(3.3) The youthful offender system consists of the following components, and the department of corrections has the authority described in paragraphs (a) to (d) of this subsection (3.3) in connection with the administration of the components:

(a) An intake, diagnostic, and orientation phase;

(b) Phase I, during which time a range of core programs, supplementary activities, and educational and prevocational programs and services are provided to offenders;

(c) (I) Phase II, which may be administered during the last three months of the period of institutional confinement and during which time the department of corrections is authorized to transfer an offender to a twenty-four-hour custody residential program that serves youthful offenders.

(II) In connection with the component described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c), the department of corrections is authorized to operate or to contract with a prerelease residential program for those sentenced as youthful offenders. The department of corrections or the contract provider shall provide for twenty-four-hour custody of offenders in phase II.

(d) (I) Phase III, which is to be administered for the period of community supervision that remains after the completion of phase II and during which the offender is monitored during reintegration into society.

(II) After the department determines appropriate phase III placement, the department shall notify, no later than thirty days prior to placement, the local law enforcement agency for the jurisdiction in which the offender shall be placed for phase III. The notice shall include the offender's name, the crime committed by the offender, the disposition of the offender's case, and the basis for the placement. The local law enforcement agency may appeal the placement, if the placement is in a jurisdiction other than the jurisdiction where the offender was convicted, it may appeal to the executive director of the department at least fifteen days prior to the placement. Except that the local law enforcement agency may not appeal if the placement is in the jurisdiction where the offender was residing at the time the offense was committed. If there is an appeal, after considering the department's basis for placement and the local law enforcement's basis for appeal, the executive director shall make the final determination of the placement.

(3.4) In addition to the powers granted to the department of corrections in subsection (3.3) of this section, the department of corrections may:

(a) Transfer a youthful offender to an appropriate facility for the purpose of accomplishing the offender's redirection goals, as long as the transfer does not jeopardize the safety and welfare of the offender;

(b) Operate an emancipation program and provide other support or monitoring services and residential placement for offenders participating in phase II and phase III under the youthful offender system for whom family reintegration poses difficulties. The department of corrections shall provide reintegration support services to an offender placed in an emancipation house.

(c) Contract with any public or private entity, including but not limited to a school district, for provision or certification of educational services. Offenders receiving educational services or diplomas from a school district under an agreement entered into pursuant to this paragraph (c) shall not be included in computing the school district's student performance on statewide assessments pursuant to section 22-7-409, C.R.S., or the school district's levels of attainment of the performance indicators pursuant to article 11 of title 22, C.R.S.

(3.5) The executive director of the department of corrections shall have final approval on the hiring and transferring of staff for the youthful offender system. In staffing the youthful offender system, the executive director shall select persons who are trained in the treatment of youthful offenders or will be trained in the treatment of youthful offenders prior to working with such population, are trained to act as role models and mentors pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (3) of this section, and are best equipped to enable the youthful offender system to meet the principles specified in subsection (3) of this section. The executive director shall make a recommendation to the department of personnel regarding the classification of positions with the youthful offender system, taking into account the level of education and training required for such positions.

(4) The youthful offender system shall provide for community supervision which shall consist of highly structured surveillance and monitoring and educational and treatment programs. Community supervision shall be administered by the department of corrections, and revocation of the inmate's supervision status shall be subject to the provisions of subsections (2) and (5) of this section.

(4.3) The youthful offender system shall provide sex offender treatment services for an offender who is sentenced to the youthful offender system and who has a history of committing a sex offense as defined in section 16-11.7-102 (3), C.R.S., or who has a history of committing any other offense, the underlying factual basis of which includes a sex offense. Prior to July 1, 2002, the sex offender treatment services provided pursuant to this subsection (4.3) shall comply with any existing national standards for juvenile sex offender treatment. On and after July 1, 2002, the sex offender treatment services provided pursuant to this subsection (4.3) shall comply with the sex offender treatment standards adopted by the sex offender management board pursuant to section 16-11.7-103, C.R.S.

(4.5) The consent of the parent, parents, or legal guardian of an offender under the age of eighteen years who has been sentenced to the youthful offender system pursuant to this section shall not be necessary in order to authorize hospital, medical, mental health, dental, emergency health, or emergency surgical care. In addition, neither the department nor any hospital, physician, surgeon, mental health care provider, dentist, trained emergency health care provider, or agent or employee thereof who, in good faith, relies on such a minor offender's consent shall be liable for civil damages for failure to secure the consent of such an offender's parent, parents, or legal guardian prior to rendering such care. However, the parent, parents, or legal guardian of a minor offender described in this subsection (4.5) may be liable, as provided by law, to pay the charges for the care provided the minor on said minor's consent.

(5) (a) Except as otherwise provided by paragraph (b) of this subsection (5), the department of corrections shall implement a procedure for the transfer of an offender to another facility when an offender in the system poses a danger to himself or herself or others. The executive director of the department of corrections shall review any transfer determination by the department prior to the actual transfer of an inmate, including a transfer back to the district court for revocation of the sentence to the youthful offender system. A transfer pursuant to this paragraph (a) shall be limited to a period not to exceed sixty days, at which time the offender shall be returned to the youthful offender facility to complete his or her sentence or returned to the district court for revocation of the sentence to the youthful offender system. In no case shall an offender initially sentenced to the youthful offender system be held in isolation or segregation or in an adult facility for longer than sixty consecutive days without action by the sentencing court.

(b) (1) An offender who is thought to have a mental illness or developmental disability by a mental health clinician, as defined by regulation of the department of corrections, may be transferred to another facility for a period not to exceed sixty days for diagnostic validation of said illness or disability. At the conclusion of the sixty-day period, the psychiatrists or other appropriate professionals conducting the diagnosis shall forward to the executive director of the department of corrections their findings, which at a minimum shall include a statement of whether the offender has the ability to withstand the rigors of the youthful offender system. If the diagnosis determines that the offender is incapable of completing his or her sentence to the youthful offender system due to a mental illness or developmental disability, the executive director shall forward such determination to the sentencing court. Based on the determination, the sentencing court shall review the offender's sentence to the youthful offender system and may:

(A) Impose the offender's original sentence to the department of corrections; or

(B) Reconsider and reduce the offender's sentence to the department of corrections in consideration of the offender's mental illness or developmental disability.

(II) Any offender who is resentenced pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall continue to be treated as an adult for purposes of sentencing and shall not be sentenced pursuant to article 2 of title 19, C.R.S.

(III) In no event shall the sentencing court, after reviewing the offender's sentence to the youthful offender system pursuant to this paragraph (b), increase the offender's sentence to the department of corrections due to the offender's diagnosis of mental illness or determination of developmental disability.

(IV) Any offender who is diagnosed as having mental illness or determined to have a developmental disability and is therefore incapable of completing his or her sentence to the youthful offender system may be housed in any department of corrections facility deemed appropriate by the executive director or transferred in accordance with procedures set forth in section 17-23-101, C.R.S., pending action by the sentencing court with regard to the offender's sentence.

(c) The department of corrections shall implement a procedure for returning offenders who cannot successfully complete the sentence to the youthful offender system, or who fail to comply with the terms or conditions of the youthful offender system, to the district court. An offender returned to the district court pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (5) or because he or she cannot successfully complete the sentence to the youthful offender system for reasons other than mental illness or a developmental disability, or because he or she fails to comply with the terms or conditions of the youthful offender system, shall receive imposition of the original sentence to the department of corrections. After the executive director of the department upholds the department's decision, the offender may be held in any correctional facility deemed appropriate by the executive director; except that an offender who cannot successfully complete the sentence to the youthful offender system for reasons other than mental illness or a developmental disability, or because he or she fails to comply with the terms or conditions of the youthful offender system, shall be transferred, within thirty-five days after the executive director upholds the department's decision, to a county jail for holding prior to resentencing. The department shall notify the district attorney of record, and the district attorney of record shall be responsible for seeking the revocation or review of the offender's sentence and the imposition of the original sentence or modification of the original sentence pursuant to sub-subparagraph (B) of subparagraph (I) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (5). The district court shall review the offender's sentence within one hundred twenty-six days after notification to the district attorney of record by the department of corrections that the offender is not able to complete the sentence to the youthful offender system or fails to comply with the terms or conditions of the youthful offender system.

(6) The department of corrections shall establish and enforce standards for the youthful offender system. Offenders in the youthful offender system, including those under community supervision, shall be considered inmates for the purposes of section 17-1-111, C.R.S.

(7) The number of offenders in any program element under the youthful offender system shall be determined by the department within available appropriations.

(8) The department of corrections may and is encouraged to contract with any private or public entity for the provision of services and facilities under the youthful offender system.

(9) On or before November 1, 1993, the department, in conjunction with the division of criminal justice, shall develop and the department shall implement a process for monitoring and evaluating the youthful offender system. In implementing such system, the department may contract with a private agency for assistance.

(10) (a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 881, § 19, effective August 7, 2002.)

(b) The division of criminal justice shall independently monitor and evaluate, or contract with a public or private entity to independently monitor and evaluate, the youthful offender system. On or before November 1, 2002, and on or before November 1 every two years thereafter, the division of criminal justice shall report its findings, or the findings of the contract entity, to the judiciary committees of the senate and the house of representatives. The department of corrections shall cooperate in providing the necessary data to the division of criminal justice or an entity designated by the division of criminal justice to complete the evaluation required in this section.

(11) Any district attorney in the state shall maintain records regarding juveniles who are sentenced to the youthful offender system and such records shall indicate which juveniles have been filed on as adults or are sentenced to the system and the offenses committed by such juveniles.

(11.5) (a) (I) An offender who is sentenced to the youthful offender system shall submit to and pay for collection and a chemical testing of a biological substance sample from the offender to determine the genetic markers thereof.

(II) Collection of the biological substance sample shall occur as soon as possible after being sentenced to the youthful offender system, and the results thereof shall be filed with and maintained by the Colorado bureau of investigation. The results of such tests shall be furnished to any law enforcement agency upon request.

(b) The department of corrections or its designee or contractor may use reasonable force to obtain biological substance samples in accordance with paragraph (a) of this subsection (11.5).

(c) Any moneys received from offenders pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (11.5) shall be deposited in the offender identification fund created in section 24-33.5-415.6, C.R.S.

(d) The Colorado bureau of investigation is directed to conduct the chemical testing of the biological substance samples obtained pursuant to this subsection (11.5).

(12) The general assembly recognizes that the increased number of violent crimes committed by juveniles and young adults is a problem faced by all the states of this nation. By creating the youthful offender system, Colorado stands at the forefront of the states in creating a new approach to addressing this problem. The general assembly also declares that the cost of implementing and operating the youthful offender system will create a burden on the state's limited resources. Accordingly, the general assembly directs the department of corrections to seek out and accept available federal, state, and local public funds, including project demonstration funds, and private moneys and private systems for the purpose of conducting the youthful offender system.

(13) Repealed.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1406, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (5)(c) amended, p. 983, § 19, effective April 17. L. 2004: (1)(c) amended and (13) repealed, pp. 243, 244, §§ 2, 3, effective April 5; (3.4)(c) amended, p. 1662, § 14, effective June 3. L. 2006: IP(5)(b)(I) amended, p. 1399, § 49, effective August 7; (11.5)(a)(I) amended, p. 1690, § 10, effective July 1, 2007. L. 2008: (4.3) and (4.5) amended, p. 39, § 1, effective March 13; (1)(b) and (2)(a)(I) amended, p. 1507, § 3, effective May 28. L. 2009: (3.4)(c) amended, (SB 09-163), ch. 293, p. 1546, § 55, effective May 21; (1)(b), (1)(c), (1)(d), (2)(a)(I), (2)(a)(II), (2)(a)(III), (2)(a.5), (2)(b), (3.3), (3.4)(a), (3.4)(b), (3.5), IP (5)(b)(I), (5)(c), (11.5)(a)(I), (11.5)(c), and (12) amended, (HB 09-1122), ch. 77, p. 280, § 5, effective October 1. L. 2010: (1)(b), (2)(a)(I), and IP(2.1)(a) amended, (HB 10-1413), ch. 264, p. 1205, § 5, effective August 11. L. 2012: (5)(c) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 866, § 111, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-311 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) This section was amended in 2002 prior to its relocation on October 1, 2002. For that history, see the source note to § 16-11-311.

(3) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the amending subsection (5)(c) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-407 is similar to § 16-11-311 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Although this section no longer specifies the procedural framework governing revocation of a youth offender sentence, minimum due process protections are still required. Due process requires only: (1) Written notice of the claimed violations; (2) disclosure to defendant of the evidence against him or her; (3) a fair opportunity to be heard in person and to present witnesses and documentary evidence; (4) the right to confront and cross-examine adversarial witnesses, unless there is good cause to deny such a right; (5) a neutral and detached hearing officer or judge; and (6) a written statement by the fact finder as to the evidence relied on and reasons for the revocation. People v. McCoy, 939 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1997).

Due process not denied because the grounds for revocation were established by hearsay evidence. People v. McCoy, 939 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1997); People v. Bostelman, 141 P.3d 891 (Colo. App. 2005), rev'd on other grounds, 162 P.3d 686 (Colo. 2007).

Plain language of section simply makes clear that youthful offender system facilities are to be available for youthful offenders of both genders, and toward that end, it mandates separate housing for male and female offenders, but it does not create an enforceable due process right to have the trial court consider youthful offender system sentencing. People v. Espinoza, 990 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1999).

Trial courts are vested with the discretion to identify the youthful offenders who should be sentenced to the youthful offender system, and a trial court sentencing a juvenile on a direct-filed charge of a violent crime also retains discretion to impose a sentence to the department of corrections. People v. Espinoza, 990 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1999).

Court's comment to defendant at sentencing did not constitute a blanket policy or an abuse of discretion but was an explanation of the conclusion that despite defendant's young age, in light of the viciousness of his crimes, he was not an appropriate candidate for the youthful offender system. People v. Espinoza, 990 P.2d 1117 (Colo. App. 1999).

Revocation of a youth offender sentence requires the imposition of the original sentence, and a trial court is without authority to modify the original sentence. People v. McCoy, 939 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1997).

The filing of a complaint or other written motion is not the sole procedure for initiating revocation of a youth offender sentence. Although defendant's administrative hearing was not held and the motion to revoke was not filed until after the expected completion date of the youth offender sentence, defendant's arrest and custodial status tolled the completion date pending resolution of the pending charges. As a result, the trial court retained jurisdiction. People v. Efferson, 122 P.3d 1038 (Colo. App. 2005).

The trial court erred in determining that it lacked jurisdiction to revoke defendant's youthful offender system sentence when defendant did not successfully complete such sentence but the department of corrections mistakenly issued an unconditional discharge of defendant. People v. Miller, 25 P.3d 1230 (Colo. 2000); People v. Valdez, 68 P.3d 484 (Colo. App. 2002).

18-1.3-407.5. Sentences - young adult offenders - youthful offender system - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2009: Entire section added, (HB 09-1122), ch. 77, p. 278, § 1, effective October 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (4) provided for the repeal of this section, effective October 1, 2012. (See L. 2009, p. 278.)

18-1.3-408. Determinate sentence of imprisonment imposed by court. When a person has been convicted of a felony and a sentence of imprisonment imposed, the court imposing the sentence shall fix a definite term of imprisonment, which shall be not longer than the terms authorized in section 18-1.3-401; except that, for persons convicted on or after November 1, 1998, of a sex offense, as defined in section 18-1.3-1003 (5), the court shall impose an indeterminate sentence as provided in part 10 of this article.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1413, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-304 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, “Correcting an Erroneous Judgment in a Criminal Case”, see 19 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 295 (1947). For article, “Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act”, see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-1.3-408 is similar to § 16-11-304 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-12-1, C.R.S. 1963, § 39-12-1, CRS 53, CSA, C. 48, § 545, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Only the general assembly may define crimes and prescribe punishments. People v. Hinchman, 196 Colo. 526, 589 P.2d 917 (1978), cert. denied, 442 U.S. 941, 99 S. Ct. 2883, 61 L. Ed.2d 311 (1979).

The sentence is a matter solely within the discretion of the trial judge. Armbeck v. People, 135 Colo. 568, 313 P.2d 715 (1957).

A trial judge has the authority and the power to impose any sentence that falls within the statutory limitations that have been created by the general assembly as punishment for the particular crime in issue. People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971).

An erroneous judgment is one rendered contrary to law. People ex rel. Best v. District Court, 115 Colo. 240, 171 P.2d 774 (1946).

When a district court has jurisdiction of the person and the subject matter — and that jurisdiction is not challenged — its judgment is not void; it is at most erroneous. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Excessive sentence invalid only as to excess. Where a judgment is merely excessive, and the court which pronounces it is one of general jurisdiction, it is not void ab initio because of the excess, but is good so far as the power of the court extends, and is invalid only as to the excess. Martin v. District Court, 37 Colo. 110, 86 P. 82, 119 Am. St. R. 262 (1906); Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

And court retains jurisdiction to correct erroneous judgment. Where a court has jurisdiction of the person and subject matter and has entered an erroneous judgment, it retains jurisdiction to correct, modify, and alter it in accordance with the statute involved, notwithstanding the expiration of the term at which the judgment was pronounced. People ex rel. Best v. District Court, 115 Colo. 240, 171 P.2d 774 (1946).

If an illegal sentence has been pronounced, the court has power to substitute a legal sentence, and this power is not impaired by the expiration of the term of court during which the judgment was pronounced. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Judgment may be corrected by appeal. An excessive sentence is at most voidable, and may be corrected on appeal. Martin v. District Court, 37 Colo. 110, 86 P. 82, 119 Am. St. R. 262 (1906).

An erroneous judgment may be corrected by appeal or other like proceeding in an appellate court. People ex rel. Best v. District Court, 115 Colo. 240, 171 P.2d 774 (1946).

Habeas corpus does not lie to obtain release from an erroneous sentence, but does lie to afford relief from a void sentence. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

Petition for habeas corpus treated as one for entry of proper sentence. A defendant seeking habeas corpus without success could, if defendant so elected, have his petition for habeas corpus treated as a petition for entry of a proper sentence. Stilley v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 66, 385 P.2d 677 (1963).

No violation of equal protection or double jeopardy where sentence within statutory limits. People v. Mieyr, 176 Colo. 90, 489 P.2d 327 (1971).

Applied in People v. Flowers, 644 P.2d 916 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Chambers, 749 P.2d 984 (Colo. App. 1987).

PART 5

MISDEMEANOR AND PETTY OFFENSE SENTENCING

18-1.3-501. Misdemeanors classified - penalties. (1) (a) Misdemeanors are divided into three classes which are distinguished from one another by the following penalties which are authorized upon conviction except as provided in subsection (1.5) of this section:

Class	Minimum Sentence	Maximum Sentence
1	Six months imprisonment, or five hundred dollars fine, or both	Eighteen months imprisonment, or five thousand dollars fine, or both

- | | |
|--|--|
| 2 Three months imprisonment, or two hundred fifty dollars fine, or both | Twelve months imprisonment, or one thousand dollars fine, or both |
| 3 Fifty dollars fine | Six months imprisonment, or seven hundred fifty dollars fine, or both |

(b) A term of imprisonment for conviction of a misdemeanor shall not be served in a state correctional facility unless served concurrently with a term for conviction of a felony.

(c) A term of imprisonment in a county jail for a conviction of a misdemeanor, petty, or traffic misdemeanor offense shall not be ordered to be served consecutively to a sentence to be served in a state correctional facility; except that if, at the time of sentencing, the court determines, after consideration of all the relevant facts and circumstances, that a concurrent sentence is not warranted, the court may order that the misdemeanor sentence be served prior to the sentence to be served in the state correctional facility and prior to the time the defendant is transported to the state correctional facility to serve all or the remainder of the defendant's state correctional facility sentence.

(1.5) (a) If a defendant is convicted of assault in the third degree under section 18-3-204 and the victim is a peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties, notwithstanding subsection (1) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant to a term of imprisonment greater than the maximum sentence but no more than twice the maximum sentence authorized for the same crime when the victim is not a peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties. In addition to the term of imprisonment, the court may impose a fine on the defendant under subsection (1) of this section. At any time after sentencing and before the discharge of the defendant's sentence, the victim may request that the defendant participate in restorative justice practices with the victim. If the defendant accepts responsibility for and expresses remorse for his or her actions and is willing to repair the harm caused by his or her actions, an individual responsible for the defendant's supervision shall make the necessary arrangements for the restorative justice practices requested by the victim.

(b) As used in this section, "peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties" means a peace officer as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., emergency medical service provider as defined in part 1 of article 3.5 of title 25, C.R.S., emergency medical care provider as defined by section 18-3-204 (4), or a firefighter as defined in section 18-3-201 (1), who is engaged or acting in or who is present to engage or act in the performance of a duty, service, or function imposed, authorized, required, or permitted by law to be performed by a peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter, whether or not the peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter is within the territorial limits of his or her jurisdiction, if the peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter is in uniform or the person committing an assault upon or offense against or otherwise acting toward the peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter or if the peace officer, emergency medical service provider, emergency medical care provider, or firefighter is intentionally assaulted in retaliation for the performance of his or her official duties.

(1.7) (a) If a defendant is convicted of assault in the third degree pursuant to section 18-3-204 or reckless endangerment pursuant to section 18-3-208 and the victim is a mental health professional employed by or under contract with the department of human services engaged in the performance of his or her duties, notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, the court may sentence the defendant to a term of imprisonment greater than the maximum sentence but not more than twice the maximum sentence authorized for the crime when the victim is not a mental health professional employed by or under contract with the department of human services engaged in the performance of his or her duties. In addition to a term of imprisonment, the court may impose a fine on the defendant pursuant to subsection (1) of this section.

(b) “Mental health professional” means a mental health professional licensed to practice medicine pursuant to part 1 of article 36 of title 12, C.R.S., or a person licensed as a mental health professional pursuant to article 43 of title 12, C.R.S., a person licensed as a nurse pursuant to part 1 of article 38 of title 12, C.R.S., a nurse aide certified pursuant to part 1 of article 38.1 of title 12, C.R.S., and a psychiatric technician licensed pursuant to part 1 of article 42 of title 12, C.R.S.

(2) The defendant may be sentenced to perform a certain number of hours of community or useful public service in addition to any other sentence provided by subsection (1) of this section, subject to the conditions and restrictions of section 18-1.3-507. An inmate in county jail acting as a trustee shall not be given concurrent credit for community or useful public service when such service is performed in his or her capacity as trustee. For the purposes of this subsection (2), “community or useful public service” means any work which is beneficial to the public, any public entity, or any bona fide nonprofit private or public organization, which work involves a minimum of direct supervision or other public cost and which work would not, with the exercise of reasonable care, endanger the health or safety of the person required to work.

(3) (a) The general assembly hereby finds that certain misdemeanors which are listed in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3) present an extraordinary risk of harm to society and therefore, in the interest of public safety, the maximum sentence for such misdemeanors shall be increased by six months.

(b) Misdemeanors that present an extraordinary risk of harm to society shall include the following:

(I) Assault in the third degree, as defined in section 18-3-204;

(I.5) (A) Sexual assault, as defined in section 18-3-402; or

(B) Sexual assault in the second degree, as defined in section 18-3-403, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(II) (A) Unlawful sexual contact, as defined in section 18-3-404; or

(B) Sexual assault in the third degree, as defined in section 18-3-404, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(III) Child abuse, as defined in section 18-6-401 (7) (a) (V);

(IV) Second and all subsequent violations of a protection order as defined in section 18-6-803.5 (1.5) (a.5);

(V) Misdemeanor failure to register as a sex offender, as described in section 18-3-412.5; and

(VI) Misdemeanor invasion of privacy for sexual gratification, as described in section 18-3-405.6.

(4) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, any person who attempts to commit, conspires to commit, or commits against an elderly person any misdemeanor set forth in part 4 of article 4 of this title, part 1, 2, 3, or 5 of article 5 of this title, or article 5.5 of this title shall be required to pay a mandatory and substantial fine within the limits permitted by law. However, all moneys collected from the offender shall be applied in the following order: Costs for crime victim compensation fund pursuant to section 24-4.1-119, C.R.S.; surcharges for victims and witnesses assistance and law enforcement fund pursuant to section 24-4.2-104, C.R.S.; restitution; time payment fee; late fees; and any other fines, fees, or surcharges. For purposes of this subsection (4), an “elderly person” or “elderly victim” means a person sixty years of age or older.

(5) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

(6) For a defendant who is convicted of assault in the third degree, as described in section 18-3-204, the court, in addition to any fine the court may impose, shall sentence the defendant to a term of imprisonment of at least six months, but not longer than the maximum sentence authorized for the offense, as specified in this section, which sentence shall not be suspended in whole or in part, if the court makes the following findings on the record:

(a) The victim of the offense was pregnant at the time of commission of the offense; and

(b) The defendant knew or should have known that the victim of the offense was pregnant.

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 2163, § 4, effective July 1, 2003.)

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1413, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (3)(b)(IV) amended, p. 1014, § 22, effective July 1; (6)(b) and (6)(c) amended, p. 2163, § 4, effective July 1; (1.5)(b) amended, p. 1624, § 44, effective August 6. L. 2004: (3)(a) amended, p. 634, § 3, effective August 4. L. 2005: (1.7) added, p. 1009, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1) amended, p. 557, § 4, effective April 16. L. 2008: (1.7)(b) and (4) amended, p. 1890, § 55, effective August 5. L. 2009: (1.5) amended, (HB 09-1120), ch. 305, p. 1650, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2010: (1.5)(b) amended, (HB 10-1422), ch. 419, p. 2073, § 32, effective August 11; (3)(b)(IV) and (3)(b)(V) amended and (3)(b)(VI) added, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, p. 2046, § 6, effective July 1, 2012. L. 2011: (1.5) amended, (HB 11-1105), ch. 250, p. 1087, § 1, effective August 10. L. 2012: (1.5) amended, (HB 12-1059), ch. 271, p. 1434, § 11, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 18-1-106 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 26 of chapter 271, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1.5) applies to acts committed on or after July 1, 2012.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2003 act amending subsections (6)(b) and (6)(c), see section 1 of chapter 340, Session Laws of Colorado 2003.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Comment: Constitutional Law — Symbolic Speech — Colorado Flag Desecration Statute", see 48 Den. L. J. 451 (1971). For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-501 is similar to § 18-1-106 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Misdemeanor defined. Since felonies are defined in the constitution to be offenses punishable by death or imprisonment in the penitentiary, it follows that misdemeanors are violations of the public laws not thus punishable. City of Greeley v. Hamman, 12 Colo. 94, 20 P. 1 (1888) (decided under G.S. § 689).

A crime carrying a possible penitentiary sentence is a felony while a crime punishable by fine or imprisonment in county jail is a misdemeanor. People v. Green, 734 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1987).

Misdemeanor sentence in conjunction with felony sentence. A court may not sentence an adult offender 21 years of age or older to the department of corrections for a misdemeanor conviction unless such defendant has already been sentenced to the department for a felony and the misdemeanor sentence is made expressly concurrent with the felony sentence. People v. Green, 734 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1987).

Any consecutive sentence imposed on such offender for a misdemeanor conviction must be served in the county jail. People v. Green, 734

P.2d 616 (Colo. 1987); People v. Battle, 742 P.2d 952 (Colo. App. 1987).

Because defendant's misdemeanor sentence expired while he was being held by the corrections department on felony conviction, trial court improperly altered judgment and mittimus to require defendant to serve his misdemeanor time consecutively with his felony term. People v. Battle, 742 P.2d 952 (Colo. App. 1987).

Absent some fault on defendant's part, defendant was entitled to serve his misdemeanor sentence in uninterrupted manner, and mistaken transfer of defendant, by sheriff, to corrections department on subsequently imposed sentence for felony conviction should not have suspended running of defendant's misdemeanor sentence. People v. Battle, 742 P.2d 952 (Colo. App. 1987).

Credit required for presentence confinement. A sentencing judge is constitutionally required to give an indigent defendant credit for time served in presentence confinement, even where the total of the presentence confinement and the sentence imposed after trial is less than the maximum sentence allowed for the offense. Godbold v. Wilson, 518 F. Supp. 1265 (D. Colo. 1981).

No equal protection violation inherent in mandatory sentencing provision as applicable to a conviction for misdemeanor offense of third degree assault on an on-duty peace officer. Sentence not more severe than that for the felony offense of second degree assault, and four-year sentence to department of corrections with possibility of probation after four months was determined to be more harsh than a sentence of two years and one day in a county jail with possibility of home detention. People v. Thompson, 942 P.2d 1242 (Colo. App. 1996).

Establishment of more severe penalty for third degree assault of an on-duty peace officer than for conviction of reckless manslaughter or vehicular assault on a victim who is not a peace officer does not constitute violation of equal protection clause. The former punishes an act that has a greater social impact, which is reasonably related to the sentence. People v. Thompson, 942 P.2d 1242 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in United States v. Dunn, 545 F.2d 1281 (10th Cir. 1976); People v. Storey, 191

Colo. 546, 554 P.2d 694 (1976); People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 (1977); Perea v. District Court, 199 Colo. 27, 604 P.2d 25 (1979); People v. Knaub, 624 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981); Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983); People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983); People v. Giles, 662 P.2d 1073 (Colo. 1983); People v. Clary, 950 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1997).

18-1.3-502. Duration of sentences for misdemeanors. Courts sentencing any person for the commission of a misdemeanor to the custody of the executive director of the department of corrections shall not fix a minimum term but may fix a maximum term less than the maximum provided by law for the offense. The persons so sentenced shall be imprisoned, released under parole, and discharged as provided by other applicable statutes. No person sentenced to a correctional facility for the commission of a misdemeanor shall be subjected to imprisonment for a term exceeding the maximum term provided by the statute fixing the maximum length of the sentence for the crime of which he or she was convicted and for which he or she was sentenced. A person sentenced to a term of imprisonment for the commission of a misdemeanor shall be entitled to the same time credits as if he or she were sentenced to a term of imprisonment for the commission of a felony. No person committed as a juvenile delinquent shall be imprisoned for a term exceeding two years, except as otherwise provided for aggravated juvenile offenders in section 19-2-601, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1416, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-302.5 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Applied in Castro v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1982) (decided prior to 2002 relocation of § 16-11-302.5).

18-1.3-503. Petty offenses classified - penalties. (1) A violation of a statute of this state is a "petty offense" if specifically classified as a class 1 or class 2 petty offense. The penalty for commission of a class 1 petty offense, upon conviction, is a fine of not more than five hundred dollars, or imprisonment for not more than six months other than in state correctional facilities, or both. The penalty for commission of a class 2 petty offense is a fine specified in the section defining the offense. The penalty assessment procedure of section 16-2-201, C.R.S., is available for the payment of fines in class 2 petty offense cases.

(2) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1416, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-107 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Knaub, 624 P.2d 922 (Colo. App. 1980) (decided prior to 2002 relocation of § 18-1-107).

18-1.3-504. Misdemeanors and petty offenses not classified. (1) Any misdemeanor or petty offense defined by state statute without specification of its class shall be punishable as provided in the statute defining it.

(2) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1416, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-108 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976).

Applied in People v. Spann, 37 Colo. App. 152, 549 P.2d 427 (1975), rev'd on other grounds, 193 Colo. 53, 561 P.2d 1268 (1977) (decided prior to 2002 relocation of § 18-1-108).

18-1.3-505. Penalty for misdemeanor not fixed by statute - punishment. (1) In all cases where an offense is denominated a misdemeanor and no penalty is fixed in the statute therefor, the punishment shall be imprisonment for not more than one year in the county jail, or a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or both such imprisonment and fine.

(2) Every sentence entered under this section shall include consideration of restitution as required by part 6 of this article and by article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1416, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-109 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-506. Payment and collection of fines for class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanors and class 1 or 2 petty offenses - release from incarceration. (1) Whenever the court imposes a fine for a nonviolent class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanor or for a class 1 or 2 petty offense, if the person who committed the offense is unable to pay the fine at the time of the court hearing or if he or she fails to pay any fine imposed for the commission of such offense, in order to guarantee the payment of such fine, the court may:

(a) Require the person to post sufficient bond or collateral; or

(b) Enter a judgment in favor of the state or political subdivision to whom the fine is owed and enter an order based on such judgment for the garnishment of the person's earnings in accordance with the provisions of either article 54 or 54.5 of title 13, C.R.S., for the purpose of collecting said fine and the costs incurred in collecting said fine; or

(c) Enter a judgment in favor of the state or political subdivision to whom the fine is owed and execute a lien based on such judgment on any chattels, lands, tenements, moneys, and real estate of the person in accordance with article 52 of title 13, C.R.S., for the purpose of collecting said fine and the costs incurred in collecting said fine.

(2) The state or a political subdivision may appear before a court of record in this state and request that the court order the release from a county jail or a correctional facility of a person who has been incarcerated as a result of the failure to pay a fine or the failure to appear in court in connection with the commission of a nonviolent class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanor or a class 1 or 2 petty offense upon the condition that the fine and any costs of collection are collected from the person incarcerated by the use of one of the methods set forth in subsection (1) of this section.

(3) For the purposes of this section, “nonviolent class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanor” means a class 1, 2, or 3 misdemeanor that does not involve cruelty to an animal, as described in section 18-9-202 (1) (a), or the use or threat of physical force on or to a person in the commission of the misdemeanor.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1417, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 18-1-110 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-507. Community or useful public service - misdemeanors. (1) Any sentence imposed pursuant to section 18-1.3-501 (2) shall be subject to the conditions and restrictions of this section.

(2) (a) A probation department, sentencing court, county sheriff, board of county commissioners, or any other governmental entity, or a private nonprofit or for-profit entity that has a contract with a governmental entity, may establish a community or useful public service program. It is the purpose of the community or useful public service program: To identify and seek the cooperation of governmental entities and political subdivisions thereof, as well as corporations, associations, or charitable trusts, for the purpose of providing community or useful public service jobs; to interview persons who have been ordered by the court to perform community or useful public service and to assign such persons to suitable community or useful public service jobs; and to monitor compliance or noncompliance of such persons in performing community or useful public service assignments within the time established by the court.

(b) Nothing in this subsection (2) shall limit the authority of an entity which is the recipient of community or useful public service to accept or reject such service, in its sole discretion.

(2.5) A charitable trust that is exempt from taxation under section 501 (c) (3) of the federal “Internal Revenue Code of 1986”, as amended, shall be eligible to provide community or useful public service jobs established under this article or any other provision of law, so long as the charitable trust meets any other requirement related to the provision of such jobs.

(3) Any general public liability insurance policy obtained pursuant to this section shall provide coverage for injuries caused by a person performing services under this section and shall be in a sum of not less than the current limit on government liability under the “Colorado Governmental Immunity Act”, article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

(4) For the purposes of the “Colorado Governmental Immunity Act”, article 10 of title 24, C.R.S., public employee, as defined in section 24-10-103, C.R.S., does not include any person who is sentenced to participate in any type of community or useful public service.

(5) No governmental entity or private nonprofit or for-profit entity which has a contract with a governmental entity shall be liable under the “Workers’ Compensation Act of Colorado”, articles 40 to 47 of title 8, C.R.S., or under the “Colorado Employment Security Act”, articles 70 to 82 of title 8, C.R.S., for any benefits on account of any person who is sentenced to participate in any type of community or useful public service, but nothing in this subsection (5) shall prohibit a governmental entity or private nonprofit or for-profit entity from electing to accept the provisions of the “Workers’ Compensation Act of Colorado” by purchasing and keeping in force a policy of workers’ compensation insurance covering such person.

(6) The court shall assess an amount, not to exceed one hundred twenty dollars, upon every person required to perform community or useful public service pursuant to section 18-1.3-501 (2). The court may waive this fee if the court determines the defendant to be indigent. Such amount shall be used by the operating agency responsible for overseeing such person’s community or useful public service program to pay the cost of administration of the program and the cost of personal services. Such amount is to be commensurate with program costs in providing services and shall be adjusted from time to time by the general assembly to insure that the operating agencies shall be financially self-supporting. The proceeds from such amounts shall be used by the operating agency only for defraying the cost of personal services and other operating expenses related to the administration of the program, a general liability policy covering such person, and, if such person will be covered by workers' compensation insurance pursuant to subsection (5) of this section or an insurance policy providing such or similar coverage, the cost of purchasing and keeping in force such insurance coverage and shall not be used by the operating agency for any other purpose.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1417, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2004: (2)(a) amended and (2.5) added, p. 505, § 1, effective August 4.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-701 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: For community service for juvenile offenders, see § 19-2-308; for useful public service for alcohol- or drug-related traffic offenses, see § 42-4-1301; for community or useful public service for class 1 and class 2 misdemeanor traffic offenders, see § 42-4-1701.

18-1.3-508. Definite sentence not void. If, through oversight or otherwise, any person is sentenced or committed to the custody of the executive director of the department of corrections for the commission of a misdemeanor for a definite period of time, the sentence or commitment shall not for that reason be void, but the person so sentenced or committed shall be subject to the liabilities and entitled to the benefits which are applicable to those persons who are properly sentenced.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1419, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-303 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Commitment of Misdemeanants to the Colorado State Reformatory", see 29 Dicta 294 (1952).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-508 is similar to § 16-11-303 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

There is no irreconcilable inconsistency between this section and Crim. P. 35(a). This section corrects a specific error committed in sentencing. It changes the erroneous sentence automatically, with the same effect as if the judge had sentenced correctly. Smith v. Johns, 187 Colo. 388, 532 P.2d 49 (1975).

Remand for resentencing. Sentence imposed by trial court which fixed a minimum term, contrary to the requirements of § 16-11-304, was erroneous, but since there is no statute which automatically corrects erroneous sentences of the trial court, the case is remanded to the trial court with directions to vacate that sentence and to resentence the defendant in accordance with law. People v. Sandoval, 36 Colo. App. 403, 541 P.2d 105 (1975).

Applied in People v. Nix, 44 Colo. App. 195, 610 P.2d 1088 (1980).

18-1.3-509. Credit for time served on misdemeanor sentences. A person who is confined for a misdemeanor offense prior to the imposition of a sentence for the misdemeanor offense shall be entitled to credit against the term of his or her sentence for the entire period of the confinement. At the time of sentencing, the court shall make a finding of the amount of presentence confinement to which the offender is entitled and shall include the finding in the mittimus. The period of confinement shall be deducted from the offender's sentence by the county jail.

Source: L. 2007: Entire section added, p. 558, § 5, effective April 16.

PART 6

RESTITUTION

Law reviews: For article, “Restitution in Criminal Cases”, see 30 Colo. Law. 125 (October 2001).

18-1.3-601. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly finds and declares that:

(a) Crime victims endure undue suffering and hardship resulting from physical injury, emotional and psychological injury, or loss of property;

(b) Persons found guilty of causing such suffering and hardship should be under a moral and legal obligation to make full restitution to those harmed by their misconduct;

(c) The payment of restitution by criminal offenders to their victims is a mechanism for the rehabilitation of offenders;

(d) Restitution is recognized as a deterrent to future criminality;

(e) An effective criminal justice system requires timely restitution to victims of crime and to members of the immediate families of such victims in order to lessen the financial burdens inflicted upon them, to compensate them for their suffering and hardship, and to preserve the individual dignity of victims;

(f) Former procedures for restitution assessment, collection, and distribution have proven to be inadequate and inconsistent from case to case;

(g) The purposes of this part 6 are to facilitate:

(I) The establishment of programs and procedures to provide for and collect full restitution for victims of crime in the most expeditious manner; and

(II) The effective and timely assessment, collection, and distribution of restitution requires the cooperation and collaboration of all criminal justice agencies and departments.

(2) It is the intent of the general assembly that restitution be ordered, collected, and disbursed to the victims of crime and their immediate families. Such restitution will aid the offender in reintegration as a productive member of society. This part 6 shall be liberally construed to accomplish all such purposes.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1419, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 16-18.5-101 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Because of the importance of requiring defendants to pay victims restitution, as expressed in this section, the doctrine of abatement ab initio does not apply to civil judgments created by restitution orders.

When defendant died after conviction and entry of the order of restitution, but before determination of the direct appeal, the common law doctrine of abatement ab initio applied to defendant’s conviction. Because of the importance of protecting the rights of victims, however, the restitution order, which created a civil judgment under § 18-1.3-603 (4)(a), was not subject to abatement but could be appealed by defendant’s estate. People v. Daly, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

18-1.3-602. Definitions. As used in this part 6, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Collections investigator” means a person employed by the judicial department whose primary responsibility is to administer, enforce, and collect on court orders or judgments entered with respect to fines, fees, restitution, or any other accounts receivable of the court, judicial district, or judicial department.

(2) “Conviction” means a verdict of guilty by a judge or jury or a plea of guilty or nolo contendere that is accepted by the court for a felony, misdemeanor, petty offense, or traffic misdemeanor offense, or adjudication for an offense that would constitute a criminal offense if committed by an adult. “Conviction” also includes having received a deferred judgment and sentence or deferred adjudication; except that a person shall not be deemed to have been convicted if the person has successfully completed a deferred sentence or deferred adjudication.

(2.3) “Money advanced by a governmental agency for a service animal” means costs incurred by a peace officer, law enforcement agency, fire department, fire protection district, or governmental search and rescue agency for the veterinary treatment and disposal of a service animal that was harmed while aiding in official duties and for the training of an animal to become a service animal to replace a service animal that was harmed while aiding in official duties, as applicable.

(2.5) Repealed.

(3) (a) “Restitution” means any pecuniary loss suffered by a victim and includes but is not limited to all out-of-pocket expenses, interest, loss of use of money, anticipated future expenses, rewards paid by victims, money advanced by law enforcement agencies, money advanced by a governmental agency for a service animal, adjustment expenses, and other losses or injuries proximately caused by an offender’s conduct and that can be reasonably calculated and recompensed in money. “Restitution” does not include damages for physical or mental pain and suffering, loss of consortium, loss of enjoyment of life, loss of future earnings, or punitive damages.

(b) “Restitution” may also include extraordinary direct public and all private investigative costs.

(c) (I) “Restitution” shall also include all costs incurred by a government agency or private entity to:

(A) Remove, clean up, or remediate a place used to manufacture or attempt to manufacture a controlled substance or which contains a controlled substance or which contains chemicals, supplies, or equipment used or intended to be used in the manufacturing of a controlled substance;

(B) Store, preserve, or test evidence of a controlled substance violation; or

(C) Sell and provide for the care of and provision for an animal disposed of under the animal cruelty laws in accordance with part 2 of article 9 of this title or article 42 of title 35, C.R.S.

(II) Costs under this paragraph (c) shall include, but are not limited to, overtime wages for peace officers or other government employees, the operating expenses for any equipment utilized, and the costs of any property designed for one-time use, such as protective clothing.

(3.5) “Service animal” means any animal, the services of which are used to aid the performance of official duties by a peace officer, law enforcement agency, fire department, fire protection district, or governmental search and rescue agency.

(4) (a) “Victim” means any person aggrieved by the conduct of an offender and includes but is not limited to the following:

(I) Any person against whom any felony, misdemeanor, petty, or traffic misdemeanor offense has been perpetrated or attempted;

(II) Any person harmed by an offender’s criminal conduct in the course of a scheme, conspiracy, or pattern of criminal activity;

(III) Any person who has suffered losses because of a contractual relationship with, including but not limited to an insurer, or because of liability under section 14-6-110, C.R.S., for a person described in subparagraph (I) or (II) of this paragraph (a);

(IV) Any victim compensation board that has paid a victim compensation claim;

(V) If any person described in subparagraph (I) or (II) of this paragraph (a) is deceased or incapacitated, the person’s spouse, parent, legal guardian, natural or adopted child, child living with the victim, sibling, grandparent, significant other, as defined in section 24-4.1-302 (4), C.R.S., or other lawful representative;

(VI) Any person who had to expend resources for the purposes described in subparagraph (I) of paragraph (c) of subsection (3) of this section.

(b) “Victim” shall not include a person who is accountable for the crime or a crime arising from the same conduct, criminal episode, or plan as defined under the law of this state or of the United States.

(c) Any “victim” under the age of eighteen is considered incapacitated, unless that person is legally emancipated or the court orders otherwise.

(d) It is the intent of the general assembly that this definition of the term “victim” shall apply to this part 6 and shall not be applied to any other provision of the laws of the state of Colorado that refers to the term “victim”.

(e) Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, “victim” includes a person less than eighteen years of age who has been trafficked by an offender, as described in section 18-3-502, or coerced into involuntary servitude, as described in section 18-3-503.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1420, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2) and (3)(a) amended and (2.5) added, p. 1049, § 2, effective September 1. L. 2004: (2.5) repealed, p. 904, § 27, effective May 21. L. 2005: (2.3) and (3.5) added and (3)(a) amended, p. 192, § 1, effective July 1; (3)(c) and (4)(a)(VI) added, p. 1498, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2006: (3)(c)(I) amended, p. 895, § 4, effective August 7. L. 2012: (4)(e) added, (HB 12-1151), ch. 174, p. 626, § 8, effective August 8.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 16-18.5-102 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Attorney general not a “collections investigator”. The attorney general is not part of the judicial department. People v. Robb, 215 P.3d 1253 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because the definition of “restitution” includes “any pecuniary loss suffered by a victim”, including “loss of use of money”, trial courts are required to include pre-judgment interest in probationary restitution orders. The term “loss of use of money” means not only the amount of money stolen but also the value of the use of the money stolen from the victim from the date the money was stolen to the date of the restitution award. Roberts v. People, 130 P.3d 1005 (Colo. 2006).

Because the definition of restitution includes “any pecuniary loss suffered by a victim” including “other losses or injuries proximately caused by an offender’s conduct and that can be reasonably calculated and recompensed in money”, the victim was entitled to the fair rental value of stolen equipment even if the victim did not rent replacement equipment. People v. Suttmiller, 240 P.3d 504 (Colo. App. 2010).

Proximate cause for purposes of restitution has been defined as a cause which in natural and probable sequence produced the claimed injury and without which the claimed injury would not have been sustained. People v. Clay, 74 P.3d 473 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Bryant, 122 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2005); People v. Steinbeck, 186 P.3d 54 (Colo. App. 2007).

Restitution statute only requires that the conduct underlying the basis of defendant’s criminal conviction proximately caused the victim’s losses. It does not require that a defendant be charged with a specific act to be ordered to pay restitution. People v. Steinbeck, 186 P.3d 54 (Colo. App. 2007).

Restitution is not limited to the value of the damaged item. It may include repair costs, even if those costs exceed the damage object’s value.

People v. Smith, 181 P.3d 324 (Colo. App. 2007).

Counseling and mental health costs are considered medical expenses, provided proximate cause is shown. People v. Rivera, 250 P.3d 1272 (Colo. App. 2010).

Cost of burglar alarm system for victim not within definition of “restitution”. The trial court’s findings do not support any loss by the victim other than a generalized feeling of insecurity. Crime victim’s feeling of insecurity could have multiple causes and the solutions they select are subjective and potentially numerous and varied. People v. Trujillo, 75 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

Court erred by ordering defendant to pay for expenses related to home sale because prosecution did not prove that the expenditures were proximately caused by the juvenile offender’s unlawful conduct. If a victim incurs expenses to avoid or mitigate the consequences of a specific and ongoing threat related to the offender’s unlawful conduct, such expenditures qualify as compensable restitution under subsection (3)(a); however, expenditures resulting from a generalized feeling of insecurity are too attenuated from the offender’s conduct, and thus do not qualify. People ex rel. D.W., 232 P.3d 182 (Colo. App. 2009).

Towing company is a “victim” for purposes of restitution because it sustained a pecuniary loss as a result of defendant’s criminal conduct and is therefore a person aggrieved by the offender’s conduct. People v. Clay, 74 P.3d 473 (Colo. App. 2003).

It is not necessary for the “victim” to be specifically named as a party in a criminal indictment or information. A defendant is responsible for restitution if there is sufficient evidence in the record to determine that an individual is directly and immediately aggrieved by the defendant’s conduct. People v. Jones, 701 P.2d 868 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Dubois, 216 P.3d 27 (Colo. App. 2007); aff'd on other grounds, 211 P.3d 41 (Colo. 2009).

Peace officer and law enforcement agency who were indirectly aggrieved by defendant's conduct fall within the meaning of "victim". The restitution statute no longer limits restitution only to persons injured by the conduct alleged as the basis for the defendant's conviction. Dubois v. People, 211 P.3d 41 (Colo. 2009).

Peace officers are generally entitled to restitution only when the underlying crime defines a peace officer as the victim or when a peace officer has been specifically included by the legislature. Dubois v. People, 211 P.3d 41 (Colo. 2009).

Restitution is warranted where a peace officer is involved in an accident while responding to a crime in which another peace officer is statutorily defined as the victim. Dubois v. People, 211 P.3d 41 (Colo. 2009).

Defendant's act of stealing the vehicle was the proximate cause of the towing company's losses because, without it, such losses would not have been sustained. While the police department's failure to impound the vehicle on its own lot and the vehicle owner's failure to retrieve the vehicle earlier may have contributed to the towing company's losses, there is no evidence that these events were not reasonably foreseeable. People v. Clay, 74 P.3d 473 (Colo. App. 2003).

Order of restitution for travel expenses of victim's parents to attend memorial service for victim was not an abuse of trial court's discretion. Parents' attendance at a memorial service was a natural and probable consequence that would not have occurred without defendant's actions, and therefore, defendant's conduct was a proximate cause of their attendance. People v. Lassek, 122 P.3d 1029 (Colo. App. 2005).

A specific threat that is still outstanding against the victim is sufficient to be considered the "proximate cause" of the victim's monetary loss, and, thus, defendant can be ordered to pay restitution for those losses. People v. Bryant, 122 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2005).

Company employing defendant was a "victim" for purposes of restitution because it sustained a pecuniary loss as a result of defendant's conduct, and, while "victim" is defined as a "person" in this section, "person" as defined for the Colorado revised statutes in § 2-4-401 does include corporations and other legal entities, and such a reading fits within the context of "victim" in subsection (4) of this section. People v. Webb-Johnson, 113 P.3d 1253 (Colo. App. 2005).

Company's claimed medical expenses properly included in the restitution order as anticipated future expenses. People v. Webb-Johnson, 113 P.3d 1253 (Colo. App. 2005).

"Lost wages", for purposes of criminal restitution, are wages not received by the victim from the date the crime was committed to the date restitution is imposed or sooner if the victim is comparably employed prior to that date. "Loss of future earnings" are earnings not expected to be received by the victim after restitution is imposed. People v. Bryant, 122 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2005).

Juvenile court lacked authority to transfer defendant's restitution obligation from an unrelated juvenile case to defendant's adult case, and district court had no authority to include the juvenile court's restitution order in its community corrections or department of corrections sentence in an unrelated case. People v. Brooks, 250 P.3d 771 (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in People v. Lowe, 60 P.3d 753 (Colo. App. 2002) (decided under former § 16-18.5-102).

18-1.3-603. Assessment of restitution - corrective orders. (1) Every order of conviction of a felony, misdemeanor, petty, or traffic misdemeanor offense, except any order of conviction for a state traffic misdemeanor offense issued by a municipal or county court in which the prosecuting attorney is acting as a special deputy district attorney pursuant to an agreement with the district attorney's office, shall include consideration of restitution. Each such order shall include one or more of the following:

- (a) An order of a specific amount of restitution be paid by the defendant;
 - (b) An order that the defendant is obligated to pay restitution, but that the specific amount of restitution shall be determined within the ninety-one days immediately following the order of conviction, unless good cause is shown for extending the time period by which the restitution amount shall be determined;
 - (c) An order, in addition to or in place of a specific amount of restitution, that the defendant pay restitution covering the actual costs of specific future treatment of any victim of the crime; or
 - (d) Contain a specific finding that no victim of the crime suffered a pecuniary loss and therefore no order for the payment of restitution is being entered.
- (2) The court shall base its order for restitution upon information presented to the court by the prosecuting attorney, who shall compile such information through victim impact statements or other means to determine the amount of restitution and the identities of the victims. Further, the prosecuting attorney shall present this information to the court prior to the order of conviction or within ninety-one days, if it is not available prior to the order of conviction. The court may extend this date if it finds that there are extenuating circumstances affecting the prosecuting attorney's ability to determine restitution.

(3) Any order for restitution may be:

(a) Increased if additional victims or additional losses not known to the judge or the prosecutor at the time the order of restitution was entered are later discovered and the final amount of restitution due has not been set by the court; or

(b) Decreased:

(I) With the consent of the prosecuting attorney and the victim or victims to whom the restitution is owed; or

(II) If the defendant has otherwise compensated the victim or victims for the pecuniary losses suffered.

(4) (a) Any order for restitution entered pursuant to this section shall be a final civil judgment in favor of the state and any victim. Notwithstanding any other civil or criminal statute or rule, any such judgment shall remain in force until the restitution is paid in full.

(b) Any order for restitution made pursuant to this section shall also be deemed to order that:

(I) The defendant owes interest from the date of the entry of the order at the rate of twelve percent per annum; and

(II) The defendant owes all reasonable and necessary attorney fees and costs incurred in collecting such order due to the defendant's nonpayment.

(c) The entry of an order for restitution under this section creates a lien by operation of law against the defendant's personal property and any interest that the defendant may have in any personal property.

(d) Any order of restitution imposed shall be considered a debt for "willful and malicious" injury for purposes of exceptions to discharge in bankruptcy as provided in 11 U.S.C. sec. 523.

(5) If more than one defendant owes restitution to the same victim for the same pecuniary loss, the orders for restitution shall be joint and several obligations of the defendants.

(6) Any amount paid to a victim under an order of restitution shall be set off against any amount later recovered as compensatory damages by such victim in any federal or state civil proceeding.

(7) When a person's means of identification or financial information was used without that person's authorization in connection with a conviction for any crime in violation of part 2, 3, or 4 of article 4, part 1, 2, 3, or 7 of article 5, or article 5.5 of this title, the sentencing court may issue such orders as are necessary to correct a public record that contains false information resulting from any violation of such laws.

(8) (a) Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection (1) of this section, for a non-felony conviction under title 42, C.R.S., the court shall order restitution concerning only the portion of the victim's pecuniary loss for which the victim cannot be compensated under a policy of insurance, self-insurance, an indemnity agreement, or a risk management fund.

(b) The court, in determining the restitution amount, shall consider whether the defendant or the vehicle driven by the defendant at the time of the offense was covered by:

(I) A complying policy of insurance or certificate of self-insurance as required by the laws of this state;

(II) Self-insurance including but not limited to insurance coverage pursuant to the provisions of part 15 of article 30 of title 24, C.R.S.; or

(III) Any other insurance or indemnity agreement that would indemnify the defendant for any damages sustained by the victim.

(c) (I) Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph (c), a court may not award restitution to a victim concerning a pecuniary loss for which the victim has received or is entitled to receive benefits or reimbursement under a policy of insurance or other indemnity agreement.

(II) (A) A court may award a victim restitution for a deductible amount under his or her policy of insurance.

(B) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2004, p. 904, § 28, effective May 21, 2004.)

(d) (I) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2004, p. 904, § 28, effective May 21, 2004.)

(II) Nothing in this paragraph (d) shall prohibit a nonowner driver or passenger in the vehicle from being awarded restitution if the driver or passenger was not covered by his or her own medical payments coverage policy.

(e) (I) Notwithstanding any provision of law to the contrary, an insurance company, risk management fund, or public entity shall not be obligated to defend a defendant in a hearing concerning restitution. No court shall interpret an indemnity or insurance contract so as to obligate an insurance company, risk management fund, or public entity to defend a defendant at a restitution hearing absent a specific agreement.

(II) Notwithstanding any provision of law, indemnity contract, or insurance contract to the contrary, an insurance company, risk management fund, or public entity shall not be obligated to pay or otherwise satisfy a civil judgment entered pursuant to this part 6, or to indemnify a defendant for an amount awarded in a restitution order.

(f) Nothing in this article shall be construed to limit or abrogate the rights and immunities set forth in the “Colorado Governmental Immunity Act”, article 10 of title 24, C.R.S.

(g) The provisions of this subsection (8) shall not preclude the court, pursuant to article 4.1 of title 24, C.R.S., from ordering restitution to reimburse an expenditure made by a victim compensation fund.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1421, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (8) added, p. 1048, § 1, effective September 1. L. 2004: (8)(c)(I), (8)(c)(II)(B), and (8)(d) amended, p. 904, § 28, effective May 21. L. 2012: (1)(b) and (2) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 866, § 112, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-18.5-103 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1)(b) and (2) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Defendant’s right against double jeopardy is not violated when, having deferred determination of the amount of restitution as permitted under subsection (1), the court ordered restitution after the defendant began to serve his or her sentence. People v. Rosales, 134 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2005).

The 90-day deadline in subsection (2) is not a jurisdictional limit that would prevent the court from reconsidering a motion for restitution. People v. Harman, 97 P.3d 290 (Colo. App. 2004).

A court-ordered deadline for determination of restitution, short of the statutory 90-day period, is not a jurisdictional limit. People v. McCann, 122 P.3d 1085 (Colo. App. 2005).

Extenuating circumstances affecting the prosecutor’s ability to calculate the amount of restitution may be a factor in finding good cause for the late determination pursuant to subsection (1)(b). People v. Harman, 97 P.3d 290 (Colo. App. 2004).

Under the plain language of subsection (1), restitution may be denied only after a finding that the victim has not suffered a pecuniary loss. People v. Stovall, 75 P.3d 1165 (Colo. App. 2003).

Absent such a finding, sentencing is not final until restitution is ordered. People v. Rosales, 134 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2005).

Court rejected defendant’s contention that “punitive” provisions of interest and attorney fees in subsection (4) constitute an ex post facto law. The restitution act simply facilitates collection from defendant of the sums he was ordered to pay at the time of his sentencing. People v. Lowe, 60 P.3d 753 (Colo. App. 2002) (decided under former § 16-18.5-103).

Court could liberally construe statute to authorize interest from the date of the offense instead of limiting the calculation of interest from the date of the entry of the order, since statute merely provides a certain, definite postjudgment interest rate but does not mandate that only postjudgment interest may be imposed. People v. Roberts, 114 P.3d 75 (Colo. App. 2005), aff’d on other grounds, 130 P.3d 1005 (Colo. 2006).

Because post-judgment interest on the restitution amount awarded has the statutory purpose to encourage speedy payment of the restitution order, which is different from the purpose of pre-judgment interest, a trial court must impose both pre-judgment interest and post-judgment interest in probationary restitution orders. Roberts v. People, 130 P.3d 1005 (Colo. 2006); People v. Cardenas, 262 P.3d 913 (Colo. App. 2011).

A sentence that does not include restitution is illegal, because the consideration of restitution is mandatory. The court was required to correct the mittimus to reflect restitution. People v. Smith, 121 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2005).

Restitution component satisfied once ordered, even though specific amount not set until two years after sentence imposed. Once restitution ordered, although not set, judgment of conviction became final and appealable, even though district court retained jurisdiction to determine restitution amount. Sanoff v. People, 187 P.3d 576 (Colo. 2008).

An order setting the amount of restitution is itself an appealable order and is subject to time limits for filing an appeal. People v. Hill, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Interest rate on orders for restitution entered on and after September 1, 2000, is 12%, even though offense was committed prior to the effective date of the section. Section merely codified a discretionary power and sets a uniform interest rate. People v. Garcia, 55 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2002).

The Colorado legislature cannot preempt federal bankruptcy law and declare certain debts to be nondischargeable. Subsection (4)(d) cannot preempt federal law. In re McNabb, 287 B.R. 820 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2003).

Trial court has broad discretion in determining the terms and conditions of a restitution order, and the court's ruling will not be disturbed unless it abuses its discretion when it misconstrues or misapplies the law. The court misapplied the law in ordering restitution for the cost of installing locks on all interior doors of office that was burglarized. People v. Reyes, 166 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2007).

In order to receive restitution, the loss must be pecuniary and may be specifically mentioned in statute or the loss or injury must be proximately caused by the offender's conduct that can be reasonably calculated and recompensed in money. Awarding restitution for installing locks on victim's interior doors would put the victim in a better financial position than victim had been in had defendant's conduct not occurred; therefore, installing the locks was not a loss proximately caused by defendant's conduct and did not qualify for a restitution award. People v. Reyes, 166 P.3d 301 (Colo. App. 2007).

A specific threat that is still outstanding against the victim is sufficient to be considered the "proximate cause" of the victim's monetary loss, and, thus, defendant can be ordered to pay restitution for those losses. People v. Bryant, 122 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2005).

"Lost wages", for purposes of criminal restitution, are wages not received by the victim from the date the crime was committed to the date restitution is imposed or sooner if the victim is comparably employed prior to that date. "Loss of future earnings" are earnings not expected to be received by the victim after restitution is imposed. People v. Bryant, 122 P.3d 1026 (Colo. App. 2005); People ex rel. D.S.L., 134 P.3d 522 (Colo. App. 2006).

Although a court may order restitution for lost wages, it may not order restitution for loss of future earnings. People ex rel. D.S.L., 134 P.3d 522 (Colo. App. 2006).

While defendant is entitled to a setoff against a restitution order to the extent of any money actually paid to a victim for the same damages covered by the order, defendant bears the burden of proof in apportioning the damages. Where victim's parents received an unapportioned settlement from defendant's automobile insurer, defendant bears burden of presenting evidence as basis for allocating the unapportioned settlement to pecuniary losses covered by the restitution order. People v. Lassek, 122 P.3d 1029 (Colo. App. 2005).

Sentencing court not barred by collateral estoppel and double jeopardy principles from considering acquitted conduct in determining an award of restitution. People v. Pagan, 165 P.3d 724 (Colo. App. 2006).

Section does not prescribe a maximum restitution amount. Therefore, the rule set forth in Apprendi and Blakely concerning prescribed statutory maximum sentences does not apply to restitution orders in Colorado. Restitution is not limited by the jury's findings, but rather includes any pecuniary losses suffered by the victim as a proximate cause of the offender's conduct. People v. Smith, 181 P.3d 324 (Colo. App. 2007).

Burden of proof for establishing the amount of restitution owed is a preponderance of the evidence. People v. Smith, 181 P.3d 324 (Colo. App. 2007).

Court may not order restitution without a hearing when prosecution must prove the amount of victim's loss and its causal link to defendant, and when defense counsel is present and prepared to contest those matters. Defendant need not be present for the hearing, but his or her counsel must be given the opportunity to contest the amount of restitution ordered. People v. Martinez, 166 P.3d 223 (Colo. App. 2007).

Defendant's challenge to the amount of restitution that she should be obligated to pay constitutes a claim that her sentence was imposed in an illegal manner. Because her claim was not brought within 120 days of her conviction, the claim was time barred. People v. Bowerman, 258 P.3d 314 (Colo. App. 2010).

Under § 16-5-401, a plea of guilty to facilitate the disposition of a case constitutes a waiver of the statute of limitations. Defendant waived her right to raise the statute of limitations as a defense to the amount of restitution ordered. People v. Wilson, 251 P.3d 507 (Colo. App. 2010).

In declaring an order for restitution to be a final civil judgment in favor of the state and any victim, the general assembly intended that the order of restitution would survive defendant's death just as a civil judgment survives the death of a judgment debtor pursuant to § 13-58-101. People v. Daly, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Thus, the doctrine of abatement ab initio does not apply to civil judgments created by restitution orders. When defendant died after conviction and entry of the order of restitution, but before determination of the direct appeal, the common law doctrine of abatement ab initio applied to defendant's conviction. Because of the importance of protecting the rights of victims, however, the restitution order, which created a civil judgment under subsection (4), was not subject to abatement but could be appealed by defendant's estate. People v. Daly, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

PART 7

FINES AND COSTS

18-1.3-701. Judgment for costs and fines. (1) (a) Where any person, association, or corporation is convicted of an offense, or any juvenile is adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for the commission of an act that would have been a criminal offense if committed by an adult, the court shall give judgment in favor of the state of Colorado, the appropriate prosecuting attorney, or the appropriate law enforcement agency and against the offender or juvenile for the amount of the costs of prosecution, the amount of the cost of care, and any fine imposed. No fine shall be imposed for conviction of a felony except as provided in section 18-1.3-401 or 18-7-203 (2) (a). Such judgments shall be enforceable in the same manner as are civil judgments, and, in addition, the provisions of section 16-11-101.6, C.R.S., and section 18-1.3-702 apply. A county clerk and recorder may not charge a fee for the recording of a transcript or satisfaction of a judgment entered pursuant to this section.

(b) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (1), on and after July 1, 2010, all judgments collected pursuant to this section for fees and court costs shall be transmitted to the state treasurer for deposit in the judicial stabilization cash fund created in section 13-32-101 (6), C.R.S.

(c) Judgments collected pursuant to this section for fees for interpreters or auxiliary services provided pursuant to section 13-90-204, C.R.S., and reimbursed pursuant to section 13-90-210, C.R.S., shall be remitted to the Colorado commission for the deaf and hard of hearing in the department of human services created in section 26-21-104, C.R.S.

(2) The costs assessed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section or section 16-18-101, C.R.S., may include:

(a) Any docket fee required by article 32 of title 13, C.R.S., or any other fee or tax required by statute to be paid to the clerk of the court;

(b) The jury fee required by section 13-71-144, C.R.S.;

(c) Any fees required to be paid to sheriffs pursuant to section 30-1-104, C.R.S.;

(d) Any fees of the court reporter for all or any part of a transcript necessarily obtained for use in the case, including the fees provided for in section 16-18-101 (2), C.R.S., and including the fees for a transcript of any preliminary hearing;

(d.5) The actual costs paid to any expert witness;

(e) (I) The witness fees and mileage paid pursuant to article 33 of title 13, C.R.S., and section 16-9-203, C.R.S.;

(II) For any person required to travel more than fifty miles from the person's place of residence to the place where specified in the subpoena, in addition to the witness fee and mileage specified in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (e):

(A) Actual lodging expenses incurred; and

(B) Actual rental car, taxi, or other transportation costs incurred;

(e.5) If a person under eighteen years of age is required to appear, the amount that a parent or guardian of the person was paid for transportation and lodging expenses incurred while accompanying the person;

(f) Any fees for exemplification and copies of papers necessarily obtained for use in the case;

(g) Any costs of taking depositions for the perpetuation of testimony, including reporter's fees, witness fees, expert witness fees, mileage for witnesses, and sheriff fees for service of subpoenas;

(h) Any statutory fees for service of process or statutory fees for any required publications;

(h.5) Any fees for interpreters required during depositions or during trials;

(i) Any item specifically authorized by statute to be included as part of the costs;

(j) On proper motion of the prosecuting attorney and at the discretion of the court, any other reasonable and necessary costs incurred by the prosecuting attorney or law enforcement agency that are directly the result of the prosecution of the defendant, including the costs resulting from the collection and analysis of any chemical test upon the defendant pursuant to section 42-4-1301.1, C.R.S., which costs shall be reimbursed by the defendant directly to the law enforcement agency that performed such chemical tests;

(k) Any costs incurred in obtaining a governor's warrant pursuant to section 16-19-108, C.R.S.;

(l) Any costs incurred by the law enforcement agency in photocopying reports, developing film, and purchasing videotape as necessary for use in the case;

(m) Any costs of participation in a diversion program if the offender or juvenile unsuccessfully participated in a diversion program prior to the conviction or adjudication.

(3) Where any person, association, or corporation is granted probation, the court shall order the offender to make such payments toward the cost of care as are appropriate under the circumstances. In setting the amount of such payments, the court shall take into consideration and make allowances for any restitution ordered to the victim or victims of a crime, which shall take priority over any payments ordered pursuant to this article, and for the maintenance and support of the offender's spouse, dependent children, or other persons having a legal right to support and maintenance from the estate of the offender. If the court determines that the offender has a sufficient estate to pay all or part of the cost of care, the court shall determine the amount which shall be paid by the offender for the cost of care, which amount shall in no event be in excess of the per capita cost of supervising an offender on probation.

(4) Where any person is sentenced to a term of imprisonment, whether to a county jail or the department of corrections, the court shall order such person to make such payments toward the cost of care as are appropriate under the circumstances. In setting the amount of such payments, the court shall take into consideration and make allowances for any restitution ordered to the victim or victims of a crime, which shall take priority over any payments ordered pursuant to this article, and for the maintenance and support of the inmate's spouse, dependent children, or any other persons having a legal right to support and maintenance out of the offender's estate. The court shall also consider the financial needs of the offender for the six-month period immediately following the offender's release, for the purpose of allowing said offender to seek employment. If the court determines that the person has a sufficient estate to pay all or part of the cost of care, the court shall determine the amount which shall be paid by the offender, which amount in no event shall be in excess of the per capita cost of maintaining prisoners in the institution or facility in which the offender has been residing prior to sentencing for the purpose of reimbursing the appropriate law enforcement agency and the per capita cost of maintaining prisoners in the department of corrections for the purpose of paying the cost of care after sentencing.

(5) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Cost of care" means the cost to the department or the local government charged with the custody of an offender for providing room, board, clothing, medical care, and other normal living expenses for an offender confined to a jail or correctional facility, or any costs associated with maintaining an offender in a home detention program contracted for by the department of public safety, as determined by the executive director of the department of corrections or the executive director of the department of public safety, whichever is appropriate, or the cost of supervision of probation when the offender is granted probation, or the cost of supervision of parole when the offender is placed on parole by the state board of parole, as determined by the court.

(b) “Estate” means any tangible or intangible properties, real or personal, belonging to or due to an offender, including income or payments to such person received or earned prior to or during incarceration from salary or wages, bonuses, annuities, pensions, or retirement benefits, or any source whatsoever except federal benefits of any kind. Real property that is held in joint ownership or ownership in common with an offender’s spouse, while being used and occupied by the spouse as a place of residence, shall not be considered a part of the estate of the offender for the purposes of this section.

(6) After the set-offs for restitution and for maintenance and support as provided in subsection (4) of this section, any amounts recovered pursuant to this section that are available to reimburse the costs of providing medical care shall be used to reimburse the state for the state’s financial participation for medical assistance if medical care is provided for the inmate or an infant of a female inmate under the “Colorado Medical Assistance Act”, articles 4, 5, and 6 of title 25.5, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1422, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1) amended, p. 1693, § 1, effective August 6. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 1091, § 11, effective May 25; (6) amended, p. 2005, § 61, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1) amended, p. 1538, § 29, effective May 31. L. 2008: (1)(b) amended, p. 2146, § 21, effective June 4. L. 2011: (1)(a) amended, (SB 11-085), ch. 257, p. 1129, § 6, effective August 10.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-501 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: (1) For items includable as costs in civil actions, see § 13-16-122.

(2) For the legislative declaration in the 2008 act amending subsection (1)(b), see section 1 of chapter 417, Session Laws of Colorado 2008. For the legislative declaration in the 2011 act amending subsection (1)(a), see section 1 of chapter 257, Session Laws of Colorado 2011.

ANNOTATION

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-1.3-701 is similar to § 16-11-501 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions and repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 48, 516, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality. Statutes imposing liability for costs on a convicted defendant have been uniformly held to be constitutional. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

No double jeopardy violation where the imposition of costs is primarily remedial rather than punitive. The reviewing court first considers if the legislature intended a criminal or civil sanction, then determines if the statutory scheme is primarily punitive. People v. Howell, 64 P.3d 894 (Colo. App. 2002).

Costs are imposed to reimburse the state for the actual expenses incurred in prosecuting a defendant; costs are not traditionally considered to be punishment; the imposition of costs does not serve the goals of retribution and deterrence. People v. Howell, 64 P.3d 894 (Colo. App. 2002).

Sixth amendment inapplicable. The sixth amendment of the constitution compels appointing counsel for indigent defendants but does not speak to whether convicted defendants of limited resources may be charged with the costs of their trial. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

Declaration of indigency differs. Whether a presumably innocent defendant is declared indigent for the purposes of appointing counsel before he is brought to trial involves different considerations than the question of whether a convicted defendant may be charged with the costs expended by the state to secure his conviction. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

Judgment for costs must be rendered against defendant upon conviction. Bransom v. Bd. of Comm’rs, 5 Colo. App. 231, 37 P. 957 (1894).

This changes the doctrine of the common law. In authorizing a recovery by the people against a convicted defendant of the costs incurred to secure his conviction, it was a departure from the doctrine of the common law. Bd. of Comm’rs v. Wilson, 3 Colo. App. 492, 34 P. 265 (1893).

Costs are a matter of statute under this section. Glavino v. People, 75 Colo. 94, 224 P. 225 (1924).

And are not to be taxed according to plea agreement. The costs in a criminal case must be taxed according to statutes and not according to any plea agreement. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

There is no restriction or limit to the amount of costs of prosecution, only that the items of cost must necessarily conform to the fee bill, and that the charge for each service shall not exceed the amount allowed. The whole matter has been left to the discretion of the prosecutor and the court. Parker v. People, 7 Colo. App. 56, 42 P. 172 (1895).

A defendant convicted of fewer than all of the counts in a multi-count indictment or criminal information, or in consolidated cases, can be assessed only those costs of prosecution attributable to the counts for which the defendant is actually convicted, if an allocation is practicable. People v. Palomo, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Extradition expenses fall within subsection (2)(j). People v. Fogarty, 126 P.3d 238 (Colo. App. 2005).

And are not subject to a time limitation. The phrase "[w]here any person...is convicted" means nothing more than "under conditions or in circumstances in which a person is convicted of an offense". The prosecution does not have an unlimited time, however, to seek expenses for extradition costs. People v. Scoggins, 240 P.3d 331 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd by operation of law, 2012 CO 16, __ P.3d __.

Judicial discretion. The general rule as to payment of costs may be avoided if the trial judge, in his discretion, determines that the defendant is unable to pay the costs. People v. Fisher, 189 Colo. 297, 539 P.2d 1258 (1975).

Joint defendants are severally liable for costs. Inasmuch as the costs are merely incident to the judgment, joint defendants are severally liable for the costs incurred in procuring their respective convictions, not for the costs of each other, nor for costs made by the people against them respectively. Murphy v. People, 3 Colo. 147 (1876).

Judgment rendered against person convicted is a lien on his property. In case of a conviction in a criminal proceeding judgment must be rendered against the defendant for the costs of the prosecution, and when rendered, is a lien upon his property, if he has any, and is collected by execution. Bransom v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 5 Colo. App. 231, 37 P. 957 (1894).

Although it becomes the duty of parole board to provide, as a condition of parole, that offender make restitution to the victim or victim's immediate family, it is error for court to require that defendant pay restitution to the police of cost of extradition. The proper way to effectuate this result is for court to enter judgment in favor of state of Colorado for amount of costs of prosecution under § 16-1-501. People v. Lemons, 824 P.2d 56 (Colo. App. 1991).

This section is not applicable to a juvenile who is adjudicated delinquent. People v. T.R., 860 P.2d 559 (Colo. App. 1993).

18-1.3-702. Fines - methods of payment. (1) When the court imposes a fine upon an individual, the court may direct as follows:

(a) That the defendant pay the entire amount of the fine at the time sentence is pronounced;

(b) That the defendant pay the entire amount of the fine at some later date;

(c) That the defendant pay a specified portion of the fine at designated periodic intervals, and in such case the court may also direct that the fine be remitted to a designated official who shall report to the court on any failure to comply with the order;

(d) Where the defendant is sentenced to a period of probation as well as a fine, that payment of the fine be a condition of probation.

(2) Where the court imposes a fine, the sentence shall provide that, except in the case of a corporation, if the defendant fails to pay the fine in accordance with the direction of the court, the defendant shall be imprisoned until the fine is satisfied or the defendant is released as provided in subsections (3) and (6) of this section. This provision shall be added at the time sentence is pronounced. If the defendant fails to pay a fine as directed, the court may issue a warrant for his or her arrest.

(3) When the court directs that the defendant be imprisoned until the fine is satisfied, the court shall specify a maximum period of imprisonment subject to the following limits:

(a) Where the fine was imposed for a felony, the period shall not exceed one year;

(b) Where the fine was imposed for a misdemeanor, the period shall not exceed one-third of the maximum term of imprisonment authorized for the misdemeanor;

(c) Where the fine was imposed for a petty offense, a traffic violation, or a violation of a municipal ordinance, any of which is punishable by a possible jail sentence, the period shall not exceed fifteen days;

(c.5) There shall be no imprisonment in those cases where no imprisonment is provided for in the possible sentence; and

(d) Where a sentence of imprisonment as well as a fine was imposed, the aggregate of the period and the term of the sentence shall not exceed the maximum term of imprisonment authorized for the offense.

(4) Where the defendant is unable to pay a fine imposed by the court, the defendant may at any time apply to the court for resentence. If the court is satisfied that the defendant is unable to pay the fine, the court shall:

(a) Adjust the terms of payment; or

(b) Lower the amount of the fine; or

(c) Where the sentence consists of probation or imprisonment and a fine, revoke the portion of the sentence imposing the fine; or

(d) Revoke the entire sentence imposed and resentence the defendant. Upon a resentence, the court may impose any sentence it originally could have imposed; except that the amount of any fine imposed shall not be in excess of the amount the defendant is able to pay.

(5) Notwithstanding that the defendant was imprisoned for failure to pay a fine or that he or she has served the period of imprisonment imposed, a fine may be collected in the same manner as a judgment in a civil action. The district attorney may, in his or her discretion, and shall, upon order of the court, institute proceedings to collect such fine.

(6) If it satisfactorily appears to the district court of the judicial district in which a person is confined that such person is confined in jail or in a correctional facility or other place of confinement, for any fine or costs of prosecution for any criminal offense, including any violation of a municipal ordinance, and has no estate whatever with which to pay such fine and costs, or costs only, it is the duty of the court to discharge such person from further imprisonment for the fine and costs. Nothing in this subsection (6) shall authorize any person to be discharged from imprisonment before the expiration of the time for which he or she may be sentenced to be imprisoned as part of his or her punishment. The court shall hear without delay any application made under this subsection (6).

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1425, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-502 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-702 is similar to § 16-11-502 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

It is the purpose of subsection (2) to provide a method of compelling one to pay fine and costs adjudged against him in a criminal case, irrespective of any exemptions. Enderman v. Alexander, 68 Colo. 110, 187 P. 729 (1920) (decided under repealed laws antecedent to CSA, C. 48, § 526).

“Any criminal offense”, in subsection (6), does not include violations of municipal ordinances. People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 284, 599 P.2d 260 (1979).

PART 8

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - SENTENCING OF HABITUAL CRIMINALS

18-1.3-801. Punishment for habitual criminals. (1) (a) A person shall be adjudged an habitual criminal and shall be punished by a term in the department of corrections of life imprisonment if the person:

(I) Is convicted of:

(A) Any class 1 or 2 felony; or

(B) Any class 3 felony that is a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406 (2);
and

(II) Has been twice convicted previously for any of the offenses described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (a).

(b) A felony described in subparagraph (I) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) is:

(I) One based upon charges separately brought and tried, and arising out of separate and distinct criminal episodes, in this or any other state; or

(II) A crime under the laws of any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, which, if committed within this state, would be such a felony described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(c) No person sentenced pursuant to this subsection (1) shall be eligible for parole until such person has served at least forty calendar years.

(d) Nothing in this subsection (1) prohibits the governor from issuing a pardon or a clemency order on a case-by-case basis; however, the governor shall submit a report to the general assembly on each such pardon or clemency order in accordance with section 7 of article IV of the state constitution.

(e) Nothing in this subsection (1) is to be construed to prohibit a person convicted of a class 1 felony from being sentenced pursuant to section 18-1.3-1201, 18-1.3-1302, or 18-1.4-102.

(f) This subsection (1) shall not apply to a person convicted of first or second degree burglary, which person shall be subject to subsections (1.5), (2), and (2.5) of this section and section 18-1.3-804.

(1.5) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (5) of this section, every person convicted in this state of any class 1, 2, 3, 4, or 5 felony who, within ten years of the date of the commission of the said offense, has been twice previously convicted upon charges separately brought and tried, and arising out of separate and distinct criminal episodes, either in this state or elsewhere, of a felony or, under the laws of any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, of a crime which, if committed within this state, would be a felony shall be adjudged an habitual criminal and shall be punished for the felony offense of which such person is convicted by imprisonment in the department of corrections for a term of three times the maximum of the presumptive range pursuant to section 18-1.3-401 for the class of felony of which such person is convicted.

(2) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2) and in subsection (5) of this section, every person convicted in this state of any felony, who has been three times previously convicted, upon charges separately brought and tried, and arising out of separate and distinct criminal episodes, either in this state or elsewhere, of a felony or, under the laws of any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, of a crime which, if committed within this state, would be a felony, shall be adjudged an habitual criminal and shall be punished for the felony offense of which such person is convicted by imprisonment in the department of corrections for a term of four times the maximum of the presumptive range pursuant to section 18-1.3-401 for the class of felony of which such person is convicted. Such former conviction or convictions and judgment or judgments shall be set forth in apt words in the indictment or information. Nothing in this part 8 shall abrogate or affect the punishment by death in any and all crimes punishable by death on or after July 1, 1972.

(b) The provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) shall not apply to a conviction for a class 6 felony pursuant to section 18-18-403.5 (2) (a) (I) or (2) (b) (I), or a conviction for a class 6 felony for attempt or conspiracy to commit unlawful possession of a controlled substance, as described in section 18-18-403.5 (2) (a) (I) or (2) (b) (I), even if the person has been previously convicted of three or more qualifying felony convictions.

(2.5) Any person who is convicted and sentenced pursuant to subsection (2) of this section, or section 16-13-101 (2), C.R.S., as it existed prior to October 1, 2002, who is thereafter convicted of a felony which is a crime of violence pursuant to section 18-1.3-406, shall be adjudged an habitual criminal and shall be punished by a term in the department of corrections of life imprisonment. No person sentenced pursuant to this subsection (2.5) shall be eligible for parole until such person has served at least forty calendar years.

(3) No drug law conviction shall be counted as a prior felony conviction under this section unless such prior offense would be a felony if committed in this state at the time of the commission of the new offense.

(4) A person who meets the criteria set forth in subsection (1) of this section shall be adjudged an habitual criminal and sentenced only in accordance with that subsection and not pursuant to subsections (1.5), (2), and (2.5) of this section.

(5) A conviction for escape, as described in section 18-8-208 (1), (2), or (3), or attempt to escape, as described in section 18-8-208.1 (1), (1.5), or (2), shall not be used for the purpose of adjudicating a person an habitual criminal as described in subsection (1.5) or subsection (2) of this section unless the conviction is based on the offender's escape or attempt to escape from a correctional facility, as defined in section 17-1-102, C.R.S., or from physical custody within a county jail.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1426, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (1)(e) amended, p. 33, § 28, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2.5) amended, p. 978, § 16, effective April 17; IP(1)(a), (1.5), (2), and (2.5) amended, p. 1426, § 5, effective April 29. L. 2011: (2) amended, (SB 11-096), ch. 57, p. 151, § 1, effective March 25. L. 2012: (1.5) and (2)(a) amended and (5) added, (HB 12-1213), ch. 183, p. 695, § 1, effective May 17.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-101 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Amendments to subsection (2.5) by Senate Bill 03-147 and House Bill 03-1236 were harmonized.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (1)(e), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Recent Judicial Modification of Habitual Criminal Act", see 23 Dicta 84 (1946). For article, "Prosecution of Habitual Criminals", see 27 Dicta 376 (1950). For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950). For article, "Joinder of Criminal Charges, Election, Duplicity", see 30 Dicta 117 (1953). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law", see 34 Dicta 98 (1957). For comment on Smalley v. People (134 Colo. 360, 304 P.2d 902 (1956)), see 34 Dicta 126 (1957). For article, "Attacking Prior Convictions in Habitual Criminal Cases: Avoiding the Third Strike", see Colo. Law. 1225 (1982). For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982). For article, "Colorado's Habitual Criminal Act: An Overview", see 12 Colo. Law. 215 (1983). For article, "Criminal Procedure", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with double jeopardy and habitual criminal adjudications, see 61 Den. L.J. 299 (1984). For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing — an Update", see 14 Colo. Law. 2163 (1985).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-702 is similar to § 16-11-502 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

This section must be strictly construed. A law which establishes additional and drastic punishment, under a given state of facts, must be strictly construed. Smalley v. People, 96 Colo. 361, 43 P.2d 385 (1935).

This section must be strictly construed, being in derogation of the common law. Smalley v. People, 116 Colo. 598, 183 P.2d 558 (1947); DeGesualdo v. People, 147 Colo. 426, 364 P.2d 374 (1961).

The habitual criminal statute shall be narrowly construed in favor of the accused. People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

And doubtful construction resolved in defendant's favor. If there is any doubt about the constitutional meaning of the word "felony" in the habitual criminal act, the supreme court must, upon construction, give the construction that favors the liberty of the accused. Smalley v. People, 134 Colo. 360, 304 P.2d 902 (1956).

The habitual criminal act does not create a new crime. It merely provides that the court, in sentencing a defendant after conviction, must consider former convictions in imposing sentence. Wright v. People, 116 Colo. 306, 181 P.2d 447 (1947); Casias v. People, 148 Colo. 544, 367 P.2d 327 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 862, 82 S. Ct. 952, 8 L. Ed.2d 20 (1962).

This section does not establish a substantive offense, but prescribes circumstances wherein one found guilty of a specific crime may be more severely penalized because of his previous criminalities. Casias v. People, 148 Colo. 544, 367 P.2d 327 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 862, 82 S. Ct. 952, 8 L. Ed.2d 20 (1962).

The habitual criminal statute does not define a substantive offense but relates to sentencing enhancement for the underlying felony. People v. Montoya, 640 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Watkins, 684 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1984).

It does not violate the constitution. Section 16 of art. II, Colo. Const., providing that the accused shall be tried by an impartial jury of the county or district in which the offense is alleged to have been committed. Wright v. People, 116 Colo. 306, 181 P.2d 447 (1947).

The habitual criminal act is not unconstitutional since it is not a special law affecting unequally those similarly situated; it does not place a defendant in double jeopardy and it does not require a defendant to be a witness against himself. Vigil v. People, 137 Colo. 161, 322 P.2d 320 (1958).

This section is not invalid as against the objection that it inflicts a double punishment for the same offense, that it inflicts cruel or unusual punishment, or unreasonable punishment, that it denies an accused a fair and impartial trial, or that it imposes a penalty on crimes committed outside a jurisdiction. Vigil v. People, 137 Colo. 161, 322 P.2d 320 (1958).

The habitual criminal provisions do not violate due process as inflicting cruel or unusual punishment. Bernard v. Tinsley, 144 Colo. 244, 355 P.2d 1098 (1960), cert. denied, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S. Ct. 718, 5 L. Ed.2d 708 (1961).

Both the United States supreme court and the Colorado supreme court have ruled unequivocally that habitual criminal statutes are constitutional despite contentions that they violate constitutional strictures dealing with double jeopardy, ex post facto laws, cruel and unusual punishments, due process, equal protection, and privileges and immunities. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

The equal protection, due process, and cruel, and unusual punishment provisions of the United States constitution are not breached by this section. People v. Larson, 194 Colo. 338, 572 P.2d 815 (1977).

Even though a person sentenced to life in prison may be eligible for parole before a person sentenced for a term of not less than 25 years and not more than 50 years under this statute, it does not violate the equal protection clause because the statutory scheme gives the parole board discretionary power to grant parole on the basis of factors other than the length of a prisoner's sentence and this is reasonably related to a legitimate government interest. People v. Alexander, 797 P.2d 1250 (Colo. 1990).

The fact that a judge, and not a jury, finds facts that increase a defendant's sentence beyond that authorized by the jury's verdict does not make the habitual criminal act unconstitutional. People v. Carrasco, 85 P.3d 580 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Benzor, 100 P.3d 542 (Colo. App. 2004).

The constitutionality of this section is well settled in this state. People v. Medina, 193 Colo. 190, 564 P.2d 119 (1977).

Since the habitual criminal act only applies after a defendant is convicted following a criminal trial or plea of guilty, the act is not a bill of attainder. Garcia v. Zavaras, 960 P.2d 1191 (Colo. 1998).

Nor does this section constitute cruel and unusual punishment within the meaning of the eighth amendment. People v. Bergstrom, 190 Colo. 105, 544 P.2d 396 (1975); People v. Renfrow, 193 Colo. 131, 564 P.2d 411 (1977); People v. Martinez, 689 P.2d 653 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Wandel, 713 P.2d 398 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Herrera, 728 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1986).

The absence of sentencing discretion, even when coupled with a prescribed life sentence, does not render subsection (2) of this section facially invalid as violative of the prohibition of cruel and unusual punishment in § 20 of art. II, Colo. Const. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hernandez, 686 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1984).

The uniquely grave nature of the death penalty is the wellspring from which flows the constitutional requirement that mitigating factors be considered in sentencing notwithstanding the number or seriousness of a defendant's prior offenses. No such requirement is included within the Colorado Constitution's prohibition of cruel and unusual punishments as applied to the sentencing of habitual criminals. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hernandez, 686 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1984).

Considering the number and severity of offenses, the court of appeals did not err in concluding that petitioner's sentence to life imprisonment with no possibility of parole for 40 years was not cruel and unusual punishment under the eighth amendment. At time of sentencing the petitioner was 48 years old. Juarez v. People of the State of Colorado, 855 P.2d 818 (Colo. 1993).

Constitutional protection against double jeopardy applies to defendant prosecuted as habitual criminal. People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mason, 643 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1982).

Use of prior conviction does not constitute double jeopardy. Because the habitual criminal statute does not create new or separate offenses, but rather defines statutes which mandate enhanced or different punishment, the use of a prior conviction as a determinant of status does not constitute double jeopardy. People v. Anderson, 43 Colo. App. 178, 605 P.2d 60 (1979).

Neither does prior adjudication as habitual criminal. A second habitual criminal adjudication which resulted in the imposition of a second life sentence before the first such habitual criminal sentence is satisfied does not constitute double jeopardy. People v. Anderson, 43 Colo. App. 178, 605 P.2d 60 (1979).

No denial of equal protection in selective use. Absent a showing of discrimination based on race or other arbitrary criteria, the selective use of the habitual criminal act does not deny any defendant equal protection of the laws. People v. Bergstrom, 190 Colo. 105, 544 P.2d 396 (1975); People v. Renfrow, 193 Colo. 131, 564 P.2d 411 (1977).

Where statistical data does not substantiate completely arbitrary or discriminatory enforcement of this statute based on invidious classifications, defendant's constitutional challenge to the recidivist charge on grounds of equal protection cannot be upheld. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

In prescribing a specific inflexible sentence to life imprisonment for persons found to be habitual criminals on the basis of three prior felony convictions, while allowing various degrees of flexibility in sentencing other offenders, the legislature has not denied such habitual criminals the equal protection of the laws. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hernandez, 686 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1984).

Nor does this section violate the constitutional prohibition on bills of attainder. Velarde v. Zavaras, 960 P.2d 1162 (Colo. 1998).

No sentence is per se constitutional, and habitual criminal statute does not necessarily incorporate proportionality considerations, thus, defendant may have a right to proportionality review in such a case. People v. Deroulet, 22 P.3d 939 (Colo. App. 2000), aff'd, 48 P.3d 520 (Colo. 2002).

Defendant is entitled to a proportionality review of his sentence imposed under this section, even though the 1993 amendments to this section result in sentences that are arguably more proportional. Any increase in proportionality resulting from the amendments is only with regard to the triggering offense. The underlying offenses are not considered by the statute for proportionality purposes. The court recognized, however, that in almost every case, the abbreviated proportionality review will result in a finding that the sentence is constitutionally proportional, thereby preserving the primacy of the general assembly in crafting sentencing schemes. People v. Deroulet, 48 P.3d 520 (Colo. 2002); People v. Allen, 111 P.3d 518 (Colo. App. 2004).

An abbreviated proportionality review consists of a comparison of two subparts, the gravity of the offense and the harshness of the penalty, to discern if an inference of disproportionality is raised. People v. Allen, 111 P.3d 518 (Colo. App. 2004).

Filing habitual criminal charges improper after defendant prevails in a Crim. P. 35 motion. Where habitual criminal charges were never brought against defendant, notwithstanding the fact that such charges could have been filed under the original information, the filing of such charges in the event defendant prevailed in his Crim. P. 35 motion would not be the reinstatement of previously dismissed charges, but rather would be the improper filing of new and additional charges in retaliation for defendant's exercise of his right to seek postconviction review. People v. Ivery, 44 Colo. App. 511, 615 P.2d 80 (1980).

Filing habitual criminal charges after defendant's successful appeal of conviction was improper where the factual basis for the charges was known to the prosecution from the outset. If the filing were permitted, a defendant's right to be free from apprehension of retaliation by virtue of his having exercised his constitutional right to appeal would be illusory. People v. Walters, 802 P.2d 1155 (Colo. App. 1990).

Section does not violate separation of powers. This section does not delegate to prosecutors the power to define criminal conduct, and thus does not run afoul of the constitutional limitations on separation of powers. People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

U.S. supreme court decision in Solem v. Helm (463 U.S. 277, 103 S. Ct. 3001, 77 L. Ed.2d 637 (1983)), requires consideration of whether the lack of violence in convictions supporting a finding of habitual criminality is proportional to the life sentence imposed. People v. Hernandez, 686 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1984); Alvarez v. People, 797 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1990).

Proportionality review under Solem v. Helm is not required where a defendant is sentenced to multiple, consecutive terms for multiple offenses and the total exceeds the defendant's anticipated life span. People v. Bolton, 859 P.2d 311 (Colo. App. 1993), overruled in Close v. People, 48 P.3d 528 (Colo. 2002).

Extended proportionality review not required simply because of the imposition of consecutive sentences. When imposing consecutive sentences the court already exercised its discretion, therefore it may be presumed that such court engaged in a consideration of the nature of the offenses similar to that required by an abbreviated proportionality review. People v. Cabral, 878 P.2d 1 (Colo. App. 1993).

Abbreviated proportionality review is required when life sentence is imposed under habitual criminal statute. Alvarez v. People, 797 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1990); People v. Cisneros, 824 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1991).

During sentencing, upon request, a defendant is also entitled to an abbreviated proportionality review of the sentence under this section even if the sentence under review is less than a life term. People v. McNeely, 68 P.3d 540 (Colo. App. 2002).

Proportionality review is required when a life sentence is imposed under this section even though parole is allowed. People v. Austin, 799 P.2d 408 (Colo. App. 1990) (disagreeing with People v. Herrera annotated above).

If defendant faced with life sentence without possibility of parole, a more extensive review is required rather than a limited proportionality review to protect the defendant against cruel and unusual punishment. Under such extended proportionality review, the court should be guided by objective criteria including: (1) the gravity of the offense and the harshness of the penalty; (2) the sentences imposed on other criminals in the same jurisdiction; and (3) the sentences imposed for commission of the same crime in other jurisdictions. People v. Cisneros, 824 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1991).

Court applied the following Solem v. Helm three-prong analysis used to guide courts in proportionality reviews of life sentences under the eighth amendment: (1) The gravity of the offense and the harshness of the penalty; (2) the sentences imposed on other criminals in the same jurisdiction; and (3) the sentences imposed for commission of the same crime in other jurisdictions. People v. Gaskins, 923 P.2d 292 (Colo. App. 1996).

Extensive review pursuant to People v. Cisneros not required because: (1) Defendant is 48 and although he would be in prison for a minimum of 40 years under this section, there is still a possibility of parole based on mortality tables set out in § 13-25-103, and (2) defendant's criminal record consists of crimes more violent and grave than those in Cisneros. People v. Shackelford, 851 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1992).

When the sentence mandated by the habitual offender statute gives rise to an inference of gross disproportionality, when compared to the predicate offense and prior convictions, an extended review of the sentence is necessary. Two driving offenses do not amount to grave and serious crimes raising a question of disproportionality. People v. Patnode, 126 P.3d 249 (Colo. App. 2005).

An abbreviated proportionality review is sufficient when the crimes supporting a habitual criminal sentence include grave or serious offenses and when the defendant will become eligible for parole. People v. Gaskins, 825 P.2d 30 (Colo. 1992), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1213, 112 S. Ct. 3015, 120 L.Ed.2d 888 (1994); People v. Shackelford, 851 P.2d 218 (Colo. App. 1992).

In determining whether the crimes involved in a habitual criminal conviction are grave or serious the offenses are to be reviewed in light of the harm caused or threatened to the victim or society, and the culpability of the offender. People v. Gaskins, 825 P.2d 30 (Colo. 1992), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1213, 112 S. Ct. 3015, 120 L.Ed.2d 888 (1994); Juarez v. People, 855 P.2d 818 (Colo. 1993).

Violence is a relevant consideration but not the sole criterion by which to evaluate whether defendant's crimes, when examined in combination, are lacking in gravity or seriousness. Conviction for crimes involving sale and distribution of heroin and other drugs along with prior convictions for felonies of robbery, theft, and attempted criminal mischief justifies imposition of life sentence under this act and does not violate § 20 of article II of the Colorado Constitution or the eighth amendment to the U.S. Constitution. People v. Mershon, 874 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1994).

Sentence was not disproportionate where one prior felony conviction was for violation of bail bond conditions but the other prior convictions were for serious offenses. People v. Martinez, 83 P.3d 1174 (Colo. App. 2003).

There is no inference of gross disproportionality when weighing the predicate convictions of attempted aggravated robbery and second degree burglary against the sentence of 48 years. People v. Reese, 155 P.3d 477 (Colo. App. 2006).

Attempted aggravated robbery is a grave or serious offense for purposes of proportionality review. People v. Reese, 155 P.3d 477 (Colo. App. 2006).

A court may consider whether a substantial legislative change in penalties during the pendency of the case should be considered in conjunction with a proportionality review. People v. Penrod, 892 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1994).

A court may consider events that have occurred after defendant committed the offense at issue that may justify a more severe sentence. People v. Penrod, 892 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1994).

In deciding whether to remand a case to the trial court for an abbreviated proportionality review an appellate court is given wide discretion. People v. Gaskins, 825 P.2d 30 (Colo. 1992), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1213, 112 S. Ct. 3015, 120 L.Ed.2d 888 (1994).

Proportionality review ordinarily should be conducted by trial court in first instance, subject to appellate review. People v. Austin, 799 P.2d 408 (Colo. App. 1990).

But neither this section governing sentencing of habitual criminals, nor former § 18-1-105 (now § 18-1.3-401) governing felony sentencing in general, specifically addresses the issue of what sentence may be imposed after a finding by the trial court that the habitual criminal sentence, big or little, would be disproportionate. Therefore, once a finding of disproportionality has been made, a trial court in resentencing should consider all sentencing options otherwise authorized by statute. People v. Valdez, 56 P.3d 1148 (Colo. App. 2002) (decided under former law).

In absence of a need for a refined analysis inquiring into the details of the specific offenses or a detailed comparison of sentences imposed, an appellate court is as well positioned as a trial court to conduct a proportionality review, and there is no justification for remand to the trial court. People v. Gaskins, 825 P.2d 30 (Colo. 1992), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1213, 112 S. Ct. 3015, 120 L.Ed.2d 888 (1994).

Court of appeals was as well positioned as trial court to conduct proportionality review. Juarez v. People, 855 P.2d 818 (Colo. 1993).

If the appellate court determines that additional evidence is necessary or desirable, the court should remand for an initial proportionality review by the trial court. People v. Gaskins, 825 P.2d 30 (Colo. 1992), cert. denied, 505 U.S. 1213, 112 S. Ct. 3015, 120 L.Ed.2d 888 (1994).

However, proportionality review is not required where sentence was an enhanced term of years and not a life sentence with no possibility of parole. People v. Herrera, 728 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1986), overruled in Close v. People, 48 P.3d 528 (Colo. 2002).

Trial court erred in substituting a 22-year sentence for the 36-year sentence mandated under this section based on an abbreviated proportionality review. Legislatively mandated sentencing schemes are to be given great deference by court engaging in proportionality review. Adjusting a sentence by a small number of years in either direction goes beyond a determination of disproportionality and improperly interferes with the general assembly's role of determining sentencing schemes. People v. Deroulet, 48 P.3d 520 (Colo. 2002).

Consecutive life sentences not unconstitutional. The exercise of the trial court's discretion that the defendant should serve several of his life sentences consecutively is not an unconstitutional interference with the duties of the parole board. People v. Montgomery, 669 P.2d 1387 (Colo. 1983).

Purpose of this section is to punish more severely those who show a propensity toward repeated criminal conduct. People v. Jimmy, 44 Colo. App. 352, 620 P.2d 42 (1980), aff'd, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982); People v. District Court, 711 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1985).

The policy of the habitual criminal statute is to punish repeat offenders. People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

The legislative purpose of this section is to punish more severely those who show a propensity toward repeated criminal conduct without regard to an opportunity between convictions for the defendant to reform. Jimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

An important rationale for the habitual criminal statute is that enhanced punishment is appropriate when an individual has shown a propensity toward repeated criminal acts. Jimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

The deterrent purpose of this section is to put the defendant on notice that future conduct of the same kind will result in more severe penalties. People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

Judgment is necessary predicate for sentence enhancement. A plea of guilty may not be used to enhance punishment, for the reason that the conviction process is incomplete. A judgment is a necessary predicate before a conviction may be used for sentence enhancement purposes. Hafelfinger v. District Court, 674 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1984).

Enhanced penalty should not be imposed until offender has opportunity to reform because of the salutary discipline from the punishment for the first conviction. People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

There is no requirement of a series of warnings and opportunities to reform. Gimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

Ten-year limitation applies to previous convictions. The 10-year limitation of this section applies only to convictions previous to the commission of the offense subject to the habitual criminal penalty enhancement. People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

Sentencing is matter reserved for trial judge. The jury's function under this section is to determine how many, if any, prior felony convictions have been suffered by the defendant. Once this determination is made the act of sentencing is a matter reserved for the trial judge acting under applicable statute. Swift v. People, 171 Colo. 178, 465 P.2d 391 (1970).

But this section makes mandatory the imposition of a life sentence upon a person who has been convicted for the fourth time of having committed a felony. Wolff v. People, 123 Colo. 487, 230 P.2d 581 (1951); Farrell v. District Court, 135 Colo. 329, 311 P.2d 410 (1957); Bernard v. Tinsley, 144 Colo. 244, 355 P.2d 1098 (1960), cert. denied, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S. Ct. 718, 5 L. Ed.2d 708 (1961).

Once a defendant is adjudged an habitual criminal, the court is required to impose a life sentence. People v. Montoya, 640 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Reyes, 728 P.2d 349 (Colo. App. 1986).

Sentencing court has no authority to ignore the penalty provisions of this section and to impose sentences below the statutory minimums set by said section. People v. Montgomery, 737 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1987).

If a defendant is advised that evidence of prior convictions introduced in the substantive trial can be used only for credibility proposes, no additional advice is needed that such evidence cannot be used as evidence to prove the habitual offender charges. People v. Windsor, 876 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1993).

The legislature's adoption of procedural safeguards under the Habitual Criminal Act was not intended to modify in any manner the provision of the act which requires imposition of a life sentence where an accused has been found guilty of a felony and the jury also finds that he has been three times previously convicted of other felonies alleged against him in the indictment or information. People v. District Court, 711 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1985).

And a defendant who requested an instruction on a lesser felony offense not included in the offense charged in the information placed himself in the same position as if that offense had originally been included in the charging document, for purposes of sentencing under the Habitual Criminal Act. People v. District Court, 711 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1985).

The legislature did not intend to change the effective date of the 1993 amendment to this section in its 1994 amendment, renumbering subsection (1) as subsection (1.5), and intended to maintain the original July 1, 1993, effective date of the renumbered subsection. People v. Pichon, 929 P.2d 3 (Colo. App. 1996).

Inasmuch as habitual criminal counts do not constitute "offenses", probable cause need not be established in the preliminary hearing to bind these charges over to the district court. Maestas v. District Court, 189 Colo. 443, 541 P.2d 889 (1975).

The required former convictions must be felonies under this section. Smalley v. People, 134 Colo. 360, 304 P.2d 902 (1956).

"Felony" defined. The supreme court has expressly recognized § 4 of art. XVIII, Colo. Const., as a definition of the term felony, and that the test by which to determine whether an offense is a felony is by the place of confinement for the prescribed punishment. Smalley v. People, 134 Colo. 360, 304 P.2d 902 (1956).

Class 4 felony qualifies under subsection (1). A class 4 felony may be punished by a sentence of eight years, and, as such, qualifies under § 16-13-101 (1) as a felony for which the maximum penalty prescribed by law exceeds five years. People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981).

Class 6 felony is specifically not included in subsection (1.5) and therefore does not fall within the purview of this section. People v. Cooper, 205 P.3d 475 (Colo. App. 2008).

"Convicted" means verdict or plea of guilty. Since the definition of "judgment of conviction" in Crim. P. 32(c) was not in existence at the time the general assembly adopted the habitual criminal act, the general assembly, in employing the words "conviction" and "convicted" in the act, intended to use them in their popular sense, i.e., a verdict of guilty or a plea of guilty. Swift v. People, 174 Colo. 259, 488 P.2d 80 (1971); People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990).

Conviction based upon a plea of nolo contendere is a "conviction" for purposes of enhancing punishment pursuant to this section. People v. Goodwin, 197 Colo. 47, 593 P.2d 326 (1979); Blehm v. People, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

"Conviction" as used in the habitual offender statute, includes a judgment of conviction entered upon a plea of nolo contendere. People v. Windsor, 876 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1993).

"Driving under the influence-bodily injury" conviction under California law is not a "drug law conviction" under this section. Wilczynski v. People, 891 P.2d 998 (Colo. 1995).

"Driving under the influence-bodily injury" conviction under California law does constitute prior felony conviction under this section. Wilczynski v. People, 891 P.2d 998 (Colo. 1995).

Conviction of lesser nonincluded felony. When a guilty verdict to a lesser nonincluded felony is followed by a verdict finding that the defendant has previously been convicted of three prior felonies which were charged against him in separate counts of the information, subsection (2) mandates the imposition of a sentence to life imprisonment. People v. District Court, 711 P.2d 666 (Colo. 1985).

The term "first conviction", as used in this section, means punishment for a first conviction under a felony for which defendant is currently charged and convicted. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

Whether conviction results from jury determination of guilt or from a guilty plea is immaterial. People v. Gimmy, 44 Colo. App. 352, 620 P.2d 42 (1980), aff'd, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

A predicate conviction under this section may result either from a conviction following trial, or upon entry of a guilty plea. Gimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

Jury verdicts regarding defendant's status as an habitual offender were not unreliable because jury forms failed to require that the jury make findings on all elements of defendant's habitual criminal status for sentencing where defendant did not assert that the jury instructions were incomplete or inaccurate with respect to each of the elements required to be established by this section. People v. Windsor, 876 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1993).

Even though the jury had not made appropriate findings on defendant's status under the "little" habitual statute, the trial court erred in not considering the range of sentences for habitual offenders under subsection (1). Jurors are not required to make any special findings with respect to each element specified in this section. People v. Gaskins, 923 P.2d 292 (Colo. App. 1996).

The wording of the information properly put defendant on notice of the essential elements for habitual criminal sentencing so that defendant could adequately defend himself although the words "conviction" and "judgment" do not appear in the information.

The information itemized defendant's four prior felonies and recited that the defendant had pled guilty or nolo contendere to and been sentenced for each. People v. Ortega, 899 P.2d 236 (Colo. App. 1994).

Jury instructions were not defective because jury was not instructed to determine whether previous convictions had occurred within ten years of the commission of the current offense or whether the convictions were for felonies. The dates of the previous offenses were specified in the charges, and the classification of the previous offenses as felonies is a question of law, and not of fact. People v. Chambers, 900 P.2d 1249 (Colo. App. 1994).

Prior convictions are considered as aggravating factors for increased punishment. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 235 (1977).

What "prior conviction" includes. The general assembly intended the term "prior conviction" to include those judgments of conviction that are on appeal. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 235 (1977).

If prior convictions on appeal were not included, many recent felony convictions might be effectively exempted from the operation of this section. This would be clearly inconsistent with the obvious purpose of the statute, which is to punish repeat offenders. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 235 (1977).

"Previously convicted" means that the convictions upon which the habitual criminal counts are based must be "previous" to the commission of the present offense. Gimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

Phrase "twice previously convicted" as used in this section refers back to "commission of the said offense". People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

Prior convictions need not be committed sequentially. There is no requirement that each of the crimes on which the habitual criminal charges are based be committed sequentially; in other words, that the second of the predicate crimes be committed after commission and conviction of the first crime, the third be committed after commission and conviction of the second, and so on. Gimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

The habitual criminal statute requires that neither the prior felonies nor the resulting judgments of conviction occur in any particular sequence in relation to each other. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 643 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1982).

It is the commission of the act which gives rise to the conviction, and not the time when conviction occurs, which controls. People v. Ramirez, 652 P.2d 1077 (Colo. App. 1982).

So long as convictions entered prior to commission of pending offense. The determinative consideration is whether judgments of conviction on the prior felonies had been entered prior to the commission of the substantive offense charged in the pending case. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 643 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1982).

The court may use two felony convictions that were later reclassified by the legislature after defendant's convictions as misdemeanors for a habitual offender charge. People v. Patnode, 126 P.3d 249 (Colo. App. 2005).

Effective date of prior conviction is not the time that a plea of guilty is entered by a defendant, nor when a jury's verdict of guilt is received by the court, nor is it the time a finding of guilt is made by the trial judge in a trial to the court, but rather the time of a prior conviction for the purposes of this section is the date the judgment of conviction is entered in the trial court. People v. Jacquez, 196 Colo. 569, 588 P.2d 871 (1979); People v. Skufca, 141 P.3d 876 (Colo. App. 2005), rev'd on other grounds, 176 P.3d 83 (Colo. 2008).

Where prior conviction cannot be used for enhancement. Where defendant never admitted his conviction of an earlier offense, and the issue was not submitted to the jury which convicted him of the present substantive offense, that earlier conviction could not be considered by the trial court for purposes of enhancement of sentence under the habitual criminal statute. Vigil v. People, 196 Colo. 522, 587 P.2d 1196 (1978).

Where defendant who was subject to sentencing act in an earlier conviction was not properly advised of the penalties under such sentencing act prior to pleading guilty, plea could not be basis for enhancement under habitual criminal statute. People v. Sutka, 713 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1985).

Defendant's previous convictions cannot be used for enhancement where the record does not establish that defendant understood the true nature of the charges to which he pled guilty. Lacy v. People, 775 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1989).

Prior conviction for felonies in another state held to be invalid for enhancing defendant's sentence under habitual offender statute where there was a history of earlier findings of not guilty by reason of insanity and no subsequent formal finding of sanity. People v. Blehm, 791 P.2d 1177 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

Prior conviction in Colorado by one previously adjudged insane may be valid notwithstanding that he has not been judicially declared to have been restored to sanity. People v. Blehm, 791 P.2d 1177 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

Prior conviction for causing bodily injury while driving under the influence under California statute was not "drug law conviction" under subsection (3) and was counted as prior felony conviction for sentencing purposes under this section. Categorization of driving under the influence as offense in the vehicle code as opposed to offense relating to controlled substances precludes a determination that general assembly intended to consider it a drug law offense. People v. Wilczynski, 873 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1993).

Prior charges which do not result in convictions are irrelevant, and therefore, should not be admitted in a habitual criminal hearing. People v. Reed, 42 Colo. App. 275, 598 P.2d 148 (1979); People v. Nieto, 715 P.2d 1262 (Colo. App. 1985).

Admission to documents in a habitual criminal hearing showing prior crimes charged but which did not result in convictions is not reversible error unless prejudice is shown. People v. Reed, 42 Colo. App. 275, 598 P.2d 148 (1979); People v. Nieto, 715 P.2d 1262 (Colo. App. 1985).

Convictions sustained after subject crime not basis for enhanced penalty. It is improper for the trial court to allow convictions which were sustained after the commission of the subject crime to be the basis for habitual criminal counts. People v. Nees, 200 Colo. 392, 615 P.2d 690 (1980).

Convictions on separate charges obtained on the same day. The fact that convictions result from charges separately brought and tried and obtained pursuant to guilty pleas on the same day does not reduce them to one conviction for purposes of this section. People v. Gimmy, 44 Colo. App. 352, 620 P.2d 42 (1980), aff'd, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982); People v. Germany, 643 P.2d 776 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Johnson, 644 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Hodge, 644 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1981).

Where the charges against the defendants were separately brought and would have been tried separately but for the defendant's decisions to enter guilty pleas, the convictions thereby obtained satisfy the definition of predicate felonies in the habitual criminal statute. Gimmy v. People, 645 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1982).

To determine whether two convictions entered on the same date as part of a single plea agreement arose "out of separate and distinct criminal episodes", it is necessary to determine whether the convictions arose from a series of acts arising from the same criminal episode, such as physical acts that are committed simultaneously or in close sequence, that occur in the same place or closely related places, and that form part of a schematic whole. People v. Jones, 967 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1997).

Convictions may be separate even though sentences concurrent. Separate judgments of convictions may result from the separate charges in question, even though the sentences are made concurrent. People v. Ybarra, 652 P.2d 182 (Colo. App. 1982).

A guilty verdict that has withstood a motion for new trial and for which a defendant has been sentenced can be used as a prior conviction for purposes of bringing an habitual criminal charge against a defendant in conjunction with a later felony charge. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 235 (1977).

The error, if any, in admitting a questionable federal conviction was harmless because four other previous felonies were proved. People v. Boehmer, 872 P.2d 1320 (Colo. App. 1993).

This section embraces every felony committed by a defendant here or in a foreign state, and if a felony in the foreign state, it satisfies the statute. The language of this section refutes the contention that all crimes, wherever committed, and regardless of their grade at the situs of the crime must be proven to be felonies if committed within this state. Hahn v. People, 126 Colo. 451, 251 P.2d 316 (1952).

Conviction of a felony in a sister state, even though crime charged is not a felony in Colorado, is sufficient to authorize sentence under this section. A reading of this section admits of no other interpretation. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961); People v. Swain, 43 Colo. App. 343, 607 P.2d 396 (1979).

It makes no difference for the purposes of enhanced punishment under this section that a previously committed crime is not a felony in Colorado if it is a felony where the conviction was had. People v. Renfrow, 199 Colo. 101, 605 P.2d 915 (1980).

The time as well as the place of commission of a crime should determine its status as a felony under this section. People v. Renfrow, 199 Colo. 101, 605 P.2d 915 (1980).

Focus of this section is on "crime", not conduct, occurring in foreign state. Therefore, the inquiry as to whether a foreign predicate misdemeanor conviction would have been a felony in Colorado is limited to a comparison of the statutes, or, where required, to the operative and material allegations of the charging document. Otherwise the defendant could be subjected to a trial of the foreign matter in the habitual criminal phase at a time and place far removed from the site of the crime. People v. Nguyen, 899 P.2d 352 (Colo. App. 1995) (decided under statute as it existed prior to 1994 amendment to subsection (1)).

Allegation and proof necessary to sustain imposition of enhanced penalty under this section focus upon the entry of judgment against a defendant, not on the defendant's plea or a verdict of guilt. Where the prosecutor charged and proved the entry of judgment for three prior convictions, the trial court erred in ruling that the enhanced penalty could not be imposed. People v. Chavez, 198 Colo. 309, 599 P.2d 261 (1979).

An authenticated copy of the record of former convictions and judgments is prima facie evidence of the convictions and may be used as evidence in a habitual criminal conviction proceeding. People v. Gilmore, 97 P.3d 123 (Colo. App. 2003).

Discretionary reformatory sentence was conviction of a felony. Conviction of the crime of robbery resulting in a sentence to the reformatory rather than to the penitentiary is nevertheless conviction of a felony within the meaning of this section since sentence could have been to the penitentiary notwithstanding the fact that defendant was under the age of 21 years. Martinez v. Tinsley, 142 Colo. 495, 351 P.2d 879 (1960). But see Smalley v. People, 134 Colo. 360, 304 P.2d 902 (1956); Villalon v. People, 145 Colo. 327, 358 P.2d 1018 (1961) (decided under former statute imposing reformatory sentence as a matter of right).

The trial court's ruling that defendant being under 21 years, convicted of a robbery, and subject to sentence to either the reformatory or the penitentiary was guilty of a felony, was correct and within the purview of this section; it does not offend the provisions of § 4 of art. XVIII, Colo. Const. Sandoval v. People, 162 Colo. 416, 426 P.2d 968 (1967).

Conviction in county court not felony. Before a defendant can be adjudged an habitual criminal, he must have had two prior convictions of felony, and a conviction of grand larceny in the county court is not conviction of a felony. Latham v. People, 136 Colo. 252, 317 P.2d 894 (1957).

The increased punishment under this statute is not arbitrary because it can only be imposed after the proof of the additional facts of prior convictions. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

The recidivist statute does not attempt to resentence a defendant for a prior felony. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

Sentences imposed under habitual criminal statute supersede those statutorily mandated for specific crimes. People v. Anderson, 43 Colo. App. 178, 605 P.2d 60 (1979).

Rather than imposing a separate sentence for defendant's status, habitual criminal statutes merely substitute a different and more severe sentencing range than the penalty provided for in the criminal statute or statutes which were violated by defendant and which constitute the underlying offense or offenses. The recidivist statute is aimed at habitual criminals and the punishment is for the new crime only, but is heavier if he is an habitual criminal. People v. Early, 692 P.2d 1116 (Colo. App. 1984).

No separate sentence is to be imposed for the habitual criminal adjudication. People v. Reyes, 728 P.2d 349 (Colo. App. 1986).

The sentence to be imposed under this section relates only to the enhancement of punishment of the felony for which defendant is currently charged and convicted. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

A convicted defendant is not foreclosed from later challenging the enhanced sentence resulting from the habitual criminal charge if, in fact, a prior conviction is reversed. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 351, 559 P.2d 235 (1977).

In an enhanced sentencing proceeding, the defendant may collaterally attack the constitutional validity of the underlying convictions, but defendant must make a prima facie showing that a prior conviction is invalid in order to challenge the use of that conviction in a later proceeding. People v. Montoya, 640 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990).

Collateral attacks pursuant to Crim. P. 35(c) on infirmities related to adjudication of habitual criminality under this section should be considered under § 16-5-402 (1), limiting the time within which such attacks must be made. People v. Hampton, 876 P.2d 1236 (Colo. 1994).

Whether the previous convictions were constitutionally procured is an issue which may properly be raised in an habitual offender proceeding. People v. Gonzales, 38 Colo. App. 522, 565 P.2d 945 (1977).

Prior unconstitutional conviction may not be used. A prior conviction obtained in violation of a constitutional right of the accused cannot be used in a subsequent criminal proceeding to support guilt or to enhance punishment. Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982); People v. Cisneros, 665 P.2d 145 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Johnson, 699 P.2d 5 (Colo. App. 1984).

Procedure where prior conviction alleged to have been unconstitutionally obtained. In attacking the constitutional validity of a prior conviction in habitual criminal proceedings, the defendant must make a prima facie showing that the challenged conviction was unconstitutionally obtained. Once a prima facie showing is made, the conviction is not admissible unless the prosecution establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that the conviction was obtained in accordance with the defendant's constitutional rights. Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982); People v. Johnson, 699 P.2d 5 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Wade, 708 P.2d 1366 (Colo. 1985); Lacy v. People, 775 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1989); People v. Mogul, 812 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1991).

Procedure applied in People v. Reyes, 728 P.2d 349 (Colo. App. 1986).

A mere showing of uncertainty about whether the defendant's constitutional rights were fully protected is not sufficient to support vacating an enhanced penalty which was based on a claim that a guilty plea was uncon-stitutionally obtained. People v. Ball, 813 P.2d 759 (Colo. App. 1990).

Collateral estoppel not applicable in context of an habitual criminal proceeding to a trial court ruling which merely excludes evidence concerning defendant's status as an habitual criminal and, thus, district court was not barred from considering validity of a plea advisement that was previously found to be invalid for purpose of sentence enhancement in an habitual criminal proceeding. Wright v. People, 690 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1984).

Prior conviction decreed nullity cannot be reaffirmed by defendant. The defendant cannot "reaffirm" the validity of a prior conviction at an habitual offender hearing when the court of appeals has decreed by final judgment that the prior conviction is a nullity. People v. Dugger, 673 P.2d 351 (Colo. 1983).

Proof of habitual criminality through testimonial admissions unconstitutional. Use of defendant's testimonial admissions to prior felony convictions as substantive evidence of his habitual criminality violates due process of law, by unduly burdening defendant's constitutional right to testify in his own defense. People v. Chavez, 632 P.2d 574 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hernandez, 686 P.2d 1325 (Colo. 1984).

The decision in People v. Chavez, is to be given retroactive application. People v. Tafoya, 654 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1982).

If a defendant's guilty plea in a previous conviction was not voluntary and knowing, it was obtained in violation of due process, and a conviction based thereon cannot be used for the purpose of enhancing the punishment for another offense. People v. Gonzales, 38 Colo. App. 522, 565 P.2d 945 (1977).

The admissibility of prior guilty pleas in a habitual criminal hearing turns on whether they meet the constitutional requirements for voluntariness, not whether they satisfy the particular standards of a state's substantive law. Blehm v. People, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

Prior convictions held to have been obtained constitutionally. People v. Chavez, 650 P.2d 1310 (Colo. App. 1982).

Guilty pleas or pleas of nolo contendere which meet the constitutional requirements for voluntariness will be admissible in habitual criminal proceedings even if they do not satisfy more stringent admissibility requirements under another state's substantive law. Blehm v. People, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

If evidence is insufficient to prove that two of defendant's three convictions were separate and distinct, defendant may be resentenced under subsection (1.5). People v. Jones, 967 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1997).

When indigent entitled to transcript of prior proceedings. Although an indigent defendant is entitled to a free transcript of prior proceedings when it is necessary for an effective defense in an enhanced sentencing proceeding, the defendant must make a showing that the furnishing of the transcripts would not be just a vain and useless gesture. People v. Montoya, 640 P.2d 234 (Colo. App. 1981).

Plea of guilty under less severe provisions of section proper. Where a plea of guilty to the substantive charge was made by the defendant with the understanding that the less severe provisions of the habitual criminal act only would be invoked against him, and the trial court approved of such disposition of the case and eliminated from consideration one of the counts of the information, and imposed sentence accordingly, the sentence was valid and a writ of habeas corpus was properly denied. Martinez v. Tinsley, 142 Colo. 495, 351 P.2d 879 (1960).

Indeterminate commitment under the sex offenders act was in lieu of prisoner's sentence under the habitual criminal act, and, therefore, the trial court erred in sentencing him to concurrent terms under the respective statutes. People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 379, 520 P.2d 751 (1974).

Sentence imposed under this section was valid. Vigil v. People, 137 Colo. 161, 322 P.2d 320 (1958); Hackett v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 203, 352 P.2d 799, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 874, 81 S. Ct. 118, 5 L. Ed. 96 (1960).

Where petitioner's sentence under this section cannot be said to be void, he did not seek modification thereof, and there was no showing that he is presently being illegally incarcerated, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus was properly denied. Wright v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 258, 365 P.2d 691 (1961).

Defendant's sentence under habitual criminal statute to a term of 40 to 50 years was not disproportionate to his conduct or grossly excessive where he had been convicted of burglary and aggravated robbery before his present conviction for first-degree burglary. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

Sentence of 25 years and 4 months is neither cruel or unusual, nor is it disproportionate where defendant was convicted of 3 theft-related felony offenses in 10 years. People v. Nieto, 715 P.2d 1262 (Colo. App. 1985).

The requirement in § 16-11-304 for a definite sentence is also a requirement for any increased sentence imposed under § 16-13-101. Thus, it was proper for a trial court to impose a definite sentence. People v. Chambers, 749 P.2d 984 (Colo. App. 1987).

Reinstatement of prior felony conviction. Where a prior felony conviction has been dismissed from consideration in habitual criminal proceedings and, without consideration of that conviction, the defendant could not be adjudged an habitual criminal, then it is appropriate that the people be entitled to reinstate that conviction subject to proof of authenticity. People v. Vigil, 39 Colo. App. 462, 570 P.2d 13 (1977).

Reinstatement of all charges where defendant was allowed to plead guilty to the wrong habitual criminal charges. Vacating guilty pleas and reinstating all charges, including habitual criminal charges, is appropriate remedy where, as part of a plea agreement to avoid "big" habitual criminal charges, defendant pled guilty to robbery, violent crime, and to two "little" habitual criminal charges. People v. Martinez, 751 P.2d 660 (Colo. App. 1987).

Where defendant was convicted of aggravated robbery and was adjudicated a habitual criminal, a subsequent reversal of the adjudication of habitual criminality negated its sentence enhancing effect and required resentencing for the underlying charge since it was not clear from the record that the robbery sentence was imposed independently from the habitual criminal adjudication. When resentencing the trial court could consider all relevant and material factors, including new evidence incorporated in a supplemental presentence report. People v. Watkins, 684 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1984).

Mittimus listing "habitual criminal" as crime may be corrected. Where the mittimus erroneously states "habitual criminal" as the crime for which sentence was imposed the only relief to which petitioner is entitled is a correction of the mittimus to conform to the judgment finding him guilty of aggravated robbery, not to a writ of habeas corpus. Bernard v. Tinsley, 144 Colo. 244, 355 P.2d 1098 (1960), cert. denied, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S. Ct. 718, 5 L. Ed.2d 708 (1961).

Habitual criminal act was validly adopted. Ryan v. Tinsley, 316 F.2d 430 (10th Cir.), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 375 U.S. 17, 84 S. Ct. 139, 11 L. Ed.2d 46 (1963).

Out-of-state felonies may be the basis for a habitual criminal count and the people need not allege or prove that the crimes the defendant committed would have been felonies if they had been committed in this state. People v. Drake, 785 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1990); People v. Wilczynski, 873 P.2d 10 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Johnson, 74 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where both the violent crimes statute and the habitual criminal statute apply, the sentencing provisions of both statutes apply and a judge must impose the defendant's sentences to run consecutively. People v. Pena, 794 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1990).

The sentencing provisions of this section do not preempt other statutory enhancement provisions. People v. Perry, 981 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1999).

The provisions of § 18-1-105 (9.7)(a) and (9.7)(b)(XI) which provide that the maximum presumptive range for a class 4 felony shall be increased by two years are not preempted by this section. People v. Perry, 981 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1999).

Nothing in this section expressly authorizes trial courts, upon a finding of unusual and extenuating circumstances, to modify crime of violence sentences imposed pursuant to § 18-1-105 (9). People v. Perry, 981 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1999).

If a convicted sex offender is subject to both subsection (1.5) and the provisions of the Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act of 1998, both statutes must be reconciled. In such case, the trial court must impose a prison sentence for an indeterminate term of at least three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for the level of offense committed and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life. People v. Apodaca, 58 P.3d 1126 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where the defendant was convicted of "extraordinary risk of harm" crime and adjudicated as a habitual criminal, trial court properly calculated defendant's sentence by increasing the maximum presumptive range sentence pursuant to § 18-1-105 (9.7) and then multiplying it by three pursuant to subsection (1.5). People v. Hoefer, 961 P.2d 563 (Colo. App. 1998).

The preemptive scope of the habitual criminal statute does not extend so far as to preclude the mandatory consecutive sentencing requirement for multiple crimes of violence arising out of the same incident. People v. Pena, 794 P.2d 1070 (Colo. App. 1990).

The language "three times the maximum of the presumptive range" as used in subsection (1.5) refers only to sentences of less than life imprisonment and thus trial court erred in imposing three terms of life imprisonment without parole for a defendant charged with one count of first degree murder for the killing of a single victim. People v. Holloway, 973 P.2d 721 (Colo. App. 1998).

Defendant's drug conviction, as both an habitual criminal under this section and as a special drug offender under a prior version of § 18-18-407, should have resulted in a prison sentence determined by the additional aggravating circumstances of the special drug offender section. By using a formula in the special drug offender section that increases the sentence length without reclassifying the offense for which it is imposed, the legislature requires the application of two different sentence enhancing provisions when the special offender is also an habitual criminal, independently mandating sentence enhancement for different aggravating circumstances. Martinez v. People, 69 P.3d 1029 (Colo. 2003).

Neither this section nor § 18-18-407 purports to limit the effect of additional aggravation or to place an upper limit on the ultimate sentence for a defendant to whom its provisions apply. Martinez v. People, 69 P.3d 1029 (Colo. 2003).

Statute as basis for jurisdiction. See Munsell v. People, 122 Colo. 402, 222 P.2d 615 (1950); Hackett v. People, 158 Colo. 304, 406 P.2d 331 (1965); Silva v. People, 170 Colo. 152, 459 P.2d 285 (1969); Mingo v. People, 171 Colo. 474, 468 P.2d 849 (1970); People v. Hill, 182 Colo. 253, 512 P.2d 257 (1973).

The presumptive range for a class 6 felony could not be doubled and then the sentence quadrupled because the defendant was also considered an habitual offender. The defendant was convicted of stalking while the defendant was on parole from prison. The stalking offense qualified the defendant as an habitual offender. Stalking is a class 6 felony. Section 18-1-105 requires the doubling of the presumptive range of the conviction for offenses that occur while on parole. Subsection (2) requires the quadrupling of offenses committed by habitual offenders. Subsection (2), however, does not authorize the quadrupling of a sentence that is already increased. People v. Bastian, 981 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1998).

Court required to apply both § 18-18-405 and this section. A second violation of § 18-18-405 for unlawful distribution and sale of a schedule II controlled substance increases the offense to a class 2 felony. If defendant has been convicted of three previous felonies, subsection (2) requires court to sentence defendant to four times the maximum of the presumptive range for a class 2 felony. People v. Cordova, 199 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2007).

18-1.3-802. Evidence of former convictions - identity. On any trial under the provisions of this section and sections 18-1.3-801 and 18-1.3-803, a duly authenticated copy of the record of former convictions and judgments of any court of record for any of said crimes against the party indicted or informed against shall be prima facie evidence of such convictions and may be used in evidence against such party. Identification photographs and fingerprints that are part of the record of such former convictions and judgments, or are part of the records kept at the place of such party's incarceration or by any custodian authorized by the executive director of the department of corrections after sentencing for any of such former convictions and judgments, shall be prima facie evidence of the identity of such party and may be used in evidence against him or her.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1428, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-102 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado's Habitual Criminal Act: An Overview", see 12 Colo. Law 215 (1983).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-802 is similar to § 16-13-102 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-13-2, C.R.S. 1963, § 39-13-2, CRS 53, and CSA, C. 48, § 555(2),

Applied in People v. Enlow, 135 Colo. 249, 310 P.2d 539 (1957); Hatch v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 170, 352 P.2d 670 (1960); Jaramillo v. District Court, 173 Colo. 459, 480 P.2d 841 (1971); People v. Marquez, 190 Colo. 255, 546 P.2d 482 (1976); People v. Keelin, 39 Colo. App. 124, 565 P.2d 957 (1977); People v. Smith, 195 Colo. 404, 579 P.2d 1129 (1978); People v. Lake, 195 Colo. 454, 580 P.2d 788 (1978); Hampton v. District Court, 199 Colo. 104, 605 P.2d 54 (1980); People v. Watkins, 200 Colo. 163, 613 P.2d 633 (1980); People v. Self, 200 Colo. 406, 615 P.2d 693 (1980); People v. McKnight, 200 Colo. 486, 617 P.2d 1178 (1980); People v. Cabral, 629 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1981); People v. Shaver, 630 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981); People v. Trujillo, 631 P.2d 146 (Colo. 1981); People v. Henry, 631 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hotopp, 632 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981); People v. Wiedemer, 641 P.2d 289 (Colo. App. 1981); Massey v. People, 649 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hale, 654 P.2d 849 (Colo. 1982); People v. Leonard, 673 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1983); People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court ex rel. County of Fremont, 673 P.2d 998 (Colo. 1983); People v. Akers, 746 P.2d 1381 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Daniels, 973 P.2d 641 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Copeland, 976 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 2 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2000).

relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

An authenticated copy of the record of conviction in a court of record is required under this section to constitute prima facie evidence of a former conviction. Certified copies of the record of former convictions are not sufficient. Coppinger v. People, 152 Colo. 9, 380

P.2d 19, cert. denied, 375 U.S. 923, 84 S. Ct. 270, 11 L. Ed.2d 167 (1963).

Certified copies of public records provide proper authentication of former convictions and judgments for purposes of this section. People v. Frost, 5 P.3d 317 (Colo. App. 1999).

Authentication requirement satisfied.

There is no definition as to what is intended by the term "duly authenticated". However, certified copies of final judgments entered in three separate proceedings in each of which the defendant was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary of a sister state, each being certified as a full, true, and complete copy of the judgment and sentence of the court and authenticated by the clerk of that court under his signature and the seal thereof, accompanied by the certificate of the judge of the court to the effect that the individual who signed as clerk is the clerk of the court; that he is the custodian of the records and papers thereof; that the said attestation is in due form and according to law; and then the further certificate by the clerk that the judge who so certified is a duly elected, commissioned, and qualified judge of said circuit court, all of said certifications being impressed with the seal of the court, are amply and properly certified public records and come within all definitions of due authentication. Brown v. People, 124 Colo. 412, 238 P.2d 847 (1951).

In addition to certified copies of the record of former convictions and judgments of a court of record, certificates of authenticity by the judge of the court that the clerk who certified the records is in fact the clerk of the court and is the custodian of the records and papers thereof, and that his attestation is in due form and according to law, and the additional certificate by the clerk that the judge who so certified is the duly elected, commissioned and qualified judge of said court are essential before the documents may be received under the statute. Coppinger v. People, 152 Colo. 9, 380 P.2d 19, cert. denied, 375 U.S. 923, 84 S. Ct. 270, 11 L. Ed.2d 167 (1963).

Sufficiency of documents relating to conviction. The habitual criminal statute requires "a duly authenticated copy of the record of former convictions and judgments". Thus, certified copies of public records provide proper authentication under this section. People v. Johnson, 699 P.2d 5 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Bielecki, 964 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Shepherd, 43 P.3d 693 (Colo. App. 2001).

Contrary to defendant's contentions, there is no requirement of a reciprocal attestation of the judge and the clerk on the documents. People v. Johnson, 699 P.2d 5 (Colo. App. 1984); People v. Bielecki, 964 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1998).

Additionally, documents that are admissible under certain rules of evidence, for example, C.R.E. 901 (b)(7), which governs public reords, and C.R.E. 902 (1) and (4), which covers self-authenticating documents, may also be used to support a habitual criminal conviction under this section. People v. Bielecki, 964 P.2d 598 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Martinez, 83 P.3d 1174 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Gregg, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Nothing in the statute requires that the copies to be introduced come directly and exclusively from the particular courts of record; hence, department of corrections' records of prior convictions, certified by the records' custodian, were properly admitted. People v. Copeland, 976 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 2 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2000); People v. Shepherd, 43 P.3d 693 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Martinez, 51 P.3d 1029 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 69 P.3d 1029 (Colo. 2003).

Nor is there a requirement that each and every signature contained with an otherwise properly authenticated set of public documents be certified or embossed with a seal. People v. Shepherd, 43 P.3d 693 (Colo. App. 2001).

Certified court records of convictions, certified department of corrections records, testimony from prosecutor's investigator and detention facility employee, detention facility records, and testimony from fingerprint expert constituted sufficient evidence to establish a chain of identity proving beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was the person convicted in the prior cases on which the habitual criminal counts were based. People v. Martinez, 83 P.3d 1174 (Colo. App. 2003).

Evidence in a packet pertaining to one conviction admitted under this section that also is evidence of another separate and distinct conviction is admissible to prove the other separate and distinct conviction for habitual offender purposes. People v. Tafoya, 985 P.2d 26 (Colo. App. 1999).

Affirmative waiver of right to counsel in record of prior conviction. Although waiver of the right to counsel may not be presumed from a silent record, when the record of a prior conviction affirmatively reflects such waiver, the defendant must make a prima facie showing that the waiver was ineffective before the prosecution must introduce additional evidence to prove the validity of the waiver. People v. Gutierrez, 622 P.2d 547 (Colo. 1981).

When facing an habitual offender charge, a defendant is entitled to advance notice that admissions of prior felonies may not be used in the habitual offender phase of the trial as substantive evidence. People v. Tafoya, 654 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Turley, 870 P.2d 503 (Colo. App. 1993).

When an habitual offender count is charged, an advisement is sufficient if it informs the defendant that admissions concerning prior convictions may be considered on the issue of credibility and for no other reason. People v. Clouse, 859 P.2d 228 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Turley, 870 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1993).

Record of defendant's conviction of forgery maintained by the Kansas bureau of investigation was sufficient evidence under this section as to a forgery count where the record contained defendant's name, physical description, and federal bureau of investigation number. People v. Deskins, 904 P.2d 1358 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 927 P.2d 368 (Colo. 1996).

Applied in Silva v. People, 170 Colo. 152, 459 P.2d 285 (1969); People v. Weber, 199 Colo. 25, 604 P.2d 30 (1979); Ramirez v. People, 682 P.2d 1181 (Colo. 1984).

18-1.3-803. Verdict of jury. (1) If the allegation of previous convictions of other felony offenses is included in an indictment or information and if a verdict of guilty of the substantive offense with which the defendant is charged is returned, the court shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine whether or not the defendant has suffered such previous felony convictions. As soon as practicable, the hearing shall be conducted by the judge who presided at trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered or a replacement for said judge in the event he or she dies, resigns, is incapacitated, or is otherwise disqualified as provided in section 16-6-201, C.R.S.

(2) An information or indictment seeking the increased penalties authorized by section 18-1.3-801 shall identify by separate counts each alleged former conviction and shall allege that the defendant on a date and at a place specified was convicted of a specific felony. If any such conviction was had outside this state, the information or indictment shall allege that the offense, if committed in this state, would be a felony.

(3) Upon arraignment of the defendant, such defendant shall be required to admit or deny that such defendant has been previously convicted of the crimes identified in the information or indictment. If the defendant refuses to admit or deny the previous convictions, such refusal shall be treated as a denial by such defendant that the defendant has been convicted as alleged. If the defendant admits to having been convicted as alleged in any count charging a previous conviction, no proof of such previous conviction is required. Such admission shall constitute conclusive proof in determining whether the defendant has been previously convicted of an alleged felony and the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with section 18-1.3-801.

(4) If the defendant denies that he or she has been previously convicted as alleged in any count of an information or indictment, the trial judge, or a replacement judge as provided in subsection (1) of this section, shall determine by separate hearing and verdict whether the defendant has been convicted as alleged. The procedure in any case in which the defendant does not become a witness in his or her own behalf upon the trial of the substantive offense shall be as follows:

(a) The jury shall render a verdict upon the issue of the defendant's guilt or innocence of the substantive offense charged;

(b) If the verdict is that the defendant is guilty of the substantive offense charged, the trial judge, or a replacement judge as provided in subsection (1) of this section, shall proceed to try the issues of whether the defendant has been previously convicted as alleged. The prosecuting attorney has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant has been previously convicted as alleged.

(5) (a) If, upon the trial of the issues upon the substantive offense charged, the defendant testifies in his or her own defense and denies that he or she has been previously convicted as alleged, the prosecuting attorney on rebuttal, may present all evidence relevant to the issues of previous convictions for the sole purpose of impeachment of the defendant's credibility, subject to the rules governing admission of evidence at criminal trials.

(b) If, upon the trial of the issues upon the substantive offense charged, the defendant testifies in his or her own defense and, after having denied the previous conviction under subsection (3) of this section, admits that he or she has been previously convicted as alleged, the trial judge, or a replacement judge as provided in subsection (1) of this section, shall, in any sentencing hearing, consider any admissions of prior convictions elicited from the defendant in connection with his or her testimony on the substantive offense only as they affect the defendant's credibility. In any sentencing hearing, the prosecution shall be required to meet its burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt the defendant's prior convictions by evidence independent of the defendant's testimony.

(6) If the prosecuting attorney does not have any information indicating that the defendant has been previously convicted of a felony prior to the time a verdict of guilty is rendered on a felony charge and if thereafter the prosecuting attorney learns of the felony conviction prior to the time that sentence is pronounced by the court, he or she may file a new information in which it shall be alleged in separate counts that the defendant has been convicted of the particular offense upon which judgment has not been entered and that prior thereto at a specified date and place the defendant has been convicted of a felony warranting application of increased penalties authorized in this section and sections 18-1.3-801 and 18-1.3-802. The defendant shall be arraigned upon the new information, and, if the defendant denies the previous conviction, the trial judge, or a replacement judge as provided in subsection (1) of this section, shall try the issue prior to imposition of sentence.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1428, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-103 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Procedure and Evidence.
- III. Verdict of Jury.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Recent Judicial Modification of Habitual Criminal Act", see 23 Dicta 84 (1946). For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950). For article, "Prosecution of Habitual Criminals", see 27 Dicta 376 (1950). For article, "Joinder of Criminal Charges, Election, Duplicity", see 30 Dicta 117 (1953). For article, "Colorado's Habitual Criminal Act: An Overview", see 12 Colo. Law. 215 (1983).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-803 is similar to § 16-13-103 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-13-3, C.R.S. 1963, § 39-13-3, CRS 53, CSA, C. 48, § 555(3), and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section does not restrict § 16-11-101. Section 16-11-101 contains no directive requiring that procedures similar to those of this section be followed. The general assembly's decision to enact § 16-11-101 without procedures similar to this section indicates its intent not to conform § 16-11-101 to the requirements of this section even though it had the right to do so. People v. Smith, 195 Colo. 404, 579 P.2d 1129 (1978).

Conviction based upon plea of nolo contendere is "conviction" for purposes of enhancing punishment pursuant to this section. People v. Goodwin, 197 Colo. 47, 593 P.2d 326 (1979).

Both statutory and decisional law served to nullify the effect of the court of appeals' reversal of the trial court's dismissal of the habitual criminal charge against defendant and remand to retry defendant as a habitual criminal, inasmuch as settled law prohibits a retrial on that charge. Smith v. People, 872 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1994).

The three findings for habitual criminal sentencing are not in addition to the "fact" of the prior convictions. Therefore, the court may find that the prior crimes were separately brought and tried, that they arose out of separate and distinct criminal episodes, and that the accused was the person named in each prior conviction without violating the principle in Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000). People v. Nunn, 148 P.3d 222 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in People v. Trujillo, 631 P.2d 146 (Colo. 1981); People v. Quintana, 665 P.2d 605 (Colo. 1983).

II. PROCEDURE AND EVIDENCE.

Court permission to file an information under the habitual criminal act is not required. People v. District Court, 93 Colo. 314, 25 P.2d 738 (1933).

Purpose of bifurcated trial and separate verdict provisions. The bifurcated trial and separate verdict provisions are manifestations of legislative intent to require that an adjudication of habitual criminality be made only in accordance with the same procedural and constitutional safeguards traditionally associated with a trial on guilt or innocence. People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981).

Because of the special nature of the habitual criminal adjudication process, any waiver of the jury trial guaranteed in habitual criminal adjudications must be governed by the same constitutional principles associated with a waiver of the right to a jury trial on felony criminal charges. Moore v. People, 707 P.2d 990 (Colo. 1985).

And purpose of requiring proof of prior conviction beyond reasonable doubt. The statutory requirement of proof beyond a reasonable doubt manifests a deliberate legislative decision to impose on the state, rather than the defendant, the risk of an erroneous decision as to the prior conviction counts. People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981).

Statutory procedures mandate bifurcated trial to obviate prejudicial effect of prior convictions on the trial of the substantive offense. People v. Lucero, 200 Colo. 335, 615 P.2d 660 (1980).

Burden of proof as to constitutionality of prior conviction. Upon challenging the validity of the prior conviction, the defendant's burden is to make a prima facie showing that the challenged conviction was unconstitutionally obtained; when such showing is made, the conviction is not admissible unless the prosecution establishes, by a preponderance of evidence, that the conviction was obtained in accordance with the defendant's constitutional rights. People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981).

Because there is no longer a statutory right to a jury determination of habitual criminal status, and because defendant's admissions to prior felony convictions act as conclusive proof of the prior counts, any error by the trial court in failing to obtain from defendant an explicit personal waiver of rights was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Deroulet, 22 P.3d 939 (Colo. App. 2000), rev'd on other grounds, 48 P.3d 520 (Colo. 2002).

Information alleging previous convictions in foreign state held sufficient. Wright v. People, 116 Colo. 306, 181 P.2d 447 (1947); People v. Swain, 43 Colo. App. 343, 607 P.2d 396 (1979).

Where information fails to allege that out-of-state convictions would be felonies if committed in Colorado, such failure does not warrant reversal where it causes no prejudice to defendant. People v. Weighard, 709 P.2d 81 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Drake, 785 P.2d 1257 (Colo. 1990).

When a defendant is arraigned, he can admit a previous conviction or deny his identity. Routa v. People, 117 Colo. 564, 192 P.2d 436 (1948).

Where defendant enters guilty plea, proof of prior convictions is not required. Vigil v. People, 137 Colo. 161, 322 P.2d 320 (1958).

Where it was held that the plea of defendant to the habitual criminal counts of an information was in effect a plea of guilty, it followed that defendant pleaded guilty to every fact averred in the counts, and there was nothing requiring proof of the things admitted by such plea. Hahn v. People, 126 Colo. 451, 251 P.2d 316 (1952).

What would or would not constitute competent evidence to establish prima facie proof of former felony convictions under this section is not material where a defendant enters pleas of guilty to charges of such former convictions. Vigil v. People, 137 Colo. 161, 322 P.2d 320 (1958).

Likewise, admissions of defendant dispense with need for other proof. In a prosecution under this section prior convictions of felonies, established by the admissions of the accused on the witness stand, relieve the prosecution of the necessity of other proof thereof. Hackett v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 203, 352 P.2d 799, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 874, 81 S. Ct. 118, 5 L.Ed.2d 96 (1960), overruled, People v. Chavez, 621 P.2d 1362 (Colo.), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1028, 101 S. Ct. 3019, 69 L.Ed.2d 398 (1981).

Use of defendant's admission of prior convictions. The impeachment use of an admission of prior convictions elicited from a defendant who chooses to testify is permissible in the trial of the substantive offense underlying a habitual criminal charge; however, the substantive use of that same evidence to relieve the prosecution of its statutory and constitutional burden of proving the elements of a separate status, habitual criminality, by introducing evidence independent of the defendant's testimony such as duly authenticated records of a defendant's prior convictions, impermissibly burdens the exercise of a defendant's right to testify in his own behalf. People v. Chavez, 621 P.2d 1362 (Colo.), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1028, 101 S. Ct. 3019, 69 L.Ed.2d 398 (1981).

Trial court's ruling that evidence of the defendant's prior convictions elicited during his trial on the substantive charges, would be admissible for substantive purposes in the habitual criminal proceeding was an error which its "bifurcation" of the jury's deliberations failed to remedy. People v. Chavez, 621 P.2d 1362 (Colo.), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1028, 101 S. Ct. 3019, 69 L.Ed.2d 398 (1981).

Retroactive application. The decision in People v. Chavez is to be given retroactive application. People v. Tafoya, 654 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1982).

This section addresses the defendant's testimony at the trial phase and the permissible use thereof by acknowledging that, should the defendant choose to testify during trial, the prosecution may confront the defendant for the sole purpose of impeachment of the defendant's credibility, but by also making clear that a defendant's admissions during the trial phase are not conclusive proof of the existence of prior convictions. People v. Ziglar, 45 P.3d 1266 (Colo. 2002).

Because prior felony evidence is relevant to habitual criminal proceedings, when a defendant testifies during the sentencing phase, the judge may consider admissions elicited at that time as substantive evidence; while such admissions are not "conclusive proof", they are some evidence that those felonies exist. People v. Ziglar, 45 P.3d 1266 (Colo. 2002).

Admission of identity as to some previous convictions is not general plea of guilty to all. Smalley v. People, 116 Colo. 598, 183 P.2d 558 (1947).

Effect on right to testify. The right of a defendant charged with habitual offender counts to testify is impermissibly burdened by the threat of impeachment by means of prior conviction without procedural protections requiring independent proof of the habitual offender allegations. The defendant is constitutionally entitled to advance notice that the jury would be specifically instructed to consider evidence of his prior convictions only on the issue of his credibility, and that the prosecution would still have the burden of proving his prior convictions by independent evidence at the habitual offender stage of the trial. People v. Tafoya, 654 P.2d 1342 (Colo. App. 1982).

Statute does not explicitly delineate procedures where defendant admits convictions. The habitual criminal statute does not explicitly delineate the procedures to be followed at trial if the defendant takes the witness stand and admits that he has been convicted previously as alleged. People v. Chavez, 621 P.2d 1362 (Colo.), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 1028, 101 S. Ct. 3019, 69 L.Ed.2d 398 (1981).

Duty of state to prove disputed identity. Where defendant denied his identity at arraignment under this section, it was incumbent upon the people to prove his identity and the previous convictions, and it became the statutory duty of the jury to find whether or not he has suffered such previous convictions. Routa v. People, 117 Colo. 564, 192 P.2d 436 (1948).

The state has the burden of proving the prior conviction of accused and establishing his identity as the person previously convicted. People v. Wolff, 111 Colo. 46, 137 P.2d 693 (1943); O'Day v. People, 114 Colo. 373, 166 P.2d 789 (1946).

And identity must be proved with particularity. This section requires that where the defendant denies his identity as the person previously convicted, such fact is to be proved with particularity. The cases have consistently required strict proof. DeGesualdo v. People, 147 Colo. 426, 364 P.2d 374 (1961).

Evidence inadequate to establish identity. DeGesualdo v. People, 147 Colo. 426, 364 P.2d 374 (1961).

Trial court may not preempt defendant's right to jury trial. The trial court is without authority to preempt a defendant's right to a jury trial on the habitual criminal counts solely on the basis of the defendant's testimony given in defense of the substantive charge. People v. Mason, 643 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1982).

Retroactive application of the rule requiring a jury determination of habitual criminal charges was denied because of the adverse impact such application would have on the administration of justice, and because the reliability of the inquiry into the truth of the defendant's convictions would not have been significantly enhanced by submission of the issue to the jury. People v. Moore, 707 P.2d 990 (Colo. 1985).

The language contained in paragraph (b) of subsection (5) referencing testimony relates entirely to the defendant's testimony elicited during the trial phase. People v. Ziglar, 45 P.3d 1266 (Colo. 2002).

Accused's testimony on own behalf merges trial of crime and former convictions. Where a defendant testifies in his own behalf, or where evidence of former convictions is introduced in impeachment, the question of former convictions is thus opened for consideration and resolution, all the facts concerning prior convictions become admissible, and the main charge may then be submitted and disposed of without separation. Mitchell v. People, 137 Colo. 5, 320 P.2d 342 (1958); People v. Trujillo, 40 Colo. App. 220, 577 P.2d 297 (1977).

When a defendant, having denied at arraignment the alleged prior convictions supporting an habitual criminal determination, elects to testify at trial and admits the charged convictions, the habitual criminal allegations may be submitted to the jury along with charges of the substantive offense. People v. Trujillo, 40 Colo. App. 220, 577 P.2d 297 (1977).

And permits cross-examination of accused on counts of prior convictions. In a criminal prosecution where an information contains counts under the habitual criminal act denied by defendant, and the prosecution offers evidence of the substantive offense only, if then the defendant voluntarily takes the witness stand to testify in his own behalf it is not error to require him upon cross-examination to testify to facts pertinent to the charge of previous felony convictions. Mitchell v. People, 137 Colo. 5, 320 P.2d 342 (1958).

But refusal to take stand bars such proof at trial of crime. Under provisions of the witness statute, it is defendant's right and privilege to refuse to take the witness stand, and in that event a district attorney cannot offer evidence on the issue of previous convictions until the jury has determined the question of his guilt upon the main or substantive offense. Mitchell v. People, 137 Colo. 5, 320 P.2d 342 (1958).

Right of defendant to be advised of consequences of guilty plea sufficiently protected. Glass v. People, 127 Colo. 210, 255 P.2d 738 (1953).

Admission of exhibits as evidence of prior conviction held not prejudicial. Where three separate previous felony convictions of the defendant were clearly established by competent evidence and separate verdicts to that effect were returned by the jury, and these verdicts were in addition to one finding that the defendant had been convicted of a felony in Missouri, sentence of life imprisonment would be mandatory under the three verdicts supported by competent evidence, and defendant was not prejudiced by admitting certain exhibits as evidence of the alleged Missouri conviction. Wolff v. People, 123 Colo. 487, 230 P.2d 581 (1951).

Admission into evidence of offenses not alleged as basis of habitual criminality during the second phase of a bifurcated trial constituted reversible error. People v. Lucero, 200 Colo. 335, 615 P.2d 660 (1980).

Where defendant withdrew pretrial motion for continuance to preserve his speedy trial rights, court did not abuse its discretion in denying post-trial motion for continuance in order to hold a habitual criminal hearing as soon as practicable under subsection (1) even though defense counsel consequently had insufficient time to investigate the validity of the defendant's prior convictions. People v. Copeland, 976 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd on other grounds, 2 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2000).

Subsection (1) clearly and unambiguously states that the habitual criminal hearing shall be conducted by the judge who presided at the trial, subject to four stated exceptions. Thus, it was reversible error for another judge to handle the habitual criminal hearing when the court merely found that the trial judge was unavailable. People v. Johnson, 74 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002).

This section does not allow a prosecutor, for good cause or otherwise, to add known habitual criminal counts after a guilty plea has been accepted. People v. Rieger, 128 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2005).

Trial court misinterpreted plain language of subsection (6) when it allowed prosecutor to file two habitual criminal counts against defendant after defendant had pled guilty, despite prosecutor's prior knowledge of the convictions. People v. Rieger, 128 P.3d 295 (Colo. App. 2005).

III. VERDICT OF JURY.

Jury determines identity on counts of former convictions, not guilt. Proceedings before the jury on the habitual criminal counts are not in determination of whether defendant is or is not guilty of the crime, but go only to issues pertaining to identity of the defendant as being the individual named in such count as the one who was previously convicted of a felony. Brown v. People, 124 Colo. 412, 238 P.2d 847 (1951).

Under the habitual criminal act, it is the jury's function to determine whether the defendant has been previously convicted. Swift v. People, 174 Colo. 259, 488 P.2d 80 (1971).

Defendant has a limited right to a jury trial to determine identity; all other questions relating to the habitual criminal statute are matters of law for the court. Once the jury found beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant was the person convicted of three prior felonies, the defendant was not entitled to have any other issues determined by the court. People v. Jones, 967 P.2d 166 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided under law in effect prior to 1995 amendments).

A defendant does not have the right to a jury determination of habitual criminality under the Colorado Constitution or the sixth amendment, therefore the court's determination of whether the defendant has suffered previous felony convictions is not a violation of a defendant's constitutional rights. People v. Edwards, 971 P.2d 1080 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Johnson, 74 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002).

The determination of habitual criminality is covered under the prior conviction exception and is exempt from the constitutional jury requirement. People v. Felder, 129 P.3d 1072 (Colo. App. 2005).

The issues in the habitual criminal counts are tried by the same jury immediately following the determination of the substantive charge, and they shall forthwith proceed to try those issues without being resworn. This definitely precludes any change in the personnel of the jury. Wolff v. People, 123 Colo. 487, 230 P.2d 581 (1951); Brown v. People, 124 Colo. 412, 238 P.2d 847 (1951); Smith v. People, 872 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1994).

No error is committed by a trial court in denying peremptory challenges to jurors made by defendant's counsel after the receipt of verdicts determining the guilt of defendant upon the substantive offenses charged against him and before the presentation of evidence on the habitual criminal counts in the information. Wolff v. People, 123 Colo. 487, 230 P.2d 581 (1951); Brown v. People, 124 Colo. 412, 238 P.2d 847 (1951).

The habitual criminal act indicates clearly that the same jury must be utilized for both segments of the prosecution. Quintana v. People, 169 Colo. 295, 455 P.2d 210 (1969).

Same jury must determine guilt on both substantive and prior offenses. Except when the defendant admits his previous conviction of a crime alleged in the habitual criminal count, the jury which determines his guilt on the substantive offense must forthwith determine that he was the person convicted of the alleged prior crime. Vigil v. People, 196 Colo. 522, 587 P.2d 1196 (1978); Smith v. People, 872 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1994).

Under plain language of § 16-13-103 (4)(a) and (4)(b), a defendant may not try to court issue of habitual criminal status once jury has convicted defendant of underlying offense. Absent showing of due process violation, jury must decide habitual criminal status. If defendant waives right to jury trial of underlying offense, court determines habitual criminal status of defendant. People v. Clouse, 859 P.2d 228 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsections (1) and (3), by their terms, plainly establish that the jury empaneled to try the substantive offense charged shall decide whether a defendant is adjudicated a habitual criminal, and the same jury which determines a defendant's guilt on the pending substantive offense must also resolve the validity of the habitual criminal charge. Smith v. People, 872 P.2d 685 (Colo. 1994).

Same-jury requirement is constitutional. Under the habitual criminal statute, the same jury which returns a guilty verdict on the underlying offense must then decide whether the defendant committed the necessary prior crimes to be adjudged an habitual criminal. Despite this "same-jury" requirement in this section, the defendant can have an impartial jury during the habitual criminal sentencing hearing, as guaranteed by §§ 16 and 25 of art. II, Colo. Const. People ex rel. Fault v. District Court ex rel. County of Fremont, 673 P.2d 998 (Colo. 1983).

Prior convictions must be submitted to the jury separately and separate verdicts must be returned by the jury as to each prior conviction. Coppinger v. People, 152 Colo. 9, 380 P.2d 19, cert. denied, 375 U.S. 923, 84 S. Ct. 270, 11 L.Ed.2d 167 (1963).

The jury should not be required to find in one form of verdict that the accused was the same person named in both alleged previous convictions; they should have been required to make a determination separately as to each of the two former convictions, because a negative finding as to one count would have rendered the determination a nullity. DeGesualdo v. People, 147 Colo. 426, 364 P.2d 374 (1961).

Whether previous convictions were constitutionally procured involves a question of law for the court. Swift v. People, 174 Colo. 259, 488 P.2d 80 (1971).

Prior conviction valid despite invalid sentence. Where one of the previous convictions upon which an habitual criminal conviction was predicated had taken place in New Mexico and it appeared that the defendant was represented by counsel at all stages except sentencing in that proceeding, it may be that his constitutional rights were violated by reason of the absence of counsel at sentencing, but any violation would relate only to that sentence, and his remedy would therefore lie in New Mexico. The punishment as an habitual criminal is based upon prior convictions, and the amount or validity of sentence under a valid conviction is immaterial. Swift v. People, 174 Colo. 259, 488 P.2d 80 (1971).

Informing jury that penalty is automatically life imprisonment. Where defendant is an habitual criminal and the habitual criminal act is invoked by the people, the court has discretion to refuse the defendant's attorney permission to inform the jury on voir dire that penalty, if defendant is convicted, is automatically life imprisonment. Routa v. People, 117 Colo. 564, 192 P.2d 436 (1948).

It was not reversible error for same jury to determine identity of all defendants on habitual criminal counts, notwithstanding separation on these issues. Brown v. People, 124 Colo. 412, 238 P.2d 847 (1951).

Verdict forms were adequate to demonstrate that the jury unanimously agreed that defendant was the same person identified in prosecution documents as having been convicted previously of several felonies. People v. Romero, 767 P.2d 782 (Colo. App. 1988).

Even where the defense counsel does not object to the court's finding that the defendant was an habitual criminal without a separate sentencing hearing, such a finding is reversed because the waiver of such an additional hearing must be personally made by the defendant and not his attorney. People v. Killpack, 793 P.2d 642 (Colo. App. 1990).

Defects in the information and the verdict form concerning the correct file number for the previous conviction were defects of form rather than substance. Such defects do not require reversal where the defendant was not prejudiced by the discrepancy in file numbers. The court found sufficient evidence was presented whereby the jury could find beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was previously convicted of felony theft. People v. Young, 923 P.2d 145 (Colo. App. 1995).

Also, an inaccuracy or discrepancy in the date of the prior conviction does not mandate dismissal if the defendant was not prejudiced thereby. Because both the incorrect and the correct dates were within ten years prior to commission of the substantive offense and a reasonable jury could find that defendant's identity was established beyond a reasonable doubt as to the prior convictions, the mistake did not affect defendant's substantive rights. People v. Young, 923 P.2d 145 (Colo. App. 1995).

For purposes of this section, two prior convictions will only be considered as one conviction if they arose from the same criminal episode. Even though two prior convictions were entered on the same day, they do not count as one conviction because they were the result of separate and distinct criminal episodes. People v. Young, 923 P.2d 145 (Colo. App. 1995).

Section 18-3-412 specifically incorporates the procedures of this section. People v. Harper, 796 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1990).

Convictions must be set forth specifically in the complaint or information, and, if the defendant pleads not guilty to these counts, the validity of the previous convictions must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Harper, 796 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1990).

18-1.3-804. Habitual burglary offenders - punishment - legislative declaration.

(1) Every person convicted in this state of first degree burglary, first degree burglary of controlled substances, or second degree burglary of a dwelling who, within ten years of the date of the commission of the said offense, has been previously convicted upon charges separately brought and tried, either in this state or elsewhere, of first degree burglary, first degree burglary of drugs or first degree burglary of controlled substances, or second degree burglary of a dwelling or, under the laws of any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, of a felony which, if committed within this state, would be first degree burglary, first degree burglary of drugs or first degree burglary of controlled substances, or second degree burglary of a dwelling shall be adjudged a habitual burglary offender and shall be sentenced to the department of corrections for a term of incarceration greater than the maximum in the presumptive range, but not more than twice the maximum term, provided for such offense in section 18-1.3-401 (1) (a).

(2) Every person convicted in this state of first degree burglary, first degree burglary of controlled substances, or second degree burglary of a dwelling who has been previously convicted of two or more felonies shall be subject to the applicable provisions of section 18-1.3-801.

(3) Such former conviction or convictions and judgment or judgments shall be set forth in apt words in the indictment or information.

(4) In no case shall any person who is subject to the provisions of this section be eligible for suspension of sentence or probation.

(5) Insofar as they may be applicable, sections 18-1.3-802 and 18-1.3-803 shall govern trials which are held as a result of the provisions of this section.

(6) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that the frequency of incidence of the crime of burglary, together with particularly high rates of recidivism among burglary offenders and the extensive economic impact which results from the crime of burglary, requires the special classification and punishment of habitual burglary offenders as provided in this section.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1430, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1) amended, p. 1427, § 6, effective April 29.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-4-202.1 as it existed prior to 2002.

Cross references: For limitations on collateral attacks of prior convictions, see § 16-5-402.

PART 9

SENTENCING OF SEX OFFENDERS

18-1.3-901. Short title. This part 9 shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Sex Offenders Act of 1968".

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1430, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-201 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-902. Applicability of part. The provisions of this part 9 shall apply to persons sentenced for offenses committed prior to November 1, 1998.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1431, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-201.5 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-903. Definitions. As used in this part 9, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) "Board" means the state board of parole.
- (2) "Conviction" means conviction after trial by court or jury or acceptance of a plea of guilty.
- (3) "Department" means the department of corrections.
- (4) "Sex offender" means a person convicted of a sex offense.
- (5) "Sex offense" means sexual assault, except misdemeanor sexual assault in the third degree, as set forth in section 18-3-404 (2), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000; sexual assault on a child, as defined in section 18-3-405; aggravated incest, as defined in section 18-6-302; and an attempt to commit any of the offenses mentioned in this subsection (5).

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1431, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2008: (5) amended, p. 1890, § 56, effective August 5.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-202 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Colorado Felony Sentencing", see 11 Colo. Law. 1478 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-903 is similar to § 16-13-202 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

When indeterminate commitment authorized in lieu of imprisonment. When the requisite proscribed intent accompanying an unauthorized intrusion is that of seeking to accomplish one of the sex offenses enumerated in subsection (5), a district court may order an indeterminate commitment under § 16-13-203, in lieu of imprisonment. People v. Ingram, 40 Colo. App. 518, 582 P.2d 689 (1978).

Applied in People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

18-1.3-904. Indeterminate commitment. The district court having jurisdiction may, subject to the requirements of this part 9, in lieu of the sentence otherwise provided by law, commit a sex offender to the custody of the department for an indeterminate term having a minimum of one day and a maximum of his or her natural life.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1431, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-203 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Law", see 32 Dicta 409 (1955). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For comment, "A Constitutional Challenge to the Release Procedures of the Colorado Sex Offenders Act: Is It Just a Matter of Time?", see 58 U. Colo. L. Rev. 313 (1987).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-904 is similar to § 16-13-203 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-19-1, C.R.S. 1963, and § 39-19-1, CRS 53, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Purpose of act is to protect public. The primary purpose of the Colorado sex offenders act is the protection of members of the public from proven dangerous sex offenders. People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983); People v. Lustgarden, 914 P.2d 488 (Colo. App. 1995); People v. Wortham, 928 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 1996).

Sex offenders subject to indeterminate term. Sex offenders within the meaning of this part 2 may be committed to a state institution for an indeterminate term having a minimum of one day and a maximum of his natural life. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962).

Upon notice and hearing. A defendant who has been convicted of a sexual offense which carries a maximum sentence of 10 years but not sentenced under such provision, may not be sentenced under the sex offenders act for an indeterminate term of from one day to life. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L.Ed.2d 326 (1967).

Constitutionality. Statutes similar to the sex offenders act have been held not repugnant to the equal protection provision, since it is recognized that the state has the right through its general assembly to classify persons based upon reasonable and natural distinctions, to accomplish the legitimate purposes of its police power in fixing the differing penalties. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962).

Where classification of sex offenders under this section is based upon reasonable and natural distinctions to accomplish a legitimate purpose under the police power, and the trial court makes a finding of fact to determine whether a defendant comes with the classification, such findings and classification do not offend against equal protection principles of the constitution. Vanderhoof v. People, 152 Colo. 147, 380 P.2d 903 (1963).

This section providing for commitment of one day to life for certain sex offenses is not unconstitutional as imposing cruel and unusual punishment upon one charged and sentenced thereunder. Specht v. Tinsley, 153 Colo. 235, 385 P.2d 423 (1963); Raullerson v. People, 157 Colo. 462, 404 P.2d 149 (1965).

The Colorado sex offenders act is not unconstitutional as being void for vagueness or violative of due process or equal protection, or as constituting cruel and unusual punishment. People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

Release procedures of the Colorado sex offenders act are not unconstitutional as being violative of due process or equal protection. People v. Kibel, 701 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1985); People v. Adrian, 701 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1985).

Convicted sex offenders who were paroled prior to the expiration of the maximum sentences for the underlying offenses had no standing to challenge whether the lack of periodic judicial review under the act could be justified, under equal protection, after the expiration of a period of confinement equal to the maximum sentence for the underlying crimes. People v. Kibel, 701 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1985).

Sentencing alternative does not involve constitutional right. From the wording of the sex offenders act, it appears that a defendant may require the commencement of a hearing. However, the matter of whether there should be sentencing under the act is an alternative which may be granted or denied by the court, once the psychiatrist and probation officer's reports have been filed and reviewed. This being a sentencing alternative, a constitutional right is not attained. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970

(1975); People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Former provisions of sex offenders act held unconstitutional on due process grounds for lack of procedural safeguards. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L.Ed.2d 326 (1967).

Sentencing under the Sex Offenders Act is an alternative which may be granted or denied by the trial court in its discretion; however, there is no constitutional or statutory right to be sentenced under the Act. People v. Lustgarden, 914 P.2d 488 (Colo. App. 1995).

Commitment proceedings, whether denominated civil or criminal, are subject to the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment and to the due process clause. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L.Ed.2d 326 (1967).

The punishment under this section is criminal punishment even though it is designed not so much as retribution as it is to keep individuals from inflicting future harm. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L.Ed.2d 326 (1967).

Trial court's failure to advise defendant of the possibility of being sentenced pursuant to the Sex Offenders Act, § 16-13-201 et seq., was not grounds to set aside defendant's guilty plea entered a decade earlier; the failure to so advise was harmless since the defendant was not originally sentenced under the Act. People v. Lustgarden, 914 P.2d 488 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section and § 18-3-408 relating to sexual assault on a child are in pari material and must be interpreted together. Sutton v. People, 156 Colo. 201, 397 P.2d 746 (1964).

Section does not confer sentencing power on parole board. This section providing for commitment of not less than one day nor more than life, and § 16-13-216 (2) authorizing the parole board to transfer such persons after commitment to other institutions to effectuate purposes of act, do not confer judicial powers on the parole board or involve the sentencing authority of the court. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962).

The provisions of this act vest the trial court with discretion to commit a defendant under an alternate sentence. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975); People v. Wortham, 928 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

The decision to sentence pursuant to this part is strictly discretionary with the trial court. People v. Sharpless, 635 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1981).

When indeterminate commitment authorized in lieu of imprisonment. When the requisite proscribed intent accompanying an unauthorized intrusion is that of seeking to accomplish one of the sex offenses enumerated in § 16-13-202 (5), a district court may order an indeterminate commitment under this section in lieu of imprisonment. People v. Ingram, 40 Colo. App. 518, 582 P.2d 689 (1978).

Defendant cannot be given sentence of commitment and sentence of imprisonment. This section, read together with § 16-13-211 (2), established that the district courts could not give a defendant, who was found to constitute a threat of bodily harm to the public, a sentence of commitment and a sentence of imprisonment but have the option to either sentence to imprisonment or sentence to commitment. People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974); People v. Ingram, 40 Colo. App. 518, 582 P.2d 689 (1978).

Only if the court finds that the defendant is a threat to the public has the court the power to commit the defendant for an indeterminate term. People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 379, 520 P.2d 751 (1974); People v. Ingram, 40 Colo. App. 518, 582 P.2d 689 (1978).

If it elects to exercise this option, it must do so "in lieu of the sentence otherwise provided by law". People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 379, 520 P.2d 751 (1974).

Thus, indeterminate commitment under the sex offenders act was in lieu of prisoner's sentence under the habitual criminal act, and, therefore, the trial court erred in sentencing him to concurrent terms under the respective statutes. People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 379, 520 P.2d 751 (1974).

Second court found defendant not threat to public contrary to first court's determination. Even though a district court, in prosecution under § 18-3-408, determined that the defendant constituted "a threat of bodily harm to members of the public" under § 16-13-211 (2) and ordered him committed pursuant to this section, a different district court, in a subsequent prosecution of defendant under § 18-3-401, arising out of different acts by the defendant, was not required under the doctrine of collateral estoppel to accept the first court's determination but could find that defendant was not a threat to the public and could sentence him to imprisonment. People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974).

Statutory limits of sentence proper question on habeas corpus. A person convicted of crime can resort to habeas corpus as a remedy if there is a question of the court's jurisdiction of the person, or its jurisdiction of the accusation made against the defendant, or where the question arises as to whether the judgment and sentence were within the prescribed statutory limits. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962).

Remedy for one sentenced under void statute. Since the time when defendant was sentenced under former provisions of the sex offenders act, the United States supreme court has declared the former provisions to be unconstitutional, and a motion under Crim. P. 35(b) to vacate the sentence and impose a proper one may be in order. Nowels v. People, 166 Colo. 140, 442 P.2d 410 (1968).

The court did not abuse its discretion when it did not impose indeterminate sentencing. The court reviewed the psychiatric reports and probation report and based on those reports determined the defendant was a significant threat to society and indeterminate sentencing was inappropriate. People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Form of commitment valid. A commitment "for a period not exceeding life and not less than one day" was within the limitations of this section providing for commitment of a minimum of one day and a maximum of natural life. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L.Ed.2d 507 (1962).

Person convicted of a sex offense is not entitled to mandatory parole; therefore, the accumulation of good time and earned time credits do not make person eligible for immediate release. Rather v. Suthers, 973 P.2d 1264 (Colo. 1999).

Applied in Carter v. People, 161 Colo. 10, 419 P.2d 654 (1966); People v. District Court, 196 Colo. 249, 585 P.2d 913 (1978).

18-1.3-905. Requirements before acceptance of a plea of guilty. Before the district court may accept a plea of guilty from any person charged with a sex offense, the court shall, in addition to any other requirement of law, advise the defendant that he or she may be committed to the custody of the department, including any penal institution under the jurisdiction of the department, as provided in section 18-1.3-904.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1431, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-204 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-905 is similar to § 16-13-204 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Duty where defendant represented by counsel. The trial court only has a duty to advise those who plead guilty to a sex offense of the possibility of sentencing under the act and has no such duty where the defendant pleads guilty and is represented by counsel. People v. Medina, 193 Colo. 190, 564 P.2d 119 (1977).

Failure to expressly advise defendant of possibility of sentence of imprisonment under this section does not invalidate guilty plea. Wilson v. People, 708 P.2d 792 (Colo. 1985).

Advisement substantially complied with the requirement of this section. People v. Adrian, 701 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1985).

Applied in People v. Wilkerson, 192 Colo. 386, 559 P.2d 1107 (1977).

18-1.3-906. Commencement of proceedings. Within twenty-one days after the conviction of a sex offense, upon the motion of the district attorney, the defendant, or the court, the court shall commence proceedings under this part 9 by ordering the district attorney to prepare a notice of the commencement of proceedings and to serve that notice upon the defendant personally.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1431, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: Entire section amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 867, § 113, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-205 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending this section applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-906 is similar to § 16-13-205 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Conviction as basis for commencing action. This section does not make the commission of a specified crime the basis for sentencing; rather it makes one conviction the basis for commencing another proceeding under the sex offenders act to determine whether a person constitutes a threat of bodily harm to the public, or is an habitual offender and mentally ill. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18

L.Ed.2d 326 (1967) (decided under repealed § 39-19-1, C.R.S. 1963).

Any defendant convicted either by plea or trial by court or jury may request commencement of proceedings under the act within 20 days following the conviction. People v. Medina, 193 Colo. 190, 564 P.2d 119 (1977).

Where trial court failed to meet certain deadlines contained in the statutes, the trial court could not, on its own motion, sentence the defendant under the Sex Offender's Act of 1968. People v. Wortham, 928 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in People v. Lyons, 196 Colo. 384, 585 P.2d 916 (1978).

18-1.3-907. Defendant to be advised of rights. (1) Upon the commencement of proceedings, the court shall advise the defendant, orally and in writing, that:

(a) The defendant is to be examined in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-908;

(b) The defendant has a right to counsel, and, if the defendant is indigent, counsel will be appointed to represent him or her;

(c) The defendant has a right to remain silent;

(d) An evidentiary hearing will be held pursuant to section 18-1.3-911 and the defendant and his or her counsel will be furnished with copies of all reports prepared for the court pursuant to sections 18-1.3-908 and 18-1.3-909 at least fourteen days prior to the evidentiary hearing.

(2) The written advisement of rights may be incorporated into the notice of commencement of proceedings.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1431, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (1)(d) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 867, § 114, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-206 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1)(d) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Rights of defendant under due process. Under Colorado's criminal procedure the invocation of the sex offenders act means the making of a new charge leading to criminal punishment. Due process requires that he be present with counsel, have an opportunity to be heard, be confronted with witnesses against him, have the right to cross-examine, and to offer evidence of his own. And there must be findings adequate to make meaningful any appeal that is allowed. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L. Ed.2d 326 (1967) (decided under repealed § 39-19-1, C.R.S. 1963).

18-1.3-908. Psychiatric examination and report. (1) (a) After advising the defendant of his or her rights, the court shall forthwith commit the defendant to the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo, the university of Colorado psychiatric hospital, or the county jail.

(b) If committed to the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo or the university of Colorado psychiatric hospital, the defendant shall be examined by two psychiatrists of the receiving institution.

(c) If committed to the county jail, the defendant shall be examined by two psychiatrists appointed by the court.

(2) (a) The examining psychiatrists shall make independent written reports to the court which shall contain the opinion of the psychiatrist as to whether the defendant, if at large, constitutes a threat of bodily harm to members of the public.

(b) The written reports shall also contain opinions concerning:

(I) Whether the defendant is mentally deficient;

(II) Whether the defendant could benefit from psychiatric treatment; and

(III) Whether the defendant could be adequately supervised on probation.

(3) The examinations shall be made and the reports filed with the court and the probation department within sixty-three days after the commencement of proceedings, and this time may not be enlarged by the court.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1432, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (3) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 867, § 115, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-207 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (3) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-908 is similar to § 16-13-207 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The requirements of this section are: (1) That there should be a complete psychiatric examination; (2) that there should be a complete written report containing all facts and findings, together with recommendations as to whether the person was treatable under the provisions of the article; (3) and that the report contain a psychiatrist's opinion as to whether the person could be adequately supervised on probation. Ray v. People, 160 Colo. 173, 415 P.2d 328 (1966) (decided under repealed § 39-19-2, C.R.S. 1963).

Order for removal of a defendant to another state for psychiatric examination in connection with proceedings held solely in Colorado issued without statutory authority.

People v. District Court, 195 Colo. 14, 575 P.2d 7 (1978).

Where trial court failed to meet certain deadlines contained in the statutes, the trial court could not, on its own motion, sentence the defendant under the Sex Offender's Act of 1968. People v. Wortham, 928 P.2d 771 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

18-1.3-909. Report of probation department. (1) Upon the commencement of proceedings under this part 9, the court shall order an investigation and report to be made by the probation officer similar to the presentence report provided for in section 16-11-102, C.R.S.

(2) The report shall be filed with the court within seventy-seven days after the commencement of proceedings, and this time may not be enlarged by the court.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1432, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (2) amended, SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 867, § 116, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-208 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (2) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983) (decided prior to 2002 relocation of § 16-13-208).

18-1.3-910. Termination of proceedings. After reviewing the reports of the psychiatrists and the probation officer, the court may terminate proceedings under this part 9 and proceed with sentencing as otherwise provided by law.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1432, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-209 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-910 is similar to § 16-13-209 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Sentencing alternative does not involve a constitutional right. From the wording of the sex offenders act, it appears that a defendant may require the commencement of a hearing. However, the matter of whether there should be sentencing under the act is an alternative which may be granted or denied by the court, once the psychiatrist's and probation officer's reports have been filed and reviewed. This being a sentencing alternative, a constitutional right is not attained. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975).

There is no constitutional or statutory right to be sentenced under the sex offenders act. People v. Medina, 193 Colo. 190, 564 P.2d 119 (1977).

Termination of proceedings did not violate legislative intent. Where the court did not continue with proceedings under the sex offenders act, including the holding of a hearing, legislative intent was not violated. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975).

The provisions of this act vest the trial court with discretion to commit a defendant under an alternate sentence. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975).

Imposition of an indeterminate sentence under the act is totally within the discretion of the trial court. People v. Medina, 193 Colo. 190, 564 P.2d 119 (1977).

Finding not requiring sentencing under act. A finding by the court "that the defendant, if at large, constitutes a threat of bodily harm to members of the public" does not require a person to be sentenced under the act if the court makes such a finding. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975).

18-1.3-911. Evidentiary hearing. (1) (a) The court shall set a hearing date at least fourteen days and no more than twenty-eight days after service upon the defendant and his or her counsel of the reports required by sections 18-1.3-908 and 18-1.3-909.

(b) The court may, in its discretion, upon the motion of the defendant, continue the hearing an additional twenty-one days.

(2) (a) The court shall, upon motion of the district attorney or the defendant, subpoena all witnesses required by the moving party in accordance with the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

(b) The district attorney shall serve upon the defendant and his or her counsel a list of all witnesses to be called by the district attorney at least fourteen days before the evidentiary hearing.

(3) In the evidentiary hearing, the court shall receive evidence bearing on the issue of whether the defendant, if at large, constitutes a threat of bodily harm to members of the public.

(4) In the evidentiary hearing, the following procedure shall govern:

(a) The district attorney may call and examine witnesses, and the defendant shall be allowed to cross-examine those witnesses.

(b) The defendant may call and examine witnesses, and the district attorney shall be allowed to cross-examine those witnesses.

(c) The defendant may call and cross-examine as adverse witnesses the psychiatrists and probation officers who have filed reports pursuant to sections 18-1.3-908 and 18-1.3-909.

(5) The reports of the psychiatrists and probation officers filed with the court pursuant to sections 18-1.3-908 and 18-1.3-909 may be received into evidence.

(6) Except as otherwise provided in this section, the laws of this state concerning evidence in criminal trials shall govern in the evidentiary hearing.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1433, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (1) and (2)(b) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 867, § 117, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-210 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1) and (2)(b) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: For subpoenas to compel attendance of witnesses, see Crim. P. 17.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-911 is similar to § 16-13-210 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-19-10, C.R.S. 1963 (1969 Supp.), and §§ 39-19-1 to 39-19-10, C.R.S. 1963, and to §§ 39-19-1 to 39-19-10, CRS 53, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Commitment proceedings, whether denominated civil or criminal, are subject to the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment and to the due process clause. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L. Ed.2d 326 (1967).

Defendant entitled to all safeguards of fair trial. A proceeding under the sex offenders act is a separate criminal proceeding which may be invoked after conviction of one of the specified crimes. A defendant is entitled to a full judicial hearing before the magnified sentence is imposed and to the full panoply of relevant protections which due process guarantees in state criminal proceedings. He must be afforded all those safeguards which are fundamental rights and essential to a fair trial, including notice, that he be present with counsel, have an opportunity to be heard, be confronted with witnesses against him, have the right to cross-examine, and to offer evidence of his own. And there must be findings adequate to make meaningful any appeal that is allowed. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L. Ed.2d 326 (1967); People v. Harper, 796 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1989).

A psychiatric report is not binding on the trial court, and was not intended to limit or restrict the trial court in the exercise of its judgment relating to sentencing of sex offenders. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L. Ed.2d 507 (1962).

The trial court should consider all material matter before it from probation reports and other sources which will aid in the formation of a proper opinion. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L. Ed.2d 507 (1962); Ray v. People, 160 Colo. 173, 415 P.2d 328 (1966).

This act does not purport to make the findings or opinion of the psychiatrist binding or controlling on the court. It is merely an aid to the court. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 316 F.2d 783 (10th Cir. 1963).

Applied in People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

18-1.3-912. Findings of fact and conclusions of law. (1) After the evidentiary hearing, the court shall, within seven days, make oral or written findings of fact and conclusions of law.

(2) If the court finds beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant, if at large, constitutes a threat of bodily harm to members of the public, the court shall commit the defendant pursuant to section 18-1.3-904.

(3) If the court does not find as provided in subsection (2) of this section, it shall terminate proceedings under this part 9 and proceed with sentencing as otherwise provided by law.

(4) If the findings and conclusions are oral, they shall be reduced to writing and filed within fourteen days, and the defendant shall not be committed to the custody of the department pursuant to section 18-1.3-904 until the findings and conclusions are filed.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1433, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (1) and (4) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 868, § 118, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-13-211 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1) and (4) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-912 is similar to § 16-13-211 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-19-1, C.R.S. 1963, and § 39-19-1, CRS 53, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality of classification and findings. Where classification of sex offenders under § 16-13-203 is based upon reasonable and natural distinctions to accomplish a legitimate purpose under the police power, and where the trial court makes a finding of fact to determine whether a defendant comes within the classification, such findings and classification do not offend against equal protection principles of the constitution. Vanderhoof v. People, 152 Colo. 147, 380 P.2d 903 (1963).

Power to sentence vested in court. The court is vested with power, after the psychiatric examination has been made and the report thereof filed, to determine whether sentence should be imposed under this part 2. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 316 F.2d 783 (10th Cir. 1963).

The trial court is the one imposing sentence and not the psychiatrist. After being apprised of the information it is the trial court which finally makes the determination whether a person, if at large, would constitute a threat of bodily harm to a member of the public. Ray v. People, 160 Colo. 173, 415 P.2d 328 (1966).

Section limits discretion of court. The trial court is empowered only to impose sentence under and in accord with the statute. In so doing the court performs a ministerial function with discretion confined to the limits permitted by this section. Trueblood v. Tinsley, 148 Colo. 503, 366 P.2d 655 (1961), cert. denied, 370 U.S. 929, 82 S. Ct. 1570, 8 L. Ed.2d 507 (1962).

Proceeding requires new finding of fact. This section does not make the commission of a specified crime the basis for sentencing. It makes one conviction the basis for commencing another proceeding under this act to determine whether a person constitutes a threat of bodily harm to the public, or is an habitual offender and mentally ill. That is a new finding of fact that was not an ingredient of the offense charged. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L. Ed.2d 326 (1967).

And due process requires that there be findings adequate to make meaningful any appeal that is allowed. Specht v. Patterson, 386 U.S. 605, 87 S. Ct. 1209, 18 L. Ed.2d 326 (1967).

Procedure did not abuse trial court's discretion. Jordan v. People, 161 Colo. 54, 419

P.2d 656 (1966), cert. denied, 386 U.S. 992, 87 S. Ct. 1308, 18 L.Ed.2d 338 (1967).

Finding of threat to public not automatic right to commitment. The effect the general assembly has given to a finding of a threat to the public under subsection (2) is not an automatic right to commitment. People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974).

A finding by the court "that the defendant, if at large, constitutes a threat of bodily harm to members of the public" does not require a person to be sentenced under the act if the court makes such a finding. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975).

The general assembly permits the court to terminate proceedings, irrespective of this finding. People v. Breazeale, 190 Colo. 17, 544 P.2d 970 (1975).

Defendant cannot be given sentence of commitment and sentence of imprisonment. Section 16-13-203, read together with subsection (2), established that the district courts could not give a defendant, who was found to constitute a threat of bodily harm to the public, a sentence of commitment and a sentence of imprisonment but have the option to either sentence to imprisonment or sentence to commitment. People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974).

18-1.3-913. Appeal. The defendant may appeal an adverse finding made pursuant to section 18-1.3-912 in the same manner as is provided by law for other criminal appeals.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-212 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-914. Time allowed on sentence. If the proceedings under this part 9 are terminated by the court, as provided in section 18-1.3-910 or 18-1.3-912 (3), the court shall deduct the time from the commencement of proceedings to the termination of proceedings from the minimum sentence of the defendant.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-213 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-915. Costs. The costs of the maintenance of the prisoner during the pendency of proceedings under this part 9 and the costs of the psychiatric examinations and reports shall be paid by the state of Colorado.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-214 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-916. Diagnostic center as receiving center. The diagnostic center, as defined in section 17-40-101 (1.5), C.R.S., shall be the receiving center for all persons committed pursuant to section 18-1.3-904.

Only if the court finds that the defendant is a threat to the public has the court the power to commit the defendant for an indeterminate term. People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 379, 520 P.2d 751 (1974).

If it elects to exercise this option, it must do so "in lieu of the sentence otherwise provided by law". People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 379, 520 P.2d 751 (1974).

Second court found defendant not threat to public contrary to first court's determination. Even though a district court, in prosecution under § 18-3-408, determined that the defendant constituted "a threat of bodily harm to members of the public" under subsection (2) and ordered him committed pursuant to § 16-13-203, a different district court, in a subsequent prosecution of defendant under § 18-3-401, arising out of different acts by the defendant, was not required under the doctrine of collateral estoppel to accept the first court's determination but could find that defendant was not a threat to the public and could sentence him to imprisonment. People v. Lyons, 185 Colo. 112, 521 P.2d 1265 (1974).

Applied in People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983).

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-215 as it existed prior to 2002.

PART 10

LIFETIME SUPERVISION OF SEX OFFENDERS

Law reviews: For article, "Felony Sex Offender Sentencing", see 33 Colo. Law. 11 (December 2004).

18-1.3-1001. Legislative declaration. The general assembly hereby finds that the majority of persons who commit sex offenses, if incarcerated or supervised without treatment, will continue to present a danger to the public when released from incarceration and supervision. The general assembly also finds that keeping all sex offenders in lifetime incarceration imposes an unacceptably high cost in both state dollars and loss of human potential. The general assembly further finds that some sex offenders respond well to treatment and can function as safe, responsible, and contributing members of society, so long as they receive treatment and supervision. The general assembly therefore declares that a program under which sex offenders may receive treatment and supervision for the rest of their lives, if necessary, is necessary for the safety, health, and welfare of the state.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-801 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1002. Short title. This part 10 shall be known and may be cited as the "Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act of 1998".

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-802 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1003. Definitions. As used in this part 10, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) "Department" means the department of corrections.
- (2) "Management board" means the sex offender management board created in section 16-11.7-103, C.R.S.
- (3) "Parole board" means the state board of parole created in section 17-2-201, C.R.S.
- (4) "Sex offender" means a person who is convicted of or pleads guilty or nolo contendere to a sex offense.
- (5) (a) "Sex offense" means any of the following offenses:
 - (I) (A) Sexual assault, as described in section 18-3-402; or
 - (B) Sexual assault in the first degree, as described in section 18-3-402 as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;
 - (II) Sexual assault in the second degree, as described in section 18-3-403 as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;
 - (III) (A) Felony unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404 (2); or
 - (B) Felony sexual assault in the third degree, as described in section 18-3-404 (2) as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;
 - (IV) Sexual assault on a child, as described in section 18-3-405;
 - (V) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, as described in section 18-3-405.3;

(VI) Aggravated sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist, as described in section 18-3-405.5 (1);

(VII) Enticement of a child, as described in section 18-3-305;

(VIII) Incest, as described in section 18-6-301;

(IX) Aggravated incest, as described in section 18-6-302;

(X) Patronizing a prostituted child, as described in section 18-7-406;

(XI) Class 4 felony internet luring of a child, in violation of section 18-3-306 (3); or

(XII) Internet sexual exploitation of a child, in violation of section 18-3-405.4.

(b) "Sex offense" also includes criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the offenses specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (5) if such criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation would constitute a class 2, 3, or 4 felony.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1434, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2005: (5)(b) amended, p. 765, § 26, effective June 1. L. 2006: (5)(a)(XI) and (5)(a)(XII) added, p. 2055, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2012: (4) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1402, § 23, effective June 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-803 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Conviction of any offense listed in subsection (5) must result in a mandatory indeterminate sentence under § 18-1.3-1004. People v. Harrison, 165 P.3d 859 (Colo. App. 2007).

Criminal attempt to commit a sexual assault is considered a sex offense if the attempt constitutes a class 2, 3, or 4 felony. People v. King, 151 P.3d 594 (Colo. App. 2006).

18-1.3-1004. Indeterminate sentence. (1) (a) Except as otherwise provided in this subsection (1) and in subsection (2) of this section, the district court having jurisdiction shall sentence a sex offender to the custody of the department for an indeterminate term of at least the minimum of the presumptive range specified in section 18-1.3-401 for the level of offense committed and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life.

(b) If the sex offender committed a sex offense that constitutes a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, the district court shall sentence the sex offender to the custody of the department for an indeterminate term of at least the midpoint in the presumptive range for the level of offense committed and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life.

(c) If the sex offender committed a sex offense that makes him or her eligible for sentencing as an habitual sex offender against children pursuant to section 18-3-412, the district court shall sentence the sex offender to the custody of the department for an indeterminate term of at least three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for the level of offense committed and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life.

(d) If the sex offender committed a sex offense that constitutes a sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-415.5, and the sex offender, prior to committing the offense, had notice that he or she had tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the district court shall sentence the sex offender to the custody of the department for an indeterminate term of at least three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for the level of offense committed and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life.

(2) (a) The district court having jurisdiction, based on consideration of the evaluation conducted pursuant to section 16-11.7-104, C.R.S., and the factors specified in section 18-1.3-203, may sentence a sex offender to probation for an indeterminate period of at least ten years for a class 4 felony or twenty years for a class 2 or 3 felony and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life; except that, if the sex offender committed a sex offense that constitutes a crime of violence, as defined in section 18-1.3-406, or committed a sex offense that makes him or her eligible for sentencing as a habitual sex offender against children pursuant to section 18-3-412, the court shall sentence the sex offender to the department of corrections as provided in subsection (1) of this section. For any sex offender sentenced to probation pursuant to this subsection (2), the court shall order that the sex offender, as a condition of probation, participate in an intensive supervision probation program established pursuant to section 18-1.3-1007, until further order of the court.

(b) The court, as a condition of probation, may sentence a sex offender to a residential community corrections program pursuant to section 18-1.3-301 for a minimum period specified by the court. Following completion of the minimum period, the sex offender may be released to intensive supervision probation as provided in section 18-1.3-1008 (1.5).

(3) Each sex offender sentenced pursuant to this section shall be required as a part of the sentence to undergo treatment to the extent appropriate pursuant to section 16-11.7-105, C.R.S.

(4) Repealed.

(5) (a) Any sex offender sentenced pursuant to subsection (1) of this section and convicted of one or more additional crimes arising out of the same incident as the sex offense shall be sentenced for the sex offense and such other crimes so that the sentences are served consecutively rather than concurrently.

(b) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (b), if a sex offender sentenced pursuant to this part 10 is convicted of a subsequent crime prior to being discharged from parole pursuant to section 18-1.3-1006 or discharged from probation pursuant to section 18-1.3-1008, any sentence imposed for the second crime shall not supersede the sex offender's sentence pursuant to the provisions of this part 10. If the sex offender commits the subsequent crime while he or she is on parole or probation and the sex offender receives a sentence to the department of corrections for the subsequent crime, the sex offender's parole or probation shall be deemed revoked pursuant to section 18-1.3-1010, and the sex offender shall continue to be subject to the provisions of this part 10.

(II) The provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall not apply if the sex offender commits a subsequent crime that is a class 1 felony.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1435, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2006: (4)(b)(II) amended, p. 2044, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2010: (4)(b)(I) amended, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 538, § 8, effective April 21. L. 2012: (4) repealed and (5)(a) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, pp. 1397, 1402, § § 14, 24, effective June 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-804 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-1004 is similar to § 16-13-804 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Indeterminate sentencing portion of the lifetime supervision of sex offenders act is constitutional. Indeterminate sentencing does not violate procedural due process. A defendant is given an opportunity to be heard at sentencing, and, since the statute does not require any further findings by a court to impose indeterminate sentencing, the defendant is not entitled to any further opportunity to be heard. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Indeterminate sentencing for sex offenders does not violate procedural due process. The opportunities in § 18-1.3-1006 (1) satisfy continuing due process requirements by providing an adequate continuing opportunity to be heard on the issue of release after a sentence has been imposed. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Substantive due process is not infringed by indeterminate sentencing. Indeterminate sentencing does implicate a fundamental right; therefore, it is subject to the rational basis test. The sentencing scheme is rationally related to the government's legitimate interest in shielding the public from untreated sex offenders and rehabilitating and treating those offenders. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Indeterminate sentencing does not violate equal protection. The threshold question in any equal protection challenge is whether the person allegedly subject to the disparate treatment is in fact similarly situated. In this case, the defendant is similarly situated with other offenders convicted of the same or similar crimes and subject to the same law, so there is no disparate treatment. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Indeterminate sentencing does not violate separation of powers. In this sentencing scheme, each branch carries out a different function, the legislative branch determined the particular punishment, the judicial branch imposed the particular sentence, and the executive branch carried out the sentence. Vesting the parole board with the decision to grant parole or release does not violate separation of powers. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003); People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court properly reviewed constitutionality of this section under the rational basis test. An adult offender has no fundamental liberty interest in freedom from incarceration. Because no fundamental right is implicated, the section is evaluated under the rational basis test. People v. Streat, 74 P.3d 387 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section bears a reasonable relationship to the legitimate state interests of safety, flexibility in rehabilitation and treatment, and minimizing unacceptably high costs of lifetime incarceration. People v. Streat, 74 P.3d 387 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004).

Indeterminate sentencing for sex offenders does not constitute cruel and unusual punishment. Sex offenses are considered particularly heinous crimes. People v. Dash, 104 P.3d 286 (Colo. App. 2004).

Prisoner has a liberty interest in participation in a statutorily mandated sex offender treatment program. Beebe v. Heil, 333 F. Supp. 2d 1011 (D. Colo. 2004).

In evaluating prisoner's substantive due process claim, the court must consider whether prison officials were deliberately indifferent to a liberty interest and deprived prisoner of that interest in such a way that the behavior of the governmental officers was so egregious, so outrageous that it may fairly be said to shock the contemporary conscience. The deliberate indifference standard is sensibly employed when actual deliberation is practical. Beebe v. Heil, 333 F. Supp. 2d 1011 (D. Colo. 2004).

Due process must be provided to a convicted sex offender before he can be excluded from such a program. Beebe v. Heil, 333 F. Supp. 2d 1011 (D. Colo. 2004).

The court must consider first, whether prisoner's exclusion from the treatment program itself constitutes an atypical and significant hardship and, second, whether the failure of the prison officials to provide prisoner with due process before terminating him from sex offender treatment constitutes an atypical and significant hardship. To evaluate whether a prisoner's freedom has been restrained in a manner that imposes atypical and significant hardship, the court must carefully examine the conditions of the prisoner's confinement, including the duration and degree of prisoner's restrictions as compared with other inmates. Beebe v. Heil, 333 F. Supp. 2d 1011 (D. Colo. 2004).

This part 10 grants the court discretion to impose an indeterminate sentence with a minimum term that exceeds the maximum of the presumptive range set forth in § 18-1.3-401. This part 10 creates specific sentencing provisions for a specific type of felony, whereas the general sentencing provisions in § 18-1.3-401 create presumptive ranges that apply to general classes of felonies. These sentencing provisions, therefore, supplant the presumptive ranges in § 18-1.3-401. People v. Larson, 97 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2004).

If a convicted sex offender is subject to both subsection (1)(a) and the provisions of the habitual criminal statute, both statutes must be reconciled. In such case, the trial court must impose a prison sentence for an indeterminate term of at least three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for the level of offense committed and a maximum of the sex offender's natural life. People v. Apodaca, 58 P.3d 1126 (Colo. App. 2002).

This section requires the court to give the offender an indeterminate sentence. The phrase "at least" in paragraph (a) of subsection (1) by its plain meaning provides the court with the options to impose either the minimum of the presumptive range or an increased minimum sentence as the minimum period of the indeterminate sentence. People v. Smith, 29 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

Indeterminate sentencing is mandatory for the types of inchoate or completed offenses enumerated in § 18-1.3-1003 (5). People v. Harrison, 165 P.3d 859 (Colo. App. 2007).

Discretionary indeterminate sentencing permits the court to sentence an offender to indeterminate term only if: (1) He or she is convicted of an economic sex crime and (2) an assessment of that offender determines that he or she is likely to commit a sexually violent predator (SVP) offense against a stranger or a groomed victim. People v. Walker, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

A mental health sex offender specific evaluation satisfies the assessment prong. The assessment was sufficient to determine defendant was likely to commit an SVP offense in the future against a groomed victim. The assessment's use of the term "significant risk to commit" was the same as "likely to commit". People v. Walker, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Indeterminate sentencing is discretionary and appropriate but only under certain circumstances, including the need for an SVP assessment, for the offenses specified in subsection (4). People v. Harrison, 165 P.3d 859 (Colo. App. 2007).

This section gives notice of the possible sentencing range and allows the court to exercise its discretion in considering rehabilitative potential. People v. Smith, 29 P.3d 347 (Colo. App. 2001).

Phrase “at least” in § 16-13-804 (1) does not require the court to set the minimum length of the indeterminate sentence at the midpoint of the presumptive range. The court may impose a minimum length to the indeterminate sentence that is greater than the midpoint of the presumptive range. People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

When the court sentenced the defendant to consecutive sentences after finding that the two counts arose out of the same incident, the sentencing did not violate Apprendi principles. In this case, the court’s fact finding did not increase the defendant’s sentence beyond the maximum allowed by statute. People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Sections 16-11-309 (1)(c) and 18-1-105 (9)(e.5) conflict irreconcilably with § 16-13-804 (1)(b). The phrase “up to the defendant’s natural life” in §§ 16-11-309 (1)(c) and 18-1-105 (9)(e.5) conflicts with the phrase “a maximum of the sex offender’s natural life” in § 16-13-804 (1)(b). Statutory construction calls for § 16-13-804 (1)(b) to prevail, requiring the court to set the maximum length of the indeterminate sentence at the defendant’s natural life. People v. Becker, 55 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2002).

The court has discretion to designate a minimum term that is greater than the maximum presumptive penalty. To conclude otherwise would be to read a provision into the act that does not exist. People v. Larson, 97 P.3d 246 (Colo. App. 2004).

The Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act requires an indeterminate sentence for the class 2, 3, and 4 felony sex offenses to which it applies, consisting of an upper term of the sex offender’s natural life and a lower term of a definite number of years, not less than the minimum nor more than twice the maximum of the presumptive range authorized for the class of felony of which the defendant stands convicted. Vensor v. People, 151 P.3d 1274 (Colo. 2007).

Although the Colorado Sex Offender Lifetime Supervision Act expressly forbids a sentence with a lower term that is less than the minimum of the presumptive range, it does not preclude the lower term of the defendant’s indeterminate sentence from exceeding the presumptive range as the result of extraordinary aggravating circumstances. Subject to the express prohibition of subsection (1)(a) against a sentencing below the presumptive range, the lower term of a sex offender’s indeterminate sentence must be fixed according to the provisions of the determinate sentencing scheme of § 18-1.3-401. Vensor v. People, 151 P.3d 1274 (Colo. 2007).

This section applies to first degree sexual assault on an at-risk adult. People v. Klausner, 74 P.3d 421 (Colo. App. 2003).

This section applies to an attempt to commit a sex offense if the attempt constitutes a class 2, 3, or 4 felony. People v. King, 151 P.3d 594 (Colo. App. 2006).

Before a defendant convicted of soliciting for child prostitution can be sentenced to an indeterminate sentence, an assessment must be made that it is likely that the defendant will commit an enumerated SVP crime under certain specific circumstances. People v. Jacobs, 91 P.3d 438 (Colo. App. 2003).

When the sentence imposed by the court is supported by the record there is no abuse of discretion. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where defendant was sentenced under subsection (1)(a) of this section and not § 18-1.3-401 (7), the court was not required to make specific findings to identify extraordinary circumstances and reasons for varying from the presumptive sentencing range. People v. Vensor, 116 P.3d 1240 (Colo. App. 2005), rev’d on other grounds, 151 P.3d 1274 (Colo. 2007).

Collateral attack on district court’s jurisdiction to order a deferred judgment and sentence barred under statute of limitations set forth in § 16-5-402. The statutory language expressly limits the court’s jurisdiction only in those cases where it actually enters a sentence, and a deferred judgment is technically not a sentence but rather a continuance with probation-like supervision conditions. People v. Loveall, 231 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2010).

Applied in People v. Vigil, 104 P.3d 258 (Colo. App. 2004).

18-1.3-1005. Parole - intensive supervision program. (1) The department shall establish an intensive supervision parole program for sex offenders sentenced to incarceration and subsequently released on parole pursuant to this part 10. In addition, the parole board may require a person, as a condition of parole, to participate in the intensive supervision parole program established pursuant to this section if the person is convicted of:

- (a) Indecent exposure, as described in section 18-7-302;
- (b) Criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the offenses specified in section 18-1.3-1003 (5) (a), which attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation would constitute a class 5 felony; or

(c) Any of the offenses specified in section 16-22-102 (9) (j), (9) (k), (9) (l), (9) (n), (9) (o), (9) (p), (9) (q), (9) (r), or (9) (s), C.R.S.

(1.5) In addition to the persons specified in subsection (1) of this section, the parole board shall require, as a condition of parole, any person convicted of felony failure to register as a sex offender, as described in section 18-3-412.5, who is sentenced to incarceration and subsequently released on parole, to participate in the intensive supervision parole program established pursuant to this section.

(2) The department shall require that sex offenders and any other persons in the intensive supervision parole program established pursuant to this section receive the highest level of supervision that is provided to parolees. The intensive supervision parole program may include, but is not limited to, severely restricted activities, daily contact between the sex offender or other person and the community parole officer, monitored curfew, home visitation, employment visitation and monitoring, drug and alcohol screening, treatment referrals and monitoring, including physiological monitoring, and payment of restitution. In addition, the intensive supervision parole program shall be designed to minimize the risk to the public to the greatest extent possible.

(3) The executive director of the department shall establish and enforce standards and criteria for administration of the intensive supervision parole program created pursuant to this section.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1438, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2008: (2) amended, p. 659, § 13, effective April 25. L. 2012: (1)(c) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1402, § 25, effective June 7.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-805 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1006. Release from incarceration - parole - conditions. (1) (a) On completion of the minimum period of incarceration specified in a sex offender's indeterminate sentence, less any earned time credited to the sex offender pursuant to section 17-22.5-405, C.R.S., the parole board shall schedule a hearing to determine whether the sex offender may be released on parole. In determining whether to release the sex offender on parole, the parole board shall determine whether the sex offender has successfully progressed in treatment and would not pose an undue threat to the community if released under appropriate treatment and monitoring requirements and whether there is a strong and reasonable probability that the person will not thereafter violate the law. The department shall make recommendations to the parole board concerning whether the sex offender should be released on parole and the level of treatment and monitoring that should be imposed as a condition of parole. The recommendation shall be based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009.

(b) If a sex offender is released on parole pursuant to this section, the sex offender's sentence to incarceration shall continue and shall not be deemed discharged until such time as the parole board may discharge the sex offender from parole pursuant to subsection (3) of this section. The period of parole for any sex offender convicted of a class 4 felony shall be an indeterminate term of at least ten years and a maximum of the remainder of the sex offender's natural life. The period of parole for any sex offender convicted of a class 2 or 3 felony shall be an indeterminate term of at least twenty years and a maximum of the remainder of the sex offender's natural life.

(c) If the parole board does not release the sex offender on parole pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), the parole board shall review such denial at least once every three years until it determines that the sex offender meets the criteria for release on parole specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1). At each review, the department shall make recommendations, based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009, concerning whether the sex offender should be released on parole.

(2) (a) As a condition of release on parole pursuant to this section, a sex offender shall participate in the intensive supervision parole program created by the department pursuant to section 18-1.3-1005. Participation in the intensive supervision parole program shall continue until the sex offender can demonstrate that he or she has successfully progressed in treatment and would not pose an undue threat to the community if paroled to a lower level of supervision, at which time the sex offender's community parole officer may petition the parole board for a reduction in the sex offender's level of supervision. The sex offender's community parole officer and treatment provider shall make recommendations to the parole board concerning whether the sex offender has met the requirements specified in this subsection (2) such that the level of parole supervision should be reduced. The recommendations shall be based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009.

(b) Following reduction in a sex offender's level of parole supervision pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), the sex offender's community parole officer may return the sex offender to the intensive supervision parole program if the community parole officer determines that an increased level of supervision is necessary to protect the public safety. The community parole officer shall notify the parole board as soon as possible after returning the sex offender to the intensive supervision parole program. To subsequently reduce the sex offender's level of supervision, the community parole officer may petition the parole board as provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2).

(3) (a) On completion of twenty years on parole for any sex offender convicted of a class 2 or 3 felony or on completion of ten years of parole for any sex offender convicted of a class 4 felony, the parole board shall schedule a hearing to determine whether the sex offender may be discharged from parole. In determining whether to discharge the sex offender from parole, the parole board shall determine whether the sex offender has successfully progressed in treatment and would not pose an undue threat to the community if allowed to live in the community without treatment or supervision. The sex offender's community parole officer and treatment provider shall make recommendations to the parole board concerning whether the sex offender has met the requirements specified in this subsection (3) such that the sex offender should be discharged from parole. The recommendations shall be based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009.

(b) If the parole board does not discharge the sex offender from parole pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), the parole board shall review such denial at least once every three years until it determines that the sex offender meets the criteria for discharge specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3). At each review, the sex offender's community parole officer and treatment provider shall make recommendations, based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009, concerning whether the sex offender should be discharged.

(4) In determining whether to release a sex offender on parole, reduce the level of supervision, or discharge a sex offender from parole pursuant to this section, the parole board shall consider the recommendations of the department and the sex offender's community parole officer and treatment provider. If the parole board chooses not to follow the recommendations made, it shall make findings on the record in support of its decision.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1438, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1)(a) amended, p. 975, § 11, effective April 17. L. 2008: (2), (3), and (4) amended, p. 660, §14, effective April 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-806 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Indeterminate sentencing for sex offenders does not violate procedural due process. The opportunities in § 18-1.3-1006 (1) satisfy continuing due process requirements by providing an adequate continuing opportunity to be heard on the issue of release after a sentence has been imposed. People v. Oglethorpe, 87 P.3d 129 (Colo. App. 2003).

18-1.3-1007. Probation - intensive supervision program. (1) (a) The judicial department shall establish an intensive supervision probation program for sex offenders sentenced to probation pursuant to this part 10. In addition, the court shall require a person, as a condition of probation, to participate in the intensive supervision probation program established pursuant to this section if the person is convicted of one of the following offenses and sentenced to probation:

(I) Indecent exposure, as described in section 18-7-302 (4);

(II) Criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the offenses specified in section 18-1.3-1003 (5) (a), which attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation would constitute a class 5 felony;

(III) Any of the offenses specified in section 16-22-102 (9) (j), (9) (k), (9) (l), (9) (n), (9) (o), (9) (p), (9) (q), (9) (r), or (9) (s), C.R.S.;

(IV) Any felony offense that involves unlawful sexual behavior or any felony offense with an underlying factual basis, as determined by the court, resulting in a conviction or plea of guilty or nolo contendere on or after July 1, 2001;

(V) Sexual assault in the third degree, in violation of section 18-3-404 (2), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000.

(b) The judicial department may establish the intensive supervision probation program in any judicial district or combination of judicial districts.

(1.5) In addition to the persons specified in subsection (1) of this section, the court may require any person convicted of felony failure to register as a sex offender, as described in section 18-3-412.5, and sentenced to probation to participate, as a condition of probation and until further order of the court, in the intensive supervision probation program established pursuant to this section.

(2) The judicial department shall require that sex offenders and any other persons participating in the intensive supervision probation program created pursuant to this section receive the highest level of supervision that is provided to probationers. The intensive supervision probation program may include but not be limited to severely restricted activities, daily contact between the sex offender or other person and the probation officer, monitored curfew, home visitation, employment visitation and monitoring, drug and alcohol screening, treatment referrals and monitoring, including physiological monitoring, and payment of restitution. In addition, the intensive supervision probation program shall be designed to minimize the risk to the public to the greatest extent possible.

(3) The judicial department shall establish and enforce standards and criteria for administration of the intensive supervision probation program created pursuant to this section.

(4) For the purposes of this section, “convicted” means having entered a plea of guilty, including a plea of guilty entered pursuant to a deferred sentence under section 18-1.3-102, or a plea of no contest, accepted by the court, or having received a verdict of guilty by a judge or jury.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1440, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2011: (1.5) amended, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 965, § 9, effective May 27. L. 2012: (1)(a)(III) amended, (HB 12-1310), ch. 268, p. 1402, § 26, effective June 7.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-807 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

This section and § 18-1.3-1008 allow the court to exercise its discretion in determining whether and on what conditions a sex offender may be released from sex offender intensified supervision probation, so long as it takes steps to minimize risk to the public. People v. Valenzuela, 98 P.3d 951 (Colo. App. 2004).

Trial court had authority to direct that defendant’s sex offender intensive supervision program would commence consecutively at the end of his incarceration on another conviction. People v. Trujillo, 261 P.3d 485 (Colo. App. 2010).

18-1.3-1008. Probation - conditions - release. (1) If the court sentences a sex offender to probation, in addition to any conditions imposed pursuant to section 18-1.3-204, the court shall require as a condition of probation that the sex offender participate until further order of the court in the intensive supervision probation program created pursuant to section 18-1.3-1007.

(1.5) If the court as a condition of probation sentences a sex offender to a residential community corrections program, following completion of the minimum period of sentence specified by the court, the community corrections program shall notify the judicial department when it determines that the sex offender has successfully progressed in treatment and would not pose an undue threat to the community if allowed to live in the community while continuing on intensive supervision probation. The community corrections program shall base its determination on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009. The judicial department shall file the recommendations of the community corrections program with the court. Upon order of the court, the sex offender shall be released from the community corrections program, and the court shall order the sex offender, as a condition of probation, to participate in the intensive supervision program created in section 18-1.3-1007. The sex offender shall participate in such program until further order of the court.

(2) On completion of twenty years of probation for any sex offender convicted of a class 2 or 3 felony or on completion of ten years of probation for any sex offender convicted of a class 4 felony, the court shall schedule a review hearing to determine whether the sex offender should be discharged from probation. In making its determination, the court shall determine whether the sex offender has successfully progressed in treatment and would not pose an undue threat to the community if allowed to live in the community without treatment or supervision. The sex offender's probation officer and treatment provider shall make recommendations to the court concerning whether the sex offender has met the requirements of this section such that he or she should be discharged from probation.

(3) (a) In determining whether to discharge a sex offender from probation pursuant to this section, the court shall consider the recommendations of the sex offender's probation officer and treatment provider. The recommendations of the probation officer and the treatment provider shall be based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009. If the court chooses not to follow the recommendations made, the court shall make findings on the record in support of its decision.

(b) If the court does not discharge the sex offender from probation pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), the court shall review such denial at least once every three years until it determines that the sex offender meets the criteria for discharge as specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3). At each review, the sex offender's probation officer and treatment provider shall make recommendations, based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009, concerning whether the sex offender should be discharged.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1441, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-808 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

A defendant's removal from sex offender intensified supervision probation is not dependent upon completion of a treatment program. People v. Valenzuela, 98 P.3d 951 (Colo. App. 2004).

18-1.3-1009. Criteria for release from incarceration, reduction in supervision, and discharge. (1) On or before July 1, 1999, the management board, in collaboration with the department of corrections, the judicial department, and the parole board, shall establish:

(a) The criteria by and the manner in which a sex offender may demonstrate that he or she would not pose an undue threat to the community if released on parole or to a lower level of supervision while on parole or probation or if discharged from parole or probation. The court and the parole board may use the criteria to assist in making decisions concerning release of a sex offender, reduction of the level of supervision for a sex offender, and discharge of a sex offender.

(b) The methods of determining whether a sex offender has successfully progressed in treatment; and

(c) Standards for community entities that provide supervision and treatment specifically designed for sex offenders who have developmental disabilities. At a minimum, the standards shall determine whether an entity would provide adequate support and supervision to minimize any threat that the sex offender may pose to the community.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1442, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-809 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1010. Arrest of parolee or probationer - revocation. (1) (a) A sex offender paroled pursuant to section 18-1.3-1006 is subject to arrest and revocation of parole as provided in sections 17-2-103 and 17-2-103.5, C.R.S. At any revocation proceeding, the sex offender's community parole officer and the treatment provider shall submit written recommendations concerning the level of treatment and monitoring that should be imposed as a condition of parole if parole is not revoked or whether the sex offender poses a sufficient threat to the community that parole should be revoked. The recommendations shall be based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009. If the parole board revokes the sex offender's parole, the sex offender shall continue to be subject to the provisions of this part 10.

(b) At a revocation hearing held pursuant to this subsection (1), the parole board shall consider the recommendations of the community parole officer and the treatment provider, in addition to evidence concerning any of the grounds for revocation of parole specified in sections 17-2-103 and 17-2-103.5, C.R.S. If the parole board chooses not to follow the recommendations made, it shall make findings on the record in support of its decision.

(2) (a) A sex offender sentenced to probation pursuant to section 18-1.3-1004 (2) is subject to arrest and revocation of probation as provided in sections 16-11-205 and 16-11-206, C.R.S. At any revocation proceeding, the sex offender's probation officer and the sex offender's treatment provider shall submit recommendations concerning the level of treatment and monitoring that should be imposed as a condition of probation if probation is not revoked or whether the sex offender poses a sufficient threat to the community that probation should be revoked. The recommendations shall be based on the criteria established by the management board pursuant to section 18-1.3-1009. If the court revokes the sex offender's probation, the court shall sentence the sex offender as provided in section 18-1.3-1004, and the sex offender shall be subject to the provisions of this part 10.

(b) At a revocation hearing held pursuant to this subsection (2), the court shall consider the recommendations of the probation officer and the treatment provider, in addition to evidence concerning any of the grounds for revocation of probation specified in sections 16-11-205 and 16-11-206, C.R.S. If the court chooses not to follow the recommendations made, it shall make findings on the record in support of its decision.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1442, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2008: (1) amended, p. 661, § 15, effective April 25.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-810 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1011. Annual report. (1) On or before November 1, 2000, and on or before each November 1 thereafter, the department of corrections, the department of public safety, and the judicial department shall submit a report to the judiciary committees of the house of representatives and the senate, or any successor committees, and to the joint budget committee of the general assembly specifying, at a minimum:

(a) The impact on the prison population, the parole population, and the probation population in the state due to the extended length of incarceration and supervision provided for in sections 18-1.3-1004, 18-1.3-1006, and 18-1.3-1008;

(b) The number of offenders placed in the intensive supervision parole program and the intensive supervision probation program and the length of supervision of offenders in said programs;

(c) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who received parole release hearings and the number released on parole during the preceding twelve months, if any;

(d) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who received parole or probation discharge hearings and the number discharged from parole or probation during the preceding twelve months, if any;

(e) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who received parole or probation revocation hearings and the number whose parole or probation was revoked during the preceding twelve months, if any;

(f) A summary of the evaluation instruments developed by the management board and use of the evaluation instruments in evaluating sex offenders pursuant to this part 10;

(g) The availability of sex offender treatment providers throughout the state, including location of the treatment providers, the services provided, and the amount paid by offenders and by the state for the services provided, and the manner of regulation and review of the services provided by sex offender treatment providers;

(h) The average number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 that participated in phase I and phase II of the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program during each month of the preceding twelve months;

(i) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who were denied admission to treatment in phase I and phase II of the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program for reasons other than length of remaining sentence during each month of the preceding twelve months;

(j) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who were terminated from phase I and phase II of the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program during the preceding twelve months and the reason for termination in each case;

(k) The average length of participation by sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 in phase I and phase II of the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program during the preceding twelve months;

(l) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who were denied readmission to phase I and phase II of the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program after having previously been terminated from the program during the preceding twelve months;

(m) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who were recommended by the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program to the parole board for release on parole during the preceding twelve months and whether the recommendation was followed in each case; and

(n) The number of sex offenders sentenced pursuant to this part 10 who were recommended by the department's sex offender treatment and monitoring program for placement in community corrections during the preceding twelve months and whether the recommendation was followed in each case.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1443, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2007: IP(1) and (1)(f) amended and (1)(h) to (1)(n) added, p. 1543, § 1, effective May 31.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-811 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1012. Applicability of part. The provisions of this part 10 shall apply to any person who commits a sex offense on or after November 1, 1998.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1444, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-13-812 as it existed prior to 2002.

PART 11

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - PRETRIAL MOTIONS IN CLASS 1 FELONY CASES ALLEGING THAT A DEFENDANT IS A MENTALLY RETARDED DEFENDANT

18-1.3-1101. Definitions. As used in this part 11:

(1) "Defendant" means any person charged with a class 1 felony.

(2) "Mentally retarded defendant" means any defendant with significantly subaverage general intellectual functioning existing concurrently with substantial deficits in adaptive behavior and manifested and documented during the developmental period. The requirement for documentation may be excused by the court upon a finding that extraordinary circumstances exist.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1444, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-9-401 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1102. Pretrial motion by defendant in class 1 felony case - determination whether defendant is mentally retarded - procedure. (1) Any defendant may file a motion with the trial court in which the defendant may allege that such defendant is a mentally retarded defendant. Such motion shall be filed at least ninety-one days prior to trial.

(2) The court shall hold a hearing upon any motion filed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section and shall make a determination regarding such motion no later than fourteen days prior to trial. At such hearing, the defendant shall be permitted to present evidence with regard to such motion and the prosecution shall be permitted to offer evidence in rebuttal. The defendant shall have the burden of proof to show by clear and convincing evidence that such defendant is mentally retarded.

(3) The court shall enter specific findings of fact and conclusions of law regarding whether or not the defendant is a mentally retarded defendant as defined in section 18-1.3-1101.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1444, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (1) and (2) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 868, § 119, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-9-402 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the amending subsections (1) and (2) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

The allocation by this section of the burden of proof to the defendant is constitutionally permissible. People v. Vasquez, 84 P.3d 1019 (Colo. 2004).

The clear and convincing standard of proof placed upon the defendant by this section is constitutionally adequate. People v. Vasquez, 84 P.3d 1019 (Colo. 2004).

18-1.3-1103. Mentally retarded defendant - death penalty not imposed thereon. A sentence of death shall not be imposed upon any defendant who is determined to be a mentally retarded defendant pursuant to section 18-1.3-1102. If any person who is determined to be a mentally retarded defendant is found guilty of a class 1 felony, such defendant shall be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1444, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-9-403 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1104. Evaluation and report. (1) When the defendant files a motion alleging that the defendant is a mentally retarded defendant, the court shall order one or more evaluations of the defendant with regard to such motion.

(2) In ordering an evaluation of the defendant pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the court shall specify the place where the evaluation is to be conducted and the period of time allocated for the evaluation. In determining the place where the evaluation is to be conducted, the court shall give priority to the place where the defendant is in custody, unless the nature and circumstances of the evaluation requires designation of a different location. The court shall direct one or more psychologists who are recommended by the executive director of the department of human services pursuant to section 27-10.5-139, C.R.S., or his or her designee, to evaluate the defendant. For good cause shown, upon motion of the prosecution or the defendant or upon the court's own motion, the court may order such further or other evaluation as it deems necessary. Nothing in this section shall abridge the right of the defendant to procure an evaluation as provided in section 18-1.3-1105.

(3) The defendant shall have a privilege against self-incrimination that may be invoked prior to or during the course of an evaluation under this section. A defendant's failure to cooperate with the evaluators or other personnel conducting the evaluation may be admissible in the defendant's mental retardation hearing.

(4) To aid in the formation of an opinion as to mental retardation, it is permissible in the course of an evaluation under this section to use statements of the defendant and any other evidence, including but not limited to the circumstances surrounding the commission of the offense as well as the medical and social history of the defendant, in evaluating the defendant.

(5) A written report of the evaluation shall be prepared in triplicate and delivered to the appropriate clerk of the court. The clerk shall furnish a copy of the report to both the prosecuting attorney and the counsel for the defendant.

(6) The report of evaluation shall include, but is not limited to:

(a) The name of each expert who evaluated the defendant;

(b) A description of the nature, content, extent, and results of the evaluation and any tests conducted; and

(c) Diagnosis and an opinion as to whether the defendant is mentally retarded.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be construed to preclude the application of section 16-8-109, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1445, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-9-404 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1105. Evaluation at insistence of defendant. (1) If the defendant wishes to be evaluated by an expert in mental retardation of the defendant's choice in connection with the mental retardation hearing under this part 11, the court, upon timely motion, shall order that the evaluator chosen by the defendant be given reasonable opportunity to conduct the evaluation.

(2) Whenever an expert is endorsed as a witness by the defendant, a copy of any report of an evaluation of the defendant shall be furnished to the prosecution within a reasonable time but not less than thirty-five days prior to the mental retardation hearing.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1445, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (2) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 868, § 120, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-9-405 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (2) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

PART 12

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - SENTENCING IN CLASS 1 FELONIES

18-1.3-1201. Imposition of sentence in class 1 felonies - appellate review.

(1) (a) Upon conviction of guilt of a defendant of a class 1 felony, the trial court shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment, unless the defendant was under the age of eighteen years at the time of the commission of the offense or unless the defendant has been determined to be a mentally retarded defendant pursuant to part 11 of this article, in either of which cases, the defendant shall be sentenced to life imprisonment. The hearing shall be conducted by the trial judge before the trial jury as soon as practicable. Alternate jurors shall not be excused from the case prior to submission of the issue of guilt to the trial jury and shall remain separately sequestered until a verdict is entered by the trial jury. If the verdict of the trial jury is that the defendant is guilty of a class 1 felony, the alternate jurors shall sit as alternate jurors on the issue of punishment. If, for any reason satisfactory to the court, any member or members of the trial jury are excused from participation in the sentencing hearing, the trial judge shall replace each juror or jurors with an alternate juror or jurors. If a trial jury was waived or if the defendant pled guilty, the hearing shall be conducted before the trial judge. The court shall instruct the defendant when waiving his or her right to a jury trial or when pleading guilty, that he or she is also waiving his or her right to a jury determination of the sentence at the sentencing hearing.

(a.5) and (a.7) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess., p. 7, § 2, effective July 12, 2002.)

(b) All admissible evidence presented by either the prosecuting attorney or the defendant that the court deems relevant to the nature of the crime, and the character, background, and history of the defendant, including any evidence presented in the guilt phase of the trial, any matters relating to any of the aggravating or mitigating factors enumerated in subsections (4) and (5) of this section, and any matters relating to the personal characteristics of the victim and the impact of the crimes on the victim's family may be presented. Any such evidence, including but not limited to the testimony of members of the victim's immediate family, as defined in section 24-4.1-302 (6), C.R.S., which the court deems to have probative value may be received, as long as each party is given an opportunity to rebut such evidence. The prosecuting attorney and the defendant or the defendant's counsel shall be permitted to present arguments for or against a sentence of death. The jury shall be instructed that life imprisonment means imprisonment for life without the possibility of parole.

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess., p. 7, § 2, effective July 12, 2002.)

(d) The burden of proof as to the aggravating factors enumerated in subsection (5) of this section shall be beyond a reasonable doubt. There shall be no burden of proof as to proving or disproving mitigating factors.

(2) (a) After hearing all the evidence and arguments of the prosecuting attorney and the defendant, the jury shall deliberate and render a verdict based upon the following considerations:

(I) Whether at least one aggravating factor has been proved as enumerated in subsection (5) of this section;

(II) Whether sufficient mitigating factors exist which outweigh any aggravating factor or factors found to exist; and

(III) Based on the considerations in subparagraphs (I) and (II) of this paragraph (a), whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment.

(b) (I) In the event that no aggravating factors are found to exist as enumerated in subsection (5) of this section, the jury shall render a verdict of life imprisonment, and the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(II) The jury shall not render a verdict of death unless it unanimously finds and specifies in writing that:

(A) At least one aggravating factor has been proved; and

(B) There are insufficient mitigating factors to outweigh the aggravating factor or factors that were proved.

(c) In the event that the jury's verdict is to sentence to death, such verdict shall be unanimous and shall be binding upon the court unless the court determines, and sets forth in writing the basis and reasons for such determination, that the verdict of the jury is clearly erroneous as contrary to the weight of the evidence, in which case the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(d) If the jury's verdict is not unanimous, the jury shall be discharged, and the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(2.5) In all cases where the sentencing hearing is held before the court alone, the court shall determine whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment in the same manner in which a jury determines its verdict under paragraphs (a) and (b) of subsection (2) of this section. The sentence of the court shall be supported by specific written findings of fact based upon the circumstances as set forth in subsections (4) and (5) of this section and upon the records of the trial and sentencing hearing.

(3) (a) The provisions of this subsection (3) shall apply only in a class 1 felony case in which the prosecuting attorney has filed a statement of intent to seek the death penalty pursuant to rule 32.1 (b) of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

(b) The prosecuting attorney shall provide the defendant with the following information and materials not later than twenty-one days after the prosecution files its written intention to seek the death penalty or within such other time frame as the supreme court may establish by rule; except that any reports, recorded statements, and notes, including results of physical or mental examinations and scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons, of any expert whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call as a witness at the sentencing hearing shall be provided to the defense as soon as practicable but not later than sixty-three days before trial:

(I) A list of all aggravating factors that are known to the prosecuting attorney at that time and that the prosecuting attorney intends to prove at the sentencing hearing;

(II) A list of all witnesses whom the prosecuting attorney may call at the sentencing hearing, specifying for each the witness' name, address, and date of birth and the subject matter of the witness' testimony;

(III) The written and recorded statements, including any notes of those statements, for each witness whom the prosecuting attorney may call at the sentencing hearing;

(IV) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess., p. 7, § 2, effective July 12, 2002.)

(V) A list of books, papers, documents, photographs, or tangible objects that the prosecuting attorney may introduce at the sentencing hearing; and

(VI) All material or information that tends to mitigate or negate the finding of any of the aggravating factors the prosecuting attorney intends to prove at the sentencing hearing.

(b.5) Upon receipt of the information required to be disclosed by the defendant pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (3), the prosecuting attorney shall notify the defendant as soon as practicable of any additional witnesses whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call in response to the defendant's disclosures.

(c) The defendant shall provide the prosecuting attorney with the following information and materials no later than thirty-five days before the first trial date set for the beginning of the defendant's trial or within such other time frame as the supreme court may establish by rule; however, any reports, recorded statements, and notes, including results of physical or mental examinations and scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons, of any expert whom the defense intends to call as a witness at the sentencing hearing shall be provided to the prosecuting attorney as soon as practicable but not later than thirty-five days before trial:

(I) A list of all witnesses whom the defendant may call at the sentencing hearing, specifying for each the witness' name, address, and date of birth and the subject matter of the witness' testimony;

(II) The written and recorded statements, including any notes of those statements, of each witness whom the defendant may call at the sentencing hearing; and

(III) *(Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess., p. 7, § 2, effective July 12, 2002.)

(IV) A list of books, papers, documents, photographs, or tangible objects that the defendant may introduce at the sentencing hearing.

(c.5) (I) Any material subject to this subsection (3) that the defendant believes contains information that is privileged to the extent that the prosecution cannot be aware of it in connection with its preparation for, or conduct of, the trial to determine guilt on the substantive charges against the defendant shall be submitted by the defendant to the trial judge under seal no later than forty-nine days before trial.

(II) The trial judge shall review any such material submitted under seal pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c.5) to determine whether it is in fact privileged. Any material the trial judge finds not to be privileged shall be provided forthwith to the prosecuting attorney. Any material submitted under seal that the trial judge finds to be privileged shall be provided forthwith to the prosecution if the defendant is convicted of a class 1 felony.

(d) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (d), if the witnesses disclosed by the defendant pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (3) include witnesses who may provide evidence concerning the defendant's mental condition at the sentencing hearing conducted pursuant to this section, the trial court, at the request of the prosecuting attorney, shall order that the defendant be examined and a report of said examination be prepared pursuant to section 16-8-106, C.R.S.

(II) The court shall not order an examination pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (d) if:

(A) Such an examination was previously performed and a report was prepared in the same case; and

(B) The report included an opinion concerning how any mental disease or defect of the defendant or condition of mind caused by mental disease or defect of the defendant affects the mitigating factors that the defendant may raise at the sentencing hearing held pursuant to this section.

(e) If the witnesses disclosed by the defendant pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (3) include witnesses who may provide evidence concerning the defendant's mental condition at a sentencing hearing conducted pursuant to this section, the provisions of section 16-8-109, C.R.S., concerning testimony of lay witnesses shall apply to said sentencing hearing.

(f) There is a continuing duty on the part of the prosecuting attorney and the defendant to disclose the information and materials specified in this subsection (3). If, after complying with the duty to disclose the information and materials described in this subsection (3), either party discovers or obtains any additional information and materials that are subject to disclosure under this subsection (3), the party shall promptly notify the other party and provide the other party with complete access to the information and materials.

(g) The trial court, upon a showing of extraordinary circumstances that could not have been foreseen and prevented, may grant an extension of time to comply with the requirements of this subsection (3).

(h) If it is brought to the attention of the court that either the prosecuting attorney or the defendant has failed to comply with the provisions of this subsection (3) or with an order issued pursuant to this subsection (3), the court may enter any order against such party that the court deems just under the circumstances, including but not limited to an order to permit the discovery or inspection of information and materials not previously disclosed, to grant a continuance, to prohibit the offending party from introducing the information and materials not disclosed, or to impose sanctions against the offending party.

(4) For purposes of this section, mitigating factors shall be the following factors:

(a) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime; or

(b) The defendant's capacity to appreciate wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform the defendant's conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, but not so impaired as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or

(c) The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, although not such duress as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or

(d) The defendant was a principal in the offense which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, although not so minor as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or

(e) The defendant could not reasonably have foreseen that the defendant's conduct in the course of the commission of the offense for which the defendant was convicted would cause, or would create a grave risk of causing, death to another person; or

(f) The emotional state of the defendant at the time the crime was committed; or

(g) The absence of any significant prior conviction; or

(h) The extent of the defendant's cooperation with law enforcement officers or agencies and with the office of the prosecuting district attorney; or

(i) The influence of drugs or alcohol; or

(j) The good faith, although mistaken, belief by the defendant that circumstances existed which constituted a moral justification for the defendant's conduct; or

(k) The defendant is not a continuing threat to society; or

(l) Any other evidence which in the court's opinion bears on the question of mitigation.

(5) For purposes of this section, aggravating factors shall be the following factors:

(a) The class 1 felony was committed by a person under sentence of imprisonment for a class 1, 2, or 3 felony as defined by Colorado law or United States law, or for a crime committed against another state or the United States which would constitute a class 1, 2, or 3 felony as defined by Colorado law; or

(b) The defendant was previously convicted in this state of a class 1 or 2 felony involving violence as specified in section 18-1.3-406, or was previously convicted by another state or the United States of an offense which would constitute a class 1 or 2 felony involving violence as defined by Colorado law in section 18-1.3-406; or

(c) The defendant intentionally killed any of the following persons while such person was engaged in the course of the performance of such person's official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that such victim was such a person engaged in the performance of such person's official duties, or the victim was intentionally killed in retaliation for the performance of the victim's official duties:

(I) A peace officer or former peace officer as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S.; or

(II) A firefighter as defined in section 24-33.5-1202 (4), C.R.S.; or

(III) A judge, referee, or former judge or referee of any court of record in the state or federal system or in any other state court system or a judge or former judge in any municipal court in this state or in any other state. For purposes of this subparagraph (III), the term "referee" shall include a hearing officer or any other officer who exercises judicial functions.

(IV) An elected state, county, or municipal official; or

(V) A federal law enforcement officer or agent or former federal law enforcement officer or agent; or

(d) The defendant intentionally killed a person kidnapped or being held as a hostage by the defendant or by anyone associated with the defendant; or

(e) The defendant has been a party to an agreement to kill another person in furtherance of which a person has been intentionally killed; or

(f) The defendant committed the offense while lying in wait, from ambush, or by use of an explosive or incendiary device or a chemical, biological, or radiological weapon. As used in this paragraph (f), "explosive or incendiary device" means:

(I) Dynamite and all other forms of high explosives; or

(II) Any explosive bomb, grenade, missile, or similar device; or

(III) Any incendiary bomb or grenade, fire bomb, or similar device, including any device which consists of or includes a breakable container including a flammable liquid or compound, and a wick composed of any material which, when ignited, is capable of igniting such flammable liquid or compound, and can be carried or thrown by one individual acting alone.

(g) The defendant committed a class 1, 2, or 3 felony and, in the course of or in furtherance of such or immediate flight therefrom, the defendant intentionally caused the death of a person other than one of the participants; or

(h) The class 1 felony was committed for pecuniary gain; or

(i) In the commission of the offense, the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person in addition to the victim of the offense; or

(j) The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner; or

(k) The class 1 felony was committed for the purpose of avoiding or preventing a lawful arrest or prosecution or effecting an escape from custody. This factor shall include the intentional killing of a witness to a criminal offense.

(l) The defendant unlawfully and intentionally, knowingly, or with universal malice manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life generally, killed two or more persons during the commission of the same criminal episode; or

(m) The defendant intentionally killed a child who has not yet attained twelve years of age; or

(n) The defendant committed the class 1 felony against the victim because of the victim's race, color, ancestry, religion, or national origin; or

(o) The defendant's possession of the weapon used to commit the class 1 felony constituted a felony offense under the laws of this state or the United States; or

(p) The defendant intentionally killed more than one person in more than one criminal episode; or

(q) The victim was a pregnant woman, and the defendant intentionally killed the victim, knowing she was pregnant.

(6) (a) Whenever a sentence of death is imposed upon a person pursuant to the provisions of this section, the supreme court shall review the propriety of that sentence, having regard to the nature of the offense, the character and record of the offender, the public interest, and the manner in which the sentence was imposed, including the sufficiency and accuracy of the information on which it was based. The procedures to be employed in the review shall be as provided by supreme court rule. The supreme court shall combine its review pursuant to this subsection (6) with consideration of any appeal that may be filed pursuant to part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S.

(b) A sentence of death shall not be imposed pursuant to this section if the supreme court determines that the sentence was imposed under the influence of passion or prejudice or any other arbitrary factor or that the evidence presented does not support the finding of statutory aggravating circumstances.

(7) (a) If any provisions of this section are determined by the United States supreme court or by the Colorado supreme court to render this section unconstitutional or invalid such that this section does not constitute a valid and operative death penalty statute for class 1 felonies, but severance of such provisions would, through operation of the remaining provisions of this section, maintain this section as a valid and operative death penalty statute for class 1 felonies, it is the intent of the general assembly that those remaining provisions are severable and are to have full force and effect.

(b) If any death sentence is imposed upon a defendant pursuant to the provisions of this section and, on appellate review including consideration pursuant to subsection (8) of this section, the imposition of such death sentence upon such defendant is held invalid for reasons other than unconstitutionality of the death penalty or insufficiency of the evidence to support the sentence, the case shall be remanded to the trial court to set a new sentencing hearing before a newly impaneled jury or, if the defendant pled guilty or waived the right to jury sentencing, before the trial judge; except that, if the prosecutor informs the trial court that, in the opinion of the prosecutor, capital punishment would no longer be in the interest of justice, said defendant shall be returned to the trial court and shall then be sentenced to life imprisonment. If a death sentence imposed pursuant to this section is held invalid based on unconstitutionality of the death penalty or insufficiency of the evidence to support the sentence, said defendant shall be returned to the trial court and shall then be sentenced to life imprisonment.

(8) If, on appeal, the supreme court finds one or more of the aggravating factors that were found to support a sentence to death to be invalid for any reason, the supreme court may determine whether the sentence of death should be affirmed on appeal by:

(a) Reweighing the remaining aggravating factor or factors and all mitigating factors and then determining whether death is the appropriate punishment in the case; or

(b) Applying harmless error analysis by considering whether, if the sentencing body had not considered the invalid aggravating factor, it would have nonetheless sentenced the defendant to death; or

(c) If the supreme court finds the sentencing body's consideration of an aggravating factor was improper because the aggravating factor was not given a constitutionally narrow construction, determining whether, beyond a reasonable doubt, the sentencing body would have returned a verdict of death had the aggravating factor been properly narrowed; or

(d) Employing any other constitutionally permissible method of review.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1446, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (1), (2), (3), and (7) amended and (2.5) and (8) added, p. 7, § 2, effective July 12. L. 2003: IP(5)(f) amended and (5)(p) added, p. 1443, § 1, effective April 29; (5)(q) added, p. 2163, § 5, effective July 1; (5)(c)(I) amended, p. 1614, § 10, effective August 6. L. 2012: IP(3)(b), IP(3)(c), and (3)(c.5)(I) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 868, § 121, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-103 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Language of an Arizona statute requiring a judge instead of a jury to determine the presence or absence of certain enumerated circumstances for imposition of the death penalty, which was similar to the language found in subsection (2) as it existed prior to July 12, 2002, was held unconstitutional in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002).

(3) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending the introductory portions to subsections (3)(b) and (3)(c) and subsection (c.5)(I) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: (1) For provisions relating to the applicability of procedures in class 1 felony cases for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1988, and prior to September 20, 1991, see part 13 of article 1.3 of title 18.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (1), (2), (3), and (7) and enacting subsections (2.5) and (8), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2003 act enacting subsection (5)(q), see section 1 of chapter 340, Session Laws of Colorado 2003.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Evidence.
- III. Sentencing and Punishment.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Jurisprudence of Death by Another: Accessories and Capital Punishment", see 51 U. Colo. L. Rev. 17 (1979). For article, "The 'Biased but Unbiased Juror,' What Are the States' Legitimate Interests?", see 65 Den. U. L. Rev. 1 (1988). For comment, "The Process of Death: Reflections on Capital Punishment Issues in the Tenth Circuit Court of Appeals", see 66 Den. U. L. Rev. 563 (1989). For comment, "No More Tears: Anti-Sympathy Jury Instructions Attempt to Disallow Impulsive Emotion", see 66 Den. U. L. Rev. 645 (1989). For comment, "And Then There Were Three: Colorado's New Death Penalty Sentencing Statute", see 68 U. Colo. L. Rev. 189 (1997). For comment, "Experimenting with Death: An Examination of Colorado's Use of the Three-Judge Panel in Capital Sentencing", see 73 U. Colo. L. Rev. 227 (2002). For article, "Race, Gender, Region and Death Sentencing in Colorado", see 77 U. Colo. L. Rev. 549 (2006).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-1201 is similar to § 16-11-103 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed §§ 39-7-8 and 40-2-3, C.R.S. 1963, CSA, C. 48, §§ 32 and 482, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construeing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Former provisions of this section unconstitutional. People v. District Court, 196 Colo. 401, 586 P.2d 31 (1978) (decided prior to 1979 amendment).

Three-judge panel for death penalty sentencing unconstitutional. A three-judge panel is required to engage in a three-step fact-finding process to determine if the defendant is eligible for the death penalty. The U.S. supreme court in Ring v. Arizona determined death penalty eligibility fact-finding belongs solely to the jury under the sixth amendment, thus Colorado's three-judge panel is unconstitutional. Woldt v. People, 64 P.3d 256 (Colo. 2003) (decided under law in effect prior to the 2002 amendment).

Section largely procedural. This section, allowing for a bifurcated trial when a first-degree murder verdict is returned, is, if not wholly procedural, largely so. People v. Loger, 188 Colo. 291, 535 P.2d 210 (1975).

The people may not seek the death penalty under pre-1988 statute, it was not revived when the 1988 amendment was found unconstitutional. People v. Aguayo, 840 P.2d 336 (Colo. 1992).

Defendant's right to waive jury trial. Subsection (1)(a), which governs the imposition of sentence in class 1 felonies, implies that a trial by jury may be waived. People v. Cisneros, 720 P.2d 982 (Colo. App. 1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 887, 107 S. Ct. 282, 93 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1986).

A defendant has a common law right to waive a trial by jury, which right extends to first degree felonies. The exercise of such right is conditioned upon the consent of the prosecution. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

No statute requires the district attorney to give notice of intent to seek the death penalty but sufficient notice must be given to satisfy the requirements of due process. People v. District Court, 825 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1992).

The purpose of the sentencing inquiry is to reveal aggravation or mitigation of the offense for the guidance of the court in the imposition of sentence. Champion v. People, 124 Colo. 253, 236 P.2d 127 (1951); Hawkins v. People, 131 Colo. 281, 281 P.2d 156 (1955).

The only necessity for the taking of evidence after a plea of guilty is to enable the court to determine whether aggravating or mitigating circumstances are present to guide a court in exercising discretion as to the minimum and maximum sentence to be imposed. Marler v. People, 139 Colo. 23, 336 P.2d 101 (1959).

The purpose of this section relating to the taking of testimony on a plea of guilty when the court has discretion as to the penalty is to show aggravation or mitigation. Stilley v. People, 160 Colo. 329, 417 P.2d 494 (1966).

When court exercises its independent review of a death sentence under the public interest provision in subsection (6), it must determine whether the proceedings were fundamentally fair. People v. Montour, 157 P.3d 489 (Colo. 2007).

Fundamental fairness dictates that appropriate questions on voir dire be asked of the jury concerning capital punishment. People v. District Court, 190 Colo. 342, 546 P.2d 1268 (1976).

"Age" means age in years. "Age" as used in the provisions of this section means age in years and not mental age, and that no person shall suffer the death penalty who, at the time of conviction, was under the age of 18 years. Sullivan v. People, 111 Colo. 205, 139 P.2d 876 (1943).

The term "convicted" means convicted upon trial. People v. District Court, 191 Colo. 558, 554 P.2d 1105 (1976).

The term "convicted" as used in this section, defining aggravating circumstances, means a judgment of conviction in the trial court, not a final determination of conviction after appeal. People v. District Court, 191 Colo. 558, 554 P.2d 1105 (1976).

Defendant should have been granted bifurcated trial. Where the effective date of this section was prior to the date of trial, and the defendant requested a bifurcated trial and preserved that request and his objections to the denial of the request at every possible moment throughout the trial, the defendant should have been granted a bifurcated trial. People v. Loger, 188 Colo. 291, 535 P.2d 210 (1975).

Applied in Goodwin v. District Court, 196 Colo. 246, 586 P.2d 2 (1978); People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981); People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983); People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000).

II. EVIDENCE.

Any evidence relevant to punishment is admissible. Guilt and punishment are so definitely integrants of a verdict in a first degree murder case that courts should admit in evidence any material relevant to the question of punishment, i.e., matters in aggravation and mitigation, whether it applies to the issue of guilt or has relation only to the degree of culpability. Jones v. People, 155 Colo. 148, 393 P.2d 366 (1964).

Polygraph evidence is per se inadmissible in a criminal trial in Colorado. Thus, the defendant's right to present all relevant mitigating evidence does not include the right to present evidence concerning polygraph results. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert.

denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

However, the mere reference to such testing does not require a mistrial. People v. Preciado-Flores, 66 P.3d 155 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Kerber, 64 P.3d 930 (Colo. App. 2002).

Admissibility before the court. Following the entry of a plea of guilty, the evidence proper for the consideration of the court is not limited to that which would be admissible upon a trial following a plea of not guilty. Champion v. People, 124 Colo. 253, 236 P.2d 127 (1951).

Before a jury. Any and all evidence relating to the series of events of which the act charged in the information is a part was proper for the consideration of the jury. Anything admissible in a trial in which the accused enters a plea of not guilty is proper for the consideration of the jury which is called upon to fix a penalty if the evidence bears upon circumstances showing aggravation or mitigation of the offense. Monge v. People, 158 Colo. 224, 406 P.2d 674 (1965).

Duty of jury to weigh all evidence in choosing mode of punishment. Where a homicide is committed in the perpetration of a robbery, proof of specific intent is not a prerequisite to a conviction of first degree murder, but in the exercise of its discretion in choosing between the two modes of punishment for that crime prescribed by this section, it is the duty of the jury to weigh and consider all the evidence in the case. Leopold v. People, 105 Colo. 147, 95 P.2d 811 (1939).

Subjects pertinent to aggravation or mitigation of offense. The character of the defendant, his habits, his social standing, his intelligence, and his motive for the commission of the offense are all subjects pertinent to the inquiry concerning aggravation or mitigation of the offense. Smith v. People, 32 Colo. 251, 75 P. 914 (1904).

Aggravation is defined to be any circumstance attending the commission of a crime or tort which increases its guilt or enormity or adds to its injurious consequences, but which is above and beyond the essential constituents of the crime or tort itself. Smith v. People, 32 Colo. 251, 75 P. 914 (1904).

Although subsection (6) provides that a previous felony conviction is an aggravating factor, there is no statutory provision expressly permitting the admission of underlying factual circumstances of prior felonies. People v. Borrego, 774 P.2d 854 (Colo. 1989).

Evidence concerning the impact of the defendant's prior crimes on the victims of those crimes is not admissible, because it is not relevant to the actual harm caused by the defendant as a result of the homicide for which he is being sentenced. The facts of the prior crimes, however, may be properly admitted. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied,

528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

Mitigating circumstances are such as do not constitute a justification or excuse of the offense in question, but which, in fairness and mercy, may be considered as extenuating or reducing the degree of moral culpability. Smith v. People, 32 Colo. 251, 75 P. 914 (1904).

The trial court inappropriately allowed the jury to consider during steps one through three of the process evidence introduced by the prosecution for the purpose of rebutting mitigating factors that the defense had not raised. The error was harmless, however, due to the limiting instructions given the jury by the trial court. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

However, the jury may consider any aggravating evidence submitted by the prosecution, regardless of whether it is related to the rebuttal of mitigating factors, after the jury has found the defendant, under steps one through three, to be eligible for the death penalty. The admissibility of evidence rebutting mitigation at the point at which the jury determines whether to select the defendant to receive the death penalty is constrained only by the standard evidentiary principles concerning the relevance of the evidence and the potential for the evidence to inflame the passion or prejudice of the jury. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

The standard for determining the sufficiency of the evidence of death penalty aggravators is the same as that for determining the sufficiency of the evidence of guilt: Whether the relevant evidence, when viewed as a whole and in the light most favorable to the prosecution, is substantial and sufficient to support a conclusion by a reasonable juror that the aggravating factor has been proven. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

The prosecution introduced sufficient evidence to convince the jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant killed his victims to avoid arrest, including evidence that the defendant did not use a disguise in carrying out the robbery and murders and that the defendant had previously worked with the victims and therefore knew they could identify him. The fact that the defendant may have had additional motives for the murders does not prevent application of the "killing to avoid arrest" aggravator. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

Former provisions of this section prohibited death penalty where conviction was based entirely on circumstantial evidence. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 153, 465 P.2d 394 (1970).

It required direct evidence on any element of crime. This section as it read prior to the 1974 amendment could reasonably have been read to mean that any direct evidence on any element of the crime was sufficient to submit the question of life imprisonment or death to the jury. Scheer v. Patterson, 429 F.2d 907 (10th Cir. 1970), cert. denied, 400 U.S. 996, 91 S. Ct. 471, 27 L. Ed. 2d 445 (1971).

For cases discussing circumstantial evidence, see Covington v. People, 36 Colo. 183, 85 P. 832 (1906); Ives v. People, 86 Colo. 141, 278 P. 792 (1929); Moya v. People, 88 Colo. 139, 293 P. 335 (1930); Berger v. People, 122 Colo. 367, 224 P.2d 228 (1950); Jones v. People, 146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961); Mills v. People, 146 Colo. 457, 362 P.2d 152 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 841, 82 S. Ct. 869, 7 L. Ed. 2d 846 (1962); Mitchell v. People, 173 Colo. 217, 476 P.2d 1000 (1970).

Introduction of confession was nonprejudicial. Under this section after a plea of guilty to murder, a hearing is held solely for the purpose of determining whether the accused is guilty of murder in the first or second degree. Petitioner was found guilty of murder in the second degree, despite the introduction of his confession. He thus received the most favorable possible verdict under the statute and the introduction of the confession into evidence was nonprejudicial. Melton v. Patterson, 313 F. Supp. 1287 (D. Colo. 1970), aff'd, 445 F.2d 410 (10th Cir. 1971).

III. SENTENCING AND PUNISHMENT.

Unconstitutionality. Imposition of death penalty when aggravating and mitigating factors weigh equally for defendants convicted of first degree murder violates fundamental requirements of certainty and reliability under the cruel and unusual punishment and due process clauses of the Colorado constitution. People v. Young, 814 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 repeal and reenactment of this section).

This section establishes a four-step process in the sentencing procedure. The jury first determines if at least one statutory aggravating factor exists. If the jury unanimously finds the state has proven at least one aggravating factor beyond a reasonable doubt, it must next determine whether any mitigating factors exist. Third, the jury must determine whether "sufficient mitigating factors exist which outweigh any aggravating factor or factors found to exist." If the jury finds that mitigating factors do not outweigh any aggravating factors then it must go on to the fourth step. The fourth step requires the jury to decide "whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment." People v. O'Neill, 803 P.2d 164 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment); People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

Jury sentencing is constitutional. For a state to permit a jury to fix the penalty in a first degree murder case, when in all other instances the penalty is imposed by a judge after presentencing hearings, is not an unreasonable or arbitrary classification. People ex rel. McKevitt v. District Court, 167 Colo. 221, 447 P.2d 205 (1968).

Colorado's system of jury sentencing is not a denial of equal protection of the laws because it is used only in capital cases. This legislative classification is neither arbitrary, unreasonable, nor discriminatory against capital offenders. Capital offenses are in a distinct class; thus, the limitation of jury sentencing in this manner and for this purpose is not discriminatory. Bell v. Patterson, 279 F. Supp. 760 (D. Colo.), aff'd, 402 F.2d 394 (10th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 955, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed. 2d 865 (1971).

Colorado's jury sentencing procedure does not deprive the petitioner of his right against self-incrimination. Bell v. Patterson, 279 F. Supp. 760 (D. Colo.), aff'd, 402 F.2d 394 (10th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 955, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed. 2d 865 (1971).

No constitutional infirmity in capital sentencing scheme. By requiring that the jury find both that a statutory aggravator has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt and that mitigation does not outweigh aggravation before a defendant is even eligible to receive the death penalty, Colorado's sentencing scheme is sufficiently reliable to pass constitutional muster. People v. Dunlap, 173 P.3d 1054 (Colo. 2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1105, 128 S. Ct. 882, 169 L. Ed. 2d 740 (2008).

Requirement that defendant waive his or her sixth amendment right to a jury trial on all facts essential to a death penalty eligibility determination jointly with a guilty plea to the underlying capital crime violates the sixth amendment. The right to have a jury trial on sentencing facts is independent of the right to a jury trial on the underlying offense. By coupling the waiver of the jury hearing on a death sentence with the guilty plea to the underlying charge, there is no opportunity for an independent, knowing, voluntary, and intelligent waiver, rather the waiver is automatic. Without such a waiver, the provision is unconstitutional. People v. Montour, 157 P.3d 489 (Colo. 2007).

To cure the constitutional defect, the court excised the offending provision. After severing the language, the result is to remand the case back to the trial court for sentencing hearing with a jury unless the defendant waives the sentencing hearing with a jury. This remedy is consistent with the intent of the general assembly to maintain a valid and operative death penalty. The other remedy, requiring a life sentence when pleading guilty to a capital crime, would subject a defendant to the death penalty only when he or she chooses a jury trial, such a result would create an unconstitutional burden on the defendant's sixth amendment right. People v. Montour, 157 P.3d 489 (Colo. 2007).

The existence of one Blakely-exempt fact does not alone make a defendant death penalty eligible. Defendant has the right to have the jury weigh all mitigating factors against aggravating factors. People v. Montour, 157 P.3d 489 (Colo. 2007).

As to discretion of jury prior to 1974 amendment to determine whether the penalty should be life imprisonment or death, see Jones v. People, 155 Colo. 148, 393 P.2d 366 (1964); Monge v. People, 158 Colo. 224, 406 P.2d 674 (1965); Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970).

For instructions trial court should give to the jury at the conclusion of evidentiary stage of capital sentencing hearing, see People v. Durre, 690 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1984).

Belief against capital punishment does not disqualify juror. Belief against capital punishment on the part of jurors who are vested with a dichotomy of functions—the determination of the issue of guilt, and, if guilt is found, the degree of punishment to be imposed—cannot be allowed to disqualify a substantial part of the venire when it is not established that the views of the persons so disqualified will preclude them from making a fair determination on the issue of guilt, aside from the issue of punishment. Such disqualification prevents the jury in its function of determining the issue of guilt from being fairly representative of the community, and thus violates equal protection of the laws. Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970).

Jury must make separate determination that death is the appropriate penalty beyond a reasonable doubt when aggravating and mitigating factors are in equipoise. People v. Young, 814 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 repeal and reenactment of this section).

Jury must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that mitigating factors do not outweigh proven statutory aggravating factors before sentencing defendant to death. People v. Tenneson, 788 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

In order to ensure reliability in process, "beyond reasonable doubt" standard is properly applied to determination of relevant weight of aggravating and mitigating factors during penalty stage of death penalty trial. People v. Tenneson, 788 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

Trial court improperly instructed jury that, in order to impose a death penalty, they must be convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that the proven statutory aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating factors as said instruction is contrary to subsection (2)(a)(II). People v. Tenneson, 788 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

Jury was properly instructed that, after weighing mitigating and aggravating factors, a death verdict could be returned only if the jurors unanimously agreed that death is the appropriate punishment beyond a reasonable doubt and the jury should be instructed that the outcome of such weighing process does not govern the final determination as to whether a death verdict is appropriate. People v. Tenneson, 788 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

Requirement that jury must be convinced beyond reasonable doubt that mitigating factors do not outweigh proven statutory aggravating factors creates to some extent a presumption that mitigating factors do outweigh aggravating factors and a presumption in favor of life imprisonment sentences; however, the use of the term "presumption of life imprisonment" in jury instructions should be discouraged. People v. Tenneson, 788 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

"Beyond a reasonable doubt" language with respect to third and fourth steps of the sentencing process do not impose a burden of proof, such language is intended to impose a standard on juries as to the high degree of certainty which is required in order to ensure the reliability and certainty of their decisions. People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

Trial court erred by instructing jury that they must consider certain statements of purported fact to be mitigating factors as such instruction assumed facts not supported by the record. People v. Tenneson, 788 P.2d 786 (Colo. 1990) (decided under law in effect prior to 1988 amendment).

"Proportionality" review not mandated by state constitution. That a reviewing court conduct an inquiry into whether the sentence in a particular case is proportional when compared with the sentences in all similar cases in Colorado is not required by either the due process or cruel and unusual punishment clauses of the state constitution. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

The defendant's age should not be considered in determining whether to conduct an abbreviated or an extended proportionality review. Valenzuela v. People, 856 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993); People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

Sentence of life imprisonment with no possibility of parole for 40 years for a juvenile offender under the automatic sentencing provisions mandated by this section for first degree murder was not disproportionate in violation of the eighth amendment. Valenzuela v. People, 856 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993).

Sentence of life imprisonment with no possibility of parole for a juvenile offender under the automatic sentencing provisions mandated by this section for first-degree murder was not disproportionate to offense. People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

Discretion afforded to the prosecutor, who determines against whom to seek a death sentence, to the jury, which determines who is to receive a sentence of death, and to the governor, who determines who shall be granted clemency, violates neither the constitutional guarantee of due process nor the constitutional prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Mitigating factors not unconstitutionally vague. Mitigators established under subsection (5) meet the requirement of certainty and clarity required by due process clause and provide the jury with sufficiently precise guidelines to determine whether or not to impose the death penalty. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Two-prong test in determining constitutionality of death penalty aggravator: (1) Whether the aggravator establishes "rational criteria" for narrowing a jury's discretion in considering whether death is appropriate; and (2) whether the aggravator identifies special indicia of blameworthiness or dangerousness capable of objective determination. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

The purpose of a statutory aggravator generally is to provide a rational criteria in order to narrow the class of persons eligible for the death penalty. The United States supreme court has held that this is one of the requirements for a capital sentencing scheme to pass constitutional muster. People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

"Grave risk of death" aggravator is not unconstitutionally vague. Alleging that a victim whom the defendant had attempted to kill was a victim "in addition to" the victims of the class 1 felonies committed by the defendant was proper under this aggravating factor. By shooting and wounding a person, the defendant created a grave risk of death to a person other than the victims of his class 1 felonies. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

"Lying in wait or from ambush" aggravator is not unconstitutionally vague. The terms "lying in wait" and "ambush" are terms that an average juror should be capable of understanding. Thus, the aggravator is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

"Avoiding or preventing a lawful arrest or prosecution" aggravator is appropriate if the evidence indicates that a defendant has murdered the victim of a contemporaneously or recently perpetrated offense and the reason for the murder was to prevent the victim from becoming a witness. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991); Davis v. Executive Dir. of Dept. of Corr., 100 F.3d 750 (10th Cir. 1996).

The statutory aggravator sufficiently narrows the class of defendants to whom it applies; therefore, it is constitutional. Davis v. Executive Dir. of Dept. of Corr., 100 F.3d 750 (10th Cir. 1996).

Aggravator established under subsection (6)(j) held unconstitutionally vague. The words "especially heinous, atrocious, or depraved" do not inherently restrain the arbitrary and capricious infliction of the death sentence. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990) (decided prior to 1989 amendment defining the words heinous, atrocious, and depraved), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Submission of the unconstitutionally vague "heinousness" aggravator to the jury did not have a substantial and injurious effect or influence in determining the jury's verdict. Davis v. Executive Dir. of Dept. of Corr., 100 F.3d 750 (10th Cir. 1996).

Invalidation on appeal of an aggravator does not require automatic reversal of sentence. The invalidation of an aggravator considered by a jury in passing sentence does not demand reversal of such sentence if the reviewing court determines, beyond a reasonable doubt, that consideration by the jury of the aggravator was harmless error. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Construction given death penalty aggravators. "Under sentence of imprisonment" within context of aggravator established by subsection (6)(a) includes period of parole. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990) (decided prior to 1988 amendment adding the phrase "including the period of parole or probation"), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

"Party to an agreement" within context of aggravator established under subsection (6)(e) does not refer exclusively to agreements involving contract murders or murders for pecuniary gain. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991); Davis v. Executive Dir. of Dept. of Corr., 100 F.3d 750 (10th Cir. 1996).

“Kidnapped” within context of aggravator established under subsection (6)(d) is not restricted to a kidnap-for-ransom situation. Aggravator applies to both first and second-degree kidnapping. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

“Avoiding or preventing lawful arrest” within context of aggravator established under subsection (6)(k) is not limited to the following situations: (1) The murder of a witness in an attempt to thwart the investigation or prosecution of a previous separate offense; or (2) the murder of a law enforcement officer while attempting to effect an arrest. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Trial court did not err in excluding evidence addressing the issue of guilt or innocence at the sentencing phase. A trial court’s decision to exclude will not be reversed absent an abuse of discretion. No such abuse exists where the trial court accepted defendant’s guilty plea and heard extensive evidence concerning mistreatment of prisoners as defendant desired. People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

“Doubling up” of aggravators permissible. The submission to the jury of both the “kidnapping” aggravator and the “felony-murder” aggravator under circumstances where kidnapping formed the basis for the “felony-murder” aggravator did not constitute plain error. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Since the jury instructions were sufficient to advise the jury that the weighing of mitigating and aggravating factors rests not on the number of each, but on a qualitative determination of whether the aggregate weight of any mitigating factors outweighs the aggregate weight of any aggravating factors, it was not error to allow the prosecution to submit to the jury multiple aggravating factors based on the same underlying factual circumstances. People v. Dunlap, 975 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1999), cert. denied, 528 U.S. 893, 120 S. Ct. 221, 145 L. Ed. 2d 186 (1999).

Trial court did not sua sponte introduce aggravators not alleged by the prosecution. Although the prosecution listed the statutory aggravators of prior felony conviction and knowingly creating a grave risk of death to another only once as opposed to once for each of the murder victims, the disclosure was sufficient to put defendant on notice that the prosecution intended to allege and introduce evidence of the two aggravators. People v. Dunlap, 173 P.3d 1054 (Colo. 2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1105, 128 S. Ct. 882, 169 L. Ed. 2d 740 (2008).

Submission to the jury of both the felony murder and the kidnapping aggravators addressing the same basic conduct did not have a substantial and injurious effect or influence on the jury verdict. Davis v. Executive Dir. of Dept. of Corr., 100 F.3d 750 (10th Cir. 1996).

Previous convictions incorporates convictions existing at the time the sentencing hearing is conducted pursuant to this section, regardless of the date on which the offense underlying the “previous conviction” occurred. People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute); Dunlap v. People, 173 P.3d 1054 (Colo. 2007), cert. denied, 552 U.S. 1105, 128 S. Ct. 882, 169 L. Ed. 2d 740 (2008).

Consideration of defendant’s acts occurring a day after the acts that caused the death of another as contributory to a finding of the “especially heinous” aggravator improper and contrary to the statutory scheme. It was error for a court to consider under subsection (6)(j) the method in which a body was disposed as aggravating the defendant’s actions which resulted in the death of another person. People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

For options available to a reviewing court where jury has improperly considered an aggravator in determining whether death is the appropriate sentence, see People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991); People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

Application of “harmless error” analysis. People v. White, 870 P.2d 424 (Colo. 1994) (decided under 1986 version of statute).

In the context of capital punishment, the state constitution does not provide broader protection than the federal constitution. People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991); People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

In the death penalty phase of the trial, it is proper for the jury to consider the circumstances of the offense itself. In order to do so, it is germane for the jury to make the assessment from the viewpoint of the victim. People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

Statements made by the prosecutor concerning the victim’s inability to celebrate another birthday or write letters were made in response to defense counsel’s arguments regarding the severity of life imprisonment, and compared the victim’s fate with that of the defendant and were permissible comment for the sentence of death. People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

Statements made by the prosecutor concerning whether the defendant would pose a continuing threat to society and whether rehabilitation was likely were proper statements. People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

A statement by the prosecutor that the case before them was one of the worst he had ever seen was irrelevant and had the possibility of being unfairly prejudicial but by itself did not rise to the level of reversible error. People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

A statement by the prosecutor that it is cheaper to execute a defendant than to keep him in prison for the rest of his life had no support in the record and was not a legitimate factor for the jury to consider. People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

Unanimity is not required for the finding of mitigating factors. People v. Rodriguez, 794 P.2d 965 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1055, 111 S. Ct. 770, 112 L. Ed. 2d 789 (1991).

But inability to impose death penalty in proper case is disqualifying. Disqualification of a juror for inability to join in a verdict imposing the death penalty in a proper case is not error where the jury has the duty to determine the defendant's guilt or innocence and his punishment if he is found guilty. Such a person is disqualified to act as a juror for the reason that his attitude on the subject of capital punishment would prevent him from performing his duty. He would not carry into effect the whole law, and therefore would not stand indifferent between the state and the accused. Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970).

Exclusion for cause of all prospective jurors who are unable to impose the death penalty is permissible. People v. Drake, 748 P.2d 1237 (Colo. 1988); People v. Davis, 794 P.2d 159 (Colo. 1990), cert. denied, 498 U.S. 1018, 111 S. Ct. 662, 112 L. Ed. 2d 656 (1991).

Defendant has the right to allocution before sentence is imposed and denial of the right of allocution requires resentencing. People v. Borrego, 774 P.2d 854 (Colo. 1989).

Since complicity is a theory that necessitates holding one person legally accountable for the behavior of another, a defendant's constitutional rights are violated if the jury in a capital offense sentencing hearing is given a complicity instruction. People v. Borrego, 774 P.2d 854 (Colo. 1989).

Inconsistent verdicts between the parts of a capital murder trial which determine guilt or innocence and which determine the penalty do not invalidate the guilty verdict. People v. Rodriguez, 786 P.2d 472 (Colo. App. 1989).

During sentencing phase of trial for a class 1 felony, trial court must allow prosecution to introduce evidence of defendant's prior felony convictions, whether or not any prior felonies constitute statutory aggravating factors, since the evidence is relevant to show lack of statutory mitigating circumstances. People v. Saathoff, 790 P.2d 804 (Colo. 1990).

Reciprocal discovery provisions of subsection (3.5) are constitutional. Requiring disclosure of identities of persons defense intends to call at the sentencing phase and witness statements for such persons does not violate the fifth, sixth, or fourteenth amendments, nor does it violate the work product privilege. People v. Martinez, 970 P.2d 469 (Colo. 1998).

Reciprocal discovery extends to persons the defense "intends" to call at the sentencing phase, not to all prospective witnesses. Such discovery extends only to statements that relate to the subject matter of the intended testimony and comprise only substantial recitation of witness statements, and not the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of the defense. People v. Martinez, 970 P.2d 469 (Colo. 1998).

Subsection (2), as it existed in 1993, and Crim. P. 35(b) together direct that a trial court may only order post-conviction relief pursuant to the rule from a jury's death sentence if the circumstances delineated in subsection (2) are met. Thus, trial court's specific finding that the evidence supported the death sentence circumscribed the limits of the court's authority to overturn that sentence under subsection (2) or to reduce it under Crim. P. 35(b). People v. Dunlap, 36 P.3d 778 (Colo. 2001), cert. denied, 534 U.S. 1095, 122 S. Ct. 884, 151 L. Ed. 2d 722 (2002).

18-1.3-1202. Death penalty inflicted by lethal injection. The manner of inflicting the punishment of death shall be by the administration of a lethal injection within the time prescribed in this part 12, unless for good cause the court or governor may prolong the time. For the purposes of this part 12, "lethal injection" means a continuous intravenous injection of a lethal quantity of sodium thiopental or other equally or more effective substance sufficient to cause death. The manner of inflicting the punishment of death shall, in all circumstances, be by the administration of a lethal injection regardless of the date of the commission of the offense or offenses for which the death penalty is imposed.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1452, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-401 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Procedure in Colorado — A Summary and Recommendations for Improvement", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 221 (1950). For comment, "And Then There Were Three: Colorado's New Death Penalty Sentencing Statute", see 68 U. Colo. L. Rev. 189 (1997).

18-1.3-1203. Genetic testing prior to execution. Prior to the execution of the death penalty pursuant to this part 12, the judicial department shall obtain the chemical testing of a biological substance sample from the convicted offender to determine the genetic markers thereof.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1453, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-401.5 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1204. Implements - sentence executed by executive director. The executive director of the department of corrections, at the expense of the state of Colorado, shall provide a suitable and efficient room or place, enclosed from public view, within the walls of the correctional facilities at Canon City and therein at all times have in preparation all necessary implements requisite for carrying into execution the death penalty by means of the administration of a lethal injection. The execution shall be performed in the room or place by a person selected by the executive director and trained to administer intravenous injections. Death shall be pronounced by a licensed physician or a coroner according to accepted medical standards.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1453, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-402 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1205. Week of execution - warrant. When a person is convicted of a class 1 felony, the punishment for which is death, and the convicted person is sentenced to suffer the penalty of death, the judge passing such sentence shall appoint and designate in the warrant of conviction a week of time within which the sentence must be executed; the end of such week so appointed shall be not fewer than ninety-one days nor more than one hundred twenty-six days from the day of passing the sentence. Said warrant shall be directed to the executive director of the department of corrections or the executive director's designee commanding said executive director or designee to execute the sentence imposed upon some day within the week of time designated in the warrant and shall be delivered to the sheriff of the county in which such conviction is had, who, within three days thereafter, shall proceed to the correctional facilities at Canon City and deliver the convicted person, together with the warrant, to said executive director or designee, who shall keep the convict in confinement until execution of the death penalty. Persons shall be permitted access to the inmate pursuant to prison rules. Such rules shall provide, at a minimum, for the inmate's attendants, counsel, and physician, a spiritual adviser selected by the inmate, and members of the inmate's family to have access to the inmate.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1453, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: Entire section amended, p. 14, § 4, effective October 1. L. 2012: Entire section amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 869, § 122, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-11-403 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending this section applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending this section, see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-1205 is similar to § 16-11-403 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, repealed § 39-11-3, C.R.S. 1963, CSA, C. 48, § 538, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Meaning of "week of time". The week of time which is required by this section to be appointed and designated in capital cases within which the sentence must be executed, is a period of time extending from 12 midnight Saturday until 12 midnight the following Saturday, but an error in the designation of the week is rendered immaterial when the execution is stayed by the supreme court pending review. Mora v. People, 19 Colo. 255, 35 P. 179 (1893).

Court fixes date of execution following stay. The court has authority to fix the date of execution in cases of affirmance, where the execution has been stayed upon appeal or supersedeas. Mora v. People, 19 Colo. 255, 35 P. 179 (1893).

But definite date set in order granting stay did not deny due process. The fact that the state supreme court set a definite execution date pending determination of post-conviction relief was not "suggestion of predetermination" in violation of due process and did not constitute an implied direction to deny petitioner relief. Bell v. Patterson, 279 F. Supp. 760 (D. Colo.), aff'd, 402 F.2d 394 (10th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 403 U.S. 955, 91 S. Ct. 2279, 29 L. Ed.2d 865 (1971).

Procedure of delivery of prisoner by sheriff held not improper. Agnes v. People, 104 Colo. 527, 93 P.2d 891 (1939).

Applied in Medley, Petitioner, 134 U.S. 160, 10 S. Ct. 384, 33 L. Ed. 835 (1890).

18-1.3-1206. Execution - witnesses. The particular day and hour of the execution of said sentence within the week specified in said warrant shall be fixed by the executive director of the department of corrections or the executive director's designee, and the executive director shall be present thereat or shall appoint some other representative among the officials or officers of the correctional facilities at Canon City to be present in his or her place and stead. There shall also be present a physician and such guards, attendants, and other persons as the executive director or the executive director's designee in his or her discretion deems necessary to conduct the execution. In addition, there may be present such witnesses as the executive director or the executive director's designee in his or her discretion deems desirable, not to exceed eighteen persons. The executive director or the executive director's designee shall notify the governor of the day and hour for the execution as soon as it has been fixed.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1453, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-404 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1207. Record and certificate of execution. The executive director of the department of corrections or his or her designee shall keep a book of record, to be known as record of executions, in which shall be entered the reports specified in this section. Immediately after the execution, a postmortem examination of the body of the convict shall be made by the attending physician, who shall enter in said book of record the nature and extent of the examination and sign and certify to the same. The executive director or his or her designee shall also immediately make and enter in said book a report, setting forth the time of such execution and that the convict (naming him or her) was then and there executed in conformity to the sentence specified in the warrant of the court (naming such court) to him or her directed and in accordance with the provisions of this part 12, and shall insert in said report the names of all the persons who were present and witnessed the execution, and shall procure each of such persons to sign said report with his or her full name and place of residence before leaving the place of execution. The executive director or his or her designee shall thereupon attach his or her certificate to said report, certifying to the truth and correctness thereof, and shall immediately deliver a certified transcript of the record entry to the court which sentenced the convict.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1454, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-405 as it existed prior to 2002.

PART 13

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS - APPLICABILITY OF PROCEDURE IN CLASS 1 FELONY CASES FOR CRIMES COMMITTED ON OR AFTER JULY 1, 1988, AND PRIOR TO SEPTEMBER 20, 1991

18-1.3-1301. Applicability of procedure for the imposition of sentences in class 1 felony cases. (1) It is the expressed intention of the general assembly that there be no hiatus in the imposition of the death penalty as a sentence for the commission of a class 1 felony in the state of Colorado as a result of the holding of the Colorado supreme court in People v. Young, 814 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1991). Toward that end, the provisions of former section 16-11-103, C.R.S., as it existed prior to the enactment of senate bill 78, enacted at the second regular session of the fifty-sixth general assembly, and as it currently exists as section 18-1.3-1201, to the extent such provisions were not automatically revitalized by the operation of law, are reenacted as section 18-1.3-1302 and are hereby made applicable to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1988, and prior to September 20, 1991.

(2) It is the intent of the general assembly that this part 13 is independent from former section 16-11-103, C.R.S., now section 18-1.3-1201, and that if any provision of this part 13 or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held to be invalid or unconstitutional, such invalidity or unconstitutionality shall not affect the application of section 18-1.3-1201 to any offense committed on or after September 20, 1991.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1454, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-801 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Applying §§ 16-11-801 and 16-11-802 retroactively violates proscription against ex post facto laws where, as a result of the decision in People v. Young, there was no valid death penalty sentencing statute in effect at the time the offenses were committed. People v. Aguayo, 840 P.2d 336 (Colo. 1992) (decided prior to 2002 relocation of § 16-11-801).

18-1.3-1302. Imposition of sentences in class 1 felonies for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1988, and prior to September 20, 1991 - appellate review. (1) (a) Upon conviction of guilt of a defendant of a class 1 felony, the trial court shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment, unless the defendant was under the age of eighteen years at the time of the commission of the offense, in which case the defendant shall be sentenced to life imprisonment. The hearing shall be conducted by the trial judge before the trial jury as soon as practicable. Alternate jurors shall not be excused from the case prior to submission of the issue of guilt to the trial jury and shall remain separately sequestered until a verdict is entered by the trial jury. If the verdict of the trial jury is that the defendant is guilty of a class 1 felony, the alternate jurors shall sit as alternate jurors on the issue of punishment. If, for any reason satisfactory to the court, any member or members of the trial jury are excused from participation in the sentencing hearing, the trial judge shall replace such juror or jurors with an alternate juror or jurors. If a trial jury was waived or if the defendant pleaded guilty, the hearing shall be conducted before the trial judge.

(b) All admissible evidence presented by either the prosecuting attorney or the defendant that the court deems relevant to the nature of the crime, and the character, background, and history of the defendant, including any evidence presented in the guilt phase of the trial, and any matters relating to any of the aggravating or mitigating factors enumerated in subsections (4) and (5) of this section may be presented. Any such evidence which the court deems to have probative value may be received, as long as each party is given an opportunity to rebut such evidence. The prosecuting attorney and the defendant or the defendant's counsel shall be permitted to present arguments for or against a sentence of death. For offenses committed before July 1, 1985, the jury shall be instructed that life imprisonment means life without the possibility of parole for twenty calendar years. For offenses committed on or after July 1, 1985, the jury shall be instructed that life imprisonment means life without the possibility of parole for forty calendar years.

(c) Both the prosecuting attorney and the defense shall notify each other of the names and addresses of any witnesses to be called in the sentencing hearing and the subject matter of such testimony. Such discovery shall be provided within a reasonable amount of time as determined by order of the court and shall be provided not less than twenty-four hours prior to the commencement of the sentencing hearing. Unless good cause is shown, noncompliance with this paragraph (c) shall result in the exclusion of such evidence without further sanction.

(d) The burden of proof as to the aggravating factors enumerated in subsection (5) of this section shall be beyond a reasonable doubt. There shall be no burden of proof as to proving or disproving mitigating factors.

(2) (a) After hearing all the evidence and arguments of the prosecuting attorney and the defendant, the jury shall deliberate and render a verdict based upon the following considerations:

(I) Whether at least one aggravating factor has been proved as enumerated in subsection (5) of this section;

(II) Whether sufficient mitigating factors exist which outweigh any aggravating factor or factors found to exist; and

(III) Based on the considerations in subparagraphs (I) and (II) of this paragraph (a), whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment.

(b) (I) In the event that no aggravating factors are found to exist as enumerated in subsection (5) of this section, the jury shall render a verdict of life imprisonment, and the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(II) The jury shall not render a verdict of death unless it finds and specifies in writing that:

(A) At least one aggravating factor has been proved; and

(B) There are insufficient mitigating factors to outweigh the aggravating factor or factors that were proved.

(c) In the event that the jury's verdict is to sentence to death, such verdict shall be unanimous and shall be binding upon the court unless the court determines, and sets forth in writing the basis and reasons for such determination, that the verdict of the jury is clearly erroneous as contrary to the weight of the evidence, in which case the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(d) If the jury's verdict is not unanimous, the jury shall be discharged, and the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(3) In all cases where the sentencing hearing is held before the court alone, the court shall determine whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment in the same manner in which a jury determines its verdict under paragraphs (a) and (b) of subsection (2) of this section. The sentence of the court shall be supported by specific written findings of fact based upon the circumstances as set forth in subsections (4) and (5) of this section and upon the records of the trial and the sentencing hearing.

(4) For purposes of this section, mitigating factors shall be the following factors:

- (a) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime; or
 - (b) The defendant's capacity to appreciate wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform the defendant's conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, but not so impaired as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or
 - (c) The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, although not such duress as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or
 - (d) The defendant was a principal in the offense which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, although not so minor as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or
 - (e) The defendant could not reasonably have foreseen that the defendant's conduct in the course of the commission of the offense for which the defendant was convicted would cause, or would create a grave risk of causing, death to another person; or
 - (f) The emotional state of the defendant at the time the crime was committed; or
 - (g) The absence of any significant prior conviction; or
 - (h) The extent of the defendant's cooperation with law enforcement officers or agencies and with the office of the prosecuting district attorney; or
 - (i) The influence of drugs or alcohol; or
 - (j) The good faith, although mistaken, belief by the defendant that circumstances existed which constituted a moral justification for the defendant's conduct; or
 - (k) The defendant is not a continuing threat to society; or
 - (l) Any other evidence which in the court's opinion bears on the question of mitigation.
- (5) For purposes of this section, aggravating factors shall be the following factors:
- (a) The class 1 felony was committed by a person under sentence of imprisonment for a class 1, 2, or 3 felony as defined by Colorado law or United States law, or for a crime committed against another state or the United States which would constitute a class 1, 2, or 3 felony as defined by Colorado law; or
 - (b) The defendant was previously convicted in this state of a class 1 or 2 felony involving violence as specified in section 18-1.3-406, or was previously convicted by another state or the United States of an offense which would constitute a class 1 or 2 felony involving violence as defined by Colorado law in section 18-1.3-406; or
 - (c) The defendant intentionally killed any of the following persons while such person was engaged in the course of the performance of such person's official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that such victim was such a person engaged in the performance of such person's official duties, or the victim was intentionally killed in retaliation for the performance of the victim's official duties:
 - (I) A peace officer or former peace officer as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S.; or
 - (II) A firefighter as defined in section 24-33.5-1202 (4), C.R.S.; or
 - (III) A judge, referee, or former judge or referee of any court of record in the state or federal system or in any other state court system or a judge or former judge in any municipal court in this state or in any other state. For purposes of this subparagraph (III), the term "referee" shall include a hearing officer or any other officer who exercises judicial functions.
 - (IV) An elected state, county, or municipal official; or
 - (V) A federal law enforcement officer or agent or former federal law enforcement officer or agent; or
- (d) The defendant intentionally killed a person kidnapped or being held as a hostage by the defendant or by anyone associated with the defendant; or
 - (e) The defendant has been a party to an agreement to kill another person in furtherance of which a person has been intentionally killed; or
 - (f) The defendant committed the offense while lying in wait, from ambush, or by use of an explosive or incendiary device. As used in this paragraph (f), "explosive or incendiary device" means:
 - (I) Dynamite and all other forms of high explosives; or
 - (II) Any explosive bomb, grenade, missile, or similar device; or
 - (III) Any incendiary bomb or grenade, fire bomb, or similar device, including any device which consists of or includes a breakable container including a flammable liquid or compound, and a wick composed of any material which, when ignited, is capable of igniting such flammable liquid or compound, and can be carried or thrown by one individual acting alone.

(g) The defendant committed or attempted to commit a class 1, 2, or 3 felony and, in the course of or in furtherance of such or immediate flight therefrom, the defendant intentionally caused the death of a person other than one of the participants; or

(h) The class 1 felony was committed for pecuniary gain; or

(i) In the commission of the offense, the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person in addition to the victim of the offense; or

(j) The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner; or

(k) The class 1 felony was committed for the purpose of avoiding or preventing a lawful arrest or prosecution or effecting an escape from custody. This factor shall include the intentional killing of a witness to a criminal offense.

(6) (a) Whenever a sentence of death is imposed upon a person pursuant to the provisions of this section, the supreme court shall review the propriety of that sentence, having regard to the nature of the offense, the character and record of the offender, the public interest, and the manner in which the sentence was imposed, including the sufficiency and accuracy of the information on which it was based. The procedures to be employed in the review shall be as provided by supreme court rule. The supreme court shall combine its review pursuant to this subsection (6) with consideration of any appeal that may be filed pursuant to part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S.

(b) A sentence of death shall not be imposed pursuant to this section if the supreme court determines that the sentence was imposed under the influence of passion or prejudice or any other arbitrary factor or that the evidence presented does not support the finding of statutory aggravating circumstances.

(7) (a) If any provision of this section or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid or unconstitutional, such invalidity or unconstitutionality shall not affect other provisions or applications of this section, which can be given effect without the invalid or unconstitutional provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this section are declared to be severable.

(b) If any death sentence imposed upon a defendant pursuant to the provisions of this section and the imposition of such death sentence upon such defendant is held invalid or unconstitutional, said defendant shall be returned to the trial court and shall then be sentenced to life imprisonment.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1455, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2004: (5)(c)(I) amended, p. 1198, § 50, effective August 4.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-11-802 as it existed prior to 2002.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-1.3-1302 is similar to § 16-11-802 as it existed prior to the 2002 relocation of certain criminal sentencing provisions, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

No statute requires the district attorney to give notice of intent to seek the death penalty but sufficient notice must be given to satisfy the requirements of due process. People v. District Court, 825 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1992).

The fact that the legislature excluded the definitions in subsection (6.5) of § 16-11-103 does not mean that there has been a detrimental change that violates the ex post facto clause.

People v. District Court, 834 P.2d 181 (Colo. 1992).

The reinstatement in this section of the fourth step in the sentencing procedure that was formerly in § 16-11-103 does not violate the ex post facto clause because the defendant was subject to the death penalty provision in § 16-11-103 when he allegedly committed the acts. People v. District Court, 834 P.2d 181 (Colo. 1992).

A charge that counsel was overzealous in his or her defense was not sufficient to establish a charge by defendant that he had ineffective assistance of counsel. Defendant claimed that had his counsel not been so zealous he would have been charged under statute (§ 16-11-103) that did not involve the death penalty. People v. District Court, 834 P.2d 181 (Colo. 1992).

Applying §§ 16-11-801 and 16-11-802 retroactively violates proscription against ex post facto laws where, as a result of the decision in People v. Young, there was no valid death penalty sentencing statute in effect at the time the offenses were committed. People v. Aguayo, 840 P.2d 336 (Colo. 1992).

Since § 16-11-802 (1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1302 (1)(b)) has a later effective date, was later enacted, and operates in an ameliorative manner for criminal defendants, it controls and that portion of § 18-1-105(4) (now § 18-1.3-401 (4)) which provides for no possibility of parole for persons sentenced to life imprisonment following conviction for class 1 felony offenses occurring during the period from July 1, 1990, until September 19, 1991, is abrogated by this later enactment. Thus, § 16-11-103 (1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1201 (1)(b)), as amended by House Bill 91S-1001, controls parole eligibility for convictions and sentences to life imprisonment based on class 1 felony offenses occurring on or after September 20, 1991, and § 16-11-802 (1)(b) (now § 18-1.3-1302 (1)(b)) controls parole eligibility for class 1 felony offenses occurring during the period from July 1, 1990, until September 19, 1991. People v. District Court, 834 P.2d 236 (Colo. 1992).

PART 14

COMPETENCY OF PERSONS TO BE EXECUTED

18-1.3-1401. Definitions. As used in this part 14, unless the context otherwise requires: (1) "Colorado mental health institute" means the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo.

(2) "Mentally incompetent to be executed" means that, due to a mental disease or defect, a person who has been sentenced to death is presently unaware that he or she is to be punished for the crime of murder or that the impending punishment for that crime is death.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1459, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-8-301 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1402. Mental competency to be executed - presumptions. (1) A person who is sentenced to death shall not be executed so long as the person is mentally incompetent to be executed.

(2) Any convicted person who is sentenced to death is presumed mentally competent to be executed. A convicted person may be found mentally incompetent to be executed only on clear and convincing evidence of such condition. The party asserting that the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed bears the burden of proof regarding such condition and the burden of producing evidence of such condition.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1459, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-8-302 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1403. Mental incompetency to be executed - filing of motion. (1) (a) If, after a sentence of death is imposed, the executive director of the department of corrections, the convicted person's attorney, or an attorney for the state has a good faith reason to believe that the convicted person may be mentally incompetent to be executed, the executive director, the convicted person's attorney, or the state attorney may file a motion raising the issue of whether the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed. The motion shall be filed in the district court in the judicial district in which the convicted person was sentenced and shall be directed to the judge who presided over the convicted person's sentencing hearing. If that judge is unavailable, the chief judge of the same judicial district shall decide the motion. The motion shall be filed in both the district court clerk's office and the office of the judge who will hear the motion. On the same day the motion and accompanying materials are filed with the court, the motion and all accompanying materials shall be served upon the office of the prosecuting attorney who tried the case and the attorney general's office.

(b) If the judge who presided at the sentencing hearing has a good faith reason to believe that the convicted person may be mentally incompetent to be executed, the judge shall so advise the convicted person's attorney or shall appoint an attorney to investigate the issue and file any motions the attorney deems appropriate under this part 14.

(2) (a) A motion filed pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall set forth the facts relating to the convicted person's conviction and sentence and the facts giving rise to the belief that the convicted person may be mentally incompetent to be executed and shall request the district court to order that the convicted person be examined for mental incompetency to be executed. The motion shall be accompanied by the names and addresses of any mental health experts who have examined the convicted person with respect to the issue of whether the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed and the results of those examinations, as well as any records of any other mental health examinations, treatment, or reports that are not privileged and are available to the moving party or in the moving party's possession. If the moving party has any question regarding whether any such report is privileged, the report shall be submitted to the court ex parte and the court shall make a determination as to release of the report. If the moving party is the convicted person's attorney, the convicted person shall be deemed to have waived any claim of confidentiality or privilege as to communications made by the convicted person to any physician, psychiatrist, or psychologist in the course of examination or treatment for any mental health condition for which the convicted person has received treatment, and the moving party shall include any records of any other mental health examinations, treatment, or reports.

(b) On receipt of a motion raising the issue of whether a convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed, the clerk of the district court shall transmit copies of the motion to the supreme court. The clerk of the district court shall transmit copies of all subsequent filings to the supreme court as they are received.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1459, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-8-303 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1404. Mental incompetency to be executed - examination. (1) (a) On receipt of a motion filed pursuant to section 18-1.3-1403, the district court shall determine whether the motion is timely, as prescribed by section 18-1.3-1405, and whether it presents reasonable grounds for ordering an examination. Prior to making any determinations, the district court shall ensure that the prosecution has an opportunity to respond to the motion and to submit any additional information for consideration. The district court shall also provide an opportunity for the executive director of the department of corrections, the convicted person's attorney, or an attorney for the state to respond to the motion and to submit additional information for consideration. All responses and additional submissions shall be filed with the court within three days following the filing of the motion. Within seven days following the filing of the motion, the district court shall determine whether there are reasonable grounds for ordering the examination, based on the motion and any supporting information, any information submitted by the prosecuting attorney or any other responding party, and the record in the case, including transcripts of previous hearings and orders.

(b) The district court shall issue a stay of execution upon a showing of reasonable grounds for granting the stay. A stay of execution may be requested only by the convicted person's attorney, the executive director of the department of corrections, or an attorney for the state.

(2) (a) If the court finds there are no reasonable grounds for the requested examination, the court shall dismiss the motion. If the court finds the motion is timely and there are reasonable grounds for ordering an examination, the court may order the convicted person to submit to physical, neurological, psychiatric, psychological, or other examinations or evaluations that are reasonably necessary to adequately determine whether the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed.

(b) The Colorado mental health institute shall create and maintain a list of licensed, qualified psychiatrists and psychologists who shall be available to perform the examinations required pursuant to this part 14.

(c) If the court determines an examination is necessary, the court shall appoint one or more licensed psychiatrists to observe and examine the convicted person. In making such appointment, the court may select one or more licensed psychiatrists from the list prepared by the Colorado mental health institute pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (2) or appoint another qualified, licensed psychiatrist. If requested in the motion for competency examination or by motion of the executive director of the department of corrections, the prosecution, or the attorney for the convicted person or by request of the appointed psychiatrist, and for good cause shown, the court may order further examinations, including the services of licensed psychologists, licensed physicians, or psychiatrists. All examinations shall be completed and reports filed with the court within thirty-five days following the court's initial appointment of experts.

(3) (a) Any examination ordered pursuant to this section shall be conducted at a department of corrections facility.

(b) At the time of appointment of experts, the parties shall disclose to the appointed experts and to each other the names and addresses of any other previously undisclosed mental health experts who have examined the convicted person and the results of the examinations, as well as any and all records of any other previously undisclosed mental health examinations, treatment, or reports that are not privileged. If the party has any question regarding whether any such records are privileged, the records shall be submitted to the court ex parte and the court shall make a determination as to release of the record. The appointed experts shall make copies of their reports available to all of the parties at the time of filing the reports with the court. The experts' reports shall indicate whether the convicted person has a mental disease or defect which renders the convicted person mentally incompetent to be executed.

(4) The convicted person shall submit to and cooperate in all examinations or evaluations ordered by the court, regardless of which party selects the examining mental health expert. The district court shall consider any relevant evidence concerning the issue of the convicted person's competency to be executed, including but not limited to the convicted person's refusal to be examined or evaluated.

(5) (a) After the examinations are completed and reports are filed, the court shall conduct a hearing within seven days following the court's receipt of all reports from appointed experts. The hearing shall be limited to the sole issue of whether the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed. At the hearing, all parties may present evidence, cross-examine witnesses, and present argument or, by stipulation, may submit the matter for the court's determination on the basis of the experts' reports or other evidence.

(b) The Colorado rules of evidence shall apply to each hearing held pursuant to this section. The transcript of the hearing shall be forwarded to the Colorado supreme court within three days following the conclusion of the hearing.

(6) (a) Within three days following the conclusion of the hearing held pursuant to subsection (5) of this section, the district court, either on the record or by written ruling, shall specifically state its findings on the motion raising the issue of whether the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed. If the ruling is in written form, it shall be transmitted by facsimile or electronic mail to all parties and the Colorado supreme court on the same day of its issuance.

(b) If the court finds the convicted person is not mentally incompetent to be executed, the court shall immediately remand the convicted person to the custody of the executive director of the department of corrections who shall execute the judgment as specified in the warrant issued pursuant to section 18-1.3-1205. If the week specified in the warrant has passed, the district court shall issue a new warrant designating a week of time within which the sentence shall be executed.

(c) If the court finds the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed, the court shall stay the execution and shall immediately transmit a copy of its order to the Colorado supreme court.

(7) The time frames specified in this section shall apply only if the motion filed pursuant to section 18-1.3-1403 is filed within one hundred nineteen days prior to the convicted person's execution date. In all other cases, the court shall establish time frames for filing of responses and additional submissions and for completion of the examinations and shall hear and rule on the motion as expeditiously as possible.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1460, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: (1)(a), (2)(c), (5)(a), and (7) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 869, § 123, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-8-304 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1)(a), (2)(c), (5)(a), and (7) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

18-1.3-1405. Mentally incompetent to be executed - untimely or successive motions. (1) A motion raising the issue of whether a convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed that is filed pursuant to section 18-1.3-1404 fewer than thirty-five days before the scheduled execution is untimely and shall not be considered by the court unless it is accompanied by both of the following:

(a) At least one affidavit from a licensed physician, licensed psychiatrist, or licensed psychologist who has examined the convicted person that states the physician's, psychiatrist's, or psychologist's opinion that the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed; and

(b) A statement that establishes good cause for the failure to file the motion in a timely manner.

(2) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), if the court has determined, pursuant to section 18-1.3-1404 or 18-1.3-1406 (3), that a convicted person is not mentally incompetent to be executed, no further consideration of the convicted person's mental incompetence to be executed may be granted by the court.

(b) A successive motion raising the issue of whether a convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed may be filed only if the successive motion is accompanied by an affidavit from a licensed physician, licensed psychiatrist, or licensed psychologist who has examined the convicted person that shows a substantial change of circumstances since the previous motion was denied or the prior determination of restoration to competency to be executed was made and the showing is sufficient to raise a significant question regarding whether the convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1462, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: IP(1) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 870, § 124, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-8-305 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending the introductory portion of subsection (1) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

18-1.3-1406. Persons mentally incompetent to be executed - restoration to competency. (1) The court may order a restoration hearing at any time on its own motion, on motion of an attorney for the state, or on motion of the convicted person's attorney. The court shall order a hearing if the executive director of the department of corrections files a report that the convicted person is no longer mentally incompetent to be executed.

(2) At the hearing, if the question is contested, the burden of submitting evidence and the burden of proof by clear and convincing evidence shall be upon the party asserting that the convicted person is mentally competent to be executed.

(3) At the hearing, the court shall determine whether the convicted person is mentally competent to be executed and, if so, shall order that the execution be conducted according to the original warrant issued pursuant to section 18-1.3-1205, if unexpired, or shall issue a new warrant appointing a time for execution of the judgment.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1463, § 2, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 16-8-306 as it existed prior to 2002.

18-1.3-1407. Appeal of determination of mental incompetency to be executed.

(1) Within seven days after the district court rules on a motion raising the issue of whether a convicted person is mentally incompetent to be executed filed pursuant to this part 14, a party may file with the Colorado supreme court a petition to obtain a review of the district court's decision and requesting a stay of execution pending the review.

(2) The supreme court shall expedite its review of the district court's decision and, if the designated week of execution in an existing warrant of conviction has not passed, shall not take more than seven days to render its decision.

Source: L. 2002: Entire article added with relocations, p. 1463, § 2, effective October 1. L. 2012: Entire section amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 871, § 125, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 16-8-307 as it existed prior to 2002.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending this section applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ARTICLE 1.4

Class 1 Felonies Committed - July 1, 1995, through July 12, 2002

18-1.4-101.	Applicability of procedure for the imposition of sentences in class 1 felony cases.	18-1.4-102.	Imposition of sentence in class 1 felonies for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1995, and prior to July 12, 2002 - appellate review.
-------------	---	-------------	--

18-1.4-101. Applicability of procedure for the imposition of sentences in class 1 felony cases. (1) It is the expressed intention of the general assembly that there be no hiatus in the imposition of the death penalty as a sentence for the commission of a class 1 felony in the state of Colorado as a result of the holding of the United States supreme court in Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584 (2002). Toward that end, the provisions of section 16-11-103, C.R.S., as it existed prior to the passage of Senate Bill 95-54, enacted at the first regular session of the sixtieth general assembly, are reenacted as section 18-1.4-102, and are hereby made applicable to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1995, and prior to July 12, 2002.

(2) It is the expressed intention of the general assembly that the adoption of section 18-1.4-102 shall not be construed by any court as a legislative statement that the provisions of Senate Bill 95-54, enacted at the first regular session of the sixtieth general assembly, are unconstitutional in any way or that any death sentence obtained pursuant to the provisions of Senate Bill 95-54, enacted at the first regular session of the sixtieth general assembly, is invalid in any way.

(3) It is the expressed intention of the general assembly that this article is independent from section 16-11-103, C.R.S., as it existed prior to October 1, 2002, and section 18-1.3-1201 and that, if any provision of this article or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid or unconstitutional, such invalidity or unconstitutionality shall not affect the application of section 16-11-103, C.R.S., as it existed prior to October 1, 2002, and section 18-1.3-1201 to any offense committed on or after the effective date of amendments to said sections enacted at the third extraordinary session of the sixty-third general assembly.

Source: L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: Entire article added, p. 16, § 12, effective July 12.
L. 2005: (1) amended, p. 766, § 27, effective June 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act enacting this article, see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

18-1.4-102. Imposition of sentence in class 1 felonies for crimes committed on or after July 1, 1995, and prior to July 12, 2002 - appellate review. (1) (a) Upon conviction of guilt of a defendant of a class 1 felony, the trial court shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing to determine whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment, unless the defendant was under the age of eighteen years at the time of the commission of the offense, or unless the defendant has been determined to be a mentally retarded defendant pursuant to part 4 of article 9 of title 16, C.R.S., as it existed prior to October 1, 2002, in either of which cases, the defendant shall be sentenced to life imprisonment. The hearing shall be conducted by the trial judge before the trial jury as soon as practicable. Alternate jurors shall not be excused from the case prior to submission of the issue of guilt to the trial jury and shall remain separately sequestered until a verdict is entered by the trial jury. If the verdict of the trial jury is that the defendant is guilty of a class 1 felony, the alternate jurors shall sit as alternate jurors on the issue of punishment. If, for any reason satisfactory to the court, any member or members of the trial jury are excused from participation in the sentencing hearing, the trial judge shall replace such juror or jurors with an alternate juror or jurors. If a trial jury was waived or if the defendant pled guilty, the hearing shall be conducted before the trial judge. The court shall instruct the defendant when waiving his or her right to a jury trial or when pleading guilty, that he or she is also waiving his or her right to a jury determination of the sentence at the sentencing hearing.

(b) All admissible evidence presented by either the prosecuting attorney or the defendant that the court deems relevant to the nature of the crime, and the character, background, and history of the defendant, including any evidence presented in the guilt phase of the trial, any matters relating to any of the aggravating or mitigating factors enumerated in subsections (4) and (5) of this section, and any matters relating to the personal characteristics of the victim and the impact of the crimes on the victim's family may be presented. Any such evidence, including but not limited to the testimony of members of the victim's immediate family, as defined in section 24-4.1-302 (6), C.R.S., which the court deems to have probative value may be received, as long as each party is given an opportunity to rebut such evidence. The prosecuting attorney and the defendant or the defendant's counsel shall be permitted to present arguments for or against a sentence of death. The jury shall be instructed that life imprisonment means imprisonment for life without the possibility of parole.

(c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess., p. 24, § 14, effective July 12, 2002.)

(d) The burden of proof as to the aggravating factors enumerated in subsection (5) of this section shall be beyond a reasonable doubt. There shall be no burden of proof as to proving or disproving mitigating factors.

(e) If, as of July 12, 2002, the prosecution has announced it will be seeking the death sentence as the punishment for a conviction of a class 1 felony and a defendant has been convicted at trial of a class 1 felony or has pled guilty to a class 1 felony, but a sentencing hearing to determine whether that defendant shall be sentenced to death or life imprisonment has not yet been held, a jury shall be impaneled to determine the sentence at the sentencing hearing pursuant to the procedures set forth in this section or, if the defendant pled guilty or waived the right to jury sentencing, the sentence shall be determined by the trial judge.

(2) (a) After hearing all the evidence and arguments of the prosecuting attorney and the defendant, the jury shall deliberate and render a verdict based upon the following considerations:

(I) Whether at least one aggravating factor has been proved as enumerated in subsection (5) of this section;

(II) Whether sufficient mitigating factors exist which outweigh any aggravating factor or factors found to exist; and

(III) Based on the considerations in subparagraphs (I) and (II) of this paragraph (a), whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment.

(b) (I) In the event that no aggravating factors are found to exist as enumerated in subsection (5) of this section, the jury shall render a verdict of life imprisonment, and the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(II) The jury shall not render a verdict of death unless it finds and specifies in writing that:

(A) At least one aggravating factor has been proved; and

(B) There are insufficient mitigating factors to outweigh the aggravating factor or factors that were proved.

(c) In the event that the jury's verdict is to sentence to death, such verdict shall be unanimous and shall be binding upon the court unless the court determines, and sets forth in writing the basis and reasons for such determination, that the verdict of the jury is clearly erroneous as contrary to the weight of the evidence, in which case the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(d) If the jury's verdict is not unanimous, the jury shall be discharged, and the court shall sentence the defendant to life imprisonment.

(3) In all cases where the sentencing hearing is held before the court alone, the court shall determine whether the defendant should be sentenced to death or life imprisonment in the same manner in which a jury determines its verdict under paragraphs (a) and (b) of subsection (2) of this section. The sentence of the court shall be supported by specific written findings of fact based upon the circumstances as set forth in subsections (4) and (5) of this section and upon the records of the trial and the sentencing hearing.

(3.5) (a) The provisions of this subsection (3.5) shall apply only in a class 1 felony case in which the prosecuting attorney has filed a statement of intent to seek the death penalty pursuant to rule 32.1 (b) of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure.

(b) The prosecuting attorney shall provide the defendant with the following information and materials not later than twenty-one days after the prosecution files its written intention to seek the death penalty or within such other time frame as the supreme court may establish by rule; except that any reports, recorded statements, and notes, including results of physical or mental examinations and scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons, of any expert whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call as a witness at the sentencing hearing shall be provided to the defense as soon as practicable but not later than sixty-three days before trial:

(I) A list of all aggravating factors that are known to the prosecuting attorney at that time and that the prosecuting attorney intends to prove at the sentencing hearing;

(II) A list of all witnesses whom the prosecuting attorney may call at the sentencing hearing, specifying for each the witness' name, address, and date of birth and the subject matter of the witness' testimony;

(III) The written and recorded statements, including any notes of those statements, for each witness whom the prosecuting attorney may call at the sentencing hearing;

(IV) A list of books, papers, documents, photographs, or tangible objects that the prosecuting attorney may introduce at the sentencing hearing; and

(V) All material or information that tends to mitigate or negate the finding of any of the aggravating factors the prosecuting attorney intends to prove at the sentencing hearing.

(c) Upon receipt of the information required to be disclosed by the defendant pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (3.5), the prosecuting attorney shall notify the defendant as soon as practicable of any additional witnesses whom the prosecuting attorney intends to call in response to the defendant's disclosures.

(d) The defendant shall provide the prosecuting attorney with the following information and materials no later than thirty-five days before the first trial date set for the beginning of the defendant's trial or within such other time frame as the supreme court may establish by rule; however, any reports, recorded statements, and notes, including results of physical or mental examinations and scientific tests, experiments, or comparisons, of any expert whom the defense intends to call as a witness at the sentencing hearing shall be provided to the prosecuting attorney as soon as practicable but not later than thirty-five days before trial:

(I) A list of all witnesses whom the defendant may call at the sentencing hearing, specifying for each the witness' name, address, and date of birth and the subject matter of the witness' testimony;

(II) The written and recorded statements, including any notes of those statements, of each witness whom the defendant may call at the sentencing hearing; and

(III) A list of books, papers, documents, photographs, or tangible objects that the defendant may introduce at the sentencing hearing.

(e) (I) Any material subject to this subsection (3.5) that the defendant believes contains information that is privileged to the extent that the prosecution cannot be aware of it in connection with its preparation for, or conduct of, the trial to determine guilt on the substantive charges against the defendant shall be submitted by the defendant to the trial judge under seal no later than forty-nine days before trial.

(II) The trial judge shall review any such material submitted under seal pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (e) to determine whether it is in fact privileged. Any material the trial judge finds not to be privileged shall be provided forthwith to the prosecuting attorney. Any material submitted under seal that the trial judge finds to be privileged shall be provided forthwith to the prosecution if the defendant is convicted of a class 1 felony.

(f) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (f), if the witnesses disclosed by the defendant pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (3.5) include witnesses who may provide evidence concerning the defendant's mental condition at the sentencing hearing conducted pursuant to this section, the trial court, at the request of the prosecuting attorney, shall order that the defendant be examined and a report of said examination be prepared pursuant to section 16-8-106, C.R.S.

(II) The court shall not order an examination pursuant to subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (f) if:

(A) Such an examination was previously performed and a report was prepared in the same case; and

(B) The report included an opinion concerning how any mental disease or defect of the defendant or condition of mind caused by mental disease or defect of the defendant affects the mitigating factors that the defendant may raise at the sentencing hearing held pursuant to this section.

(g) If the witnesses disclosed by the defendant pursuant to paragraph (d) of this subsection (3.5) include witnesses who may provide evidence concerning the defendant's mental condition at a sentencing hearing conducted pursuant to this section, the provisions of section 16-8-109, C.R.S., concerning testimony of lay witnesses shall apply to said sentencing hearing.

(h) There is a continuing duty on the part of the prosecuting attorney and the defendant to disclose the information and materials specified in this subsection (3.5). If, after complying with the duty to disclose the information and materials described in this subsection (3.5), either party discovers or obtains any additional information and materials that are subject to disclosure under this subsection (3.5), the party shall promptly notify the other party and provide the other party with complete access to the information and materials.

(i) The trial court, upon a showing of extraordinary circumstances that could not have been foreseen and prevented, may grant an extension of time to comply with the requirements of this subsection (3.5).

(j) If it is brought to the attention of the court that either the prosecuting attorney or the defendant has failed to comply with the provisions of this subsection (3.5) or with an order issued pursuant to this subsection (3.5), the court may enter any order against such party that the court deems just under the circumstances, including but not limited to an order to permit the discovery or inspection of information and materials not previously disclosed, to grant a continuance, to prohibit the offending party from introducing the information and materials not disclosed, or to impose sanctions against the offending party.

(4) For purposes of this section, mitigating factors shall be the following factors:

(a) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime; or

(b) The defendant's capacity to appreciate wrongfulness of the defendant's conduct or to conform the defendant's conduct to the requirements of law was significantly impaired, but not so impaired as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or

(c) The defendant was under unusual and substantial duress, although not such duress as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or

(d) The defendant was a principal in the offense which was committed by another, but the defendant's participation was relatively minor, although not so minor as to constitute a defense to prosecution; or

(e) The defendant could not reasonably have foreseen that the defendant's conduct in the course of the commission of the offense for which the defendant was convicted would cause, or would create a grave risk of causing, death to another person; or

(f) The emotional state of the defendant at the time the crime was committed; or

(g) The absence of any significant prior conviction; or

(h) The extent of the defendant's cooperation with law enforcement officers or agencies and with the office of the prosecuting district attorney; or

(i) The influence of drugs or alcohol; or

(j) The good faith, although mistaken, belief by the defendant that circumstances existed which constituted a moral justification for the defendant's conduct; or

(k) The defendant is not a continuing threat to society; or

(l) Any other evidence which in the court's opinion bears on the question of mitigation.

(5) For purposes of this section, aggravating factors shall be the following factors:

(a) The class 1 felony was committed by a person under sentence of imprisonment for a class 1, 2, or 3 felony as defined by Colorado law or United States law, or for a crime committed against another state or the United States which would constitute a class 1, 2, or 3 felony as defined by Colorado law; or

(b) The defendant was previously convicted in this state of a class 1 or 2 felony involving violence as specified in section 16-11-309, C.R.S., as it existed prior to October 1, 2002, or section 18-1.3-406, or was previously convicted by another state or the United States of an offense which would constitute a class 1 or 2 felony involving violence as defined by Colorado law in section 16-11-309, C.R.S., as it existed prior to October 1, 2002, or section 18-1.3-406; or

(c) The defendant intentionally killed any of the following persons while such person was engaged in the course of the performance of such person's official duties, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that such victim was such a person engaged in the performance of such person's official duties, or the victim was intentionally killed in retaliation for the performance of the victim's official duties:

(I) A peace officer or former peace officer as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S.; or

(II) A firefighter as defined in section 24-33.5-1202 (4), C.R.S.; or

(III) A judge, referee, or former judge or referee of any court of record in the state or federal system or in any other state court system or a judge or former judge in any municipal court in this state or in any other state. For purposes of this subparagraph (III), the term "referee" shall include a hearing officer or any other officer who exercises judicial functions.

(IV) An elected state, county, or municipal official; or

(V) A federal law enforcement officer or agent or former federal law enforcement officer or agent; or

(d) The defendant intentionally killed a person kidnapped or being held as a hostage by the defendant or by anyone associated with the defendant; or

(e) The defendant has been a party to an agreement to kill another person in furtherance of which a person has been intentionally killed; or

(f) The defendant committed the offense while lying in wait, from ambush, or by use of an explosive or incendiary device. As used in this paragraph (f), "explosive or incendiary device" means:

(I) Dynamite and all other forms of high explosives; or

(II) Any explosive bomb, grenade, missile, or similar device; or

(III) Any incendiary bomb or grenade, fire bomb, or similar device, including any device which consists of or includes a breakable container including a flammable liquid or compound, and a wick composed of any material which, when ignited, is capable of igniting such flammable liquid or compound, and can be carried or thrown by one individual acting alone.

(g) The defendant committed a class 1, 2, or 3 felony and, in the course of or in furtherance of such or immediate flight therefrom, the defendant intentionally caused the death of a person other than one of the participants; or

(h) The class 1 felony was committed for pecuniary gain; or

(i) In the commission of the offense, the defendant knowingly created a grave risk of death to another person in addition to the victim of the offense; or

(j) The defendant committed the offense in an especially heinous, cruel, or depraved manner; or

(k) The class 1 felony was committed for the purpose of avoiding or preventing a lawful arrest or prosecution or effecting an escape from custody. This factor shall include the intentional killing of a witness to a criminal offense.

(l) The defendant unlawfully and intentionally, knowingly, or with universal malice manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life generally, killed two or more persons during the commission of the same criminal episode; or

(m) The defendant intentionally killed a child who has not yet attained twelve years of age; or

(n) (I) The defendant committed the class 1 felony against the victim because of the victim's race, color, ancestry, religion, or national origin.

(II) The provisions of this paragraph (n) shall apply to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1998.

(o) (I) The defendant's possession of the weapon used to commit the class 1 felony constituted a felony offense under the laws of this state or the United States.

(II) The provisions of this paragraph (o) shall apply to offenses committed on or after August 2, 2000.

(6) (a) Whenever a sentence of death is imposed upon a person pursuant to the provisions of this section, the supreme court shall review the propriety of that sentence, having regard to the nature of the offense, the character and record of the offender, the public interest, and the manner in which the sentence was imposed, including the sufficiency and accuracy of the information on which it was based. The procedures to be employed in the review shall be as provided by supreme court rule. The supreme court shall combine its review pursuant to this subsection (6) with consideration of any appeal that may be filed pursuant to part 2 of article 12 of title 16, C.R.S.

(b) A sentence of death shall not be imposed pursuant to this section if the supreme court determines that the sentence was imposed under the influence of passion or prejudice or any other arbitrary factor or that the evidence presented does not support the finding of statutory aggravating circumstances.

(7) (a) It is the expressed intent of the general assembly that there be in place a valid and operative procedure for the imposition of a sentence of death concerning class 1 felonies committed on or after July 1, 1995, and prior to July 12, 2002. Towards that end, if any provisions of this section are determined by the United States supreme court or by the Colorado supreme court to render this section unconstitutional or invalid such that this section does not constitute a valid and operative death penalty statute concerning such class 1 felonies, but severance of such provisions would, through operation of the remaining provisions of this section, maintain this section as a valid and operative death penalty statute concerning such class 1 felonies, it is the intent of the general assembly that those remaining provisions are severable and are to have full force and effect. If, instead, any provisions of this section are determined by the United States supreme court or by the Colorado supreme court to render this section unconstitutional or invalid such that this section does not constitute a valid and operative death penalty statute concerning such class 1 felonies, and severance of such provisions would not, through operation of the remaining provisions of this section, render this section a valid and operative death penalty statute concerning such offenses, it is the intent of the general assembly that this entire article be void and inoperative.

(b) If any death sentence is imposed upon a defendant pursuant to the provisions of this section and, on appellate review including consideration pursuant to subsection (9) of this section, the imposition of such death sentence upon such defendant is held invalid for reasons other than unconstitutionality of the death penalty or insufficiency of the evidence to support the sentence, the case shall be remanded to the trial court to set a new sentencing hearing before a newly impaneled jury or, if the defendant pled guilty or waived the right to jury sentencing, before the trial judge; except that, if the prosecutor informs the trial court that, in the opinion of the prosecutor, capital punishment would no longer be in the interest of justice, said defendant shall be returned to the trial court and shall then be sentenced to life imprisonment. If a death sentence imposed pursuant to this section is held invalid based on unconstitutionality of the death penalty or insufficiency of the evidence to support the sentence, said defendant shall be returned to the trial court and shall then be sentenced to life imprisonment.

(8) When reviewing a sentence of death imposed by a three-judge panel, if the Colorado supreme court concludes that any one or more of the determinations made by the three-judge panel were constitutionally required to have been made by a jury, the supreme court may:

(a) Examine the record and the jury's verdicts or the defendant's guilty pleas at the guilt phase of the trial and determine whether any of the aggravating factors found to exist by the three-judge panel were also fairly determined to exist beyond a reasonable doubt by the jury's verdicts or the defendant's guilty pleas; and

(b) (I) If the supreme court determines that one or more aggravating factors were fairly determined to exist beyond a reasonable doubt by the jury's verdicts or the defendant's guilty pleas, the supreme court shall determine whether the sentence of death should be affirmed on appeal by proceeding in accordance with the provisions of paragraphs (a) to (d) of subsection (9) of this section; or

(II) If the supreme court determines there were no aggravating factors fairly determined to exist beyond a reasonable doubt by the jury's verdicts or the defendant's guilty pleas, the supreme court shall remand the case to the trial court for a sentencing hearing before a newly impaneled jury.

(9) If, on appeal, the supreme court finds one or more of the aggravating factors that were found to support a sentence to death to be invalid for any reason, the supreme court may determine whether the sentence of death should be affirmed on appeal by:

(a) Reweighing the remaining aggravating factor or factors and all mitigating factors and then determining whether death is the appropriate punishment in the case; or

(b) Applying harmless error analysis by considering whether, if the sentencing body had not considered the invalid aggravating factor, it would have nonetheless sentenced the defendant to death; or

(c) If the supreme court finds the sentencing body's consideration of an aggravating factor was improper because the aggravating factor was not given a constitutionally narrow construction, determining whether, beyond a reasonable doubt, the sentencing body would have returned a verdict of death had the aggravating factor been properly narrowed; or

(d) Employing any other constitutionally permissible method of review.

Source: L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: Entire article added and (1)(a), (1)(b), (1)(c), (5)(m), (6)(a), and (7) amended and (1)(e), (3.5), (5)(n), (5)(o), (8), and (9) added, pp. 16, 22, 24, 28, §§ 12, 13, 14, 15, effective July 12. L. 2003: (5)(c)(I) amended, p. 1615, § 11, effective August 6. L. 2012: IP(3.5)(b), IP(3.5)(d), and (3.5)(e)(I) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 871, § 126, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending the introductory portions to subsections (3.5)(b) and (3.5)(d) and subsection (3.5)(e)(I) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act enacting this article and amending subsections (1)(a), (1)(b), (1)(c), (5)(m), (6)(a), and (7) and enacting subsections (1)(e), (3.5), (5)(n), (5)(o), (8), and (9), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

ANNOTATION

When a statute addresses an enumerated provision from the special legislation prohibition, a court must answer the threshold question of whether the classification adopted by the legislature is a real or potential class or logically and factually limited to a class of one and thus illusory. The provision in subsection (1)(e) comes within two of the enumerated provisions in the special legislation prohibition. People v. Canister, 110 P.3d 380 (Colo. 2005); People v. Hagos, 110 P. 3d 1290 (Colo. 2005).

The special legislation provision prohibits an illusory class. The general assembly creates an illusory class when it defines the class so that it will never have any other members other than those targeted by the legislation. The provision in subsection (1)(e) was "conceived, cut, and tailored" to apply to only two defendants, and the time limitation in the provision ensured it would only apply to two defendants. The legislation, therefore, is unconstitutional special legislation. People v. Canister, 110 P.3d 380 (Colo. 2005); People v. Hagos, 110 P. 3d 1290 (Colo. 2005).

Subsections (8) and (9) conflict with § 18-1.3-401 (5). Section 18-1.3-401 (5) requires the court to impose a life sentence on a defendant sentenced to death under an unconstitutional death penalty scheme. In contrast, subsections (8) and (9) of this section allow the supreme court to review the death sentence or remand for a new sentencing hearing. Section 18-1.3-401 (5) is a mandatory provision and therefore it applies over the discretionary provision. Woldt v. People, 64 P.3d 256 (Colo. 2003).

Subsections (8) and (9) are unconstitutional. Allowing the supreme court to determine if the jury implicitly found one or more aggravating factors that the three-judge panel found in their written findings violates the U.S. supreme court's decision in Ring v. Arizona. The supreme court would engage in the type of fact-finding declared unconstitutional in Ring. Woldt v. People, 64 P.3d 256 (Colo. 2003).

Allowing the supreme court to remand the cases back for new penalty proceedings violates the ex post facto clause. Subjecting a defendant, sentenced under an unconstitutional death penalty statute, to a new penalty hearing in front of a jury is ex post facto because of the statutory dictate of a life sentence in § 18-1.3-401 (5) and because the defendants in these cases were identifiable targets of the legislation. Woldt v. People, 64 P.3d 256 (Colo. 2003).

ARTICLE 1.5

Criminal Justice Commission

18-1.5-101 to 18-1.5-105. (Repealed)

Editor's note: (1) This article was added in 1989. For amendments to this article prior to its repeal in 1994, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

(2) Section 18-1.5-105 provided for the repeal of this article, effective March 15, 1994. (See L. 89, p. 833.)

ARTICLE 1.7

Treatment of Persons with Mental Illness Involved in the Criminal Justice System

18-1.7-101 to 18-1.7-106. (Repealed)

Editor's note: (1) This article was added in 2000 and was not amended prior to its repeal in 2003. For the text of this article prior to 2003, consult the 2002 Colorado Revised Statutes.

(2) Section 18-1.7-106 provided for the repeal of this article, effective July 1, 2003. (See L. 2000, p. 1567.)

ARTICLE 1.8

Interagency Task Force on Trafficking in Persons

18-1.8-101. Interagency task force. (Repealed)

18-1.8-101. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2012: Entire article repealed, (HB 12-1151), ch. 174, p. 621, § 1, effective August 8.

Editor’s note: This article was added in 2005 and consisted of only § 18-1.8-101 and was not amended prior to its repeal in 2012. For the text of this article prior to 2012, consult the 2011 Colorado Revised Statutes and the Colorado statutory research explanatory note beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

ARTICLE 1.9

Continuing Examination of the Treatment of Persons with Mental Illness Who are Involved in the Justice System

18-1.9-101.	Legislative declaration.
18-1.9-102.	Definitions.	18-1.9-104.	systems - creation - duties. Mentally ill offender task
18-1.9-103.	Legislative oversight committee for the continuing examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice		force - creation - membership - duties.
		18-1.9-105.	Task force funding - staff support.
		18-1.9-106.	Cash fund.
		18-1.9-107.	Repeal of article.

- 18-1.9-101. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that:
- (a) In November of 1998, the Colorado department of corrections reported that ten percent of its correctional population met the diagnostic criteria for serious mental illness, which number was double the number identified two years earlier, and five to six times the number documented in 1988, only ten years earlier;
- (b) The Colorado department of corrections estimates that in 2002, sixteen percent of its inmate population met the diagnostic criteria for major mental illness;
- (c) The Colorado division of youth corrections estimates that twenty-four percent of juveniles in the juvenile justice system are diagnosed with mental illness;
- (d) A study conducted in 1995 found that approximately six percent of the persons held in county jails and in community corrections throughout the state had been diagnosed as persons with serious mental illness;
- (e) It is estimated that nationally, nearly nine percent of all adults and juveniles on probation have been identified as having serious mental illness;
- (f) For the 1998-99 fiscal year, approximately forty-four percent of the inpatient population at the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo had been committed following the return of a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity or a determination by the court that the person was incompetent to stand trial due to mental illness;
- (g) Persons with mental illness, as a direct or indirect result of their condition, are in many instances more likely than persons who do not have mental illness to be involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems;
- (h) The existing procedures and diagnostic tools used by persons working in the criminal and juvenile justice systems may not be sufficient to identify appropriately and diagnose persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems;

(i) The criminal and juvenile justice systems may not be structured in such a manner as to provide the level of treatment and care for persons with mental illness that is necessary to ensure the safety of these persons, of other persons in the criminal and juvenile justice systems, and of the community at large;

(j) Studies show that, for offenders under community supervision, treatment of the mental illness of the offender decreases repeat arrests by forty-four percent; and

(k) The ongoing supervision, care, and monitoring, especially with regard to medication, of persons with mental illness who are released from incarceration are crucial to ensuring the safety of the community.

(2) The general assembly further finds that pursuant to the findings in a report requested by the joint budget committee in 1999 that recommended cross-system collaboration and communication as a method for reducing the number of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems, the legislative oversight committee and advisory task force for the examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal justice system were created in 1999 and extended for an additional three years in 2000. Over the course of four years, the legislative oversight committee and advisory task force began to address, but did not finish addressing, the issues specified in subsection (1) of this section, through both legislative and non-legislative solutions including, but not limited to:

(a) Community-based intensive treatment management programs for juveniles involved in the juvenile justice system;

(b) An expedited application process for aid to the needy disabled benefits for persons with mental illness upon release from incarceration;

(c) Standardized inter-agency screening to detect mental illness in adults who are involved in the criminal justice system and juveniles who are involved in the juvenile justice system;

(d) Training of law enforcement officers to recognize and safely deal with persons who have mental illness through the use of crisis intervention teams; and

(e) Creating local initiative committee pilot programs for the management of community-based programs for adults with mental illness who are involved in the criminal justice system.

(3) Experts involved in cross-system collaboration and communication to reduce the number of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems recommend a five-year plan to continue the work of the task force and the legislative oversight committee in order to more fully effectuate solutions to these issues.

(4) Therefore, the general assembly declares that it is necessary to create a task force to continue to examine the identification, diagnosis, and treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the state criminal and juvenile justice systems and to make additional recommendations to a legislative oversight committee for the continuing development of legislative proposals related to this issue.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1866, § 1, effective June 4.

18-1.9-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Committee" means the legislative oversight committee established pursuant to section 18-1.9-103.

(1.5) "Co-occurring disorder" means a disorder that commonly coincides with mental illness and may include, but is not limited to, substance abuse, developmental disability, fetal alcohol syndrome, and traumatic brain injury.

(2) "Task force" means the task force for the continuing examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems established pursuant to section 18-1.9-104.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1868, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2009: (1.5) added, (HB 09-1021), ch. 33, p. 139, § 1, effective August 5.

18-1.9-103. Legislative oversight committee for the continuing examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems - creation - duties. (1) Creation. (a) There is hereby created a legislative oversight committee for the continuing examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems.

(b) The committee shall consist of six members. The president of the senate, the minority leader of the senate, and the speaker of the house of representatives shall appoint the members of the committee, as follows:

(I) The president of the senate shall appoint two senators to serve on the committee, and the minority leader of the senate shall appoint one senator to serve on the committee;

(II) The speaker of the house of representatives shall appoint three representatives to serve on the committee, no more than two of whom shall be members of the same political party;

(III) The terms of the members appointed by the speaker of the house of representatives, the president of the senate, and the minority leader of the senate and who are serving on March 22, 2007, shall be extended to and expire on or shall terminate on the convening date of the first regular session of the sixty-seventh general assembly. As soon as practicable after such convening date, the speaker, the president, and the minority leader of the senate shall each appoint or reappoint members in the same manner as provided in subparagraphs (I) and (II) of this paragraph (b). Thereafter, the terms of members appointed or reappointed by the speaker, the president, and the minority leader of the senate shall expire on the convening date of the first regular session of each general assembly, and all subsequent appointments and reappointments by the speaker, the president, and the minority leader of the senate shall be made as soon as practicable after such convening date. The person making the original appointment or reappointment shall fill any vacancy by appointment for the remainder of an unexpired term. Members appointed or reappointed by the speaker, the president, and the minority leader of the senate shall serve at the pleasure of the appointing authority and shall continue in office until the member's successor is appointed.

(c) The president of the senate shall select the first chair of the committee, and the speaker of the house of representatives shall select the first vice-chair. The chair and vice-chair shall alternate annually thereafter between the two houses. The chair and vice-chair of the committee may establish such organizational and procedural rules as are necessary for the operation of the committee.

(d) (I) Notwithstanding the provisions of section 2-2-307, C.R.S., the committee may receive payment of per diem and reimbursement for actual and necessary expenses authorized pursuant to said section and any other direct or indirect costs associated with the duties of the committee set forth in this article only from moneys appropriated from the examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness in the criminal justice system cash fund created in section 18-1.9-106.

(II) The director of research of the legislative council and the director of the office of legislative legal services may supply staff assistance to the committee as they deem appropriate, within existing appropriations. If staff assistance is not available within existing appropriations, then the director of research of the legislative council and the director of the office of legislative legal services may supply staff assistance to the task force only if moneys are credited to the examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness in the criminal justice system cash fund created in section 18-1.9-106 in an amount sufficient to fund staff assistance.

(2) Duties. (a) The committee shall meet at least once on or before August 1, 2004. Beginning in 2005 and continuing each year thereafter through 2014, the committee shall meet at least three times each year and at such other times as it deems necessary; except that the committee shall not meet during the 2010 interim.

(b) (I) The committee shall be responsible for the oversight of the task force and shall submit annual reports to the general assembly regarding the findings and recommendations of the task force. In addition, the committee may recommend legislative changes that shall be treated as bills recommended by an interim legislative committee for purposes of any introduction deadlines or bill limitations imposed by the joint rules of the general assembly.

(II) The provisions of subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) shall not apply during the suspension of the committee during the 2010 interim.

(c) (I) The committee shall submit a report to the general assembly by January 15, 2005, by each January 15 thereafter through January 15, 2010, and by January 15, 2012, and by each January 15 thereafter through January 15, 2015. The annual reports shall summarize the issues addressing the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems that have been considered and any recommended legislative proposals.

(II) The general assembly reviewed the reporting requirements in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (c) during the 2008 regular session and continued the requirements.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1868, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2007: (1)(b)(III) added, p. 178, § 8, effective March 22. L. 2008: (2)(c) amended, p. 1267, § 1, effective August 5. L. 2009: (2)(a) and (2)(c)(I) amended, (HB 09-1021), ch. 33, p. 139, § 2, effective August 5. L. 2010: (2)(a), (2)(b), and (2)(c)(I) amended, (SB 10-213), ch. 375, p. 1761, § 6, effective June 7.

18-1.9-104. Mentally ill offender task force - creation - membership - duties.

(1) Creation. (a) There is hereby created a task force for the continuing examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems in Colorado. The task force shall consist of thirty members appointed as provided in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subsection (1).

(b) The chief justice of the Colorado supreme court shall appoint four members who represent the judicial department, two of whom shall represent the division of probation within the department, one of whom shall have experience handling juvenile justice matters within the department, and one of whom shall have experience handling adult criminal justice matters within the department.

(c) The chair and vice-chair of the committee shall appoint twenty-six members as follows:

(I) One member who represents the division of criminal justice within the department of public safety;

(II) Two members who represent the department of corrections, one of whom represents the division of parole within the department;

(III) Two members who represent local law enforcement agencies, one of whom shall be in active service and the other one of whom shall have experience dealing with juveniles in the juvenile justice system;

(IV) Six members who represent the department of human services, as follows:

(A) One member who represents the unit within the department of human services that is responsible for mental health and drug and alcohol abuse services;

(B) One member who represents the division of youth corrections;

(C) One member who represents the unit within the department of human services that is responsible for child welfare services;

(D) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2009, p. 140, § 3, effective August 5, 2009.)

(E) One member who represents the Colorado mental health institute at Pueblo; and

(F) One member who represents the mental health planning and advisory committee within the department of human services;

(V) One member who represents the interests of county departments of social services;

(VI) One member who represents the department of education;

(VII) One member who represents the state attorney general's office;

(VIII) One member who represents the district attorneys within the state;

(IX) Two members who represent the criminal defense bar within the state, one of whom shall have experience representing juveniles in the juvenile justice system;

(X) Two members who are licensed mental health professionals practicing within the state, one of whom shall have experience treating juveniles;

(XI) One member who represents community mental health centers within the state;

(XII) One member who is a person with knowledge of public benefits and public housing within the state;

- (XIII) One member who is a practicing forensic professional within the state;
 - (XIV) Three members of the public as follows:
 - (A) One member who has mental illness and has been involved in the criminal justice system in this state;
 - (B) One member who has an adult family member who has mental illness and has been involved in the criminal justice system in this state; and
 - (C) One member who is the parent of a child who has mental illness and has been involved in the juvenile justice system in this state;
 - (XV) One member who represents the department of health care policy and financing; and
 - (XVI) One member who represents the department of labor and employment.
- (d) A vacancy occurring in a position filled by the chief justice of the Colorado supreme court pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (1) shall be filled as soon as possible by the chief justice of the Colorado supreme court in accordance with the limitations specified in paragraph (b) of this subsection (1). In addition, the chief justice of the Colorado supreme court may remove and replace any appointment to the task force made pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (1).
- (e) A vacancy occurring in a position filled by the chair and vice-chair of the committee pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1) shall be filled as soon as possible by the chair and vice-chair of the committee in accordance with the limitations specified in paragraph (c) of this subsection (1). In addition, the chair and vice-chair of the committee may remove and replace any appointment to the task force made pursuant to paragraph (c) of this subsection (1).
- (f) In making appointments to the task force, the appointing authorities shall ensure that the membership of the task force reflects the ethnic, cultural, and gender diversity of the state and includes representation of all areas of the state.
- (2) Issues for study. The task force shall examine the identification, diagnosis, and treatment of persons with mental illness who are involved in the state criminal and juvenile justice systems, including an examination of liability, safety, and cost as they relate to these issues. The task force shall specifically consider, but need not be limited to, the following issues:
- (a) On or before July 1, 2005, the following issues:
 - (I) The diagnosis, treatment, and housing of juveniles with mental illness who are involved in the criminal justice system or the juvenile justice system; and
 - (II) The adoption of a common framework for effectively addressing the mental health issues, including competency and co-occurring disorders, of juveniles who are involved in the criminal justice system or the juvenile justice system;
 - (b) On or before July 1, 2006, the following issues:
 - (I) The prosecution of and sentencing alternatives for persons with mental illness that may involve treatment and ongoing supervision;
 - (II) The civil commitment of persons with mental illness who have been criminally convicted, found not guilty by reason of insanity, or found to be incompetent to stand trial; and
 - (III) The development of a plan to most effectively and collaboratively serve the population of juveniles involved in the criminal justice system or the juvenile justice system;
- (b.5) Repealed.
- (c) On or before July 1, 2007, the following issues:
 - (I) The diagnosis, treatment, and housing of adults with mental illness who are involved in the criminal justice system;
 - (II) The ongoing treatment, housing, and supervision, especially with regard to medication, of adults and juveniles who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems and who are incarcerated or housed within the community and the availability of public benefits for such persons;
 - (III) The ongoing assistance and supervision, especially with regard to medication, of persons with mental illness after discharge from sentence; and

(IV) The identification of alternative entities to exercise jurisdiction regarding release for persons found not guilty by reason of insanity, such as the development and use of a psychiatric security review board, including recommendations related to the indeterminate nature of the commitment imposed;

(d) On or before July 1, 2008, the identification, diagnosis, and treatment of minority persons with mental illness, women with mental illness, and persons with co-occurring disorders, in the criminal and juvenile justice systems;

(e) On or before July 1, 2009, the following issues:

(I) The early identification, diagnosis, and treatment of adults and juveniles with mental illness who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems;

(II) The modification of the criminal and juvenile justice systems to most effectively serve adults and juveniles with mental illness who are involved in these systems;

(III) The implementation of appropriate diagnostic tools to identify persons in the criminal and juvenile justice systems with mental illness; and

(IV) Any other issues concerning persons with mental illness who are involved in the state criminal and juvenile justice systems that arise during the course of the task force study.

(f) Beginning July 1, 2011, through July 1, 2014, the following issues:

(I) The diagnosis, treatment, and housing of persons with mental illness or co-occurring disorders who are convicted of crimes, or incarcerated or who plead guilty, nolo contendere, or not guilty by reason of insanity or who are found to be incompetent to stand trial;

(II) The diagnosis, treatment, and housing of juveniles with mental illness or co-occurring disorders who are adjudicated, detained, or committed for offenses that would constitute crimes if committed by adults or who plead guilty, nolo contendere, or not guilty by reason of insanity or who are found to be incompetent to stand trial;

(III) The ongoing treatment, housing, and supervision, especially with regard to medication, of adults and juveniles who are involved in the criminal and juvenile justice systems and who are incarcerated or housed within the community and the availability of public benefits for these persons; and

(IV) The safety of the staff who treat or supervise persons with mental illness and the use of force against persons with mental illness.

(3) Additional duties of the task force. The task force shall provide guidance and make findings and recommendations to the committee for its development of reports and legislative recommendations for modification of the criminal and juvenile justice systems, with respect to persons with mental illness who are involved in these systems. In addition, the task force shall:

(a) On or before August 1, 2004, and by each August 1 thereafter through August 1, 2013, except during the suspension of the committee during the 2010 interim, select a chair and a vice-chair from among its members;

(b) Meet at least six times each year from the date of the first meeting until January 1, 2015, or more often as directed by the chair of the committee; except that the committee shall not meet during the 2010 interim;

(c) Communicate with and obtain input from groups throughout the state affected by the issues identified in subsection (2) of this section;

(d) Create subcommittees as needed to carry out the duties of the task force. The subcommittees may consist, in part, of persons who are not members of the task force. Such persons may vote on issues before the subcommittee but shall not be entitled to a vote at meetings of the task force.

(e) Submit a report to the committee by October 1, 2004, and by each October 1 thereafter through October 1, 2009, and by October 1, 2011, and by each October 1 thereafter through October 1, 2014, at a minimum specifying the following:

(I) Issues to be studied in upcoming task force meetings and a prioritization of those issues;

(II) Findings and recommendations regarding issues of prior consideration by the task force;

(III) Legislative proposals of the task force that identify the policy issues involved, the agencies responsible for the implementation of the changes, and the funding sources required for such implementation.

(4) Flexibility. No requirement set forth in subsection (2) of this section shall prohibit the task force from studying, presenting findings and recommendations on, or requesting permission to draft legislative proposals concerning any issue described in subsection (2) of this section at any time during the existence of the task force.

(5) Compensation. Members of the task force shall serve without compensation.

(6) Coordination. The task force may work with other task forces, committees, or organizations that are pursuing policy initiatives similar to those addressed in subsection (2) of this section. The task force shall consider developing relationships with other task forces, committees, and organizations to leverage efficient policy-making opportunities through collaborative efforts.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1870, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2006: (2)(b.5) added, p. 528, § 1, effective April 18. L. 2008: (1)(a) and IP(1)(c) amended and (1)(c)(XV) added, p. 105, § 1, effective March 19. L. 2009: (1)(c)(IV)(A), (1)(c)(IV)(D), (1)(c)(XV), (3), and (4) amended and (1)(c)(XVI), (2)(f), and (6) added, (HB 09-1021), ch. 33, pp. 140, 141, §§ 3, 4, 5, effective August 5. L. 2010: IP(2)(f), (3)(a), (3)(b), and IP(3)(e) amended, (SB 10-213), ch. 375, p. 1762, § 7, effective June 7.

Editor's note: Subsection (2)(b.5)(IV) provided for the repeal of subsection (2)(b.5), effective December 30, 2006. (See L. 2006, p. 528.)

18-1.9-105. Task force funding - staff support. (1) The division of criminal justice of the department of public safety, on behalf of the task force, is authorized to receive and expend contributions, grants, services, and in-kind donations from any public or private entity for any direct or indirect costs associated with the duties of the task force set forth in this article.

(2) The director of research of the legislative council, the director of the office of legislative legal services, the director of the division of criminal justice within the department of public safety, and the executive directors of the departments represented on the task force may supply staff assistance to the task force as they deem appropriate within existing appropriations. If staff assistance is not available from a governmental agency within existing appropriations, then the executive directors of the departments represented on the task force, the director of research of the legislative council, and the director of the office of legislative legal services may supply staff assistance to the task force only if moneys are credited to the examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness in the criminal justice system cash fund created in section 18-1.9-106 in an amount sufficient to fund staff assistance. The task force may also accept staff support from the private sector.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1874, § 1, effective June 4.

18-1.9-106. Cash fund. (1) All private and public funds received through grants, contributions, and donations pursuant to this article shall be transmitted to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the examination of the treatment of persons with mental illness in the criminal justice system cash fund, which fund is hereby created and referred to in this section as the "fund". The moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly for the direct and indirect costs associated with the implementation of this article. All moneys in the fund not expended for the purpose of this article may be invested by the state treasurer as provided by law. All interest and income derived from the investment and deposit of moneys in the fund shall be credited to the fund. Any unexpended and unencumbered moneys remaining in the fund at the end of a fiscal year shall remain in the fund and shall not be credited or transferred to the general fund or another fund. All unexpended and unencumbered moneys remaining in the fund as of July 1, 2015, shall be transferred to the general fund.

(2) Compensation as provided in sections 18-1.9-103 (1) (d) and 18-1.9-105 (2) for members of the general assembly and for staff assistance to the committee and task force provided by the director of research of the legislative council and the director of the office of legislative legal services shall be approved by the chair of the legislative council and paid by vouchers and warrants drawn as provided by law from moneys appropriated for such purpose and allocated to the legislative council from the fund.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1875, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2009: (1) amended, (HB 09-1021), ch. 33, p. 142, § 6, effective August 5.

18-1.9-107. Repeal of article. This article is repealed, effective July 1, 2015.

Source: L. 2004: Entire article added, p. 1875, § 1, effective June 4. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (HB 09-1021), ch. 33, p. 142, § 7, effective August 5.

ARTICLE 2

Inchoate Offenses

Editor’s note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment, see the editor’s note following the title heading.

	PART 1	18-2-205.	Incapacity, irresponsibility, or immunity of party to conspiracy.
	ATTEMPTS	18-2-206.	Penalties for criminal conspiracy - when convictions barred.
18-2-101.	Criminal attempt.
	PART 2		PART 3
	CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY		CRIMINAL SOLICITATION
18-2-201.	Conspiracy.	18-2-301.	Criminal solicitation.
18-2-202.	Joinder and venue in conspiracy prosecutions.		PART 4
18-2-203.	Renunciation of criminal purpose.		RENUNCIATION AND ABANDONMENT
18-2-204.	Duration of conspiracy.	18-2-401.	Nonavailability of defenses.

PART 1

ATTEMPTS

18-2-101. Criminal attempt. (1) A person commits criminal attempt if, acting with the kind of culpability otherwise required for commission of an offense, he engages in conduct constituting a substantial step toward the commission of the offense. A substantial step is any conduct, whether act, omission, or possession, which is strongly corroborative of the firmness of the actor’s purpose to complete the commission of the offense. Factual or legal impossibility of committing the offense is not a defense if the offense could have been committed had the attendant circumstances been as the actor believed them to be, nor is it a defense that the crime attempted was actually perpetrated by the accused.

(2) A person who engages in conduct intending to aid another to commit an offense commits criminal attempt if the conduct would establish his complicity under section 18-1-603 were the offense committed by the other person, even if the other is not guilty of committing or attempting the offense.

(3) It is an affirmative defense to a charge under this section that the defendant abandoned his effort to commit the crime or otherwise prevented its commission, under circumstances manifesting the complete and voluntary renunciation of his criminal intent.

(3.5) Criminal attempt to commit any crime for which a court is required to sentence a defendant for a crime of violence in accordance with section 18-1.3-406 is itself a crime of violence for the purposes of that section.

(4) Criminal attempt to commit a class 1 felony is a class 2 felony; criminal attempt to commit a class 2 felony is a class 3 felony; criminal attempt to commit a class 3 felony is a class 4 felony; criminal attempt to commit a class 4 felony is a class 5 felony; criminal attempt to commit a class 5 or 6 felony is a class 6 felony.

(5) Criminal attempt to commit a felony which is defined by any statute other than one contained in this title and for which no penalty is specifically provided is a class 6 felony.

(6) Criminal attempt to commit a class 1 misdemeanor is a class 2 misdemeanor.

(7) Criminal attempt to commit a misdemeanor other than a class 1 misdemeanor is a class 3 misdemeanor.

(8) Criminal attempt to commit a petty offense is a crime of the same class as the offense itself.

(9) The provisions of subsections (4) to (8) of this section shall not apply to a person who commits criminal attempt to escape. A person who commits criminal attempt to escape shall be punished as provided in section 18-8-208.1.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 414, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-101. L. 75: (4) to (7) amended and (8) added, p. 617, § 3, effective July 21. L. 76, Ex. Sess.: (9) added, p. 10, § 2, effective September 18. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 960, § 4, effective July 1. L. 89, 1st Ex. Sess.: (4) and (5) amended, p. 21, § 11, effective July 1. L. 95: (3.5) added, p. 1250, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2002: (3.5) amended, p. 1511, § 182, effective October 1.

Cross references: (1) For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3.5), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L. J. 137 (1972). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "Attempt, Reckless Homicide, and the Design of Criminal Law", see 78 U. Colo. L. Rev. 879 (2007).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-2-101 is similar to former § 40-25-1, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The attempt provision was drawn from proposed federal criminal code. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977); People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981).

"Criminal attempt" construed. Criminal attempt is a crime in which the defendant's purpose is to effect a criminal result. People v. Derrera, 667 P.2d 1363 (Colo. 1983).

Criminal attempt is not readily understandable to a person of ordinary intelligence in a guilty plea hearing without some further explanation by the court. People v. Leonard, 673 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1983).

"Purpose" equivalent of "intent". The word "purpose", as used in this section, is the equivalent of the common meaning of the word "intent". People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981).

An attempt merely requires some overt act beyond mere preparation. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 413, 484 P.2d 110 (1971).

An attempt means an effort to commit a crime, and a direct, ineffectual act done towards its commission. Lewis v. People, 124 Colo. 62, 235 P.2d 348 (1951); Martin v. People, 179 Colo. 237, 499 P.2d 606 (1972).

This section provides that criminal attempt requires that the defendant has the intent to perform any act, and to obtain any result which, if accomplished, would constitute such crime, plus some step toward the commission of the crime which would result in its commission, except for the extraneous intervention of another person or factor. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

Such overt act need not be the last proximate act necessary. People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 57, 530 P.2d 512 (1974).

A transaction, if complete, must constitute offense. Where a transaction, had it proceeded to its contemplated conclusion, would not have been a completed crime, the incompleted transaction does not rise to the dignity of an attempt to commit such offense. Martin v. People, 179 Colo. 237, 499 P.2d 606 (1972).

Culpability and conduct required for criminal attempt. In order to be guilty of criminal attempt, an actor must act with the kind of culpability otherwise required for commission of the underlying offense and must engage in conduct which constitutes a substantial step, with the further intent to perform acts which, if completed, would constitute the underlying offense. People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981); People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

Because the jury instructions taken as a whole failed to instruct the jury that the defendant must intend to complete the crime intended, the judgment of conviction of attempted theft is reversed. People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

Commission of a criminal attempt requires the intent to commit a specific crime. Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971).

Specific criminal attempt provision prevails over the general criminal attempt statute. There was no violation of equal protection in defendant's conviction under a specific attempt provision of the second degree assault statute, despite defendant's contention that this section proscribes the same conduct. People v. Weller, 679 P.2d 1077 (Colo. 1984).

First degree murder statutes contain rationally different elements than first degree assault statute, § 18-3-202, and thus a defendant sentenced under the former and not the latter was not denied equal protection of law. People v. Brewer, 720 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1985).

Attempt to commit aggravated robbery requires same culpability, plus substantial step. Criminal attempt to commit aggravated robbery requires that the offender act with the kind of culpability otherwise required for aggravated robbery and engage in a substantial step toward the commission of aggravated robbery. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Conviction of attempted aggravated robbery does not require a showing of specific intent to commit the underlying crime. People v. Krovarz, 697 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1985).

Information reciting elements of attempt, and referring to provision defining ulterior crime, adequate. Where the information recited the elements of the inchoate crime of attempt in the language of this section and included a reference to the section defining the burglary allegedly attempted, and where the defendant claimed no surprise or prejudice resulting from the absence of an allegation specifying the ulterior crime to be relied upon by the prosecution in its proof of the elements of burglary, the information adequately described the offense of attempt. People v. Jiron, 44 Colo. App. 246, 616 P.2d 166 (1980).

This section and § 18-1-504 may be harmonized and do not conflict. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Subsection (1) and § 18-3-203 (1)(b) do not proscribe the same conduct, and disparity in applicable punishment does not violate equal protection guarantees. People v. Marez, 916 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1995).

Legislative intent in amending subsection (5). It is immaterial that the offense of attempted possession of a narcotic drug is not proscribed by part 3 of article 22 of title 12; the general assembly's manifest intent was to broaden the crime of criminal attempt to include felonies other than those defined in the criminal code when it amended subsection (5) of this section. People v. Maciel, 39 Colo. App. 149, 568 P.2d 68 (1977).

No defense of impossibility available in attempt prosecution. The general assembly intended that the defense of factual or legal impossibility not be available in an attempt prosecution. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

A person who only thinks he is violating law may not be prosecuted. Exclusion of the defense of impossibility is not intended to permit prosecuting the person who thinks he is violating a law when in fact no such law exists. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Attempted criminally negligent homicide logical and legal impossibility. Where the trial court joined criminally negligent homicide and attempt and charged the jury on attempted criminally negligent homicide, the charge was a logical and legal impossibility. People v. Hernandez, 44 Colo. App. 161, 614 P.2d 900 (1980).

Defendant may raise defense of general mistake of fact. A defendant may not rely on the defense of legal impossibility in a prosecution for attempted theft, but may raise the defense of general mistake of fact by alleging that he never believed the goods were stolen. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

The fact that the items were not in fact stolen does not provide a defense to attempted theft where the defendant believed they were stolen. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Intoxication not defense in criminal attempt action. The legislative intent in amending this section in 1977 was to preclude a defendant from utilizing intoxication as a defense to his ability to form the intent required for criminal attempt. People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981).

Proper instructions on affirmative defense must be given. Where an issue of renunciation and abandonment is before a jury, proper instructions on this affirmative defense must be given. People v. Traubert, 625 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1981).

Effect of voluntary renunciation of criminal intent. Even though the crime of attempt is complete once the actor intentionally takes a substantial step towards the commission of the crime, the affirmative defense of abandonment is present if he thereafter voluntarily renounces his criminal intent. People v. Johnson, 41 Colo. App. 220, 585 P.2d 306 (1978).

Defense of abandonment may apply at various stages, early and late, in the commission of attempted crimes; however, the abandonment defense does not provide immunity where the actor has put in motion forces that the actor is powerless to stop, because the attempt is deemed to have been completed and cannot be abandoned. People v. Gandiaga, 70 P.3d 523 (Colo. App. 2002).

Defense of abandonment was not available where defendant knew of his accomplice's intent to rob someone, went with the accomplice to the crime scene, waited across the street until the crime was committed, fled with the accomplice, and later returned to conceal or remove evidence. People v. Nicholas, 950 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1997), rev'd on other grounds, 973 P.2d 1213 (Colo. 1999).

To present an affirmative defense for abandonment to the jury, defendant must present "some credible evidence" on the issue of the claimed defense. It is not necessarily the case, however, that the defense of abandonment is not available once defendant has injured the victim. O'Shaughnessy v. People, 2012 CO 9, 269 P.3d 1233.

Culpable state of knowledge sufficient to support criminal attempt liability. A knowing attempt to attain a proscribed result is sufficient culpable mental state to justify imposition by the legislature of attempt liability. People v. Krovarz, 697 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1985).

Conviction of conspiracy to commit a robbery is totally inconsistent with an acquittal of attempt to commit aggravated robbery. People v. Berry, 191 Colo. 125, 550 P.2d 332 (1976).

For conviction under subsection (1) of this section or § 18-4-410 (1), relating to theft by receiving, it is irrelevant whether the goods are recovered stolen goods or have never been stolen. The intent and acts of the defendant, not the surrounding circumstances, are the crucial elements of the attempt offense. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

The portion of subsection (1) which provides that impossibility "is not a defense if the offense could have been committed had the attendant circumstances been as the actor believed them to be" in effect substitutes "believing" the goods to be stolen, the element of culpability required in attempted theft by receiving, for "knowing" the goods to be stolen, the element of culpability for a completed theft by receiving. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Where the defendant did every act within his power to commit the offense of theft by receiving and would have committed the completed offense had the jewelry been stolen as he believed it to be, these acts evidenced an intent to commit the offense, and the defendant comes within the letter of this section. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Proof of intent insufficient. Where testimony of complaining parties negates any intent on the part of defendant to commit attempted theft and sole evidence of intent comes from defendant, requisite independent corroborative evidence of corpus delicti is lacking. Martin v. People, 179 Colo. 237, 499 P.2d 606 (1972).

Where a defendant engages in only one assaultive act, he or she cannot simultaneously have a specific intent to harm a particular person and universal malice that is not directed at a particular person. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Attempt to commit rape is crime. The contention that there is no crime of attempt to commit rape under this section in view of the existence of the crime of assault with intent to commit rape under § 18-3-202 is without merit, for these are separate and distinct offenses. Clark v. People, 176 Colo. 48, 488 P.2d 1097 (1971).

For attempt to commit an assault with a deadly weapon, see Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971).

Attempt to commit sexual assault on child is offense under Colorado law. People v. Martinez, 42 Colo. App. 257, 592 P.2d 1358 (1979).

Person is guilty of attempted second degree kidnapping if he knowingly engaged in conduct which is strongly corroborative of the firmness of his purpose to knowingly seize or carry another person from one place to another without his consent and without lawful justification. People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (1980); Apodaca v. People, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Intent required for attempted first degree murder. Intent required for attempted first degree murder is the intent to commit the underlying offense of first degree murder. Defendant must have acted after deliberation, and must have intended to cause the death of another person. People v. Juvenile Court, 813 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1991).

Attempted reckless manslaughter is a cognizable crime in Colorado. People v. Thomas, 729 P.2d 972 (Colo. 1986).

When one engages in conduct that involves a risk of death that is both substantial and unjustified, tified and is conscious of the nature and extent of the risk, the actor demonstrates such a disregard for the likelihood that another will die as to evince a degree of dangerousness hardly less threatening to society than if the actor had chosen to cause death and, as such, justifies the conclusion that attempt liability may be founded on the substantive offense of reckless manslaughter. People v. Thomas, 729 P.2d 972 (Colo. 1986).

Intent required for attempted reckless manslaughter is the intent to commit the underlying offense of reckless manslaughter, that is, the intent to engage in and complete the risk-producing act or conduct. It does not include an intent that death occur even though the underlying crime, reckless manslaughter, has death as an essential element. People v. Thomas, 729 P.2d 972 (Colo. 1986).

The crime of attempted reckless manslaughter also requires that the risk-producing act or conduct be commenced and sufficiently pursued to constitute a substantial step toward the commission of the offense. That is, the act or conduct must proceed far enough to be strongly corroborative of the firmness of the actor's purpose to complete those acts that will produce a substantial and unjustifiable risk of death to another. People v. Thomas, 729 P.2d 972 (Colo. 1986).

Finally, in order to be guilty of attempted reckless manslaughter, the actor must engage in the requisite acts or conduct with the kind of culpability otherwise required for the commission of the underlying offense, that is, with a conscious disregard of a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the acts or conduct will cause the death of another person. People v. Thomas, 729 P.2d 972 (Colo. 1986).

Court's response to jury inquiry on attempted reckless manslaughter, although a comment on the evidence and not a proper instruction on the law, did not constitute plain error. Hypothetical given by the court, when considered in the context of the jury instructions as a whole, neither misled the jury nor cast serious doubt on the verdict. People v. Allen, 43 P.3d 689 (Colo. App. 2001).

Colorado does not recognize the offense of attempted felony murder. Because criminal attempt requires a defendant to possess the culpable mental state for the attempted offense and felony murder does not require a mental state, it is impossible to convict a person of attempting to commit an act that the person was not intending. People v. Meyer, 952 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1997).

Third degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree criminal trespass. While unlawful entry upon the premises is a necessary element of the completed offense of third degree criminal trespass, it is not a necessary element of attempted first degree criminal trespass. People v. Griffith, 58 P.3d 1111 (Colo. App. 2002).

Section 18-1-105 (9)(a)(V) does not require the imposition of a sentence beyond the presumptive range upon conviction of criminal attempt to commit escape under this section. People v. Lobato, 703 P.2d 623 (Colo. App. 1985).

Substantial step required for conviction of attempted extreme indifference murder is conduct which poses a real and proximate risk of death to the victim. People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983).

In applying this test, the court should consider the nature of the defendant's conduct as well as the extent of the victim's injuries. People v. Ramos, 708 P.2d 1347 (Colo. 1985).

Substantial step. Evidence was sufficient to induce a person of ordinary prudence and caution to a reasonable belief that the defendants engaged in conduct which constituted a substantial step toward the underlying offense of first degree murder. People v. Juvenile Court, 813 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1991).

Evidence sufficiently demonstrated that defendant, by seizing and carrying the victim from the kitchen to the bedroom and unsuccessfully attempting to have sexual relations despite the victim's protests and resistance, engaged in a substantial step toward the commission of sexual assault. People v. Martinez, 36 P.3d 154 (Colo. App. 2001).

Submission of attempt and lesser included offenses to jury. Where it was possible for the jury to entertain a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt of attempted robbery, and at the same time to be convinced by reason of defendant's admissions that he was guilty of making an assault upon the complaining witness, the evidence justified the giving of an instruction on simple assault as requested in order to submit the lesser included offense to a jury. People v. Velasquez, 178 Colo. 264, 497 P.2d 12 (1972).

A defendant could commit the crime of attempted theft without having first committed the crime of joyriding or attempted joyriding, which are not lesser included offenses of theft. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

A conviction for attempted second degree murder cannot merge with a conviction for attempted first degree murder with extreme indifference when the offenses had different victims. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

The question of whether felony menacing is a lesser included offense of attempted second degree murder is an issue of first impression in Colorado. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 267 (Colo. App. 2009).

The offense of second degree murder does not establish every element of felony menacing. Attempted second degree murder requires a defendant to knowingly engage in conduct that is a substantial step toward causing the death of a person. There is no requirement that the victim be in fear of imminent serious bodily injury. Thus, an attempted second degree murder conviction does not necessarily establish all the elements of menacing. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

Elements constituting the crime of theft must be explained to the jury when that is the ulterior crime in a case alleging a burglary offense. People v. Jiron, 44 Colo. App. 246, 616 P.2d 166 (1980).

Jury instruction which erroneously omitted element for attempted first degree murder was not plain error because jury instructions read as a whole sufficiently communicated to the jury the culpability elements required to convict the defendant of attempted first degree murder. People v. Key, 851 P.2d 228 (Colo. App. 1992).

Jury instruction on attempted first degree murder that omitted the required element of "after deliberation", when taken together with first degree murder jury instruction that expressly mentioned "after deliberation", adequately advised the jury of the required mens rea for attempted first degree murder. People v. Johnson, 74 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002); People v. Petschow, 119 P.3d 495 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Rubio, 222 P.3d 355 (Colo. App. 2009).

Crimes of violence include attempts of crimes listed in § 18-1.3-406 (2)(a)(II). People v. Laurson, 70 P.3d 564 (Colo. App. 2002).

The general rule applies that abandonment is not available for completed crimes where the general assembly specifically limited the affirmative defense of abandonment to "a charge under this section" and no other legislative enactment makes abandonment an affirmative defense for tampering with a witness. People v. Scialabba, 55 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2002).

Attempted first degree assault is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. Attempted first degree assault requires that a defendant act with the intent to cause serious bodily injury to another person by means of a deadly weapon. Use of a deadly weapon is not an element of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in People v. Montoya, 196 Colo. 111, 582 P.2d 673 (1978); Hudson v. People, 196 Colo. 211, 585 P.2d 580 (1978); People v. Dowdell, 197 Colo. 76, 589 P.2d 948 (1979); People v. Blalock, 197 Colo. 320, 592 P.2d 406 (1979); Pigford v. People, 197 Colo. 358, 593 P.2d 354 (1979); People v. Honey, 198 Colo. 64, 596 P.2d 751 (1979); People v. Elkhatib, 198 Colo. 287, 599 P.2d 897 (1979); People v. Miller, 199 Colo. 32, 604 P.2d 36 (1979); People ex rel. Losavio v. Gentry, 199 Colo. 153, 606 P.2d 57 (1980); People v. DeLeon, 44 Colo. App. 146, 613 P.2d 639 (1980); Godbold v. Wilson, 518 F. Supp. 1265 (D. Colo. 1981); People v. Chavez, 629 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jordan, 630 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1981); People v. Elkhatib, 632 P.2d 275 (Colo. 1981); People v. Walters, 632 P.2d 566 (Colo. 1981); People v. Johnson, 634 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1981); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); People v. Franklin, 640 P.2d 226 (Colo. 1982); People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982); People v. Madonna, 651 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1982); People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982); People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hoffman, 655 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1982); People v. Simien, 656 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1983); People v. Freiman, 657 P.2d 452 (Colo. 1983); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983); People v. Tate, 657 P.2d 955 (Colo. 1983); People v. Hrapski, 658 P.2d 1367 (Colo. 1983).

PART 2

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY

18-2-201. Conspiracy. (1) A person commits conspiracy to commit a crime if, with the intent to promote or facilitate its commission, he agrees with another person or persons that they, or one or more of them, will engage in conduct which constitutes a crime or an attempt to commit a crime, or he agrees to aid the other person or persons in the planning or commission of a crime or of an attempt to commit such crime.

(2) No person may be convicted of conspiracy to commit a crime, unless an overt act in pursuance of that conspiracy is proved to have been done by him or by a person with whom he conspired.

(3) If a person knows that one with whom he conspires to commit a crime has conspired with another person or persons to commit the same crime, he is guilty of conspiring to commit a crime with the other person or persons, whether or not he knows their identity.

(4) If a person conspires to commit a number of crimes, he is guilty of only one conspiracy so long as such multiple crimes are part of a single criminal episode.

(4.5) Conspiracy to commit any crime for which a court is required to sentence a defendant for a crime of violence in accordance with section 18-1.3-406 is itself a crime of violence for the purposes of that section.

(5) If a person conspires to commit a felony which is defined by any statute other than one contained in this title and for which conspiracy no penalty is specifically provided, he is guilty of a class 6 felony. If a person conspires to commit a misdemeanor which is defined by any statute other than one contained in this title and for which conspiracy no penalty is specifically provided, he is guilty of a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 415, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-201. L. 74: (5) added, p. 250, § 1, effective February 13. L. 89, 1st Ex. Sess.: (5) amended, p. 21, § 12, effective July 1. L. 95: (4.5) added, p. 1250, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4.5) amended, p. 1512, § 183, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4.5), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Essential Elements of Crime.
- III. Trial and Punishment.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Evidence.
 - C. Instructions and Jury.
 - D. Verdict and Sentence.
- IV. Illustrative Cases.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with conspiracy, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 125 (1985).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-2-201 is similar to former § 40-7-35, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Conspiracy has legal significance only with respect to some other crime which is the object of the conspiracy. Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982).

Conspiracy and commission of contemplated crime are different and distinct offenses. Davis v. People, 22 Colo. 1, 43 P. 122 (1895).

The charge of conspiracy to commit confidence game and the charge of confidence game are separate and distinct offenses, and proof of one does not hinge upon proof of the other. Roll v. People, 132 Colo. 1, 284 P.2d 665 (1955).

The crime of conspiracy to commit burglary and burglary are distinct and separate offenses. Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

The commission of a substantive offense and a conspiracy to commit the same crime are separate and distinct offenses, since the proof of the substantive offense rests on separate facts and does not hinge upon the proof of the conspiracy. DeBose v. People, 175 Colo. 356, 488

P.2d 69 (1971); People v. Steele, 193 Colo. 187, 563 P.2d 6 (1977).

Conspiracy and crime which is the object of the conspiracy are different and distinct offenses. People v. Rivera, 178 Colo. 373, 497 P.2d 990 (1972); People v. Grass, 180 Colo. 346, 505 P.2d 1301 (1973).

Conspiracy is a substantive offense, separate from the underlying charge itself, which punishes an agreement intentionally entered into for the purpose of promoting criminal acts. People v. Ganatta, 638 P.2d 268 (Colo. 1981).

One can be convicted of a conspiracy and not of the offense which is the object of the conspiracy, if the evidence implicates the defendant in a conspiracy separate and apart from the evidence offered to prove the substantive offense. People v. Leonard, 644 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1982).

However, conviction of conspiracy cannot stand absent conviction of the substantive offense. People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Complicity distinguished. Under the complicity statute, a defendant is held accountable for a criminal offense committed by another if the defendant participates in the criminal act, i.e., intentionally aids, abets, or advises the other person in planning or committing the offense. In contrast, the essence of the crime of conspiracy is an illegal agreement or combination, plus an overt act in furtherance of that agreement. People v. Hood, 878 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1994).

Solicitation distinguished. A conspiracy may be committed without the inducement required for the crime of solicitation, and solicitation may be committed without the parties ever reaching an agreement or without any overt act taken to complete the object of the solicitation. Therefore, neither crime is included in the other and the two crimes do not merge. People v. Hood, 878 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1994).

Verdict acquitting defendant of conspiracy not inconsistent with verdict convicting the defendant of distribution of a controlled substance. People v. Saldana, 899 P.2d 208 (Colo. 1995).

Consistency of verdicts is not required. The court of appeals erred in holding that the defendant could attack his conviction for distribution of a controlled substance on the ground that it is inconsistent with his acquittal on the conspiracy offense. People v. Saldana, 899 P.2d 208 (Colo. 1995).

Section proscribes a conspiracy to commit any conduct which constitutes a crime, and not merely those acts designated as criminal in this title. People v. Cabus, 626 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1980).

It is not a violation of double jeopardy to be convicted of both aggravated robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery. People v. Rivera, 178 Colo. 373, 497 P.2d 990 (1972).

Defendant charged with assault with a deadly weapon and conspiracy to assault with deadly weapon was not subjected to double jeopardy by conspiracy instruction in combination with accessory instruction. People v. Grass, 180 Colo. 346, 505 P.2d 1301 (1973).

Conspiracy to commit reckless manslaughter is not a crime in Colorado. Palmer v. People, 964 P.2d 524 (Colo. 1998).

Where the underlying substantive criminal offense is of no effect, the conspiracy to commit it is likewise void. People v. Larkin, 183 Colo. 363, 517 P.2d 389 (1973).

Conviction on a charge of conspiracy to commit assault to rape was not inconsistent with an acquittal on a substantive charge of assault with intent to commit rape. People v. Walker, 182 Colo. 317, 512 P.2d 1243 (1973).

Acquittal of substantive offense forecloses conviction of conspiracy to commit that offense, if the identical evidence relied upon to establish the conspiracy is the same evidence which proved insufficient to establish the substantive offense. People v. Albers, 196 Colo. 66, 582 P.2d 667 (1978).

When conspiracy terminates. Although a conspiracy need not necessarily terminate with the completion of its targeted crime, nor even the arrest of a conspirator, when it does terminate depends upon the "particular facts and purposes of such conspiracy". People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

Actions which establish continuing conspiracy. It is the actions taken in concert by the conspirators which alone can establish that the conspiracy was to continue beyond the completion of the substantive crime. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

The mere recognition that a desire to conceal participation in a crime is generally present does not constitute sufficient basis to conclude that each and every criminal conspiracy survives the completion of the crime at which it was directed. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

A conspiracy to commit theft does not continue, per se, until the proceeds are returned. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

Without evidence to support the contention that the defendants cooperated to effect the concealment of the crime, conspiracy ended upon the division of the proceeds of the robbery. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

Whether single set of facts constitutes one criminal episode. Pinelli v. District Court, 197 Colo. 555, 595 P.2d 225 (1979).

Case remanded to district court for a new preliminary hearing because district court had interrupted prior hearing before a proper determination of probable cause for conspiracy could be made. People v. Nygren, 696 P.2d 270 (Colo. 1985).

Conspiracy to commit second degree burglary is not a violent felony for purposes of the federal Armed Career Criminal Act. The ordinary Colorado case of conspiracy to commit second burglary does not present a risk of violent confrontation comparable to the risk inherent in a completed burglary. Accordingly, defendant's Colorado conviction is not a violent felony as that term is defined in 18 U.S.C. § 924(e)(2)(B), and it should not have been used as a basis for the imposition of the armed career criminal enhancement. United States v. Fell, 511 F.3d 1035 (10th Cir. 2007).

Applied in Powers v. People, 53 Colo. 43, 123 P. 642 (1912); West v. People, 60 Colo. 488, 156 P. 137 (1915); Bunch v. People, 87 Colo. 84, 284 P. 766 (1930); Vigil v. People, 150 Colo. 582, 375 P.2d 103 (1962); People v. Mojo, 173 Colo. 422, 480 P.2d 571 (1971); People v. Mangum, 189 Colo. 246, 539 P.2d 120 (1975); People v. Schuemann, 190 Colo. 474, 548 P.2d 911 (1976); People v. Talarico, 192 Colo. 445, 560 P.2d 90 (1977); People v. Girard, 196 Colo. 68, 582 P.2d 666 (1978); People in Interest of C.B., 196 Colo. 362, 585 P.2d 281 (1978); People ex rel. Brown v. District Court, 196 Colo. 359, 585 P.2d 593 (1978); Goodwin v. District Court, 196 Colo. 246, 586 P.2d 2 (1978); People in Interest of R.A.D., 196 Colo. 430, 586 P.2d 46 (1978); Goodwin v. District Court, 197 Colo. 6, 588 P.2d 874 (1979); Hughes v. District Court, 197 Colo. 396, 593 P.2d 702 (1979); People v. Smith, 198 Colo. 120, 597 P.2d 204 (1979); People ex rel. Losavio v. Gentry, 199 Colo. 153, 606 P.2d 57 (1980); People v. Myers, 43 Colo. App. 256, 609 P.2d 1104 (1979); People v. Malacara, 199 Colo. 243, 606 P.2d 1300 (1980); Graham v. People, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980); People v. Hearty, 644 P.2d 302 (Colo. 1982); People v. Franklin, 645 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); Law Offices of Bernard D. Morley, P.C. v. MacFarlane, 647 P.2d 1215 (Colo. 1982);

People v. Sanchez, 649 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1982); People in Interest of R.M.S., 651 P.2d 377 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hoffman, 655 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1982); People v. Luciano, 662 P.2d 480 (Colo. 1983); Holmes v. District Court, 668 P.2d 11 (Colo. 1983); People v. Rivera, 56 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2002).

II. ESSENTIAL ELEMENTS OF CRIME.

Crime of conspiracy is a crime of specific intent. Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982).

A different specific intent is required for accessory offenses than for the crime of conspiracy; one cannot commit both by performing the same act. People v. Broom, 797 P.2d 754 (Colo. App. 1990).

Charge of conspiracy has legal significance only with respect to some other crime which is the object of the conspiracy. People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983); People v. Finnessey, 747 P.2d 673 (Colo. 1987).

In proving that a "wheel and hub" conspiracy is a single conspiracy rather than multiple conspiracies, it is not necessary to prove that each conspirator knew every other conspirator so long as an overall plan with a common object is shown. People v. Serrano, 804 P.2d 253 (Colo. App. 1990).

The unlawful agreement is the gist of the crime of conspiracy. Short v. People, 27 Colo. 175, 60 P. 350 (1900); Roll v. People, 132 Colo. 1, 284 P.2d 665 (1955).

The gravamen of the crime of conspiracy is the illicit agreement to commit a felony. DeBose v. People, 175 Colo. 356, 488 P.2d 69 (1971).

Essence of the crime of conspiracy is the illegal agreement or combination. People v. Grass, 180 Colo. 346, 505 P.2d 1301 (1973).

The relationship between coconspirators is part and parcel of the first element of conspiracy, which involves an agreement, combination, or confederation between two or more persons. People v. Johnson, 189 Colo. 28, 536 P.2d 44 (1975).

There must be a combination of two or more persons; one person cannot conspire with himself. Archuleta v. People, 149 Colo. 206, 368 P.2d 422 (1962).

The essential elements of conspiracy are: (1) An agreement; (2) a common design between two or more persons; and (3) an unlawful purpose to be accomplished, which purpose amounts to a crime in Colorado. Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

To constitute the crime of conspiracy there must be a combination of two or more persons, the existence of an unlawful purpose to be accomplished, which in Colorado must amount to a crime, and a real agreement, combination, or confederation with a common design; mere passive cognizance of the crime to be committed or mere negative acquiescence is not sufficient. Salazar v. People, 166 Colo. 508, 445 P.2d 60 (1968); Dressel v. People, 174 Colo. 238, 483 P.2d 367 (1971); Davis v. People, 176 Colo. 378, 490 P.2d 948 (1971).

The three elements necessary to prove a conspiracy are: (1) A real agreement, combination, or confederation, (2) with a common design between two or more persons, (3) to accomplish an unlawful purpose amounting to a crime. Digiallonardo v. People, 175 Colo. 560, 488 P.2d 1109 (1971); People v. Albers, 196 Colo. 66, 582 P.2d 667 (1978); People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

The three elements necessary to prove a conspiracy are: (1) An agreement, combination, or confederation, (2) between two or more persons, (3) to accomplish an unlawful purpose which must amount to a crime. People v. Dowell, 182 Colo. 11, 510 P.2d 436 (1973).

The elements of a conspiracy are: (1) An agreement, (2) between two or more persons, (3) to commit a crime. Young v. People, 180 Colo. 62, 502 P.2d 81 (1972); People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

An agreement with common design between defendant and his coconspirator to engage in conduct which constitutes a crime or to aid in the planning or commission of the crime must be proven to establish a conspiracy. People v. Wilkinson, 38 Colo. App. 365, 561 P.2d 347 (1976).

Intent to promote or facilitate commission of a crime is a necessary element of the crime of conspiracy. People v. Wilkinson, 38 Colo. App. 365, 561 P.2d 347 (1976).

To establish conspiracy there need only be circumstantial evidence that indicates that the conspirators, by their acts, pursued the same objective, with a view toward attainment of the same objective. Viewing the evidence in the light most favorable to the prosecution, there was sufficient evidence to convict the defendant on the conspiracy counts. There was evidence that the defendant and his gang agreed to kill two people and that he and others tried to kill those people. People v. McGlotten, 166 P.3d 182 (Colo. App. 2007).

These elements must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt. To convict anyone of conspiracy, the state must prove beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a real agreement, combination, or federation with a common design between two or more persons to accomplish an unlawful purpose, which must amount to a crime. People v. Armijo, 176 Colo. 547, 491 P.2d 1384 (1971); Feltes v. People, 178 Colo. 409, 498 P.2d 1128 (1972); Bates v. People, 179 Colo. 81, 498 P.2d 1136 (1972).

Where the evidence showed that defendant approached the money bag on two occasions, looked into the cars surrounding the drop site, and pointed out a car containing the officers to the man who eventually attempted to retrieve the money, a jury could reasonably conclude that each material element of conspiracy to commit criminal extortion had been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

Concerted commission of crime is not necessarily conspiracy. If people act in concert in the commission of a crime, it does not follow that they must have had a conspiracy as that term is defined in the statutes. Jacobs v. People, 174 Colo. 403, 484 P.2d 107 (1971).

As to when crime requires two persons to participate. An agreement by two persons to commit a particular crime cannot be prosecuted as a conspiracy when the crime is of such a nature as to necessarily require the participation of two persons for its commission. Conspiracy charges may be filed when more or different people participate in the conspiracy than are necessary to commit the substantive offense. People v. Incerto, 180 Colo. 366, 505 P.2d 1309 (1973).

The "Wharton" rule states generally that one may not be convicted of conspiracy when the principal crime charged is one that must necessarily be committed by two or more persons agreeing among themselves, such as adultery or common-law bribery, and the agreement did not exist between parties other than those committing the underlying crime. People v. Ganatta, 638 P.2d 268 (Colo. 1981).

An exception to the "Wharton" rule permits conspiracy charges to be filed when more or different people participate in the conspiracy than are necessary to commit the substantive offense. People v. Ganatta, 638 P.2d 268 (Colo. 1981).

Success or failure of object of conspiracy does not determine guilt or innocence of conspirators. People v. Gill, 180 Colo. 382, 506 P.2d 134 (1973).

When conspirators agree to engage in conduct that would result in crime if facts were as conspirators believe them to be, and take step towards completion, danger is manifest and conspiracy is consummated. People v. Gill, 180 Colo. 382, 506 P.2d 134 (1973).

Coconspirator need not be specifically named. Where information named an alleged coconspirator, but evidence created the possibility that defendant had conspired with another person or persons and jury instruction did not name any specific person, there was no reasonable probability that defendant was convicted of an offense for which she was not charged. People v. Kurz, 847 P.2d 194 (Colo. App. 1992).

Although a criminal attempt is not readily understandable to a person of ordinary intelligence without some further explanation by the court, the trial court's failure to instruct on "attempt" was harmless error, as the jury specifically found defendant guilty of first-degree murder after deliberation. People v. Rodriguez, 914 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1996).

III. TRIAL AND PUNISHMENT.

A. In General.

Crime is not readily understandable. The crime of conspiracy to commit burglary is not the type of offense readily understandable from a mere reading of the information at a guilty plea hearing without further explanation of its elements. People v. Leonard, 673 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1983).

One conspiracy does not become several because it may involve the violation of several statutes. The principle that no one shall be twice put in jeopardy is guaranteed and prohibits double punishment for the same crime. People v. Bradley, 169 Colo. 262, 455 P.2d 199 (1969).

One conspiracy may be formed to commit a number of offenses. The conspiracy is one offense and a single offense, no matter how many repeated violations of the law may have been the object of the conspiracy. Bingham v. People, 157 Colo. 92, 401 P.2d 255 (1965).

Although there may have been several unlawful objects of the conspiracy, there is only one conspiracy. People v. Brown, 185 Colo. 272, 523 P.2d 986 (1974), overruled in Villafranca v. People, 194 Colo. 472, 573 P.2d 540 (1978).

Whether the object of a single agreement is to commit one or many crimes, it is in either case that agreement which constitutes the conspiracy which this section punishes. The one agreement cannot be taken to be several agreements and hence several conspiracies because it envisages the violation of several statutes rather than one. People v. Brown, 185 Colo. 272, 523 P.2d 986 (1974) overruled in Villafranca v. People, 573 P.2d 540 (1978).

Conspiracy constitutes a single offense even though the agreement upon which the charge is founded contemplates the performance of several criminal acts. People v. Forbes, 185 Colo. 410, 524 P.2d 1377 (1974); People v. Morgan, 189 Colo. 256, 539 P.2d 130 (1975).

A single conspiracy may have more than one crime as its object. People v. Leonard, 644 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1982).

One who is not a conspirator is not of necessity precluded from being an accessory. Jacobs v. People, 174 Colo. 403, 484 P.2d 107 (1971).

A husband and wife may conspire to commit a criminal offense. Dalton v. People, 68 Colo. 44, 189 P. 37 (1920).

Indictment must contain every element necessary to constitute crime. In an indictment for conspiracy to commit a crime under this section, the indictment must contain every element necessary to constitute that crime, as fully as if the indictment was for its perpetration.

Lipschitz v. People, 25 Colo. 261, 53 P. 1111 (1898).

A district attorney need not inform against other conspirators. Bradley v. People, 157 Colo. 530, 403 P.2d 876 (1965).

Dismissal before trial is same as not filing charges. Where there was no judgment of acquittal or dismissal against the conspirators other than defendant, but a dismissal before trial, it is as though no charge of conspiracy had ever been filed against any of the conspirators other than defendant. Bradley v. People, 157 Colo. 530, 403 P.2d 876 (1965).

A person may be convicted of conspiracy without others being tried for the same crime, as in the case where the count of conspiracy has been dismissed against the other codefendants. Salazar v. People, 166 Colo. 508, 445 P.2d 60 (1968).

A failure to charge coconspirators or the dismissal of conspiracy charges before trial against coconspirators does not require dismissal of conspiracy charges against the remaining coconspirators or render invalid a verdict of guilty against the remaining coconspirators. Hughes v. People, 175 Colo. 351, 487 P.2d 810 (1971).

Coconspirators may be alleged to be unknown in a conspiracy count. People v. Holter, 185 Colo. 47, 521 P.2d 765 (1974).

Variance in burglary charge fatal to conspiracy charge. Where defendant was not guilty of burglary as charged in the information because the locale was not a building, it necessarily follows that he was not guilty of conspiracy to commit burglary. Macias v. People, 161 Colo. 233, 421 P.2d 116 (1966).

Defendant's involvement as a conspirator and as a complicitor was tied to separate and distinct crimes, and the doctrine of merger did not apply. People v. Shannon, 189 Colo. 287, 539 P.2d 480 (1975).

Conspiracy punishable even if underlying crime not contained in criminal code. The general assembly intended that the conspiracy to commit a crime be punishable even if the underlying crime is proscribed by some section other than one contained in this title. People v. Cabus, 626 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1980).

Explicit mention of conspiracy in narcotics violation's provision carries out legislative intent. The explicit mention of conspiracy in § 12-22-322 (1)(h), setting out the penalties for a narcotics violation, was necessary to carry out the general assembly's intent to punish narcotics conspiracies as severely as the underlying offenses. People v. Cabus, 626 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1980).

Obscenity provisions cannot support injunction or criminal charge. The Colorado obscenity statute, § 18-7-101 et seq., cannot be relied upon to support either a civil injunction or a criminal charge. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Procuring agent defense requires that defendant act as exclusive agent for the buyer.

As such, the defendant becomes a principal, or a conspirator, in the purchase rather than in the sale of the narcotics and, therefore, he cannot be convicted of sale or conspiracy to sell. People v. Smith, 623 P.2d 404 (Colo. 1981).

B. Evidence.

In a prosecution for conspiracy, considerable latitude is allowed because of the inherent problems of proof involved in proving a crime, the veil around which is secrecy. People v. Broncucia, 189 Colo. 334, 540 P.2d 1101 (1975), cert. denied, 431 U.S. 937, 97 S. Ct. 2647, 53 L. Ed.2d 254, reh'g denied, 433 U.S. 915, 97 S. Ct. 2989, 53 L. Ed.2d 1101 (1977).

A conspiracy need not be proved directly, but may be inferred by the jury from the facts proved. Gomez v. People, 152 Colo. 309, 381 P.2d 816 (1963).

Conspiracy is generally covert and consequently must be established in most cases by circumstantial evidence. Medina v. People, 154 Colo. 4, 387 P.2d 733 (1963), cert. denied, 379 U.S. 848, 85 S. Ct. 88, 13 L. Ed.2d 52 (1964); People v. In Interest of A.G., 43 Colo. App. 514, 605 P.2d 487 (1979).

The evidence in proof of a conspiracy will generally be circumstantial. Abeyta v. People, 156 Colo. 440, 400 P.2d 431 (1965).

Direct testimony that the parties charged with conspiracy entered into a specific agreement to commit the crime is not necessary. It is sufficient if there is evidence in the record from which the jury can infer such an agreement or meeting of the minds. Griffin v. People, 157 Colo. 72, 400 P.2d 928 (1965); Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968); Salazar v. People, 16 Colo. 508, 445 P.2d 60 (1968).

The proof necessary to support a conviction for conspiracy is necessarily not direct or clear. The nature of the offense and the secrecy involved require that the elements of the crime be established by circumstantial evidence. Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

The evidence in proof of a conspiracy will generally, from the nature of the case, be circumstantial. Grass v. People, 172 Colo. 223, 471 P.2d 602 (1970).

The existence of the agreement or assent of minds necessary to constitute a conspiracy need not be proved directly, but may be inferred from the facts provided. People v. Johnson, 189 Colo. 28, 536 P.2d 44 (1975).

Although elements of a conspiracy must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt, they may be proven by circumstantial evidence. People v. LeFebvre, 190 Colo. 307, 546 P.2d 952 (1976).

Conspiracies by their very nature are often covert and surreptitious in nature, and for that reason, conspiracies may be established by circumstantial evidence alone. People v. Shannon, 189 Colo. 287, 539 P.2d 480 (1975).

Because of the nature of conspiracy, it often may only be proven by circumstantial evidence of involvement, which gives rise to the inference that an agreement to promote or facilitate the commission of the underlying crime was present. People v. Ganatta, 638 P.2d 268 (Colo. 1981).

Proof in a conspiracy case will necessarily be mostly circumstantial due to the covert and secretive nature of the offense. People v. LeFebre, 190 Colo. 307, 546 P.2d 952 (1976).

Since most conspiracies are covert, agreement frequently must be proven by circumstantial evidence. People v. Wilkinson, 38 Colo. App. 365, 561 P.2d 347 (1976).

In a prosecution for conspiracy, proof of an agreement may be shown by circumstantial evidence which indicates that the conspirators, by their acts, pursued the same objective, with a view toward obtaining a common goal. People v. Cabus, 626 P.2d 1159 (Colo. App. 1980).

The circumstances necessary to support a conviction for conspiracy are those which show that the alleged conspirators pursued by their acts the same objective, one performing one part, and the other another part, with a view to completing the acts and attaining the common objective. People v. Wilkinson, 38 Colo. App. 365, 561 P.2d 347 (1976); People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

Proof of common design. A common design is the essence of a conspiracy and must be proved, and such proof may be fashioned from evidence other than that the parties came together and actually agreed upon a method of operation for the accomplishment of an offense. If it be shown that the defendants pursued by their acts the same object, often by the same means, one performing one part and another part of the same so as to complete it, the question of the existence of a conspiracy is presented and may be inferred by the jury. Medina v. People, 154 Colo. 4, 387 P.2d 733 (1963), cert. denied, 379 US 848, 85 S. Ct. 88, 13 L. Ed.2d 52 (1964); Abeyta v. People, 156 Colo. 440, 400 P.2d 431 (1965); Bingham v. People, 157 Colo. 92, 401 P.2d 255 (1965); Grass v. People, 172 Colo. 223, 471 P.2d 602 (1970); Husar v. People, 178 Colo. 300, 496 P.2d 1035 (1972).

A criminal conspiracy need not be proved by direct evidence, and a common purpose or plan may be inferred from the development or the combination of circumstances. Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

Although the facts as shown do not reflect an expressed agreement, this is not required if the evidence portrays facts from which clear inferences can be drawn that a plan to rob the victim was the subject of at least a tacit or implied understanding or agreement between them.

Morehead v. People, 167 Colo. 287, 447 P.2d 215 (1968).

Prosecution showed an agreement, a common design between the defendants, and an unlawful purpose and the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction of conspiracy to commit theft. People v. Todd, 189 Colo. 117, 538 P.2d 433 (1975).

Evidence of the consummation of the conspiracy is admissible as a circumstance tending to prove, and as throwing light upon it. Short v. People, 27 Colo. 175, 60 P. 350 (1900); Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

Acts and declarations of coconspirator admissible upon proof of conspiracy. The declarations of a defendant are not admissible in evidence against his codefendants under a charge of conspiracy until there be prima facie proof of the existence of the alleged conspiracy. A concert of action between the defendants in the unlawful enterprise as charged being shown to the satisfaction of the trial court, the acts and declarations of each conspirator in furtherance of the unlawful object may be given in evidence against all the coconspirators. Rollins v. Bd. of Comm'rs, 15 Colo. 103, 25 P. 319 (1890); Smith v. People, 38 Colo. 509, 88 P. 453 (1906).

In a prosecution for conspiracy when the fact of a conspiracy is shown, the acts and declarations of the conspirators, or of any of them, in furtherance of the conspiracy, are admissible in evidence not only against the persons who originally conspired together, but also against any person who joined with them in the consummation or attempt at consummation of the conspiracy. Moore v. People, 31 Colo. 336, 73 P. 30 (1903).

Where in a prosecution for larceny a conspiracy between defendant and another party to steal had been shown by the admissions of defendant to the witness, it was not error to permit the witness to testify to admissions made by the coconspirator relative to the transaction, made when the defendant was not present, but previous to the consummation of the crime. Porter v. People, 31 Colo. 508, 74 P. 879 (1903).

The decisions of the court of appeals for the tenth circuit adhere to the conservative requirements of a subsisting conspiracy and statements in furtherance of it before admitting the declarations of a coconspirator. United States v. Mares, 260 F. Supp. 741 (D. Colo. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 383 F.2d 805 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 963, 89 S. Ct. 1314, 22 L. Ed.2d 564 (1969).

To render evidence of the acts or declarations of an alleged conspirator admissible against an alleged coconspirator, the existence of the conspiracy must be shown and the connection of the latter therewith established by independent evidence. People v. Braly, 187 Colo. 324, 532 P.2d 325 (1975).

The acts and utterances of one conspirator become the acts and utterances of all conspirators if such are done during the existence and the furtherance of the conspiracy. People v. Trujillo, 181 Colo. 350, 509 P.2d 794 (1973).

Evidence tended to show a continuing plan, scheme, design, and intent on the part of the coconspirators to deal in illicit drugs with an undercover agent over a period of time which extended from January, 1973, to the date of the defendant's arrest. Given these facts, the testimony of conversations and transactions between the principals was properly admitted, and a limiting instruction was not necessary after the testimony was offered and received in evidence. People v. Geller, 189 Colo. 338, 540 P.2d 334 (1975).

The declarations of an alleged conspirator are admissible against an alleged coconspirator only when the existence of the conspiracy is shown by independent evidence. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

To be admissible under the coconspirator exception to the hearsay rule, the coconspirator's out-of-court statement must be made during the course and in furtherance of the conspiracy. Villafranca v. People, 194 Colo. 472, 573 P.2d 540 (1978).

Likewise, exhibits admissible in trial of accomplices to common plan. Defendant and his codefendant jointly participated in the criminal venture which resulted in the homicide. They acted in concert in furtherance of a common illegal purpose, and each, as to the other, was an accomplice. Admitting in evidence as against defendant the articles found in the possession of his codefendant was not error where they were a part of the people's case against both defendants. Miller v. People, 141 Colo. 576, 349 P.2d 685, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 851, 5 L. Ed.2d 75, 81 S. Ct. 97 (1960).

The exhibits were admissible to establish the guilt of the principal and therefore relevant to the trial of defendant as an accessory and coconspirator. Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

Admission of postconspiracy statements was reversible error. When the conspiracy ends the theory that the participants are agents for each other has no further validity, and statements thereafter made are not admissible against the others. Such statements are then no different from any other hearsay. After the conspiracy has come to an end, as when defendants had been arrested and jailed, the admissions of one conspirator, by way of narrative of past facts, are not admissible in evidence against the others. United States v. Mares, 260 F. Supp. 741 (D. Colo. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 383 F.2d 805 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 963, 89 S. Ct. 1314, 22 L. Ed.2d 564 (1969).

Acts or declarations made by one of the conspirators outside of the presence of other conspirators after the consummation of the conspiracy are inadmissible against other conspirators jointly charged. People v. Peery, 180 Colo. 161, 503 P.2d 350 (1972).

Statements of coconspirators admissible where conspiracy was continuing. The acts and statements after the completion of the offense were admissible and in furtherance of a going conspiracy because: (1) There is ample evidence that the defendants were continuing to act in concert after the robbery and prior to their arrest, in that they attempted to conceal a joint buying spree, they acted on behalf of one another and maintained communications; (2) the utterances were made in close proximity in time and space; and, (3) the utterances were circumstantial and spontaneous rather than testimonial or narrative. United States v. Mares, 260 F. Supp. 741 (D. Colo. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 383 F.2d 805 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 963, 89 S. Ct. 1314, 22 L. Ed.2d 564 (1969).

Evidence must establish particular conspiracy charged. To sustain a verdict on an information charging one particular conspiracy, the evidence must establish the conspiracy charged; evidence that establishes another conspiracy or several other conspiracies will not sustain a verdict. Dressel v. People, 174 Colo. 238, 483 P.2d 367 (1971).

Evidence of conspiracy is not inadmissible because of failure of crime. Evidence of conspiracy to commit aggravated robbery is not inadmissible and is not meaningless and to be ignored merely because plans to commit robbery were frustrated and ended with commission of second-degree assault. People v. Shannon, 189 Colo. 287, 539 P.2d 480 (1975).

Properly instructed, a jury may convict upon the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

Admissibility of hearsay. Although the court may, in its discretion, allow hearsay to be introduced, the independent proof requirement must be met before the jury may consider hearsay statements of the alleged coconspirator against the defendant. If sufficient independent proof is not shown, then the jury must be instructed to disregard the testimony. Although the proof of the existence of the conspiracy may be circumstantial, it must be independent of the hearsay statements. People v. Braly, 187 Colo. 324, 532 P.2d 325 (1975).

If the court, in its discretion, admits the hearsay first, and independent evidence is not later introduced to support the initial determination by the court that the conspiracy continued, the jury must be instructed to disregard the testimony. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

Admissibility is question for judge. While the issue of whether the conspiracy had ended at the time of the declaration may properly be submitted to the jury, the issue of admissibility of the testimony initially presented a question of law to be decided by the trial judge. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

The alleged unreliability of a coconspirator's testimony involved a determination by the jury of the weight to be given this testimony. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L. Ed.2d 167 (1976).

The criminal record and admitted prior perjury of a coconspirator do not go to the admissibility of his testimony but rather to the weight to be given it, which was properly left for the jury's determination. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L. Ed.2d 167 (1976).

Coconspirator's mental state not relevant. Only the defendant's mental state is relevant in proving a charge of conspiracy. Accordingly, it is no defense that the person with whom the defendant acted is legally not responsible for the crime. People v. McCoy, 944 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1996).

Mere presence does not amount to sufficient independent evidence to support the existence of the conspiracy to sell narcotics. People v. Braly, 187 Colo. 324, 532 P.2d 325 (1975).

The same circumstantial evidence may provide the basis for a conviction of both the substantive crime and conspiracy. People v. O'Neill, 185 Colo. 202, 523 P.2d 123 (1974).

An acquittal of a substantive offense forecloses conviction on a conspiracy if, and only if, the only evidence relied on to prove the existence of the conspiracy was also the only evidence used to prove the substantive offense. People v. Gallegos, 181 Colo. 264, 509 P.2d 596 (1973).

Where alleged coconspirators are tried in separate proceedings, the rule of consistency is inapplicable, and an alleged coconspirator may be found guilty despite the acquittal of his alleged coconspirator. People v. Marquiz, 726 P.2d 1105 (Colo. 1986).

Evidence sufficient to uphold conviction. Evidence showed that informant set up a drug deal between two people, the two people showed up at the drug deal with the drugs, and there were scales in the car. Based on that evidence the jury could infer an agreement to sell drugs and the overt act of traveling to the location. People v. Robinson, 226 P.3d 1145 (Colo. App. 2009).

C. Instructions and Jury.

Instruction on elements of conspiracy held sufficient. Young v. People, 180 Colo. 62, 502 P.2d 81 (1972).

An instruction that to find defendant guilty of conspiracy the jury must find beyond a reasonable doubt that there was a common design or purpose to commit an unlawful act by concert of action, although not a model of preciseness, does set forth the essential elements of the offense charged in understandable language. The law does not require more. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 101, 465 P.2d 112 (1970).

Instruction on conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor properly refused. Goddard v. People, 172 Colo. 498, 474 P.2d 210 (1970).

Erroneous instruction on intent requires reversal. A verdict of guilty cannot stand where the element of specific intent is material as to one count of the information or indictment which is related to and joined with a count on conspiracy, when the court's instructions on intent covering either count are erroneous. Gonzales v. People, 166 Colo. 557, 445 P.2d 74 (1968).

Finding of jury conclusive. Where the question of the existence of a conspiracy is clearly presented by the evidence and is properly submitted to the jury, the finding of the jury is conclusive. Davis v. People, 176 Colo. 378, 490 P.2d 948 (1971).

Failure to instruct the jury in meaning of "overt act" harmless error since the plain meaning of "overt act" is not so abstruse as to be incomprehensible to the average juror. People v. Schruder, 735 P.2d 905 (Colo. App. 1986).

D. Verdict and Sentence.

Conspiracy and object crime are separately punishable. Since the substantive offense and the conspiracy are separate and distinct crimes, the doctrine of merger does not apply and the crimes are separately punishable. Roll v. People, 132 Colo. 1, 284 P.2d 665 (1955); DeBose v. People, 175 Colo. 356, 488 P.2d 69 (1971).

Conspiracy is a separate and distinct offense from that which is the object of the conspiracy, and as such may be punishable by a consecutive sentence. People v. Morgan, 189 Colo. 256, 539 P.2d 130 (1975); People v. Madonna, 651 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1982).

Accused may be convicted of both crimes. Accused who participates in a crime as a principal may be convicted of both the substantive offense and conspiracy to commit such substantive offense. People v. Rivera, 178 Colo. 373, 497 P.2d 990 (1972).

Where conspiracy verdict failed to specify the crime which was the subject of the conspiracy, it is a nullity. People v. Pleasant, 182 Colo. 144, 511 P.2d 488 (1973).

An acquittal of all conspirators but one renders verdict of guilty invalid as to him since he cannot conspire with himself. Bradley v. People, 157 Colo. 530, 403 P.2d 876 (1965).

Where defendant and others were jointly charged with conspiracy to commit larceny from the person, and others were found not guilty of conspiring with defendant or with each other, a conviction of defendant of such offense was without sanction in law or fact. Archuleta v. People, 149 Colo. 206, 368 P.2d 422 (1962).

Where alleged coconspirators are tried in separate proceedings, the rule of consistency is inapplicable, and an alleged coconspirator may be found guilty despite the acquittal of his alleged coconspirator. People v. Marquiz, 726 P.2d 1105 (Colo. 1986).

Summary judgment inappropriate. Even where it is extremely doubtful that a genuine issue of fact exists as to whether all defendants joined in a conspiracy to libel, even assuming that libel can be proven, summary judgment is not appropriate. Abrahamsen v. Mountain States Tel. & Tel. Co., 177 Colo. 422, 494 P.2d 1287 (1972).

Conviction on a charge of conspiracy to commit assault on a rape was not inconsistent with an acquittal on a substantive charge of assault with intent to commit rape. People v. Walker, 182 Colo. 317, 512 P.2d 1243 (1973).

Conviction of conspiracy to commit a robbery is totally inconsistent with an acquittal of attempt to commit aggravated robbery. People v. Berry, 191 Colo. 125, 550 P.2d 332 (1976).

An erroneous conspiracy conviction must be reversed regardless of the fact that concurrent sentences were imposed for the conspiracy and for the underlying substantive crime. Villafranca v. People, 194 Colo. 472, 573 P.2d 540 (1978).

Under subsection (4.5), conspiracy to commit a per se crime of violence is itself a crime of violence to which the sentence enhancing provisions of § 16-11-309 apply. Terry v. People, 977 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1999).

IV. ILLUSTRATIVE CASES.

Agreement not established. When there is no evidence to suggest an agreement to commit a crime other than that the defendants wanted to get some money, the evidence does not rise to the dignity of agreeing to commit a crime. People v. Armijo, 176 Colo. 547, 491 P.2d 1384 (1971).

Proof of conspiracy to bribe. Where jury does not find defendant guilty of bribery but does find that defendant had agreed with other person to bribe a judge, defendant's conviction of conspiracy to commit bribery of a judge is proper. People v. Incerto, 180 Colo. 366, 505 P.2d 1309 (1973).

Conspiracy to commit perjury. Although defendant contends that there was a fatal variance between the charge contained in the indictment and the proof, and that although one conspiracy, involving all the alleged perjurers, was charged, the prosecution proved at least four conspiracies, only one of which involved the defendant where there was a single overall plan with a common object, and the success or failure of the conspiracy depended upon the successful linkage of each member's testimony, and the perjury of one person was not and could not have been an end in itself, the testimony was sufficient to establish circumstantially a single conspiracy to commit perjury involving all the defendants. People v. Quintana, 189 Colo. 330, 540 P.2d 1097 (1975).

Conspiracy to commit burglary. People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

Conspiracy to commit third degree arson. The main object of a conspiracy to commit third degree arson is not the burning of a building, but the collection of insurance proceeds. People v. Peltz, 701 P.2d 98 (Colo. App. 1984).

Conviction did not deny due process. The evidence of conspiracy between the two defendants to possess narcotics is very weak but not totally nonexistent. Appellants were each in possession of the same prohibited drug and each in possession of crude but common instruments associated with the use and possession of narcotics. Federal due process is denied when conviction results without any evidence of guilt, but not otherwise. Casias v. Patterson, 398 F.2d 486 (10th Cir. 1968), cert. denied, 393 U.S. 1108, 89 S. Ct. 918, 21 L. Ed.2d 804 (1969).

Evidence sufficient for submission to jury. People v. Gilkey, 181 Colo. 103, 507 P.2d 855 (1973).

The evidence shown that the four who took part in the robbery entered the store simultaneously, that each performed a given task toward the accomplishment of the robbery, and that they all fled together was sufficient to submit the charge of conspiracy to the jury. Abeyta v. People, 156 Colo. 440, 400 P.2d 431 (1965).

Evidence did not present jury question. There was some evidence of conspiracy to buy or receive stolen property, but that was not the charge. The evidence of conspiracy to commit the larceny was insufficient as a matter of law to submit that issue to the jury, particularly since the district attorney absolved those to whom the evidence pointed as being coconspirators. Attwood v. People, 165 Colo. 345, 439 P.2d 40 (1968).

Where the evidence was not sufficient to establish, either directly or by legitimate inference, a real agreement, combination, or confederation between the defendant and his alleged conspirator with the common purpose of embezzling the grain of a third person stored in an elevator, as charged, the question was not one for the jury's determination, and the defendant's motion for judgment of acquittal should have been sustained. Dressel v. People, 174 Colo. 238, 483 P.2d 367 (1971).

Evidence sufficient to establish conspiracy. Roll v. People, 132 Colo. 1, 284 P.2d 665 (1955); Hughes v. People, 175 Colo. 351, 487 P.2d 810 (1971); Husar v. People, 178 Colo. 300, 496 P.2d 1035 (1972); People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972); People v. Incerto, 180 Colo. 366, 505 P.2d 1309 (1973); People v. Vandiver, 191 Colo. 263, 552 P.2d 6 (1976).

Even though the defendants may have offered their help to the victim separately, as claimed, they then cooperated with each other in carrying the drunk victim out of the club and they both participated in assaulting him. This constitutes sufficient and independent evidence of conspiracy to rob. Morehead v. People, 167 Colo. 287, 447 P.2d 215 (1968).

Where defendant's fingerprints were found on the inside of the entry door and on an envelope normally kept in a desk drawer in the victim's bedroom, and where defendants theorize that the prints could have been made at a time other than during the commission of the crime, but did not testify nor present other testimony to buttress the theory, the evidence was sufficient for conviction of robbery. People v. Hannaman, 181 Colo. 82, 507 P.2d 466 (1973).

Evidence held insufficient to establish conspiracy. Ziatz v. People, 171 Colo. 58, 465 P.2d 406 (1970).

Evidence that defendant has physical makeup fitting witnesses' general physical description of one of the robbers, without witness' statement to police linking defendant to robbery or testimony being offered at trial, is insufficient to support defendant's conviction for robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery. Velarde v. People, 179 Colo. 207, 500 P.2d 125 (1972).

Subsection (5) did not lower the classification of the offense of the defendant. The defendant pled guilty to a conspiracy to commit the class 4 felony of distribution and sale of marijuana and thus was convicted of a class 5 felony. People v. Hartkemeyer, 843 P.2d 92 (Colo. App. 1992).

18-2-202. Joinder and venue in conspiracy prosecutions. (1) Subject to the provisions of subsection (2) of this section, two or more persons charged with criminal conspiracy may be prosecuted jointly if:

- (a) They are charged with conspiring with one another; or
- (b) They are charged with being involved in conspiracies that are so related as to constitute different aspects of a scheme of organized criminal conduct. In such case it is immaterial that the persons charged are not parties to the same conspiracy.
- (2) In any joint prosecution under subsection (1) of this section:
 - (a) No defendant shall be charged with a conspiracy in any judicial district other than one in which he entered into the conspiracy or in which an overt act pursuant to such conspiracy was done by him or by a person with whom he conspired; and
 - (b) Neither the liability of any defendant nor the admissibility against him of evidence of acts or declarations of another shall be enlarged by this joinder; and
 - (c) The court shall order a severance or take a special verdict as to any defendant who so requests, if it deems it necessary or appropriate to promote the fair determination of his guilt or innocence.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 415, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-202.

18-2-203. Renunciation of criminal purpose. It is an affirmative defense to a charge of conspiracy that the offender, after conspiring to commit a crime, thwarted the success of the conspiracy, under circumstances manifesting a complete and voluntary renunciation of his criminal intent.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 416, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-203.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

18-2-204. Duration of conspiracy. (1) Conspiracy is a continuing course of conduct which terminates when the crime or crimes which are its object are committed or the agreement that they be committed is abandoned by the defendant and by those with whom he conspired.

(2) Abandonment is presumed if neither the defendant nor anyone with whom he conspired does any overt act in pursuance of the conspiracy during the applicable period of limitation.

(3) If an individual abandons the agreement, the conspiracy is terminated as to him only if and when he gives timely notice to those with whom he conspired of his abandonment and the notice is evidenced by circumstances corroborating the giving of the same, or he informs the law enforcement authorities, having jurisdiction, of the existence of the conspiracy and of his participation therein.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 416, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-204.

ANNOTATION

Completion of the object of the conspiracy completes the conspiracy. United States v. Mares, 260 F. Supp. 741 (D. Colo. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 383 F.2d 805 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 963, 89 S. Ct. 1314, 22 L. Ed.2d 564 (1969).

The ending of a conspiracy depends upon the particular facts and purposes of such conspiracy. The conspiracy does not come to an abrupt and automatic end simultaneously with the completion of the offense nor even the arrest of a conspirator. United States v. Mares, 260 F. Supp. 741 (D. Colo. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 383 F.2d 805 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 963, 89 S. Ct. 1314, 22 L. Ed.2d 564 (1969).

A conspiracy to commit a crime of stealth for material gain usually has a minimum routine development from plan, to commission, to division of fruits, if any, among the conspirators. United States v. Mares, 260 F. Supp. 741 (D. Colo. 1966), rev'd on other grounds, 383 F.2d 805 (10th Cir. 1967), cert. denied, 394 U.S. 963, 89 S. Ct. 1314, 22 L. Ed.2d 564 (1969).

District court has proper jurisdiction over conspiracy charge that began when defendant was a juvenile but continued after defendant became an adult. People v. McGlotten, 166 P.3d 182 (Colo. App. 2007).

Applied in Jeffrey v. District Court, 626 P.2d 631 (Colo. 1981); Corr v. District Court, 661 P.2d 668 (Colo. 1983).

18-2-205. Incapacity, irresponsibility, or immunity of party to conspiracy. (1) It is immaterial to the liability of a person who conspires with another to commit a crime that:

(a) He or the person with whom he conspires does not occupy a particular position or have a particular characteristic which is an element of the crime, if he believes that one of them does; or

(b) The person with whom he conspires is irresponsible or has an immunity to prosecution or conviction for the commission of the crime.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 416, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-205.

18-2-206. Penalties for criminal conspiracy - when convictions barred. (1) Conspiracy to commit a class 1 felony is a class 2 felony; conspiracy to commit a class 2 felony is a class 3 felony; conspiracy to commit a class 3 felony is a class 4 felony; conspiracy to commit a class 4 felony is a class 5 felony; conspiracy to commit a class 5 or 6 felony is a class 6 felony.

(2) A person may not be convicted of conspiracy to commit an offense if he is acquitted of the offense which is the object of the conspiracy where the sole evidence of conspiracy is the evidence establishing the commission of the offense which is the object of the conspiracy.

(3) If the particular conduct charged to constitute a criminal conspiracy is so inherently unlikely to result or culminate in the commission of a crime that neither that conduct nor the offender presents a public danger warranting the grading of the offense under this section, the court may enter judgment and impose sentence for a crime of a lesser class or, in extreme cases, may dismiss the prosecution.

(4) Conspiracy to commit a class 1 misdemeanor is a class 2 misdemeanor.

(5) Conspiracy to commit a misdemeanor other than a class 1 misdemeanor is a class 3 misdemeanor.

(6) Conspiracy to commit a petty offense is a crime of the same class as the offense itself.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 416, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-206. L. 75: (1) amended and (4) to (6) added, p. 617, § 4, effective July 21. L. 89, 1st Ex. Sess.: (1) amended, p. 22, § 13, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-2-206 is similar to former § 40-7-35, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Acquittal of crime and conviction of conspiracy inconsistent where evidence same as to both. Where the very same evidence which the jury apparently did not believe was sufficient to prove that the defendant participated in the robbery was the only evidence which could prove him guilty of conspiracy, the conspiracy verdict of guilty cannot stand. Robles v. People, 160 Colo. 297, 417 P.2d 232 (1966); People v. Way, 165 Colo. 161, 437 P.2d 535 (1968); Attwood v. People, 165 Colo. 345, 439 P.2d 40 (1968); Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971); People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

The jury may not convict a defendant of conspiracy to commit a crime when under the same evidence they acquitted him of the substantive crime when the only evidence of the conspiracy was the evidence of the robbery itself. Pooley v. People, 164 Colo. 484, 436 P.2d 118 (1968).

The only evidence of conspiracy was that two people were acting in concert for a common cause. Since the jury found that defendant was not guilty of robbery and since the only evidence of conspiracy was that he participated in the robbery, the verdict on the charge of conspiracy cannot stand. Carter v. People, 169 Colo. 531, 458 P.2d 236 (1969).

If only one fund of evidence is utilized to prove both the substantive offense and conspiracy charge, and a jury disbelieves this evidence or has a reasonable doubt that it is sufficient to prove the substantive offense, it logically follows that it is likewise unbelievable or insufficient to support a verdict of guilty to the conspiracy charge. Armijo v. People, 170 Colo. 411, 462 P.2d 500 (1969).

Where one of the defendants asserted that because the jury found him not guilty of possession of a narcotic drug, the guilty verdict of conspiracy to possess was inconsistent and his conviction should be reversed, it was held that since there was no evidence of conspiracy apart from that introduced in support of the substantive crime of possession as to the defendant, and the jury found the evidence was insufficient to establish the defendant's guilt as to the possession charge, it followed that the conviction on the conspiracy count must fall as well. Fagin v. People, 174 Colo. 540, 484 P.2d 1216 (1971).

The jury cannot be permitted to believe testimony for the purposes of the conspiracy and disbelieve the same testimony for purposes of the substantive crime. Hughes v. People, 175 Colo. 351, 487 P.2d 810 (1971).

An acquittal of a substantive offense forecloses conviction on a conspiracy charge if, and only if, the only evidence relied upon to prove the existence of the conspiracy was also the only evidence used to prove the substantive offense. People v. Incerto, 180 Colo. 366, 505 P.2d 1309 (1973); People v. Samora, 188 Colo. 74, 532 P.2d 946 (1975).

Conviction of conspiracy to commit a robbery is totally inconsistent with an acquittal of attempt to commit aggravated robbery. People v. Berry, 191 Colo. 125, 550 P.2d 332 (1976).

Jury may be so instructed. If counsel for the people insist upon submitting to the jury a count of conspiracy as well as a count of robbery where the evidence which would convict upon either charge is exactly the same, the jury should be instructed that it cannot convict on one count and acquit on the other. People v. Way, 165 Colo. 161, 437 P.2d 535 (1968).

Different rule applies where evidence different. The basic reason for the rule in Robles v. People (160 Colo. 297, 417 P.2d 232 (1966)) disappears when the evidence can be segmented or is different as to both offenses. Armijo v. People, 170 Colo. 411, 462 P.2d 500 (1969).

Where there is different evidence relating to the conspiracy and the substantive crime, the jury may return different verdicts as to the two charges. Hughes v. People, 175 Colo. 351, 487 P.2d 810 (1971).

When a defendant is acquitted of a substantive offense, he can still be convicted of conspiracy to commit the offense if in addition to the evidence offered to prove the substantive offense, there exists evidence to prove the conspiracy. Bates v. People, 179 Colo. 81, 498 P.2d 1136 (1972).

Where there is different evidence relating to the conspiracy, separate and independent from that of participation in the substantive offense, the jury may properly return a verdict of guilty to the conspiracy charge and not guilty to the substantive charge. People v. Coca, 185 Colo. 10, 521 P.2d 781 (1974).

Jury verdicts acquitting a defendant of burglary and finding guilt as to a conspiracy to commit burglary are not inconsistent so long as there is independent evidence in the record implicating the defendant in a conspiracy separate and apart from the evidence offered to prove the substantive offense. People v. In Interest of A.G., 43 Colo. App. 514, 605 P.2d 487 (1979).

Where the defendant was seen checking the drop site for money and the police testified he was seen talking to both the man identified as placing the extortion call and the man that attempted to pick of the money, there was sufficient independent proof of conspiracy to sustain the conspiracy, despite the acquittal on the extortion charge. People v. Williams, 707 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

Where sufficient independent evidence exists, including testimony of accomplice, defendant may be convicted of conspiracy even if acquitted on the substantive charge of arson. People v. Harrison, 746 P.2d 66 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Hood, 878 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant may be convicted of conspiracy to commit attempted murder even though acquitted of attempted murder charge. Evidence of attempted murder is not sole evidence for conspiracy charge, conspiracy charge was supported by additional evidence of an agreement to kill a person. People v. McGlotten, 166 P.3d 182 (Colo. App. 2007).

Subsection (2) codifies the rule of Robles v. People. People v. Frye, 898 P.2d 559 (Colo. 1995).

Robles rule should be strictly limited to the terms of subsection (2). People v. Frye, 898 P.2d 559 (Colo. 1995).

Subsection (2) not applicable and defendant not acquitted where jury was deadlocked on the first degree arson charge and the prosecution dismissed such charge and the court accepted the unanimous verdict on the conspiracy charge. People v. Espinoza, 989 P.2d 178 (Colo. App. 1999).

Vague evidence insufficient to support conspiracy after acquittal of substantive crime. Where the so-called independent evidence from which it might be inferred that the defendant was a participant in a conspiracy was vague and inconclusive, such evidence is totally insufficient to support the defendant's conviction on the conspiracy charge after his acquittal on the substantive charge. People v. Samora, 188 Colo. 74, 532 P.2d 946 (1975).

Jury may not believe evidence for conspiracy and disbelieve for substantive crime. A jury will not be permitted to believe the evidence for the purpose of a conspiracy count and disbelieve the evidence for the purpose of the substantive crime count. People v. Coca, 185 Colo. 10, 521 P.2d 781 (1974).

Court erred in prohibiting defendant, on hearsay grounds, from eliciting evidence of what he and an alleged coconspirator said to one another. Nonhearsay verbal act evidence is admissible on the issue of whether a conspiratorial agreement existed because the statement is admitted merely to show that it was actually made, not to prove the truth of what was asserted in it. People v. Scarce, 87 P.3d 228 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in People v. Albers, 196 Colo. 66, 582 P.2d 667 (1978); People v. Hoffman, 655 P.2d 393 (Colo. 1982); Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982).

PART 3

CRIMINAL SOLICITATION

18-2-301. Criminal solicitation. (1) Except as to bona fide acts of persons authorized by law to investigate and detect the commission of offenses by others, a person is guilty of criminal solicitation if he or she commands, induces, entreats, or otherwise attempts to persuade another person, or offers his or her services or another's services to a third person, to commit a felony, whether as principal or accomplice, with intent to promote or facilitate the commission of that crime, and under circumstances strongly corroborative of that intent.

(2) It is a defense to a prosecution under this section that, if the criminal object were achieved, the defendant would be the sole victim of the offense or the offense is so defined that his conduct would be inevitably incident to its commission or he otherwise would not be guilty under the statute defining the offense or under section 18-1-603 dealing with complicity.

(3) It is no defense to a prosecution under this section that the person solicited could not be guilty of the offense because of lack of responsibility or culpability, or other incapacity.

(4) It is an affirmative defense to a prosecution under this section that the defendant, after soliciting another person to commit a felony, persuaded him not to do so or otherwise prevented the commission of the felony, under circumstances manifesting a complete and voluntary renunciation of the defendant's criminal intent.

(5) Criminal solicitation is subject to the penalties provided for criminal attempt in section 18-2-101.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 417, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-301. L. 98: (1) amended, p. 1443, § 29, effective July 1.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Comment: Constitutional Law — Symbolic Speech — Colorado Flag Desecration Statute", see 48 Den. L. J. 451 (1971). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

This section is constitutional. People v. Latsis, 195 Colo. 411, 578 P.2d 1055 (1978).

Section is constitutional even though it fails to expressly require a close temporal proximity between the "strongly corroborative" circumstances and this particular act of solicitation. People v. Aalbu, 696 P.2d 796 (Colo. 1985).

Section distinguished from complicity statute. Although encouragement of a criminal offense is prohibited under both this section and § 18-1-603, this statute concerns incomplete acts, while the complicity statute covers consummated criminal offenses. Because the provisions proscribe distinguishable behavior, there is no violation of equal protection. Alonzi v. People, 198 Colo. 160, 597 P.2d 560 (1979).

Section distinguished from attempt statute. Degree of "preparation" involved, while relevant to crime of attempt, is not relevant to crime of solicitation. People v. Washington, 865 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1994).

Identity or motive of the person solicited is irrelevant. Where defendant was charged with soliciting an undercover police officer for the purchase of drugs, fact that officer was already "passing himself off as a drug dealer" did not affect question of whether probable cause existed for defendant's arrest. People v. Washington, 865 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1994).

Conspiracy distinguished. A conspiracy may be committed without the inducement required for the crime of solicitation, and solicitation may be committed without the parties ever reaching an agreement or without any overt act taken to complete the object of the solicitation. Therefore, neither crime is included in the other and the two crimes do not merge. People v. Hood, 878 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1994).

The statutory elements of the general inchoate offense of solicitation do not apply to the separate substantive offense of soliciting for child prostitution. The offense of soliciting for child prostitution is an offense in and of itself with its own designated penalty level. People v. Jacobs, 91 P.3d 438 (Colo. App. 2003).

Solicitation for deviate sexual intercourse is no longer prohibited. People v. Gibson, 184 Colo. 444, 521 P.2d 774 (1974).

PART 4

RENUNCIATION AND ABANDONMENT

18-2-401. Nonavailability of defenses. (1) Renunciation and abandonment are not voluntary and complete so as to be a defense to prosecution under this article if they are motivated in whole or in part by:

(a) A belief that a circumstance exists which increases the probability of detection or apprehension of the defendant or another or which makes more difficult the consummation of the crime; or

(b) A decision to postpone the crime until another time or to substitute another victim or another but similar objective.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 417, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-2-401.

ANNOTATION

Where defense of abandonment available in attempt cases. Even though the crime of attempt is complete once the actor intentionally takes a substantial step towards the commission of the crime, the affirmative defense of abandonment is present if he thereafter voluntarily renounces his criminal intent. People v. Johnson, 41 Colo. App. 220, 585 P.2d 306 (1978).

A defendant cannot abandon and renounce the crimes charged after they are completed. People v. Mason, 642 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1982); People v. Jacobs, 91 P.3d 438 (Colo. App. 2003).

Abandonment is no defense to completed crime of criminal mischief. People v. Johnson, 41 Colo. App. 220, 585 P.2d 306 (1978).

To present an affirmative defense for abandonment to the jury, defendant must present “some credible evidence” on the issue of the claimed defense. It is not necessarily the case, however, that the defense of abandonment is not available once defendant has injured the victim. O’Shaughnessy v. People, 2012 CO 9, 269 P.3d 1233.

ARTICLE 3

Offenses Against the Person

Editor’s note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment, see the editor’s note following the title heading.

PART 1		18-3-403.	Sexual assault in the second degree. (Repealed)
HOMICIDE AND RELATED OFFENSES		18-3-404.	Unlawful sexual contact.
18-3-101.	Definition of terms.	18-3-405.	Sexual assault on a child.
18-3-102.	Murder in the first degree.	18-3-405.3.	Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust.
18-3-103.	Murder in the second degree.	18-3-405.4.	Internet sexual exploitation of a child.
18-3-104.	Manslaughter.	18-3-405.5.	Sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist.
18-3-105.	Criminally negligent homicide.	18-3-405.6.	Invasion of privacy for sexual gratification.
18-3-106.	Vehicular homicide.	18-3-406.	Criminality of conduct. (Repealed)
18-3-107.	First degree murder of a peace officer or firefighter - legislative declaration.	18-3-407.	Victim’s and witness’s prior history - evidentiary hearing - victim’s identity - protective order.
PART 2		18-3-407.5.	Victim evidence - forensic evidence - electronic lie detector exam without victim’s consent prohibited.
ASSAULTS		18-3-408.	Jury instruction prohibited.
18-3-201.	Definitions.	18-3-408.5.	Jury instruction on consent - when required.
18-3-202.	Assault in the first degree.	18-3-409.	Marital defense.
18-3-203.	Assault in the second degree.	18-3-410.	Medical exception.
18-3-204.	Assault in the third degree.	18-3-411.	Sex offenses against children - “unlawful sexual offense” defined - limitation for commencing proceedings - evidence - statutory privilege.
18-3-205.	Vehicular assault.	18-3-412.	Habitual sex offenders against children - indictment or information - verdict of the jury.
18-3-206.	Menacing.	18-3-412.5.	Failure to register as a sex offender.
18-3-207.	Criminal extortion - aggravated extortion.	18-3-412.6.	Failure to verify location as a sex offender.
18-3-208.	Reckless endangerment.	18-3-413.	Video tape depositions - children - victims of sexual offenses.
18-3-209.	Assault on the elderly or persons with disabilities - legislative declaration. (Repealed)	18-3-413.5.	Use of closed circuit television - child victims of sexual offenses. (Repealed)
PART 3		18-3-414.	Payment of treatment costs for the victim or victims of a sexual offense against a child.
KIDNAPPING
18-3-301.	First degree kidnapping.
18-3-302.	Second degree kidnapping.
18-3-303.	False imprisonment.
18-3-304.	Violation of custody order or order relating to parental responsibilities.
18-3-305.	Enticement of a child.
18-3-306.	Internet luring of a child.
PART 4
UNLAWFUL SEXUAL BEHAVIOR
18-3-401.	Definitions.
18-3-402.	Sexual assault.

18-3-414.5.	Sexually violent predators - assessment - annual report.	PART 5
18-3-415.	Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons charged with any sexual offense.	HUMAN TRAFFICKING AND SLAVERY
		18-3-501. Trafficking in adults.
		18-3-502. Trafficking in children.
18-3-415.5.	Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons charged with certain sexual offenses - mandatory sentencing.	18-3-503. Coercion of involuntary servitude.
		PART 6
18-3-416.	Reports of convictions to department of education.	STALKING
18-3-417.	Reports of sexual assault by applicants, registrants, or licensed professionals.	18-3-601. Legislative declaration.
		18-3-602. Stalking - penalty - definitions - Vonnie's law.

PART 1

HOMICIDE AND RELATED OFFENSES

18-3-101. Definition of terms. As used in this part 1, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) "Homicide" means the killing of a person by another.
- (2) "Person", when referring to the victim of a homicide, means a human being who had been born and was alive at the time of the homicidal act.
- (2.5) One in a "position of trust" includes, but is not limited to, any person who is a parent or acting in the place of a parent and charged with any of a parent's rights, duties, or responsibilities concerning a child, including a guardian or someone otherwise responsible for the general supervision of a child's welfare, or a person who is charged with any duty or responsibility for the health, education, welfare, or supervision of a child, including foster care, child care, family care, or institutional care, either independently or through another, no matter how brief, at the time of an unlawful act.
- (3) The term "after deliberation" means not only intentionally but also that the decision to commit the act has been made after the exercise of reflection and judgment concerning the act. An act committed after deliberation is never one which has been committed in a hasty or impulsive manner.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 417, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-101. L. 74: (1)(c) R&RE, p. 251, § 1, effective January 1, 1975. L. 95: (2.5) added, p. 1221, § 1, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the statutory provision which declares that the withholding or withdrawal of life-sustaining procedures does not constitute suicide or homicide, see § 15-18-111; for the effect of homicide on probate matters, see § 15-11-803.

ANNOTATION

Meaningful distinction between first and second degree murder intended. The general assembly intended that there be a meaningful distinction between first and second degree murder. People v. Mullins, 188 Colo. 23, 532 P.2d 733 (1975).

Killing may be perpetrated by any means by which death may be occasioned. The unlawful killing may be perpetrated by poisoning, sticking, starving, drowning, stabbing, shooting, or by any other of the various forms or means by which human nature may be overcome, and death thereby occasioned. May v. People, 8 Colo. 210, 6 P. 816 (1885).

"Person" does not include a fetus, even if the child is born following the injury which ultimately results in its death. "Born and was alive at the time of the homicidal act" is clear and unambiguous in its temporal limitation. People v. Lage, 232 P.3d 138 (Colo. App. 2009).

Court incorrectly applied in pari materia doctrine by concluding temporal limitation within this section's definition of "person" could be inferred into other statutory definitions of “person” outside of this part 1. Statutory language here places an explicit limitation on the application of the definitions contained in this section. People v. Lage, 232 P.3d 138 (Colo. App. 2009).

Use of a deadly weapon is not in itself sufficient to show deliberation. People v. Hamrick, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1979), aff’d, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981).

Instruction given in prosecution for murder in the first degree erroneously defined “after deliberation” as an interval sufficient for one thought to follow another, but although of constitutional dimension, such error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt where the erroneous language in the challenged instruction did not so distort the definition in another distinction that the prosecution was relieved of its burden of proving the mental culpability requirement beyond a reasonable doubt and where evidence on the issue of deliberation was overwhelming. Key v. People, 715 P.2d 319 (Colo. 1986); People v. Tyler, 728 P.2d 314 (Colo. 1986).

Evidence supports the element of deliberation. Evidence that defendant shot at the victim three times, twice from behind, is sufficient to support the element of deliberation. People v. Cisneros, 720 P.2d 982 (Colo. App.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 887, 107 S. Ct. 282, 93 L.Ed.2d 257 (1986).

The term “after deliberation” means “not only intentionally but also that the decision to commit the act has been made after the exercise of reflection and judgment concerning the act.” People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

“After deliberation” is part of the specific intent element of first degree murder. People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000) (disapproving People v. Orona, 907 P.2d 659 (Colo. App. 1995)).

Prosecution’s closing arguments that exercising judgment and reflection to decide whether to drive through a yellow light could occur as “fast” as “[a] second” distorted a key element of attempted first degree murder. People v. McBride, 228 P.3d 216 (Colo. App. 2009).

Applied in Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981); People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Fields, 697 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1984).

18-3-102. Murder in the first degree. (1) A person commits the crime of murder in the first degree if:

(a) After deliberation and with the intent to cause the death of a person other than himself, he causes the death of that person or of another person; or

(b) Acting either alone or with one or more persons, he or she commits or attempts to commit arson, robbery, burglary, kidnapping, sexual assault as prohibited by section 18-3-402, sexual assault in the first or second degree as prohibited by section 18-3-402 or 18-3-403 as those sections existed prior to July 1, 2000, or a class 3 felony for sexual assault on a child as provided in section 18-3-405 (2), or the crime of escape as provided in section 18-8-208, and, in the course of or in furtherance of the crime that he or she is committing or attempting to commit, or of immediate flight therefrom, the death of a person, other than one of the participants, is caused by anyone; or

(c) By perjury or subornation of perjury he procures the conviction and execution of any innocent person; or

(d) Under circumstances evidencing an attitude of universal malice manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life generally, he knowingly engages in conduct which creates a grave risk of death to a person, or persons, other than himself, and thereby causes the death of another; or

(e) He or she commits unlawful distribution, dispensation, or sale of a controlled substance to a person under the age of eighteen years on school grounds as provided in section 18-18-407 (2), and the death of such person is caused by the use of such controlled substance; or

(f) The person knowingly causes the death of a child who has not yet attained twelve years of age and the person committing the offense is one in a position of trust with respect to the victim.

(2) It is an affirmative defense to a charge of violating subsection (1) (b) of this section that the defendant:

(a) Was not the only participant in the underlying crime; and

(b) Did not commit the homicidal act or in any way solicit, request, command, importune, cause, or aid the commission thereof; and

(c) Was not armed with a deadly weapon; and

(d) Had no reasonable ground to believe that any other participant was armed with such a weapon, instrument, article, or substance; and

(e) Did not engage himself in or intend to engage in and had no reasonable ground to believe that any other participant intended to engage in conduct likely to result in death or serious bodily injury; and

(f) Endeavored to disengage himself from the commission of the underlying crime or flight therefrom immediately upon having reasonable grounds to believe that another participant is armed with a deadly weapon, instrument, article, or substance, or intended to engage in conduct likely to result in death or serious bodily injury.

(3) Murder in the first degree is a class 1 felony.

(4) The statutory privilege between patient and physician and between husband and wife shall not be available for excluding or refusing testimony in any prosecution for the crime of murder in the first degree as described in paragraph (f) of subsection (1) of this section.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 418, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-102. L. 74: (1)(a) amended, p. 251, § 2, effective January 1, 1975. L. 75: (1)(b) amended, p. 632, § 5, effective July 1; (1)(b) amended, p. 617, § 5, effective July 21. L. 77: (1)(d) amended, p. 960, § 5, effective July 1. L. 81: (1)(d) amended, p. 973, § 4, effective July 1. L. 88: (1)(b) amended, p. 712, § 16, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(e) added, p. 1006, § 2, effective July 1. L. 92: (1)(e) amended, p. 392, § 20, effective July 1. L. 95: (1)(f) and (4) added, pp. 1221, 1222, §§ 2, 3, effective July 1. L. 97: (1)(e) amended, p. 1543, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1)(b) amended, p. 703, § 28, effective July 1.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805; for the statutory privilege between patient and physician and between husband and wife, see § 13-90-107.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Premeditation.
 - C. Felony Murder.
 - D. Extreme Indifference to Life.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Indictment or Information.
 - C. Evidence.
 - D. Jury.
 - E. Instructions.
 - F. Affirmative Defense.
- IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Should Ralph Fleagle Hang?", see 7 Dicta 10 (Nov. 1929); 7 Dicta 17 (Jan. 1930). For comment on Reppin v. People (95 Colo. 192, 34 P.2d 71 (1934)), see 7 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 209 (1935). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law", see 34 Dicta 98 (1957). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 36 Dicta 34 (1959). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For comment on Bizup v. People (150 Colo. 214, 371 P.2d 786 (1962)), see 35 U. Colo.

L. Rev. 435 (1963). For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L. J. 137 (1972). For article, "The Jurisprudence of Death by Another: Accessories and Capital Punishment", see 51 U. Colo. L. Rev. 17 (1979). For note, "Extreme-Indifference Murder: The Impact of People v. Marcy", see 54 U. Colo. L. Rev. 83 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-102 is similar to former §§ 40-2-1 and 40-2-3, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section constitutional. Since there is a rational difference expressed by the general assembly between first degree murder and second degree murder, the first degree murder statute is constitutional. People v. Sneed, 183 Colo. 96, 514 P.2d 776 (1973).

No equal protection violation where felony first degree murder carries a greater punishment than aggravated vehicular homicide. These offenses are distinguished by the level of intent, the actus reus (commission or omission), the requirement that the actor operate or drive a motor vehicle for vehicular homicide, and the predicate felonies. People v. Prieto, 124 P.3d 842 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section defines murder. Sawyer v. People, 173 Colo. 351, 478 P.2d 672 (1970).

Murder after deliberation and felony murder are not separate and independent offenses, but only ways in which criminal liability for first degree murder may be charged and prosecuted. People v. Lowe, 660 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1983); People v. Brown, 731 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1986).

Election of theories not required. The prosecution should be allowed to charge multiple theories of first degree murder in separate counts, and it may, but should not be required to, elect among theories after the evidence is closed. People v. Freeman, 668 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1983).

Defendant can be convicted only of one first degree murder for one killing, as two convictions for one killing would result in enhanced collateral punishment. People v. Lowe, 660 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1983); People v. Ragland, 747 P.2d 4 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Fincham, 799 P.2d 419 (Colo. App. 1990).

The rule of lenity prohibits the entry of dual convictions and sentences for felony murder and murder after deliberation when the convictions and sentences are predicated upon the killing of a single victim. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

Dual convictions and sentences may not be entered on the murder after deliberation and felony murder counts with respect to a single killing. People v. Freeman, 668 P.2d 1371 (Colo. 1983).

A defendant may not be convicted of both first degree felony murder and first degree murder after deliberation for a single homicide nor may a defendant be convicted of both first degree and second degree murder for the killing of one person. People v. Hickam, 684 P.2d 228 (Colo. 1984).

General assembly was competent to adopt the definition of murder under this section. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

The purpose of distinctions in degrees of murder is to fix the punishment which shall be inflicted according to the circumstances in which the murder was committed. Andrews v. People, 33 Colo. 193, 79 P. 1031 (1905).

The general assembly intended that there be two grades of murder. People v. Sneed, 183 Colo. 96, 514 P.2d 776 (1973).

Meaningful distinction intended. The general assembly intended that there be a meaningful distinction between first and second degree murder. People v. Mullins, 188 Colo. 23, 532 P.2d 733 (1975).

The distinctions between this section and § 18-3-103 are not inconsequential and satisfy due process requirements and the informational requirements of § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const. People v. Mendoza, 195 Colo. 19, 575 P.2d 403 (1978).

Second degree murder is lesser included offense. The difference in substance between first degree murder and second degree murder is that first degree murder requires the additional element of premeditation. Since proof of first degree murder necessarily establishes every element of second degree murder, the latter is necessarily a lesser included offense of the former. People v. Gladney, 194 Colo. 68, 570 P.2d 231 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1038, 98 S. Ct. 776, 54 L. Ed. 2d 787 (1978).

A conviction for attempted second degree murder cannot merge with a conviction for attempted first degree murder with extreme indifference where the offenses had different victims. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

First degree murder and manslaughter impose different standards of care. As to the distinction between first degree murder and manslaughter, the two statutes impose different standards of care in that the manslaughter statute requires that the cause of death be recklessly done, while in comparison an extreme indifference to human life in the first degree murder statute is clearly a more culpable standard of conduct, especially where necessarily coupled with the additional requirement that there be created a grave risk of death. People v. District Court, 185 Colo. 78, 521 P.2d 1254 (1974).

Nothing in the language of § 18-1.3-401(8)(g) or § 18-3-106 suggests a legislative intent to preempt the felony murder statute. People v. Prieto, 124 P.3d 842 (Colo. App. 2005).

The statutory language in this section and §§ 18-3-104 and 18-3-105 creates distinguishable standards which can be fairly applied by jurors. People v. Favors, 192 Colo. 136, 556 P.2d 72 (1976).

Failure to instruct on less serious offense did not deny due process. Failure to instruct on an even less serious offense than second degree murder, in light of the jury's verdict for the most serious possible offense, first degree murder, does not comport with an inference of prejudice and did not deny the defendant a fair trial. People v. Favors, 192 Colo. 136, 556 P.2d 72 (1976).

No standing to attack constitutionality. In view of the fact that the jury did not convict the defendant under this statute, arguments attacking the constitutionality of this section cannot be properly considered on appeal. People v. Webb, 189 Colo. 400, 542 P.2d 77 (1975).

Where defendant was convicted of reckless manslaughter, robbery, and felony murder, appellate court could choose to give effect to the jury's finding that the defendant acted knowingly in committing a robbery and that a death occurred in the course of the robbery. The court could appropriately vacate the jury's finding of reckless manslaughter conviction. People v. Jones, 990 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1999).

Applied in In re Tyson, 13 Colo. 482, 22 P. 810 (1889); Mora v. People, 19 Colo. 255, 35 P. 179 (1893); Schneider v. People, 118 Colo. 543, 199 P.2d 873 (1948); Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962); Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966); People v. Schuemann, 190 Colo. 474, 548 P.2d 911 (1976); Reliford v. People, 195 Colo. 549, 579 P.2d 1145 (1978); Goodwin v. District Court, 196 Colo. 246, 586 P.2d 2 (1978); People v. Campbell, 196 Colo. 390, 589 P.2d 1360 (1978); Goodwin v. District Court, 197 Colo. 6, 588 P.2d 874 (1979); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 70, 595 P.2d 1045 (1979); Gonzales v. District Court, 198 Colo. 505, 602 P.2d 857 (1979); People v. DelGuidice, 199 Colo. 41, 606 P.2d 840 (1979); People v. White, 199 Colo. 82, 606 P.2d 847 (1980); People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Williams, 628 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1981); People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981); People v. Valencia, 630 P.2d 85 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lee, 630 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1981); People v. Small, 631 P.2d 148 (Colo. 1981); Conston v. People, 633 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1981); People v. Garries, 645 P.2d 1306 (Colo. 1982); People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982); People v. Fetty, 650 P.2d 541 (Colo. 1982); People v. Simien, 656 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1983); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1287 (Colo. 1983); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983); People v. Fish, 660 P.2d 505 (Colo. 1983); People v. McCall, 662 P.2d 178 (Colo. 1983); People v. Moore, 701 P.2d 1249 (Colo. App. 1985), cert. denied, 706 P.2d 802 (Colo. 1985); People v. Bowman, 738 P.2d 387 (Colo. App. 1987).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

A. In General.

Degrees of murder distinguished. The distinguishing feature between murder in the first degree and murder in the second degree is that to constitute murder in the first degree the jury must find "premeditation", but if said fact is not found, it is murder in the second degree. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1885); Carlson v. People, 91 Colo. 418, 15 P.2d 625 (1932).

Proof of killing alone is not murder. Proof of the mere abstract fact that the accused killed the deceased will not sustain a guilty verdict of first or second degree murder based on instructions thereto. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

First degree murder is the deliberate and premeditated killing of a human being. Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

Murder in the first degree, other than in the commission of a felony, is the deliberate and premeditated killing of a human being. Hinton v. People, 169 Colo. 545, 458 P.2d 611 (1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1047, 90 S. Ct. 1375, 25 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1970).

To constitute murder under a statute, it is necessary that the killing be done in the mode described by the statute. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1885).

First degree murder is a specific intent crime; the prosecution must establish not only that the defendant intended to cause the death of another person, but that he acted after deliberation. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

First degree murder statutes contain rationally different elements than first degree assault statute, § 18-3-202, and thus a defendant sentenced under the former and not the latter was not denied equal protection of law. People v. Brewer, 720 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1985).

Culpability cannot be determined on basis of presumption. The essential culpability for first degree murder cannot be determined on the basis of a presumption of law; rather, the requisite culpability must be proven as a matter of fact. People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981).

Generally, the crimes of second degree murder and attempted second degree murder are, respectively, lesser included offenses of first degree murder or attempted first degree murder under any theory and second degree murder is a lesser included offense of first degree murder by extreme indifference. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

Attempted first degree assault is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. Attempted first degree assault requires that a defendant act with the intent to cause serious bodily injury to another person by means of a deadly weapon. Use of a deadly weapon is not an element of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Illegal discharge of a firearm is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. Discharge of a firearm is not an element of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Second degree murder is a lesser included offense of first degree murder as well as the associated attempt offenses. Brown v. People, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

It is not necessary to prove a motive as an essential element in the crime of murder. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Proof of motive is not an essential part of the state's case in a murder prosecution. People v. Spinuzzi, 149 Colo. 391, 369 P.2d 427 (1962), overruled on other grounds, People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

Death in course of unjustified arrest by private person. A private person who, without any excuse or justification, in order to accomplish the arrest of another not shown to have been guilty of any crime, shoots, merely intending to wound, is guilty of murder if the shot takes fatal effect. Demato v. People, 49 Colo. 147, 111 P. 703 (1910).

Defendant must take his victim as he finds him, and it is no defense that the victim is suffering from physical infirmities. Hamrick v. People, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981).

Although an inconsistency exists between jury verdicts for attempted first degree murder and those for first and second degree assault under the heat of passion, the inconsistency does not require reversal because the existence or absence of heat of passion is not a necessary element of either assault charge. People v. Sanchez, 253 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

Defendant can possess the intent to cause death, serious bodily harm, and bodily harm at the same time. Therefore, jury's guilty verdicts for attempted first degree murder and first degree assault based on defendant's stabbing of one person and the jury's guilty verdicts for attempted first degree murder and second degree assault based on defendant's stabbing of a second person are not necessarily inconsistent. People v. Sanchez, 253 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

Guilty verdicts for both attempted after deliberation first degree murder and attempted extreme indifference first degree murder did not require inconsistent findings of fact; therefore, the sentences were not illegal. The information alleged different victims for the different charges, so it is not inconsistent to conclude that defendant had the specific intent to take the life of the specific targets and also showed an extreme indifference to life in general as to the other persons. People v. Stovall, 2012 COA 7, __ P.3d __.

B. Premeditation.

Law reviews. For note, "The Role of Mental Disorder in Showing the Absence of Premeditation and Deliberation in Murder Trials", see 29 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 396 (1957).

Annotator's note. Most of the cases cited below were decided prior to the 1974 amendment of this section, which substituted "After deliberation and with the intent" for "with premeditated intent" in paragraph (a) of subsection (1).

Premeditation required. Prior to the 1975 amendment, to be guilty of murder of the first degree a person had to not only be sane, but in killing he had to have acted with premeditation.

Ingles v. People, 92 Colo. 518, 22 P.2d 1109 (1933).

In order to make out first degree murder under this section, other than in the commission of a felony, there was the requirement of a premeditated killing. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

To be convicted of murder, the state must prove deliberation and intent to cause death. People v. Robinson, 874 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1993).

Premeditation directed against one other than victim sufficed. If a shot was fired, without justification, and a killing resulted, the homicide was first degree murder, although the premeditation was directed against one other than the person actually killed. Ryan v. People, 50 Colo. 99, 114 P. 306 (1911).

"Premeditated intent" and "intentionally, but without premeditation" are sufficiently different elements to be a constitutionally acceptable basis for defining two distinct crimes. People v. Pearson, 190 Colo. 313, 546 P.2d 1259 (1976).

Words such as "deliberate" and "premeditated" refer to the intention of the accused at the time of the killing. Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436 (1872).

They are matters of inference and presumption. Premeditation and deliberation are matters of inference and presumption to be drawn by the jury from the facts and circumstances leading up to, surrounding, and explanatory of the homicide. Van Houton v. People, 22 Colo. 53, 43 P. 137 (1895); Robinson v. People, 76 Colo. 416, 232 P. 672 (1925).

The element of deliberation, like intent, can rarely be proven other than through circumstantial or indirect evidence. People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981); People v. District Court, 779 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1989); People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

Thus, intent may be inferred from act. Premeditation does not require positive proof of an intent prior to the commission of the act, as such prior intent may be inferred from the act. Robinson v. People, 76 Colo. 416, 232 P. 672 (1925).

Intent, like deliberation, can be proven through means other than direct evidence. People v. Juvenile Court, 813 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1991); People v. Valenzuela, 825 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991), aff'd, 856 P.2d 805 (Colo. 1993).

The fact finder may infer an intent to cause the natural and probable consequences of unlawful voluntary acts. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

Where there is close temporal and spatial relationship between a killing and a subsequent felony, defendant's intent to commit the underlying felony may be inferred from the circumstances. People v. Phillips, 219 P.3d 798 (Colo. App. 2009).

Malice, premeditation, and deliberation may be inferred from use of a deadly weapon. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 153, 465 P.2d 394 (1970); Lopez v. People, 175 Colo. 503, 488 P.2d 892 (1971).

Intent to kill and premeditation may be inferred from the intentional use of a deadly weapon in a deadly manner. Mills v. People, 146 Colo. 457, 362 P.2d 152 (1961), cert. denied, 369 U.S. 841, 82 S. Ct. 869, 7 L. Ed. 2d 846 (1962).

Where evidence established that defendant approached the deceased brandishing a gun after having threatened deceased's friends, and that a shot was fired killing deceased, the jury could have found premeditation or lack of considerable provocation for killing. People v. Spinuzzi, 149 Colo. 391, 369 P.2d 427 (1962).

Evidence of the manner in which the weapon is used may furnish some proof of the requisite culpability for first degree murder. People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981).

Use of a deadly weapon is not in itself sufficient to show deliberation. People v. Hamrick, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1979), aff'd, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981); People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981).

The use of a deadly weapon, while not giving rise to a legal presumption of deliberation, may nevertheless be considered, along with other circumstances attending the killing, in determining whether sufficient evidence exists for submission of the issue of deliberation to the jury. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

Not from mere blow by hand or fist. A conviction for first degree murder will not stand when the blow was struck on being aroused from sleep, probably in anger, but certainly without plan, deliberation, or premeditation. A blow with a fist and a fortiori with the open hand is not calculated to cause death to a person in good health and of mature age; death is not the natural consequence of such a blow. Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964).

Flight is not evidence of premeditation and deliberation. Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964).

Shortness of time between purpose and act immaterial. If one actually forms the purpose to kill another, premeditates upon it before performing the act, and then performs it, he is guilty of murder in the first degree no matter how short the time may have been between the purpose and its execution. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 345, 93 P. 478 (1907); People v. Valenzuela, 825 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

Time is not essential if there was a design and determination to kill formed in the mind of the defendant previous to or at the time the mortal wound was given. Van Houton v. People, 22 Colo. 53, 43 P. 137 (1895).

The element of deliberation requires that the decision to commit the act is made after the exercise of reflection and judgment concerning the act; however, the length of time required for deliberation need not be long. People v. District Court, 779 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1989).

Premeditation requires time for one thought to follow another. No particular time need pass in order to establish deliberation and premeditation. The important thing is that there must be at least enough time to permit one thought to follow another. An impulsive killing cannot be first degree murder. The law does not demand that a defendant shall have premeditated for any period of time, but that the defendant shall have committed the act deliberately and with premeditation. Hammil v. People, 145 Colo. 577, 361 P.2d 117, cert. denied, 368 U.S. 903, 82 S. Ct. 182, 7 L. Ed. 2d 98 (1961); Bradney v. People, 162 Colo. 403, 426 P.2d 765 (1967).

The deliberation and formed design need not have existed at the inception of the transaction which finally resulted in the homicide. It matters not how short the interval between the formation of the design and the death if it included the time necessary for one thought to follow another. People v. Spinuzzi, 149 Colo. 391, 369 P.2d 427 (1962), overruled in People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

The elements of deliberation and premeditation are established by proof of the formed design to kill, and length of time is not a determinative factor. The only time requirement for deliberation and premeditation within the meaning of the first degree murder statute is an interval sufficient for one thought to follow another. Hinton v. People, 169 Colo. 545, 458 P.2d 611 (1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1047, 90 S. Ct. 1375, 25 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1970).

Appreciable length of time required. Premeditation required that the design to kill precede the killing by an appreciable length of time; but the time need not be long. People v. Duran, 40 Colo. App. 302, 577 P.2d 307 (1978).

The circumstances surrounding a victim's death may permit the reasonable inference that the defendant had adequate time for the exercise of reflection and judgment concerning the fatal act. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

Intoxication cannot negate "after deliberation" element of first degree murder. "After deliberation" is not part of the culpable mental state required for first degree murder, therefore voluntary intoxication cannot negate this element. People v. Orona, 907 P.2d 659 (Colo. App. 1995) (disapproved in People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000)).

For requirement of malice under former statute, see May v. People, 8 Colo. 210, 6 P. 816

(1885); Murphy v. People, 9 Colo. 435, 13 P. 528 (1886); Andrews v. People, 33 Colo. 193, 79 P. 1031 (1905); McAndrews v. People, 71 Colo. 542, 208 P. 486 (1922); Ingles v. People, 92 Colo. 518, 22 P.2d 1109 (1933); Baker v. People, 114 Colo. 50, 160 P.2d 983 (1945); Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952); Kukuljan v. People, 129 Colo. 116, 267 P.2d 1017 (1954); Beckstead v. People, 133 Colo. 72, 292 P.2d 189 (1956); Lutz v. People, 133 Colo. 229, 293 P.2d 646 (1956); Castro v. People, 140 Colo. 493, 346 P.2d 1020 (1959); Smith v. People, 142 Colo. 523, 351 P.2d 457 (1960); People v. Spinuzzi, 149 Colo. 391, 369 P.2d 427 (1962), overruled on other grounds, People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971); Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964); Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965); Ferrin v. People, 164 Colo. 130, 433 P.2d 108 (1967); Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969); Hinton v. People, 169 Colo. 545, 458 P.2d 611 (1969), cert. denied, 397 U.S. 1047, 90 S. Ct. 1375, 25 L. Ed. 2d 659 (1970); Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 153, 465 P.2d 394 (1970); Moya v. People, 174 Colo. 435, 484 P.2d 788 (1971); Lopez v. People, 175 Colo. 503, 488 P.2d 892 (1971); Walker v. People, 175 Colo. 173, 489 P.2d 584 (1971); People v. Morant, 179 Colo. 287, 499 P.2d 1173 (1972).

C. Felony Murder.

Law reviews. For article, "Stretching Liability Too Far: Colorado's Felony Murder Statute in Light of Auman", see 83 Den. U.L. Rev. 639 (2005).

Self-defense is not available as an affirmative defense for felony murder. People v. Burns, 686 P.2d 1360 (Colo. App. 1983).

Provision does not violate equal protection. Failure to require proof of a culpable mental state for a conviction of felony murder does not violate equal protection. People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981).

Definition of felony murder does not deny due process. Defining felony murder as being of the grade of first degree and as precluding a verdict of second degree does not violate substantive due process. Bizup v. Tinsley, 211 F. Supp. 545 (D. Colo. 1962), aff'd, 316 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1963).

This section is not unconstitutional in that it defines murder committed in the perpetration of a robbery as murder in the first degree. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

Or right to jury trial. The claim that this section which classifies murder committed in the perpetration of certain crimes as first degree murder is unconstitutional in that it deprived the accused of his right to a jury trial with respect to the essential element of intent, and is thus in violation of the fourteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States and § 23 of art. II, Colo. Const., is without merit. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

Or substitute presumption for proof. This section defining murder committed in the perpetration of a robbery as murder in the first degree is a substantive definition of murder and is not unconstitutional as substituting a presumption of malice for proof thereof. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

The general assembly may provide that a murder committed during the perpetration of robbery is murder in the first degree, and this in no way establishes a presumption as a substitute for proof of a culpable mental state, as the prosecution still has to prove the homicide and all elements of the underlying felony beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981).

First degree felony murder is clearly and precisely defined in this section. Sawyer v. People, 173 Colo. 351, 478 P.2d 672 (1970).

The purpose of the felony murder provision was to make every homicide committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate certain felonies murder, which may be punished by death, if the jury so determines, without regard to premeditation. Andrews v. People, 33 Colo. 193, 79 P. 1031 (1905); Robbins v. People, 142 Colo. 254, 350 P.2d 818 (1960); Whitman v. People, 161 Colo. 110, 420 P.2d 416 (1966).

The underlying purpose of the felony murder statute is to imply the element of deliberation where the commission of certain crimes of violence result in a death. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

The purpose of the felony murder statute is to hold a participating robber accountable for a nonparticipant's death, even though unintended, as long as death is caused by an act committed in the course of or in furtherance of the robbery or in the course of immediate flight therefrom. People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Felony murder occurs when a murder is committed in the commission of certain designated felonies. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

There can be no exact measure of time or distance which is dispositive of whether felony murder exists. People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976).

Defendant's liability for felony murder not terminated upon defendant's arrest. Phrase "immediate flight therefrom" is set off by commas and is not restricted to defendant's own immediate flight. Jury may look to the totality of the circumstances to determine when felony murder liability terminates. Murder committed shortly after defendant's arrest may be a natural and probable consequence of defendant's actions. People v. Auman, 67 P.3d 741 (Colo. App. 2002), rev'd on other grounds, 109 P.3d 647 (Colo. 2005).

All that is necessary to sustain a charge of felony murder is that a life be taken during the course of a felony in which the defendant was engaged. People v. Scheer, 184 Colo. 15, 518 P.2d 833 (1974).

Any death that results in the course of any type of robbery may serve as a basis for a felony murder conviction. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Defendant may be guilty of felony murder where the death of a security guard occurred while the defendant was in immediate flight from a robbery and where the shooting of the guard was intended to facilitate his flight and enhance his chance of escape, and shots fired by the guard were not an intervening event which caused the guard's death to be outside of the scope of the felony. People v. Hickam, 684 P.2d 228 (Colo. 1984).

"Acting either alone or with one or more persons" does not define an element of the offense of felony murder, but merely makes clear that guilt results in either case. People v. Bastin, 937 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1996).

Specific intent not an element of felony murder. In felony murder, specific intent to take a human life with malice is not an element of the crime. People v. Scheer, 184 Colo. 15, 518 P.2d 833 (1974).

Defendant may be convicted of first degree felony murder where only showing of mental culpability is for the underlying general intent felony. People v. Hickam, 684 P.2d 228 (Colo. 1984).

Participation in felony substituted for mens rea. The felony murder statute substitutes participation in the underlying felony for the mens rea otherwise required to support a murder charge. People v. Priest, 672 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1983).

Proof beyond reasonable doubt required of homicide, felony, and connection of both. The prosecution is required to prove the homicide beyond a reasonable doubt and is also required to establish to the same degree of proof the commission of the named felony and the commission of the homicide in the perpetration of the said felony. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960); Jones v. People, 146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961).

A robbery and killing which followed were all part of same transaction where they were so closely connected in point of time, place, and continuity of action as to be one continuous transaction. Bizup v. Tinsley, 211 F. Supp. 545 (D. Colo. 1962), aff'd, 316 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1963); People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976).

The perpetration of a robbery does not come to an end the split second the victim surrenders his money to the gunman, and most certainly the robbery continues where the robbers are trying to avoid arrest by police officers who are in extremely hot pursuit, and cause the death of an innocent motorist. Whitman v. People, 161 Colo. 110, 420 P.2d 416 (1966).

If defendant was an accessory to aggravated robbery which resulted in murder, it follows that he was guilty of murder. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

Defendant may not be simultaneously convicted of felony murder and the felony on which the felony murder conviction rests. Where a defendant is convicted of multiple felonies, all of which are alleged as the legal predicates for the commission of felony murder, only that felony that most directly contributes to the death of the victim should be vacated. People v. Huynh, 98 P.3d 907 (Colo. App. 2004).

Aggravated robbery is merged in the offense of felony murder and the constitutional protection against double jeopardy precludes conviction for both offenses. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983); People v. Driggers, 812 P.2d 702 (Colo. App. 1991).

Felony murder based on robbery precludes conviction for robbery. The defendant's conviction of the greater offense of felony murder, predicated as it is upon his killing of the robbery victim, precludes his simultaneous conviction of the lesser included offense of robbery. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

There is no logic or reason to preclude a felony murder charge from being based upon a burglary charge that, in turn, is based upon either an intent to assault or an intent to murder inasmuch as both murder and assault are crimes which may underlie a felony burglary. People v. Lewis, 791 P.2d 1152 (Colo. App. 1989); People v. Medina, 260 P.3d 42 (Colo. App. 2010).

Sequence of events is irrelevant as long as sufficient evidence is produced to show that a felony was committed by defendant and that a death occurred during the commission of that felony. People v. Braxton, 807 P.2d 1214 (Colo. App. 1990).

Or for aggravated robbery. Where the defendant's conviction for felony murder is based upon the causation of the robbery victim's death during the course of the robbery, a charge of aggravated robbery of the same victim is a lesser included offense of the felony murder charge within the meaning of § 18-1-408 (5)(c). People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983); People v. Guffie, 749 P.2d 976 (Colo. App. 1987).

Subsection (1)(b) is not so limited as to allow conviction only if there is a finding that defendant was committing or attempting to commit the crime at the time he caused the death. A death caused in the furtherance of a robbery or a death caused in the immediate flight from a robbery falls squarely within the edict of this section. People v. Kittrell, 786 P.2d 467 (Colo. App. 1989).

Or for rape. The defendant's conviction of the greater offense of felony murder, predicated as it is upon his killing of the sexual assault victim, precludes his simultaneous conviction of the lesser included offense of first degree sexual assault. People v. Horton, 683 P.2d 358 (Colo. App. 1984).

Felony murder can be predicated upon an assault directed at the person who was killed. People v. Ager, 928 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Medina, 260 P.3d 42 (Colo. App. 2010).

Robbery conviction is not precluded by conviction for murder of another after deliberation. Although a separate judgment of conviction for robbery may not simultaneously exist with a judgment of conviction for first degree murder predicated upon the killing of the robbery victim, there is no such impediment to the entry of both a judgment of conviction for first degree murder based upon the killing of another after deliberation and a separate judgment of conviction for the robbery of the same victim. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

Premeditation not an element of felony murder. When the proof is undisputed that the homicide was committed in an attempt to perpetrate robbery which the defendants had conspired to commit, it is not necessary to prove any facts from which malice, deliberation, or premeditation could be inferred. Robbins v. People, 142 Colo. 254, 350 P.2d 818 (1960); Oaks v. People, 161 Colo. 561, 424 P.2d 115 (1967).

A particular or specific intent to kill is not an ingredient of murder committed in the perpetration of a robbery. This section makes the taking of human life in an attempt to perpetrate a robbery murder in the first degree without regard to the questions of intent, premeditation, or deliberation. Jones v. People, 146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961).

Attempted robbery is a predicate felony for felony murder. People v. Renaud, 942 P.2d 1253 (Colo. App. 1996).

The turpitude of the felonious act supplies the element of deliberation and design to effect death, and, therefore, no express or implied design to effect death is essential; the murder is still of first degree though casual and unintentional. Whitman v. People, 161 Colo. 110, 420 P.2d 416 (1966).

Murder to facilitate escape. Escape from the scene of the underlying felony is part of the res gestae of a crime so that a murder committed to facilitate the flight can be felony murder. People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976).

All forms of escape under § 18-8-208 are predicate offenses for first degree felony murder. The clear and unambiguous language of the statute contemplates an escape penalized as a petty offense as a predicate offense for first degree felony murder. People v. Stovall, 2012 COA 7, ___ P.3d __.

All members of a conspiracy to rob are guilty of first degree murder. Where two or more persons conspired to commit a robbery and went to the place where the robbery was to have been committed, armed with deadly weapons, and in an attempt to perpetrate the robbery one of them committed murder, all are guilty of murder of the first degree, whether or not they intended to commit murder. Andrews v. People, 33 Colo. 193, 79 P. 1031 (1905).

If a homicide is committed by one of defendant's associates while engaged in a robbery in furtherance of a common purpose, defendant is guilty of murder in the first degree. Abshier v. People, 87 Colo. 507, 289 P. 1081 (1930).

If a defendant and an accomplice were participating in a robbery during the commission of which the accomplice killed the deceased, the defendant is guilty as a principal. If there is direct evidence of the crime, he is subject to the death penalty. Mitchell v. People, 173 Colo. 217, 476 P.2d 1000 (1970).

Colorado does not recognize the offense of attempted felony murder. Because criminal attempt requires a defendant to possess the culpable mental state for the attempted offense and felony murder does not require a mental state, it is impossible to convict a person of attempting to commit an act that the person was not intending. People v. Meyer, 952 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1997).

When aider and abettor not guilty of murder. One cannot be held guilty of murder as an aider and abettor if he has acted without knowledge or malice on his part and was ignorant of the malicious motives and felonious intent on the part of the actual slayer. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Complicitor included in felony murder statute. A complicitor, being a principal, is included in the felony murder statute as one who commits or attempts to commit the underlying felony. People v. Saiz, 42 Colo. App. 469, 600 P.2d 97 (1979).

A complicitor, being a principal, is included in the felony murder statute as one who "commits or attempts to commit [the underlying felony]" , whether he is near the scene of the underlying felony or not. People v. Priest, 672 P.2d 539 (Colo. App. 1983).

A defendant who acts as a complicitor in the underlying felony may be held criminally liable for felony murder. It is not legally nor logically impossible to be a complicitor to felony murder. People v. Fisher, 9 P.3d 1189 (Colo. App. 2000).

D. Extreme Indifference to Life.

Subsection (1)(d) (as it existed prior to the 1977 amendment that substituted “knowingly” for “intentionally”) was not constitutionally void for vagueness. People v. District Court, 185 Colo. 78, 521 P.2d 1254 (1974).

Conviction under subsection (1)(d) (as it existed prior to the 1977 amendment that substituted “knowingly” for “intentionally”) did not deny equal protection. The standards of culpability in subsection (1)(d) and § 18-3-105 (1)(a) are distinct enough to be intelligently understood and applied, and therefore, the defendant was not denied equal protection of the law by virtue of his conviction under subsection (1)(d) of this section. People v. Jones, 193 Colo. 250, 565 P.2d 1333 (1977).

Statutory definition of extreme indifference murder (as it existed prior to the 1981 amendment) violated equal protection of the laws under § 25 of art. II, Colo. Const., because that crime was not sufficiently distinguishable from second degree murder to warrant the substantial differential in penalty authorized by the statutory scheme. People v. Curtis, 627 P.2d 734 (Colo. 1981); Crespin v. People, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

The statutory prohibition of extreme indifference murder violated equal protection of the laws because it could not reasonably be distinguished from the lesser offense of second degree murder as defined in § 18-3-103 (1)(a). People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981); People v. Roark, 643 P.2d 756 (Colo. 1982).

The statutory definition of extreme indifference murder violated equal protection of the laws under the Colorado constitution because it was not sufficiently distinguishable from second degree murder to warrant the substantial differential in penalty authorized by the statutory scheme. People v. Gurule, 628 P.2d 99 (Colo. 1981).

Statutory definition of extreme indifference murder in 1981 amendment is not violative of equal protection of the laws under § 25 of art. II, Colo. Const., because it is sufficiently distinguishable from second degree murder to warrant difference in penalty. People v. Jefferson, 748 P.2d 1223 (Colo. 1988).

Defendant’s due process rights not to be charged with a multiplicitous information were not violated when defendant was charged and convicted of two counts of attempted extreme indifference murder for firing multiple shots at a door and injuring one victim and shooting towards, but not injuring, another victim. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

Both first degree murder by extreme indifference and second degree murder are committed “knowingly” and are thus general intent crimes. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

If perpetrator possesses the specific intent under subsection (1)(a) to kill the individual whose death occurs as a result of the perpetrator’s actions, the perpetrator cannot also be convicted for extreme indifference murder under subsection (1)(d). People v. Atkins, 844 P.2d 1196 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where defendant knew the victim and his conduct was directed toward that particular person, evidence of the element of universal malice under subsection (1)(d) was lacking. People v. Perez, 972 P.2d 1072 (Colo. App. 1998).

There is no logical inconsistency with a perpetrator having both the specific intent under subsection (1)(a) to kill an individual and exhibiting an extreme indifference to murder under subsection (1)(d). There are situations in which a perpetrator can have both the specific intent to kill an individual and also show an extreme indifference to the lives around the individual targeted for death. Candelaria v. People, 148 P.3d 178 (Colo. 2006) (disagreeing with People v. Atkins cited above).

Unlike intentional first degree murder after deliberation, crime of extreme indifference first degree murder does not require proof that defendant intended to cause the death of another. Instead, it requires proof that defendant knowingly engaged in conduct that created a grave risk of death to one or more persons and demonstrated extreme indifference to the value of human life generally. Candelaria v. People, 148 P.3d 178 (Colo. 2006); People v. Reynolds, 252 P.3d 1128 (Colo. App. 2010).

Extreme indifference murder is evinced by acts that are calculated to put the lives of many persons in danger, without being aimed at anyone in particular. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant firing at a group of persons running out doorway of bar was sufficient evidence to prove universal malice element of extreme indifference murder. People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

A defendant may be charged with and convicted of multiple counts of attempted extreme indifference murder where his or her conduct endangers several people. Accordingly, defendant was properly convicted of multiple counts of attempted extreme indifference murder for shooting into a car with multiple passengers. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

“Knowingly” requirement is satisfied in an attempted extreme indifference murder case by proving that defendant's conduct in fact created a grave risk of death. Defendant need not have known that his or her conduct was practically certain to cause death. People v. Rubio, 222 P.3d 355 (Colo. App. 2009).

Despite fact that defendant was angry with victims, defendant's act of firing at closed door upon leaving house and admitting that he was not directing his fire at any particular individual displayed the requisite universal malice and that he knowingly engaged in conduct creating a grave risk of death to others required for the crime of extreme indifference murder. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

Second degree murder is a lesser included offense of extreme indifference murder. People v. Moore, 902 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1994).

Menacing is not a lesser included offense of attempted extreme indifference murder. People v. Portillo, 251 P.3d 483 (Colo. App. 2010).

There is a significant difference between the elements of extreme indifference murder and reckless manslaughter. Extreme indifference murder requires proof of circumstances showing an attitude of universal malice with extreme indifference to the value of human life generally. Reckless manslaughter lacks this element. People v. Alvarado-Juarez, 252 P.3d 1135 (Colo. App. 2010).

A conviction for attempted second degree murder cannot merge with a conviction for attempted first degree murder with extreme indifference where the offenses had different victims. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

Defendant firing at a moving vehicle with passengers where path of bullet endangered both passengers of vehicle and people near defendants house was sufficient evidence to prove universal malice element of extreme indifference murder. People v. Zekany, 833 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1991).

Voluntary intoxication not to be considered as a defense or mitigating factor to the crime of extreme indifference murder. Voluntary intoxication only a defense to specific intent crimes such as homicide with deliberation. Extreme indifference murder requires only that defendant have the general intent to act "knowingly". People v. Zekany, 833 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1991).

Self-defense is not available as a defense for extreme indifference murder. For certain actions to constitute self-defense, defendant must have acted in a reasonable manner. Finding a defendant guilty of extreme indifference murder necessarily precludes a finding that his actions were reasonable, as the "universal malice" element of the offense requires the jury to conclude that the defendant acted with aggravated recklessness. People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

The affirmative defense of self-defense is not consistent with charges of first degree extreme indifference murder and attempted first degree extreme indifference murder. Thus, as it relates to those charges, any evidence reflective of an apprehension of imminent danger is immaterial. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

Jury's consideration not limited to evidence of blows inflicted upon the victim immediately before the victim's death. Jury could have concluded that defendant had indiscriminately shoved, hit, kicked, and threatened one or more other persons without provocation near the time of the victim's death, thus indicating excessively reckless conduct. Testimony that the defendant had worked himself into a frenzy and that he did not know the victim or any of the other people he hit, kicked, or shoved, tended to establish extreme indifference to the value of human life. People v. Moore, 902 P.2d 366 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section does not include every act dangerous to life of person killed. This section does not include in its definition of murder in the first degree every act that is dangerous to the life of the person killed. Every act that results in the death of a person is greatly dangerous to the life of such person, but the section intended that there should be an act which shows the accused to have had a depraved mind, regardless of human life, and is intended to include those cases where a person has no deliberate intention to kill any particular individual. Longinotti v. People, 46 Colo. 173, 102 P. 165 (1909).

It is inapplicable to homicide resulting from direct assault. The provision relating to acts gravely dangerous to life cannot, without violence to the intention of the general assembly as evinced by the language, be applied to the case of homicide resulting from a direct assault by one person upon another. Longinotti v. People, 46 Colo. 173, 102 P. 165 (1909).

Felony child abuse not inconsistent with acquittal of extreme indifference murder. A guilty verdict for felony child abuse is not inconsistent with an acquittal of extreme indifference murder nor second degree murder. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981).

Death or great bodily harm must be the reasonable or probable consequence of the act to constitute murder. Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964).

Element addresses itself to human life generally. The element of "extreme indifference to human life", by definition, does not address itself to the life of the victim, but to human life generally. People v. District Court, 185 Colo. 78, 521 P.2d 1254 (1974).

No requirement that knowing conduct directed against person actually killed. There is no requirement that the knowing conduct essential to extreme indifference murder and second degree murder be directed against the person actually killed. On the contrary, both offenses are general intent crimes, and as long as the offender knowingly acts in the proscribed manner and causes the death of another, he is guilty of the crime, even though the person killed is not the person against whom the criminal conduct was directed. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

Defendant's intent may vary in committing crimes against separate victims. The jury could have found that the shots other than the one hitting the intended victim were not specifically intended to harm any of the other victims, but instead were fired generally in their direction. While the defendant did not have the specific intent to harm any of the other victims, the jury could have properly determined that the defendant was guilty of extreme indifference murder and attempted extreme indifference murder as to those victims. People v. Lee, 914 P.2d 441 (Colo. App. 1995).

Standard of conduct more culpable than that involved in manslaughter. The term "under circumstances ... manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life" connotes a heightened awareness and disregard of a fatal risk and is clearly a more culpable standard of conduct than the reckless conduct involved in manslaughter. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

For the definition of "intentionally", which was replaced by "knowingly" by the 1977 amendment, see People v. District Court, 185 Colo. 78, 521 P.2d 1254 (1974).

Evidence was sufficient for jury to find that defendant acted with universal malice for the purposes of subsection (1)(d). Even though defendant argued heatedly with victim shortly before victim was shot by the defendant, evidence sufficiently showed that the defendant knew the rifle he shot was dangerous and that more than one person could be struck with each bullet fired, that the defendant shot the rifle toward a moving pickup with a number of passengers, and that the path of the bullet fired from the rifle endangered numerous lives of persons in the pickup and standing in the area in which the rifle was shot. People v. Zekany, 833 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1991).

The element of universal of malice required for extreme indifference murder, defined as aggravated or extremely reckless conduct, was present where defendant, in a knowing effort to scare the crowd, fired shots with his right hand, although he was left-handed, while his head was placed between his knees. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

Voluntary intoxication is not available as a defense for extreme indifference murder. Voluntary intoxication is available only for specific intent crimes. The term "universal malice" under subsection (1)(d), does not make murder under section a specific intent crime. People v. Zekany, 833 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1992).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. In General.

In order for an accessory to be convicted of murder where the principal is found not guilty by reason of insanity, it must be shown beyond a reasonable doubt that, except for the insanity, the principal committed a murder. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

The burden of proof rests upon the state to prove to the satisfaction of the jury, beyond a reasonable doubt, the existence of all the material elements necessary to constitute the crime of murder as defined by this section. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1885).

It is the people's burden to make out a case that would have sustained a verdict of guilty of first or second degree murder before the prosecution is entitled to instructions thereto. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Before a jury can convict a defendant on any one of the counts of homicide, it must be satisfied that each and every material allegation of that count has been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. Jorgensen v. People, 178 Colo. 8, 495 P.2d 1130 (1972).

An arrest without warrant is not a defense to a charge of first degree murder. Moore v. Tinsley, 142 Colo. 516, 351 P.2d 456 (1960).

Cross-examination. In a murder case a wide latitude should be permitted on cross-examination of prosecution witnesses. McCune v. People, 179 Colo. 262, 499 P.2d 1184 (1972).

It is not unconstitutional to try the felony murder and first degree kidnapping charges together under the current statutory scheme. People v. Cunningham, 194 Colo. 198, 570 P.2d 1086 (1977).

Defendant's federal prosecution under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO) and subsequent state conviction for first degree murder for the same incident do not constitute double jeopardy, as the RICO conviction required proof of facts not necessary for the state murder conviction, and the two laws seek to prohibit substantially different evils. People v. Gladney, 250 P.3d 762 (Colo. App. 2010).

B. Indictment or Information.

Notice of the specific charge is a matter of procedural due process. Bizup v. Tinsley, 211 F. Supp. 545 (D. Colo. 1962), aff'd, 316 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1963).

Indictment which simply charged that defendant murdered the victim was upheld as constitutional. Bizup v. Tinsley, 211 F. Supp.

545 (D. Colo. 1962), aff'd, 316 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1963).

Indictment or information in the words of the statute is sufficient. In an indictment for murder, it is not necessary to state more than the statute provides in order to sustain a conviction of murder in the first degree. Andrews v. People, 33 Colo. 193, 79 P. 1031 (1905).

Information charging felony murder was substantively sufficient and therefore conferred jurisdiction on the trial court as it specifically named the underlying offense, burglary, and otherwise tracked the felony murder statute. People v. Palmer, 87 P.3d 137 (Colo. App. 2003).

As information charging murder includes all degrees of criminal homicide. Campbell v. People, 55 Colo. 302, 133 P. 1043 (1913).

Where an information charged murder in the first degree, it included all the lower grades of criminal homicide. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

Indictment charging murder supports verdict of felony murder. A prosecution on an information charging that on a certain date defendant did feloniously, willfully, and of his premeditated malice aforethought, kill and murder a named person, and defendant was convicted of felony murder. Where the information contained every essential element demanded by the Colorado statutes and demanded also by generally approved principles of criminal pleading, and apprised the defendant of the nature of the charge, the date and place, described the victim, and further alleged that the killing was with malice aforethought, but failed to pinpoint the allegation that the homicide occurred incident to a known felony, due process was not violated. Bizup v. Tinsley, 211 F. Supp. 545 (D. Colo. 1962), aff'd, 316 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1963).

Defective charge not cured by verdict. When one is tried as on a charge of murder in the first degree, but the jury finds a verdict of murder in the second degree, the error is not cured if the indictment fails to describe the higher grade of the crime. Redus v. People, 10 Colo. 208, 14 P. 323 (1887).

Words "malice aforethought" are coextensive with deliberation and premeditation. The words "malice aforethought" in the indictment are coextensive in meaning with the words "deliberate" and "premeditated", and a charge that a homicide was committed with malice aforethought comprehends a case of deliberate and premeditated killing. Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436 (1872).

An indictment charging that defendant unlawfully, feloniously, willfully, purposely, and of his malice aforethought, did kill and murder the deceased, is sufficient to warrant a verdict finding that the homicide was committed with deliberation and premeditation within the terms of this section. Redus v. People, 10 Colo. 208, 14 P. 323 (1887).

C. Evidence.

Conviction of a crime may be based on circumstantial evidence, and a conviction for first degree murder will be affirmed where review of the record indicates that the people's circumstantial case fully excluded all reasonable hypotheses of innocence. Moore v. People, 174 Colo. 286, 483 P.2d 1340 (1971).

Wholly circumstantial evidence is sufficient to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt in prosecution for felony murder. People v. Sanchez, 184 Colo. 25, 518 P.2d 818 (1974).

As may instructions on crimes. Circumstantial evidence, when tied together, can support and provide a foundation for instructions on each of the crimes of first degree murder, first degree burglary, and theft arising out of the same transaction. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

Test for evidence on appeal. The critical inquiry on appeal is whether the evidence, when reviewed in a light most favorable to the prosecution, is substantial and sufficient to permit a reasonable person to conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant intentionally caused the victim's death and that the decision to kill was made after the exercise of reflection and judgment. People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981).

Proof must establish premeditation to support verdict of murder in the first degree. Van Houton v. People, 22 Colo. 53, 43 P. 137 (1895).

The elements of deliberation, premeditation, and express malice must be manifested by external circumstances capable of proof to justify submitting the charge of first degree murder to the jury. Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972).

Presumption of intent will not support conviction of first degree murder. People v. Morant, 179 Colo. 287, 499 P.2d 1173 (1972).

The ultimate point which the evidence must extend to and establish is not the use of a deadly weapon, but the deliberation or premeditation with which the fatal act is done. Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436 (1872).

Intent must be determined from all circumstances. Where pertinent, the question of intent of a defendant in a criminal case must be determined from all the circumstances connected with the perpetration of the offense with which he is charged. Leopold v. People, 105 Colo. 147, 95 P.2d 811 (1939).

Evidence supporting first degree conviction supports second degree conviction. It is illogical to say that the evidence is sufficient to support a conviction of first degree murder but insufficient to support the lesser included offense of second degree murder. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

Proof of motive will not be excluded merely because it may be prejudicial to the defendant so long as it is relevant and material. People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

In a homicide case, it is proper to show an antecedent grudge borne by the accused against the deceased to establish a motive for the alleged homicide. People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

Also, evidence of a prior argument was clearly admissible to show a possible motive, and the fact that the argument occurred approximately two months before the shooting affected only the weight of the evidence, not its admissibility. People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

Insanity resulting from voluntary intoxication mitigates first degree murder. People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974).

If defendant is voluntarily under the influence of an intoxicant so as to be unable to form the intent required for a conviction, he cannot be guilty. People v. Manier, 184 Colo. 44, 518 P.2d 811 (1974).

Evidence of intoxication admissible only to determine if accused was capable of premeditation and deliberation. Brennan v. People, 37 Colo. 256, 86 P. 79 (1906); Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

It is only because of the specific intent required for first degree murder that voluntary drunkenness is an excuse even for that crime. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Drunkenness is not an excuse for crime, but when a particular intent forms the gist of the offense, as distinguished from general criminal intent, and is made to depend on the state and condition of the mind of the accused at the time, drunkenness as a fact affecting the control of the mind is proper for the consideration of the jury in determining whether the accused was capable of entertaining the positive and particular intent requisite to make out the offense. Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

Likewise, mental deficiency admissible as to intent. A defendant in a first degree murder case has the right, without reference to a plea of insanity, to establish mental deficiency as bearing upon his capacity to form the specific intent essential to first degree murder. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

For evidence of insanity, see Beckstead v. People, 133 Colo. 72, 292 P.2d 189 (1956); Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

Evidence of general depravity is not admissible to prove guilt of one charged with a crime. While a defendant who takes the stand may be impeached in this state by showing former convictions of a felony, the rule does not extend to admission of acts or occurrences which show bad character on the part of the defendant. Romero v. People, 170 Colo. 234, 460 P.2d 784 (1969).

Acts prior to crime admissible to show intent. In order to show intent, it is not error to permit third parties to testify as to fighting and stabbing by defendants just prior to defendant's fatal attack on deceased. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Evidence of any crime committed by a defendant prior to the acts charged must not be considered for any purpose except that of determining the intent with which the acts charged in the information is done. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

In marital homicide cases, any fact or circumstance relating to ill-feeling, ill-treatment, jealousy, prior assaults, personal violence, threats, or any similar conduct of attitude by the husband toward the wife are relevant to show motive and malice in such crimes and are not evidence of mere general depravity which is not admissible. Romero v. People, 170 Colo. 234, 460 P.2d 784 (1969).

Admissibility of other connected crimes. In the trial of a homicide case, evidence of other crimes which were indivisibly connected with, incidental to, and in furtherance of the plan of defendant to rob a bank and flee, and which are a part of a single transaction, is admissible. Abshier v. People, 87 Colo. 507, 289 P. 1081 (1930).

Other offenses may be offered in evidence where so interwoven with principal transaction that it is necessary to show them in order to give a fair and true understanding of offense charged, particularly where the other transactions were so connected in point of time with the offense under investigation, and so similar in character, that the same motive could be imputed as to all of them. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Evidence presented at trial established conduct that was so closely connected to the main criminal transaction that evidence of it was necessary to complete the story of the crime. Without that evidence, the murder might not be properly understood as the jury would have no basis upon which it could determine the reasons behind defendant's conduct. People v. Gladney, 250 P.3d 762 (Colo. App. 2010).

Actions subsequent to crime admissible to show guilt. The fact that the defendant buried the body, repeatedly lied concerning the disappearance of his wife, went under an assumed name, and, while awaiting trial, escaped from jail, was properly submitted to the jury as evidence of guilt and consciousness of guilt, but the same does not serve to supply the missing element of malice. Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964).

The flight of a person immediately after the commission of a crime is a circumstance establishing his guilt. Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964).

Ballistic test conditions must be substantially similar to the conditions when the shooting occurred in order to be admissible. Jorgenson v. People, 174 Colo. 144, 482 P.2d 962 (1971).

Admission of real evidence. In order to be material and relevant, real evidence must only be connected with the perpetrator, the victim, or the crime. The clothing worn by the victim the night of the crime meets these tests and is properly admitted. Jorgenson v. People, 174 Colo. 144, 482 P.2d 962 (1971).

Pictures can be admitted to show anything a witness would be allowed to testify about. Certainly a doctor could testify to the location of the wounds and the cause of death. The fact that the defendant admitted the killing, relying on self-defense, does not prevent the state from showing the circumstances surrounding it, and the pictures were properly admitted. Jorgenson v. People, 174 Colo. 144, 482 P.2d 962 (1971).

Unless there is an abuse of discretion, the trial court's decision as to admissibility of a large color photograph of the deceased will not be disturbed on review. People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

Articles and statements of codefendants admissible. Defendant and his codefendant jointly participated in the criminal venture which resulted in the homicide. They acted in concert in furtherance of a common illegal purpose, and each, as to the other, was an accomplice. Admitting in evidence as against defendant the articles found in the possession of his codefendant was not error where they were a part of the people's case against both defendants. Miller v. People, 141 Colo. 576, 349 P.2d 685, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 851, 81 S. Ct. 97, 5 L. Ed. 2d 75 (1960).

Error in admitting testimony as to admissions made by codefendant who under prosecution theory was principal perpetrator of robbery and murder where defendant was charged as an accessory, which indicated that another person was present and the admission of which allegedly violated defendant's sixth amendment right of confrontation, was harmless where additional evidence consisting of testimony of three eyewitnesses also established that the robbery was committed by two men. People v. Knapp, 180 Colo. 280, 505 P.2d 7 (1973).

Statements and physical evidence constitute direct evidence. Where a defendant and his codefendant plan the death of defendant's wife and both participate in the execution of the plan, it is immaterial which of them actually strangled the deceased, and where each of them make signed statements and the defendant makes verbal statements to a police officer, such statements, together with the physical evidence in the case, constitute sufficient direct evidence to sustain the death penalty. Leick v. People, 136 Colo. 535, 322 P.2d 674 (1958).

Confession held involuntary and invalid. Oaks v. Patterson, 278 F. Supp. 703 (D. Colo. 1968), aff'd, 400 F.2d 392 (10th Cir. 1968).

Statements taken in violation of Miranda's procedural safeguards are admissible for impeachment purposes. Jorgenson v. People, 174 Colo. 144, 482 P.2d 962 (1971), overruling Velarde v. People, 171 Colo. 261, 466 P.2d 919 (1970).

Admission of hearsay referring to defendant's prior act of homicide held reversible error. People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981).

Evidence sufficient to show expressed malice. Where all the evidence is strongly indicative of the fact that the defendant aimed the vehicle at the victim and struck him, and did not apply brakes nor stop immediately after striking the victim, the evidence is sufficient to show express malice. People v. Casey, 185 Colo. 58, 521 P.2d 1250 (1974).

Circumstantial evidence held sufficient. Morse v. People, 168 Colo. 494, 452 P.2d 3 (1969).

While there is no direct evidence of defendant's intent, there is enough circumstantial evidence from which the jury can infer that defendant intended to commit either burglary or robbery prior to or concurrent with the shooting. People v. Phillips, 219 P.3d 798 (Colo. App. 2009).

Colorado supreme court will refuse to give an advisory opinion on the interpretation of subsection (1)(d), as it relates to the evidence presented in the case, as it would serve little purpose and would have no significant precedential value. People v. Lyle, 200 Colo. 236, 613 P.2d 896 (1980).

Evidence held sufficient to support conviction of first degree murder. Moya v. People, 88 Colo. 139, 293 P. 335 (1930); Frady v. People, 96 Colo. 43, 40 P.2d 606 (1934); Sullivan v. People, 111 Colo. 205, 139 P.2d 876 (1943); Mayer v. People, 116 Colo. 284, 180 P.2d 1017 (1947).

Where the circumstances shown by the evidence were such that the jury could well have been satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that defendant fired the shot resulting in the death of deceased, it was sufficient to sustain a conviction. Atencio v. People, 147 Colo. 566, 364 P.2d 575 (1961).

Evidence sufficient to show victim was killed during robbery. Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972).

Evidence sufficient to convict defendant of felony murder. People v. McCrary, 190 Colo. 538, 549 P.2d 1320 (1976).

Evidence sufficient to establish deliberation. Where a witness testified that the defendant left the room for a moment and returned carrying a wooden stick, that when the victim saw the stick, he asked the defendant, "Where did you get that?" and to this question the defendant replied, "In the bedroom" and began hitting the victim, this evidence was sufficient to establish that the defendant acted after deliberation. People v. Hamrick, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1979), aff'd, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981).

Viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, the evidence was sufficient to induce a person of ordinary prudence to entertain a reasonable belief that defendant committed murder in the first degree where testimony indicated defendant was fighting with victim, threatened to kill victim, obtained a butcher knife, waved the knife at victim, and stabbed victim not once, but twice in the abdominal area, and where circumstances, such as the length of the struggle between defendant and victim permitted the reasonable inference that defendant had adequate time for the exercise of reflection and judgment concerning the fatal act. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

D. Jury.

The right of the prosecution to qualify the jury has consistently been upheld. Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970); English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

The trial judge's questioning of prospective jurors as to their views regarding capital punishment is relevant and proper in prosecution for first degree murder. People v. Mackey, 185 Colo. 24, 521 P.2d 910 (1974).

Juror who would refuse to inflict death penalty is properly excused. A juror who declares that, notwithstanding evidence and instructions, he would under no circumstances vote to inflict the death penalty is properly excused. Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

Trial court properly sustained the challenge for cause of jurors who stated upon voir dire that under no circumstances would they vote to impose the death penalty, as a juror with such convictions would exclude from his consideration one of the penalties prescribed by law. Gallegos v. People, 116 Colo. 129, 179 P.2d 272 (1947).

The test for qualifying the jury for imposition of the death penalty is whether, regardless of his personal beliefs or convictions, a venireman could impose the death penalty. If he cannot set aside those convictions and impose sentence in accord with his oath as a juror, it is not error to exclude him, not because of his beliefs and convictions, but because of his inability to perform his oath as a juror. English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

Such exclusion does not deny trial by jury. A constitutional right to a trial by a jury of his peers is not denied a defendant because 29.3 percent of the jury panel were excluded on challenge for cause because of their unwillingness to consider under any circumstances the imposition of the death penalty. Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970).

Trial by jury may be waived. Since under the statutes, there are no mandatory requirements for the jury to determine the degree of murder or to determine the class of felony and because the criminal defendant has a substantive right to waive a jury trial, defendant could properly waive his right to a jury trial even though he was convicted of a class 1 felony. People v. Cisneros, 720 P.2d 982 (Colo. App.), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 887, 107 S. Ct. 282, 93 L. Ed. 2d 257 (1986).

Juror who merely opposes capital punishment not excludable for cause. A death sentence cannot constitutionally be executed if imposed by a jury from which have been excluded for cause those who, without more, are opposed to capital punishment or have conscientious scruples against imposing the death penalty. This decision does not govern where the jury recommended a sentence of life imprisonment. Padilla v. People, 171 Colo. 521, 470 P.2d 846 (1970).

Voir dire on death penalty proper. Where charge was murder in the first degree, it was not improper to permit prosecuting attorney to qualify jurors to return the death penalty, where evidence to be presented was wholly circumstantial, since at the time of examination of jurors it was possible that witness would be found to give direct evidence, or that defendant, upon direct or cross-examination, might incriminate himself to the extent that death penalty could be sought. Atencio v. People, 147 Colo. 566, 364 P.2d 575 (1961).

Court may not invade province of jury. A person charged with murder is tried by a jury; they alone must determine the facts, and no court, either trial or appellate, has a right to constitute itself a trier of facts, and thus invade the province of a jury. The question of the weight of testimony and the credibility of the witnesses is to be determined by the jury, properly instructed as to the law. Unless this course is followed, a defendant is deprived of his constitutional right of a trial by jury. Gallegos v. People, 136 Colo. 321, 316 P.2d 884 (1957).

Jury sequestration. Trial of a first degree murder charge is a "capital case" for purposes of jury sequestration under Crim. P. 24(f) (as it existed prior to the 1983 amendment) even though the district attorney does not intend to qualify the jury for consideration of the death penalty or to seek the imposition of the death penalty in the event of a conviction. People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983).

Intention is question to be submitted to jury. Whether intention is shown by evidence of antecedent menaces, former grudges, the means employed to effect the homicide, or any other circumstances which may give assurance of it, it is to be submitted to the jury to find the fact under the direction of the law. Hill v. People, 1 Colo. 436 (1872).

If there was evidence relevant to the issue of manslaughter, its credibility and force were for the jury to consider in determining the facts, and not as a matter of law for the decision of the court. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

Whether defendant acted with premeditation is for the jury to determine after a consideration of all the facts and circumstances in evidence, including those affecting his mental condition at the time. Ingles v. People, 92 Colo. 518, 22 P.2d 1109 (1933).

Where from this evidence the jury could have found that defendant had formed a premeditated design to take the life of the deceased or that there was no considerable provocation for the killing, it was not for the trial court to determine as a matter of law, but for the jury under proper instructions to resolve as a matter of fact, the question of whether premeditation existed. People v. Spinuzzi, 149 Colo. 391, 369 P.2d 427 (1962), overruled on another point in People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

Express malice is a question of fact to be determined by the jury on all the evidence in the case. Lopez v. People, 175 Colo. 503, 488 P.2d 892 (1971).

Facts other than killing must exist to submit charge of murder. It is only when, in addition to the killing, facts and circumstances attending or surrounding the homicide are laid before the jury that the necessary inferences of fact to complete the crime of murder can be rightfully drawn. Kent v. People, 8 Colo. 563, 9 P. 852 (1885).

There being no evidence of malice, premeditation, deliberation, intention to kill, or killing showing an abandoned and malignant heart, it was error to submit to the jury instructions defining murder and forms of verdict whereby they could find the defendant guilty of murder. Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964).

Intoxication is question for jury. Where there was evidence tending to prove drunkenness, it was for the jury to determine whether the defendant was so intoxicated as to be unable to form the deliberate intent necessary. Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

Whether injuries inflicted began chain of events causing death is question for jury. Where the defendant attacked an epileptic who had consumed a considerable amount of whiskey and had failed to take his prescribed medication, the question for the jury's determination was whether the injuries inflicted by the defendant began a chain of events which in their natural and probable consequences caused the victim's death. Hamrick v. People, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981).

E. Instructions.

Courts should excise irrelevant portions of a murder instruction to conform to the evidence in the case. People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

Use of word "homicide" is preferred to term "murder". A homicide is the killing of a human being by another. It is the unlawful commission of homicide that renders the perpetrator guilty of a crime, and consequently in court instructions to a jury concerning the law as to this offense the use of the word "homicide" is proper and to be preferred to the term "murder". Leopold v. People, 105 Colo. 147, 95 P.2d 811 (1939).

"After deliberation" needs no elaboration, unless requested. The phrase "after deliberation" is neither so unusual nor so unfamiliar as to require elaboration, although a trial court should give an instruction on the meaning of this statutory phrase if requested by a defendant. People v. Beltran, 634 P.2d 1003 (Colo. App. 1981).

"Acting either alone or with one or more persons" does not define an element of the offense, but merely makes clear that guilt results in either case. People v. Bastin, 937 P.2d 761 (Colo. App. 1996).

Instruction on first degree murder and felony murder held proper. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Instruction on elements of felony murder proper. Instruction that if homicide was committed in perpetrating robbery, premeditation and intent are not necessary elements of the crime charged and need not be proved, is held proper in view of this section. Frady v. People, 96 Colo. 43, 40 P.2d 606 (1934).

Instruction on circumstantial evidence. In the trial of any murder case, where the prosecution relies in whole or in part on circumstantial evidence, if defendant's counsel desires an instruction on such evidence, it is his duty to prepare and tender such, and its refusal may constitute error. Berger v. People, 122 Colo. 367, 224 P.2d 228 (1950).

Instruction on intent. Upon the trial of an information for homicide, the accused is entitled to an instruction that the intent of the prisoner is for the jury, and that the presumption of innocence attends the prisoner throughout the trial and must be overcome by evidence excluding reasonable doubt. Young v. People, 47 Colo. 352, 107 P. 274 (1910).

Defendant's failure at trial to object to the lack of a "specific intent" definition instruction and a voluntary intoxication instruction makes constitutional harmless error review inapplicable. Under plain error review, trial court's failure to properly instruct the jury that "after deliberation" is an element of first degree murder that is negated by voluntary intoxication did not constitute plain error. People v. Miller, 113 P.3d 743 (Colo. 2005).

Instructions adequately advised jury on premeditation and presumption of innocence. Carroll v. People, 177 Colo. 288, 494 P.2d 80 (1972).

Where instruction refers to crimes proscribed by section, general verdict form not error. Where the trial court's instruction on the charge of first degree murder stated clearly that the jury was entitled to find the defendant guilty of that crime if it determined that he had committed the crime proscribed by (1)(a) or the crime proscribed by subsection (1)(b), the use of a general verdict form referring to the crime "as charged in count one of the indictment" was not error. People v. Glenn, 200 Colo. 416, 615 P.2d 700 (1980).

Instructions on flight. Robbins v. People, 142 Colo. 254, 350 P.2d 818 (1960); Stafford v. People, 154 Colo. 113, 388 P.2d 774 (1964); People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

No jury instruction explaining or defining "immediate flight" is necessary. These are words of common meaning, not a legal term of art. People v. Auman, 67 P.3d 741 (Colo. App. 2002), rev'd on other grounds, 109 P.3d 647 (Colo. 2005).

Reversal of second degree burglary conviction because of erroneous theft instruction required reversal of felony murder conviction. Auman v. People, 109 P.3d 647 (Colo. 2005).

Instruction based on statutory presumptions of intoxication not applicable to issue of first degree murder. Roybal v. People, 177 Colo. 144, 493 P.2d 9 (1972).

Instruction held not to express court's belief in guilt of accused. An instruction declared that "deliberately" does not mean brooded over, or reflected upon, for a week, day or hour, "but an intent to kill executed by the defendant" in cold blood. The use of the definite article in referring to the accused was held not to be taken as the court's expression of a belief in his guilt. King v. People, 54 Colo. 122, 129 P. 235 (1912).

Court is not required to instruct as to grade unsupported by evidence. In a homicide case, the court is not required to instruct on second degree murder where there is no evidence upon which to base such an instruction.

Jones v. People, 93 Colo. 282, 26 P.2d 103 (1933); Reppin v. People, 95 Colo. 192, 34 P.2d 71 (1934).

In a prosecution for murder where there is no evidence from which a jury would be justified in finding the defendant guilty of manslaughter, a trial judge is not required to instruct upon that grade of homicide. Crawford v. People, 12 Colo. 290, 20 P. 769 (1888); Mow v. People, 31 Colo. 351, 72 P. 1069 (1903); Carpenter v. People, 31 Colo. 284, 72 P. 1072 (1903); Demato v. People, 49 Colo. 147, 111 P. 703 (1910).

In a case of felonious homicide, if the evidence shows the killing to have been deliberate and intentional, there is no question of manslaughter presented, and therefore no reason for submitting that question to the jury. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Murder in the second degree is not an issue where there are no facts in the record justifying submission of instructions and a verdict defining second degree murder. Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

An instruction on second degree murder is improper where, by the evidence, the crime was perpetrated in the commission of one of the felonies named, for in such circumstances the verdict must be first degree murder or acquittal. Jones v. People, 146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961).

But prerogative should be exercised with caution. Where there is an affray and where self-defense is relied on, the court exercises an exceedingly dangerous prerogative in refusing to charge upon the minor as well as the graver offenses covered by the indictment. He should be absolutely certain that there is an entire absence of evidence bearing upon the particular grade or grades omitted. Young v. People, 47 Colo. 352, 107 P. 274 (1910); Gallegos v. People, 136 Colo. 321, 316 P.2d 884 (1957).

Instruction on manslaughter held properly refused. Shank v. People, 79 Colo. 576, 247 P. 559 (1926).

Where the evidence reveals that defendant participated in a brutal and heartless assault and robbery committed on the person of the deceased, no other verdict than that of first degree murder would have been justified, and it was not error to omit instruction on the lesser degrees of homicide. Ceja v. People, 142 Colo. 447, 351 P.2d 271 (1960).

Failure of trial court to give instruction relating to fists as a deadly weapon was not error where the evidence presented did not justify the giving of such instruction. People v. Duran, 185 Colo. 359, 524 P.2d 296 (1974).

Error not to instruct on manslaughter. When there is competent evidence which could conceivably reduce a homicide to manslaughter, the defendant is entitled to an instruction thereon, as where homicides occur during an affray and are unintentional, accidental, a result of misadventure, or in self-defense. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

When there is any evidence, however improbable, unreasonable, or slight, which tends to reduce a homicide to the grade of manslaughter, a defendant is entitled to an instruction thereon upon the hypothesis that the same is true, and that it is for the jury, under proper instructions, and not the trial judge, to weigh and consider the evidence and determine therefrom what grade of crime, if any, was committed, and a court's refusal to instruct thereon is reversible error. Gallegos v. People, 136 Colo. 321, 316 P.2d 884 (1957); People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 426, 609 P.2d 1105 (1979).

Refusal to instruct on a lesser included offense in a homicide case is reversible error as long as there is some evidence, however slight, tending to establish the lesser included offense. People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982).

If there is evidence tending to establish a statutory grade of homicide, the court's refusal to instruct thereon is error. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Where during the trial for first degree murder defendant presented a plausible case for self-defense, which even if the jury deemed it to be an overreaction, nevertheless would negate the elements of murder, the trial court should have instructed the jury on the lesser offense of manslaughter, as defendant requested. People v. Miller, 187 Colo. 239, 529 P.2d 648 (1974).

Jury may be instructed that there is no evidence of manslaughter. If there was no evidence upon which a verdict of manslaughter could be based, then the trial court was justified in instructing the jury to that effect. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

In a murder trial an erroneous instruction taking from the jury the consideration of all degrees of murder, excepting the first, is not grounds for reversing a conviction in the first degree and a sentence of life imprisonment, where the entire evidence, including that of the accused, excludes the idea of manslaughter and fully warrants the conviction and the infliction of the death penalty. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 345, 93 P. 478 (1907).

Refusal to instruct that there can be no conviction for less than first degree murder may be error. Where upon the trial of an indictment for murder, the evidence shows that the crime was deliberate, and no fact is shown leading to a contrary inference, there should be no conviction of the crime in any less degree. The refusal of the court below to instruct accordingly on request of the prisoner is prejudicial error. Dickens v. People, 67 Colo. 409, 186 P. 277 (1919).

Or that only issue for determination is whether punishment shall be death or life imprisonment. Where, in a homicide case, it is admitted that the killing was done in the perpetration of a robbery and in no other way, the offense being murder of the first degree, the trial court properly instructed the jury that the only issue for them to determine was whether the punishment to be inflicted should be death or imprisonment for life. Reppin v. People, 95 Colo. 192, 34 P.2d 71 (1934).

No error in failing to instruct jury on attempted first degree murder where victim's injuries were such that no rational jury could have found the shooter acted with anything but a premeditated intent to cause death. People v. Brown, 218 P.3d 733 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

When court must instruct jury on second degree murder. Trial court does not have to instruct jury on the lesser included offense when there is no evidence to support the instruction. People v. Jones, 677 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1983), rev'd, 711 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1986).

Error to submit nonfelony murder to jury. Where a petitioner's acts from the time he took money from the victim until he shot the victim were one continuous integrated attempt to successfully complete his crime and escape detection, and the escape with ill-gotten gains was as important to the execution of the robbery as gaining possession of the property, robbery and homicide were not distinct transactions, and, therefore, submission of a nonfelony murder to jury would not have been justified. Bizup v. Tinsley, 211 F. Supp. 545 (D. Colo. 1962), aff'd, 316 F.2d 284 (10th Cir. 1963).

Where the charge is first degree murder occurring during the commission of a felony, lesser included offenses need not be submitted to the jury. Kurtz v. People, 177 Colo. 306, 494 P.2d 97 (1972).

Felony murder conviction based upon crime of simple robbery sustained without jury finding existence of aggravation even though jury instruction included allegation of aggravation. People v. Driggers, 812 P.2d 702 (Colo. App. 1991).

Where jury was instructed that if it found the People had failed to prove the elements of first degree murder beyond a reasonable doubt, it should consider any of the lesser offenses, not just second degree murder but also provoked passion manslaughter, the instructions adequately described the prosecution's burden of proof and did not unconstitutionally shift the burden of proof to the defendant in violation of his due process rights. People v. Seigler, 832 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

Defendant is not entitled to an instruction on the affirmative defense of disengagement from the crime for a charge of felony murder where the defendant failed to present evidence of each of the elements listed in subsection (2).

People v. Lucas, 992 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1999).

Defendant is not entitled to an instruction on self-defense in trial for extreme indifference murder. For certain actions to constitute self-defense, defendant must have acted in a reasonable manner. Finding a defendant guilty of extreme indifference murder necessarily precludes a finding that his actions were reasonable, as the "universal malice" element of the offense requires the jury to conclude that the defendant acted with aggravated recklessness. People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant not entitled to instruction that jury must reach unanimous decision as to whether defendant committed first degree murder after deliberation either as a complicitor or as principal. Those alternative legal theories are two means of committing a single offense, and are not an impermissible distinction requiring a unanimity instruction. People v. Hall, 60 P.3d 728 (Colo. App. 2002).

F. Affirmative Defense.

Self-defense may be available as an affirmative defense to a predicate felony but not as to the resulting death. People v. Renaud, 942 P.2d 1253 (Colo. App. 1996).

Self-defense does not apply to felony murder. Trial court merged the second degree murder charge into the felony murder charge, thus, the only murder charge remaining was felony murder. As a result, any error in the self-defense instruction as given was harmless. People v. Palmer, 87 P.3d 137 (Colo. App. 2003).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

It was error to grant a motion for a directed verdict in a murder prosecution on the ground that there was no evidence of premeditation based on fact that there was no acquaintanceship between defendant and deceased and no evidence of animosity between them, since malice is not synonymous with motive, and motive is not essential in murder prosecution. People v. Spinuzzi, 149 Colo. 391, 369 P.2d 427 (1962), overruled on other grounds, People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

No verdict other than first degree murder possible where the evidence overwhelmingly establishes the guilt of the defendant in a brutal and heartless assault and robbery committed upon the person of the deceased, and the defendant had a fair trial, one that was conducted in all respects pursuant to law. Ceja v. People, 142 Colo. 447, 351 P.2d 271 (1960).

Where murder is committed in the perpetration or attempt to perpetrate one of the felonies specified in this section, there is only one degree of murder, namely, murder of the first degree. If the uncontradicted evidence is to the effect that murder was committed in one of the ways specified above, and in no other way, the question of second degree murder is not in the case, and the defendant should be found guilty of murder of the first degree or acquitted; there is no middle course. Jones v. People, 93 Colo. 282, 26 P.2d 103 (1933); Early v. People, 142 Colo. 462, 352 P.2d 112, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 847, 81 S. Ct. 90, 5 L. Ed. 2d 70 (1960).

In a capital case the punishment to be inflicted rests with the jury, and refusal of the trial court to accept a plea of guilty of second degree murder on recommendation of the district attorney was upheld. Frady v. People, 96 Colo. 43, 40 P.2d 606 (1934).

One of the appointed functions of jurors is to fix the penalty in first degree murder cases. Fleagle v. People, 87 Colo. 532, 289 P. 1078 (1930).

The particular manner in which a murder is committed does not govern the penalty when a verdict in the first degree is returned, but the penalty to be imposed is a matter solely for the jury to fix, either at imprisonment for life, or death. Henwood v. People, 57 Colo. 544, 143 P. 373 (1914).

Term of imprisonment is within discretion of court. The term of imprisonment within the limits prescribed is wholly within the discretion of the court. Arrano v. People, 24 Colo. 233, 49 P. 271 (1897).

Life imprisonment is minimum sentence for first degree murder. People v. Pacheco, 41 Colo. App. 188, 581 P.2d 741 (1978).

Error in enhancement of sentence for crime of violence. Where a defendant is convicted of first degree murder, and the mittimus reads that he was found to have committed a "crime of violence", but the jury was not instructed on the elements of crime of violence nor given a separate verdict form or interrogatory as required, enhancement of sentence for having committed a crime of violence would be plain error. The cause must be remanded for correction of the mittimus to show conviction of first degree murder only, and for imposition of sentence on that crime only. People v. Thrower, 670 P.2d 1251 (Colo. App. 1983).

Although defendant could not be convicted for felony-murder and murder after deliberation based on killing of single victim, sufficient evidence existed to sustain defendant's conviction for first degree murder, and thus judgment of conviction for first degree murder after deliberation and sentence imposed thereon would be affirmed while judgment of conviction and sentence for felony-murder would be vacated. People v. Brown, 731 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1986).

Although a finding of specific intent to kill a particular victim precludes a simultaneous finding of extreme indifference to the value of human life generally, it is permissible nonetheless for the People to charge on two different theories of first degree murder. After the close of evidence, the People may, but are not required to, elect between the theories charged. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

Defendant's remedy was not a new trial where jury returned guilty verdicts on the theory of first degree murder and attempted first degree murder by extreme indifference and on the lesser included offenses, under either theory of first degree murder, of second degree murder and attempted second degree murder; rather, the remedy is to merge the lesser offense of second degree murder into the greater. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

A verdict of guilt on second degree murder, as a lesser included offense to a charge of first degree murder after deliberation is not legally inconsistent with a verdict of guilt on a charge of first degree murder by extreme indifference. No simultaneous acceptance and rejection by the jury of evidence relied upon for these convictions occurred since the jury's determination that defendant did not act with deliberation did not require rejection of evidence that he acted knowingly and with universal malice. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

Jury's province to determine degree of murder evidence justifies. Assuming the sufficiency of the evidence to support first degree murder, it is strictly within the province of the jury to evaluate the evidence and say by its verdict whether the evidence justifies a verdict of first or second degree murder. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

Sentences concurrent with life sentence proper. Where the defendant was sentenced for life imprisonment for first degree murder and lesser sentences for first degree burglary and theft which the jury found he had committed, and all sentences were imposed concurrently with the life sentence which the jury ordered, there was no error. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

Defective sentence may be amended to supply minimum. Smith v. Best, 115 Colo. 494, 176 P.2d 686 (1946).

Trial court may correct sentence where punishment only reversed. In a first degree murder case when the United States supreme court affirms the guilt verdict, and invalidates the punishment portion of the verdict only because the jury was not constitutionally qualified to fix the death penalty, and the sole alternative under the statute as to punishment available to the jury is life imprisonment, the entry by the trial court of such a judgment is a mere ministerial act within the power and authority of the trial judge under the terms and within the contemplation of Crim. P. 35. Segura v. District Court, 179 Colo. 20, 498 P.2d 926 (1972).

Sentence of life imprisonment with no possibility of parole for a juvenile offender was not disproportionate to offense under this section. People v. Fernandez, 883 P.2d 491 (Colo. App. 1994).

18-3-103. Murder in the second degree. (1) A person commits the crime of murder in the second degree if the person knowingly causes the death of a person.

(2) Diminished responsibility due to self-induced intoxication is not a defense to murder in the second degree.

(2.5) (Deleted by amendment, L. 96, p. 1844, § 12, effective July 1, 1996.)

(3) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), murder in the second degree is a class 2 felony.

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), murder in the second degree is a class 3 felony where the act causing the death was performed upon a sudden heat of passion, caused by a serious and highly provoking act of the intended victim, affecting the defendant sufficiently to excite an irresistible passion in a reasonable person; but, if between the provocation and the killing there is an interval sufficient for the voice of reason and humanity to be heard, the killing is a class 2 felony.

(4) A defendant convicted pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be sentenced by the court in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 418, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-103. L. 75: (1)(a) amended, p. 622, § 1, effective March 19. L. 77: (1)(a) amended and (1)(b) repealed, pp. 960, 971, §§ 6, 67, effective July 1. L. 86: (4) added, p. 776, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: IP(1) amended and (2.5) added, p. 1222, § 5, effective July 1. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1844, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4) amended, p. 1512, § 184, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. Evidence.
 - B. Defenses.
 - C. Instructions.
- IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L. J. 137 (1972). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For note, "Extreme-Indifference Murder: The Impact of People v. Marcy", see 54 U. Colo. L. Rev. 83 (1982).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-103 is similar to former § 40-2-3, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is not unconstitutionally overbroad. People v. Gladney, 194 Colo. 68, 570 P.2d 231 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1038, 98 S. Ct. 776, 54 L. Ed. 2d 787 (1978).

Subsection (2) is not violative of the due process clause of the Colorado Constitution. People v. Campisi, 649 P.2d 1053 (Colo. 1982).

This section does not violate due process rights by rendering irrelevant evidence concerning an impaired mental condition due to voluntary intoxication. People v. Loscutoff, 661 P.2d 274 (Colo. 1983).

Distinction between second degree murder and manslaughter constitutional. The difference between the mental states required for second degree murder (knowingly) and manslaughter (recklessly) mirrors the distinction between practically certain of result on the one hand, and probability or contingency of result on the other, and this difference is sufficient to avoid an equal protection violation. People v. Padilla, 638 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1981).

Section constitutionally distinguishable from manslaughter statute, § 18-3-104 (1)(a), because the two statutes require different mens rea elements for conviction. People v. DelGuidice, 199 Colo. 41, 606 P.2d 840 (1979); People v. Padilla, 638 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1981). See People v. White, 199 Colo. 82, 606 P.2d 847 (1980).

Statutory prohibition of extreme indifference murder in § 18-3-102 (1)(d) (as it existed prior to the 1983 amendment) violated equal protection of the laws because it could not reasonably be distinguished from the lesser offense of second degree murder as defined in this section. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981); Crespin v. People, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

Both first degree murder by extreme indifference and second degree murder are committed "knowingly" and are thus general intent crimes. People v. Rodriguez, 888 P.2d 278 (Colo. App. 1994).

The general assembly intended that there be two grades of murder. People v. Sneed, 183 Colo. 96, 514 P.2d 776 (1973).

Distinction intended to be meaningful. The general assembly intended that there be a meaningful distinction between first and second degree murder. People v. Mullins, 188 Colo. 23, 532 P.2d 733 (1975).

The distinctions between § 18-3-102 and this section are not inconsequential and satisfy due process requirements and the informational requirements of § 16 of art. II, Colo. Const. People v. Mendoza, 195 Colo. 19, 575 P.2d 403 (1978).

Lesser included offense of first degree murder. The difference in substance between first degree murder and second degree murder is that first degree murder requires the additional element of premeditation. Since proof of first degree murder necessarily establishes every element of second degree murder, the latter is necessarily a lesser included offense of the former. People v. Gladney, 194 Colo. 68, 570 P.2d 231 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1038, 98 S. Ct. 776, 54 L. Ed. 2d 787 (1978).

A conviction for attempted second degree murder cannot merge with a conviction for attempted first degree murder with extreme indifference when the offenses had different victims. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

Felony menacing is not a lesser included offense of attempted second degree murder. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

The offense of second degree murder does not establish every element of felony menacing. Attempted second degree murder requires a defendant to knowingly engage in conduct that is a substantial step toward causing the death of a person. There is no requirement that the victim be in fear of imminent serious bodily injury. Thus, an attempted second degree murder conviction does not necessarily establish all the elements of menacing. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

Second degree murder as defined in this section is "conceptually distinguishable" from intentional manslaughter. People v. Gladney, 194 Colo. 68, 570 P.2d 231 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1038, 98 S. Ct. 776, 54 L. Ed. 2d 787 (1978).

Applied in Salas v. District Court, 190 Colo. 447, 548 P.2d 605 (1976); Reliford v. People, 195 Colo. 549, 579 P.2d 1145 (1978); People v. Sepeda, 196 Colo. 13, 581 P.2d 723 (1978);

People v. Fink, 41 Colo. App. 47, 579 P.2d 659 (1978); People v. Parsons, 199 Colo. 421, 610 P.2d 93 (1980); People v. Botham, 629 P.2d 589 (Colo. 1981); People v. Chavez, 629 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lee, 630 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1981); Coston v. People, 633 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1981); People v. Harris, 633 P.2d 1095 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1287 (Colo. 1983); People v. Clark, 662 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Fisher, 759 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1988).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

Term “knowingly” describes the requisite culpability for second degree murder. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

No requirement that knowing conduct be directed against person actually killed. There is no requirement that the knowing conduct essential to second degree murder be directed against the person actually killed. On the contrary, the offense is a general intent crime, and as long as the offender knowingly acts in the proscribed manner and causes the death of another, he is guilty of the crime, even though the person killed is not the person against whom the criminal conduct was directed. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

Elements of murder in second degree concerning defendant’s state of mind are: (1) That the death was more than merely a probable result of the defendant’s actions; and (2) that the defendant was aware of the circumstances which made death practically certain. The first is an objective standard; the second, a subjective standard. People v. Mingo, 196 Colo. 315, 584 P.2d 632 (1978); People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 70, 595 P.2d 1045 (1979).

The express statutory definition of second degree murder does not include malice as an element. People v. Gladney, 194 Colo. 68, 570 P.2d 231 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1038, 98 S. Ct. 776, 54 L. Ed. 2d 787 (1978).

For discussion of element of implied malice required by former statute, see Walker v. People, 175 Colo. 173, 489 P.2d 584 (1971); People v. Morant, 179 Colo. 287, 499 P.2d 1173 (1972); People v. Gallegos, 180 Colo. 238, 504 P.2d 343 (1972); People v. Tapia, 183 Colo. 141, 515 P.2d 453 (1973); People v. Garcia, 186 Colo. 167, 526 P.2d 292 (1974).

Application of specific intent as element. Specific intent as an element of second degree murder applies whenever the events giving rise to a second degree murder charge occurred after the 1973 amendments. People v. Stitt, 40 Colo. App. 355, 575 P.2d 446 (1978).

Second degree murder is general intent crime which entails being aware that one’s actions are practically certain to result in another’s death. People v. Mingo, 196 Colo. 315, 584 P.2d 632 (1978).

Second degree murder consists of an unlawful killing without premeditation and deliberation. Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

Conviction requires proof that death natural consequence of unlawful act. A conviction for criminal homicide requires proof beyond a reasonable doubt that the death was a natural and probable consequence of the defendant’s unlawful act. People v. Fite, 627 P.2d 761 (Colo. 1981).

Unlawful infliction of wound which develops into fatal infection renders offender criminally responsible for the consequential death. People v. Fite, 627 P.2d 761 (Colo. 1981).

For “premeditated intent” and “intentionally, but without premeditation” as different elements, prior to the 1975 amendment of § 18-3-102, see People v. Pearson, 190 Colo. 313, 546 P.2d 1259 (1976).

There is no crime of second degree felony murder in the state of Colorado. Sawyer v. People, 173 Colo. 351, 478 P.2d 672 (1970).

Subsection (3) sets forth the elements of provocation, which is a mitigating factor and not a separate crime or a lesser included offense of murder in the second degree. If proven, provocation is a statutory mitigating factor that will reduce a defendant’s sentence for second degree murder, but it is not an element of a separate offense. Further, to secure a conviction of second degree murder, the prosecution must prove a lack of provocation beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Garcia, 1 P.3d 214 (Colo. App. 1999), aff’d, 28 P.3d 340 (Colo. 2001).

The general assembly intended to eliminate the offense of heat of passion manslaughter and create a single crime of second degree murder with two different felony levels by making provocation, or acting in the heat of passion, a factor in mitigation of second degree murder. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2001).

Second degree murder is a per se crime of violence, even if committed in the heat of passion. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 582 (Colo. App. 2001).

Second degree murder is a lesser included offense of first degree murder as well as the associated attempt offenses. Brown v. People, 239 P.3d 764 (Colo. 2010).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. Evidence.

It is the people’s burden to make out a case that would have sustained a verdict of guilty of first or second degree murder before the prosecution is entitled to instructions thereto. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Subsection (2) does not create any presumption of culpability, conclusive or otherwise, and the prosecution retains the burden of establishing the defendant's guilt as to all elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981).

Prosecution's burden of proving "knowingly". Subsection (2) does not lessen the prosecution's constitutional burden to prove the requisite culpability of "knowingly" for a second-degree murder. People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981).

Where the trial court admits evidence as to the defendant's diminished mental capacity and such evidence is considered as to the charge of murder in the second degree, subsection (2) does not unconstitutionally restrict the defense in contesting the culpability element of the charge nor does it lessen the prosecution's burden of proving guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981).

Proof of killing alone is not murder. Proof of the mere abstract fact that the accused killed the deceased will not sustain a verdict of guilty of first or second degree murder based on instructions thereto. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Presumption of intent to kill may be presumed or implied as inference of fact from act itself with regard to second degree murder. People v. Morant, 179 Colo. 287, 499 P.2d 1173 (1972).

The use of a deadly weapon is sufficient to support finding of second degree murder. Hervey v. People, 178 Colo. 38, 495 P.2d 204 (1972).

Use of a deadly weapon is not in itself sufficient to show deliberation. People v. Hamrick, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1979), aff'd, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981).

Evidence sustaining first degree verdict sustains verdict in second degree. When evidence viewed in its most favorable light was sufficient to sustain a verdict of first degree murder, that evidence must perforce sustain a finding of second degree murder. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

Jury's province to determine degree evidence justifies. Assuming the sufficiency of the evidence to support first degree murder, it is strictly within the province of the jury to evaluate the evidence and say by its verdict whether the evidence justifies a verdict of first or second degree murder. People v. Lankford, 185 Colo. 445, 524 P.2d 1382 (1974).

First and second degree murder properly submitted to jury. Where there was sufficient evidence to support the contention of the prosecution that the offense of murder in the first degree had been committed, but a jury could find from the evidence that because defendant had been the victim of a robbery at the hands of decedent he was seeking revenge, it was within the province of the jury to determine whether the evidence established beyond a reasonable doubt that there was no justification or considerable provocation in the circumstances of the homicide; hence, an instruction and form of verdict on second degree murder was proper. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Court properly excluded defendant's expert heat of passion testimony because the heat of passion mitigator does not apply when a person seeks out the highly provoking act in question, as defendant did here. Therefore, trial court properly excluded the testimony since it would not have been helpful to the jury. People v. Valdez, 183 P.3d 720 (Colo. App. 2008).

After properly refusing to allow defendant's expert heat of passion testimony, trial court erred by instructing the jury on the heat of passion mitigator. People v. Valdez, 183 P.3d 720 (Colo. App. 2008).

Section 18-1-803 does not require evidence of any psychiatric abnormality or independent testimony to analyze the effect of a blow on the defendant's mental state. This effect may be inferred from the evidence present. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Court may deny admitting testimony that alcohol found in victim's bloodstream. As a matter of law, a trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying the admission of an expert's testimony that some alcohol and drug traces were found in the murder victim's bloodstream without any effort to show how such substances might have affected the victim's behavior. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Instruction on mental condition required if any evidence tends to establish impairment. An instruction on impaired mental condition is required if there is any evidence tending to establish that a blow to the defendant's head impaired his mental condition sufficiently to preclude formation of a conscious objective to cause the victim's death. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

The perpetrator may testify to his state of mind at the time of the homicide, but the jury is not bound by this statement and may consider the attendant circumstances in resolving the matter. Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

Evidence sufficient to establish deliberation. Where a witness testified that the defendant left the room for a moment and returned carrying a wooden stick, that when the victim saw the stick he asked the defendant, "Where did you get that?" and to this question the defendant replied, "In the bedroom", and began hitting the victim, this evidence was sufficient to establish that the defendant acted after deliberation. People v. Hamrick, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. App. 1979), aff'd, 624 P.2d 1320 (Colo. 1981).

Jury had sufficient evidence to determine that defendant was aware his conduct was practically certain to result in victim's death. People v. Fry, 74 P.3d 360 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 92 P.3d 970 (Colo. 2004).

Sufficient evidence to support a jury finding that defendant knew his conduct was practically certain to cause death. Evidence of the size differential between the defendant and victim, the way the defendant struck the victim, and the defendant's effort to conceal the crime afterwards was sufficient to support a jury finding that defendant knew his actions would cause death. Mata-Medina v. People, 71 P.3d 973 (Colo. 2003).

Evidence sufficient for conviction of second degree murder. People v. Naranjo, 181 Colo. 273, 509 P.2d 1235 (1973); People v. Garcia, 186 Colo. 167, 526 P.2d 292 (1974); Crespin v. People, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986); People v. Sepulveda, 65 P.3d 1002 (Colo. 2003).

B. Defenses.

Gross negligence constitutes defense. Gross negligence, not being reasonably foreseeable, constitutes a defense to criminal homicide under those circumstances where, but for the gross negligence, death would not have resulted. People v. Fite, 627 P.2d 761 (Colo. 1981).

Intoxication does not negative the necessary capacity to be guilty of second degree murder. Watkins v. People, 158 Colo. 485, 408 P.2d 425 (1965).

Even if lack of deliberation and premeditation because of intoxication is shown, second degree murder can be proved. Washington v. People, 158 Colo. 115, 405 P.2d 735 (1965), cert. denied, 383 U.S. 953, 86 S. Ct. 1217, 16 L. Ed. 2d 215 (1966).

An instruction limiting voluntary intoxication as an affirmative defense to second degree murder does not constitute a violation of due process by reducing the people's burden of proving every element of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. DelGuidice, 199 Colo. 41, 606 P.2d 840 (1979). See People v. White, 199 Colo. 82, 606 P.2d 847 (1980); People v. Lee, 199 Colo. 301, 607 P.2d 998 (1980).

Subsection (2) prohibits admission of evidence of voluntary intoxication to contest the general intent required for second degree murder. People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Vasquez, 148 P.3d 326 (Colo. App. 2006).

For voluntary intoxication as an affirmative defense prior to the 1977 amendment of this section, see People v. Cornelison, 192 Colo. 337, 559 P.2d 1102 (1977).

Killing in self-defense justified. A general fight ensued under circumstances which could lead only to the conclusion on the part of defendant that he was being set upon by at least three assailants. Defendant made his way out of the booth and was obviously trying to get out of the tavern. There was scuffling outside and defendant fired a second shot which fatally wounded deceased. Under the law and the circumstances, defendant had the right to defend himself against the threatened assault of those whose lawlessness and utter disregard of his right resulted in the justifiable killing of one of their number. The conviction of second degree murder is reversed and defendant discharged. Maes v. People, 166 Colo. 15, 441 P.2d 1 (1968).

Intentional death not result of mutual combat. A defendant cannot avoid the consequences of a deliberate, intentional act of murder on grounds of mutual combat or hot state of blood when the person killed was not a party to the mutual combat nor a bystander accidentally and unintentionally slain. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Attack by policeman was murder. A policeman who, without justification, strikes a citizen with his billy, in a manner calculated to produce death, but without deliberation or premeditation, is guilty of murder in the second degree if death ensues. Campbell v. People, 55 Colo. 302, 133 P. 1043 (1913).

The refusal of a marriage proposal and the request or demand to leave one's home cannot under any circumstances rise to the level of provocation that would justify a reasonable person to use violence. Thus, there was not sufficient evidence to support the heat of passion mitigator. People v. Ramirez, 56 P.3d 89 (Colo. App. 2002).

C. Instructions.

Error to charge conviction of second degree murder required if killing was without deliberation. It is error to charge the jury that, if they believe the killing was without any deliberation or premeditation whatever, they should convict of murder of the second degree; and such charge must be considered erroneous, even when the conviction is murder of the first degree. Babcock v. People, 13 Colo. 515, 22 P. 817 (1889).

Error to instruct upon higher degree of homicide when evidence will not support such instructions. Leonard v. People, 149 Colo. 360, 369 P.2d 54 (1962).

Error in instruction on higher degree of crime not prejudicial to one convicted of lesser crime. Walker v. People, 126 Colo. 135, 248 P.2d 287 (1952); Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

The accused cannot complain of an error in instructing the jury as to the higher degree of the crime charged where the jury is properly instructed as to the lower degree and returns a verdict of guilty of the lower degree, especially with respect to charges upon the different grades and degrees of culpable homicide. Walker v. People, 126 Colo. 135, 248 P.2d 287 (1952); Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956); Crespin v. People, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

Error to instruct that the prosecution was required to prove the elements of provocation beyond a reasonable doubt. Since provocation is a mitigating factor, not a separate offense, the prosecution must prove a lack of provocation in order to secure a conviction of second degree murder. People v. Garcia, 1 P.3d 214 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 28 P.3d 340 (Colo. 2001).

A provocation instruction is warranted whenever a defendant shows some supporting evidence—regardless of how incredible, unreasonable, improbable, or slight it may be—to establish each factor described in subsection (3)(b). Cassels v. People, 92 P.3d 951 (Colo. 2004).

Instruction on involuntary manslaughter should have been granted. Where one of the defense theories was that the grade of the crime, if there was a crime, was at most involuntary manslaughter because the shooting of the victim was unintentional according to some of the defense evidence presented to the jury, the defendant's request for an instruction on involuntary manslaughter should have been granted in prosecution for second degree murder. People v. Travis, 183 Colo. 255, 516 P.2d 121 (1973).

Refusal of trial court to instruct on the lesser included offense not in error when there is no evidence to support the instruction. Jones v. People, 711 P.2d 1270 (Colo. 1986).

Where jury was instructed that if it found the People had failed to prove the elements of first degree murder beyond a reasonable doubt, it should consider any of the lesser offenses, not just second degree murder but also provoked passion manslaughter, the instructions adequately described the prosecution's burden of proof and did not unconstitutionally shift the burden of proof to the defendant in violation of his due process rights. People v. Seigler, 832 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993).

Failure to give instruction on lesser included offense of criminally negligent homicide was harmless, even if assumed to be erroneous, where jury convicted defendant of second degree murder and rejected charge of reckless manslaughter because criminally negligent homicide is a lesser included offense of reckless manslaughter. Jury's selection of the highest available grade of offense was a rejection of the next lower included offense and of all lesser offenses included in the latter. People v. Medina, 51 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd, 71 P.3d 973 (Colo. 2003).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

Trial court retains jurisdiction to correct erroneous sentence. Where the court has jurisdiction of the person and subject matter and has entered an erroneous judgment, it retains jurisdiction to correct, modify, and alter it in accordance with the statute. This rule is applicable to the judgment of a district court erroneously sentencing one guilty of second degree murder to life imprisonment, where defendant applied for rendition of a valid judgment after serving several years of the erroneous sentence. People ex rel. Best v. District Court, 115 Colo. 240, 171 P.2d 774 (1946).

One can be guilty of first degree assault but not attempted second degree murder. A jury's verdict of guilty of first degree assault under § 18-3-202 (1)(e) is not irreconcilable and inconsistent with its verdict of not guilty on the charge of attempted second degree murder under this section. These crimes require different elements of proof, and the jury can find from the very same evidence that an element of one crime is present while an element of another charged crime is absent. People v. Ward, 673 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1983).

One is guilty of attempted second degree murder when it is established that the person acted with an awareness that death is certain to result, and proceeds to engage in conduct constituting a substantial step toward causing the death of a person. Because these are not the same elements of first degree assault, attempted second degree murder is not a lesser-included offense to first degree assault. People v. Laurson, 15 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2000).

Conviction for first degree assault is not inconsistent with conviction for attempted second degree murder. A defendant can engage in conduct with the intent to cause serious bodily injury while knowing but not caring that the conduct is practically certain to result in death. In such circumstances, the defendant may be found guilty of attempted second degree murder, even though lacking the specific intent to cause death. People v. Gonzales, 926 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1996).

Felony child abuse not inconsistent with acquittal of second degree murder. A guilty verdict for felony child abuse is not inconsistent with an acquittal of extreme indifference murder nor second degree murder. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981).

Overtaken first degree murder conviction resulting in conviction and sentence for second degree murder. Prosecution has discretion to decide whether case with conviction overturned, because of trial court's submission of extreme indifference murder, should be retried on other theories of first degree murder that were originally charged or whether defendant should be convicted and resentenced for second degree murder. Crespin v. People, 721 P.2d 688 (Colo. 1986).

Where conviction was overturned because of jury instruction regarding "after deliberation" element of first degree murder, prosecution has discretion to decide whether case should be retried or whether defendant should be convicted and resentenced for second degree murder. People v. Sepulveda, 65 P.3d 1002 (Colo. 2003).

Second degree murder is a per se crime of violence, even if committed in the heat of passion. Heat of passion is a sentence mitigating factor rather than a separate offense. People v. Darbe, 62 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2002).

18-3-104. Manslaughter. (1) A person commits the crime of manslaughter if:

- (a) Such person recklessly causes the death of another person; or
- (b) Such person intentionally causes or aids another person to commit suicide.
- (c) (Deleted by amendment, L. 96, p. 1844, § 13, effective July 1, 1996.)
- (2) Manslaughter is a class 4 felony.

(3) This section shall not apply to a person, including a proxy decision-maker as such person is described in section 15-18.5-103, C.R.S., who complies with any advance medical directive in accordance with the provisions of title 15, C.R.S., including a medical durable power of attorney, a living will, or a cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) directive.

(4) (a) This section shall not apply to a medical caregiver with prescriptive authority or authority to administer medication who prescribes or administers medication for palliative care to a terminally ill patient with the consent of the terminally ill patient or his or her agent.

(b) For purposes of this subsection (4):

(I) "Agent" means a person appointed to represent the interests of the terminally ill patient by a medical power of attorney, power of attorney, health care proxy, or any other similar statutory or regular procedure used for designation of such person.

(II) "Medical caregiver" means a physician, registered nurse, nurse practitioner, physician assistant, or anesthesiologist assistant licensed by this state.

(III) "Palliative care" means medical care and treatment provided by a licensed medical caregiver to a patient with an advanced chronic or terminal illness whose condition may not be responsive to curative treatment and who is, therefore, receiving treatment that relieves pain and suffering and supports the best possible quality of his or her life.

(c) Paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) shall not be interpreted to permit a medical caregiver to assist in the suicide of the patient.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 419, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-104. L. 75: (1)(c) amended, p. 623, § 1, effective March 19; (1)(c) amended, p. 618, § 6, effective July 21. L. 79: (1)(c) amended, p. 726, § 3, effective July 1. L. 86: (1)(c) amended, p. 770, § 4, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1986, § 13, effective July 1. L. 94: (3) added, p. 1059, § 3, effective May 4. L. 96: (1)(b), (1)(c), and (2) amended, p. 1844, § 13, effective July 1. L. 2006: (4) added, p. 313, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2012: (4)(b)(II) amended, (HB 12-1332), ch. 238, p. 1059, § 15, effective August 8.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. Indictment and Information.
 - B. Evidence.
 - C. Defenses.
 - D. Instructions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 38 Dicta

65 (1961). For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L.J. 137 (1972). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-104 is similar to former § 40-2-4 to 40-2-7, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section is a valid, religiously neutral, and generally applicable criminal statute that prohibits conduct a state is free to regulate, and was not a violation of petitioners rights under the free exercise clause of the first amendment to the United States Constitution. Sanderson v. People, 12 P.3d 851 (Colo. 2000).

As to the distinction between first degree murder and manslaughter, the two statutes impose different standards of care in that the manslaughter statute requires that the cause of death be recklessly done, while in comparison, an extreme indifference to human life in the first degree murder statute is clearly a more culpable standard of conduct, especially where necessarily coupled with the additional requirement that there be created a grave risk of death. People v. District Court, 185 Colo. 78, 521 P.2d 1254 (1974).

The term "under circumstances ... manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life", contained in § 18-3-102, connotes a heightened awareness and disregard of a fatal risk and is clearly a more culpable standard of conduct than the reckless conduct involved in manslaughter. People v. Marcy, 628 P.2d 69 (Colo. 1981).

Second degree murder as defined in § 18-3-103 is "conceptually distinguishable" from intentional manslaughter. People v. Gladney, 194 Colo. 68, 570 P.2d 231 (1977), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 1038, 98 S. Ct. 776, 54 L. Ed. 2d 787 (1978).

Distinction between manslaughter and second degree murder constitutional. The difference between the mental states required for second degree murder (knowingly) and manslaughter (recklessly) mirrors the distinction between practically certain of result on the one hand, and probability or contingency of result on the other and this difference is sufficient to avoid an equal protection violation. People v. Padilla, 638 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1981).

Section constitutionally distinguishable from second degree murder statute, § 18-3-103 (1)(a), because the two statutes require different mens rea elements for conviction. People v. DelGuidice, 199 Colo. 41, 606 P.2d 840 (1979); People v. Padilla, 638 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1981).

Convictions for felony child abuse and reckless manslaughter not inconsistent. There is no logical inconsistency between the guilty verdicts for the crimes of felony child abuse and reckless manslaughter. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981).

The statutory language in this section and §§ 18-3-102 and 18-3-105 creates distinguishable standards which can be fairly applied by jurors. People v. Favors, 192 Colo. 136, 556 P.2d 72 (1976).

Prior to the 1975 amendment to § 18-1-501, subsection (1)(a) was unconstitutional. Subsection (1)(a) is unconstitutional, in that the requirement to sustain a conviction under that statute (recklessness) is indistinguishable from the requirement to sustain a conviction for criminally negligent homicide (criminal negligence). People v. Calvaresi, 188 Colo. 277, 534 P.2d 316 (1975); People v. Webb, 189 Colo. 400, 542 P.2d 77 (1975); Till v. People, 196 Colo. 126, 581 P.2d 299 (1978).

Jury could not distinguish between manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide. Where the court submitted instructions to the jury on second-degree murder and on the lesser included offenses of manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide, the jury could not rationally distinguish between the crimes of manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide, the lesser included offenses on which it was instructed. People v. Horrocks, 190 Colo. 501, 549 P.2d 400 (1976).

Reckless manslaughter and heat of passion manslaughter are of equal grade and neither is included within the other nor is reckless manslaughter included in criminally negligent homicide. People v. Gordon, 765 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1988).

Reckless manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide distinguished. People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982).

Conviction of criminally negligent homicide held constitutional. Where defendant was charged with manslaughter and convicted of criminally negligent homicide as an included offense, the conviction was constitutional. People v. Palumbo, 192 Colo. 7, 555 P.2d 521 (1976).

There is a significant difference between the elements of extreme indifference murder and reckless manslaughter. Extreme indifference murder requires proof of circumstances showing an attitude of universal malice with extreme indifference to the value of human life generally. Reckless manslaughter lacks this element. People v. Alvarado-Juarez, 252 P.3d 1135 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where penalty for first degree assault limited. A person charged with first degree assault, who can establish that he acted in "heat of passion", is constitutionally protected against receiving a greater penalty than he could have received had he caused the death of his victim. People v. Montoya, 196 Colo. 111, 582 P.2d 673 (1978).

Selection by jury of highest available grade of offense constitutes rejection of next lower included offense and all lesser offenses included within latter. People v. Gordon, 765 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1988).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding psychiatrist from testifying as an expert witness to explain to the jury the meaning of the terms "heat of passion" and "irresistible impulse". Such issues were of an understandable nature to the jury without expert testimony.

People v. Lanari, 811 P.2d 399 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd, 827 P.2d 495 (Colo. 1992).

Vacating jury's finding that defendant recklessly caused the victim's death did not violate the defendant's right to a trial by jury. Where defendant was convicted of reckless manslaughter, robbery, and felony murder, appellate court could choose to give effect to the jury's finding that the defendant acted knowingly in committing a robbery and that a death occurred in the course of the robbery. The court could appropriately vacate the jury's finding of reckless manslaughter conviction. People v. Jones, 990 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1999).

Manslaughter is not a crime of violence for purposes of the United States sentencing guidelines. Because this state's version of manslaughter involves only reckless conduct, not intentional or purposeful behavior as required under the guidelines, it is not a crime of violence. United States v. Armijo, 651 F.3d 1226 (10th Cir. 2011).

Applied in May v. People, 8 Colo. 210, 6 P. 816 (1885); St. Louis v. People, 120 Colo. 345, 209 P.2d 538 (1949); Hardy v. People, 133 Colo. 201, 292 P.2d 973 (1956); Robbins v. People, 142 Colo. 254, 350 P.2d 818 (1960); Edwards v. People, 160 Colo. 395, 418 P.2d 174 (1966); Romero v. People, 170 Colo. 234, 460 P.2d 784 (1969); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. Grable, 43 Colo. App. 518, 611 P.2d 588 (1979); People v. Gallegos, 628 P.2d 999 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lee, 630 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1981); People v. Beland, 631 P.2d 1130 (Colo. 1981); People v. Christian, 632 P.2d 1031 (Colo. 1981); People v. Madson, 638 P.2d 18 (Colo. 1981); People v. Bookman, 646 P.2d 924 (Colo. 1982); People v. Sanchez, 644 P.2d 95 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Police, 651 P.2d 430 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

Common law rule of provocation. At common law, words of reproach, however grievous, were not provocation sufficient to free the killing party from the guilt of murder, nor were indecent, provoking actions and gestures, expressive of contempt or reproach, without an assault on the person. Murphy v. People, 9 Colo. 435, 13 P. 528 (1887).

The provisions of this section do not recognize provocation less in degree than that recognized as sufficient at common law. Murphy v. People, 9 Colo. 435, 13 P. 528 (1887).

This provision is a recognition of the frailty of human nature, the purpose of which is to reduce a homicide committed in the circumstances therein contemplated to the grade of manslaughter. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

Manslaughter defined. This section states that in order to be manslaughter, the killing must be the result of a sudden, violent impulse of passion. Sawyer v. People, 173 Colo. 351, 478 P.2d 672 (1970).

Element of deliberation lacking. A distinguishing feature between murder of either the first or second degree and manslaughter are the ingredients of premeditation and deliberation required in the former which are absent in the latter. Beckstead v. People, 133 Colo. 72, 292 P.2d 189 (1956); Bertalotto v. People, 175 Colo. 557, 488 P.2d 1100 (1971).

Attempted reckless manslaughter is a legally cognizable offense. People v. Thomas, 729 P.2d 972 (Colo. 1986); People v. Palmer, 944 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 964 P.2d 524 (Colo. 1998).

Provocation need not immediately precede act. The provocation or the injury inflicted on the killer by the victim, whether real or threatened, need not immediately precede the act. Ferrin v. People, 164 Colo. 130, 433 P.2d 108 (1967); Coston v. People, 633 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1981).

Where manslaughter is charged, while there is no strict requirement that the act constituting the provocation occur immediately before the killing, if there is evidence of a sufficient interval between the provocation and the killing for reason to prevail, the killing is murder and not manslaughter. English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

Three-week interval sufficient to allow voice of reason. The record revealed no evidence which would support a verdict of manslaughter where the acts of provocation by the victim and his threats against the defendant all occurred no later than three weeks before the time of the shooting, which interval was sufficient for the voice of reason and humanity to be heard, and, this being so, the killing must be attributed to deliberate revenge punishable as murder. English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

The term "reasonable person" as it refers to subsection (1)(c) refers to an objectively reasonable person. Therefore, even if a particular defendant was provoked to kill in a sudden heat of passion, the evidence must also establish that an objectively reasonable person would have similarly suffered an irresistible passion to kill. People v. Dooley, 944 P.2d 590 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 1996 repeal of subsection (1)(c)).

Discussion of element of implied malice required by former statute. People v. Hosier, 186 Colo. 116, 525 P.2d 1161 (1974).

The phrase "aids another to commit suicide" evidences a clear and unambiguous intent to apply only to persons who provide indirect types of aid or assistance to others who then kill themselves and not to persons who actively participate in the death of a suicidal person. People v. Gordon, 32 P.3d 575 (Colo. App. 2001).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. Indictment and Information.

Manslaughter is sufficiently charged in indictment for murder. Manslaughter has always been recognized as an included offense in the crime and charge of murder, and to be sufficiently charged and covered by a good indictment for murder. Packer v. People, 8 Colo. 361, 8 P. 564 (1885).

An information charging murder in the first degree includes all the lower grades of criminal homicide. Baker v. People, 114 Colo. 50, 160 P.2d 983 (1945).

B. Evidence.

Section 18-1-803 does not require evidence of any psychiatric abnormality or independent testimony to analyze the effect of a blow on the defendant's mental state. This effect may be inferred from the evidence present. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Court may deny admitting testimony that alcohol found in victim's bloodstream. As a matter of law, a trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying the admission of an expert's testimony that some alcohol and drug traces were found in the murder victim's bloodstream without any effort to show how such substances might have affected the victim's behavior. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Sufficient evidence of provocation. Walker v. People, 175 Colo. 173, 489 P.2d 584 (1971).

The term "reasonable person" as it refers to subsection (1)(c) refers to an objectively reasonable person. Therefore, even if a particular defendant was provoked to kill in a sudden heat of passion, the evidence must also establish that an objectively reasonable person would have similarly suffered an irresistible passion to kill. People v. Dooley, 944 P.2d 590 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided under law as it existed prior to 1996 repeal of subsection (1)(c)).

Question of provocation is for jury. The jury are the judges of the sufficiency of the provocation and passion that reduce a homicide to the grade of manslaughter. Murphy v. People, 9 Colo. 435, 13 P. 528 (1887).

Whether certain circumstances amounted to the statutory provocation or caused the passion which the section denominates irresistible was not for the court to determine, but is properly a question for the jury. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

Likewise, credibility and force of evidence as to manslaughter. On the trial of a person indicted for murder, although the evidence may overwhelmingly show that the killing was in fact murder and not manslaughter, or an act performed in self-defense, so long as there is evidence relevant to the issue of manslaughter, its credibility and force are for the jury, and cannot be matter of law for the decision of the court. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

If there is evidence relative to manslaughter offered by either the people or the defendant charged with first degree murder, its credibility and weight is for the jury to consider in determining the facts, and proper instructions upon manslaughter should be given. Baker v. People, 114 Colo. 50, 160 P.2d 983 (1945); Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

A person charged with murder is triable by a jury. They alone must determine the facts, and no court, either trial or appellate, has a right to constitute itself a trier of facts, and thus invade the province of a jury. Where there is testimony tending to prove manslaughter, whether or not it is sufficient to justify a verdict of manslaughter is for the jury to determine, and not the court. Gallegos v. People, 136 Colo. 321, 316 P.2d 884 (1957); Sanchez v. People, 172 Colo. 168, 470 P.2d 857 (1970).

Accused cannot complain where evidence warranted conviction of higher degree. The evidence warranting a conviction for murder in the second degree, the accused has no ground to complain of a conviction of manslaughter. Campbell v. People, 55 Colo. 302, 133 P. 1043 (1913).

"Cooling time" not precisely defined. No precise formulation may be offered to define what "cooling time" constitutes a sufficient interval to allow a person to function rationally after having been seriously provoked. This judgment depends upon human nature as it is generally understood, the particular emotional state of the offender, and, especially, upon the surrounding circumstances of the case. Coston v. People, 633 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1981).

"Cooling time" is a question of law for the court, and not a question for the jury. Wickham v. People, 41 Colo. 345, 93 P. 478 (1907).

The question of whether there has been a sufficient cooling off period is one of law for the court. English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

The question of whether there is sufficient evidence of a cooling off period between provocation and killing is initially one of law for the court. Coston v. People, 633 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1981).

C. Defenses.

Mutual combat no excuse for murder of nonparticipant. A defendant cannot avoid the consequences of a deliberate, intentional act of murder on grounds of “mutual combat” or “hot state of blood” when the person killed was not a party to the mutual combat nor a bystander accidentally and unintentionally slain. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Self-defense may be asserted as a defense to attempted heat of passion manslaughter. Thomas v. People, 820 P.2d 656 (Colo. 1991).

For a crime requiring recklessness, criminal negligence, or extreme indifference, like reckless manslaughter, self-defense is not an affirmative defense; rather, it is an element-negating traverse. The prosecution bears no burden in disproving self-defense when self-defense is not an affirmative defense. The court did not err in instructing the jury that the prosecution did not bear the burden of disproving self-defense in relation to the reckless manslaughter charge. People v. Pickering, __ P.3d __ (Colo. 2011) (overruling People v. Lara, 224 P.3d 388 (Colo. App. 2009) and People v. Taylor, 230 P.3d 1227 (Colo. App. 2009)).

No defense to manslaughter indictment that evidence shows homicide was murder. It is no defense to an indictment for manslaughter that the homicide therein alleged appears by the evidence to have been murder. In re Garvey, 7 Colo. 384, 3 P. 903 (1884); Murphy v. People, 9 Colo. 435, 13 P. 528 (1887).

D. Instructions.

Defendant entitled to jury instruction on lesser included offense where jury could reasonably doubt defendant’s guilt of greater offense but be persuaded beyond a reasonable doubt of defendant’s guilt of lesser included offense. People v. Gordon, 765 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1988).

The very essence of the manslaughter instruction is that the killing must be preceded by a serious and highly provocative injury inflicted upon the person committing the homicide. Ferrin v. People, 164 Colo. 130, 433 P.2d 108 (1967).

Evidence of provocation should not be omitted from instructions. People v. Morant, 179 Colo. 287, 499 P.2d 1173 (1972).

Defense of accidental or excusable killing does not waive the question of manslaughter, and did not make unnecessary the giving of instructions thereon. Baker v. People, 114 Colo. 50, 160 P.2d 983 (1945); Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Where homicides occurring during an affray are unintentional, accidental, a result of misadventure, or in self-defense, it is error not to instruct as to manslaughter. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Under a variety of fact situations in a homicide case, the self-defense evidence could conceivably also be a basis for a manslaughter instruction. English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972).

When defendant entitled to manslaughter instruction. To be entitled to a manslaughter instruction, the defendant must be able to point to some evidence presented at trial which would permit a jury to find, in addition to concluding that the defendant intentionally killed the victim, that all the elements listed in subsection (1)(c) existed at the time the offense was committed. Coston v. People, 633 P.2d 470 (Colo. 1981); People v. Garcia, 826 P.2d 1259 (Colo. 1992).

Evidence held to support instruction on manslaughter. Abila v. People, 80 Colo. 169, 249 P. 649 (1926).

Error for court to take question of manslaughter from the jury, as there was not an entire absence of evidence tending to establish manslaughter. Henwood v. People, 54 Colo. 188, 129 P. 1010 (1913).

If the evidence tends to prove a case of manslaughter, or if, upon the evidence, there is any doubt whatever as to the grade of the crime, the question of manslaughter ought to be submitted to the jury. Jones v. People, 93 Colo. 282, 26 P.2d 103 (1933).

When there is competent evidence which could conceivably reduce a homicide to manslaughter, the defendant is entitled to an instruction thereon. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

When there is any evidence, however improbable, unreasonable, or slight, which tends to reduce a homicide to the grade of manslaughter, a defendant is entitled to an instruction thereon upon the hypothesis that the same is true, and that it is for the jury, under proper instructions, and not the trial judge, to weigh and consider the evidence and determine therefrom what grade of crime, if any, was committed; and a court’s refusal to instruct thereon is reversible error. Gallegos v. People, 136 Colo. 321, 316 P.2d 884 (1957); Ferrin v. People, 164 Colo. 130, 433 P.2d 108 (1967); Sanchez v. People, 172 Colo. 168, 470 P.2d 857 (1970); English v. People, 178 Colo. 325, 497 P.2d 691 (1972); People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 426, 609 P.2d 1105 (Colo. 1979); People v. Garcia, 826 P.2d 1259 (Colo. 1992).

A defendant in a homicide case is entitled to an instruction on lesser included offenses when there is evidence, however manifested, whether presented by the people, or by the defense, to indicate the commission of the lesser offense. Sanchez v. People, 172 Colo. 168, 470 P.2d 857 (1970); People v. Gordon, 765 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1988).

Only in those cases where there is evidence — even though it be slight — that there was a serious and highly provoking act by the victim against the accused which could possibly excite an irresistible passion is a manslaughter instruction required when requested. People v. Mullins, 188 Colo. 23, 532 P.2d 733 (1975).

Refusal to instruct on lesser offense is reversible error. People v. Gordon, 765 P.2d 633 (Colo. App. 1988).

Defendant was not entitled to an instruction on reckless manslaughter where the evidence showed that the defendant did not intend to kill her husband when she picked up the axe, but that something "just snapped" and she hit him. The court found that there was no evidence that, when the defendant hit her husband with the axe, she was conscious of the risk of death. People v. Garcia, 1 P.3d 214 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd on other grounds, 28 P.3d 340 (Colo. 2001).

Trial court not required to give a lesser offense instruction requested by a defendant unless there is some evidence tending to establish the lesser offense and a rational basis upon which the jury may acquit the defendant of the greater offense but convict him or her of the lesser. People v. Gordon, 32 P.3d 575 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant not entitled to jury instruction on aiding suicide manslaughter where the trial court found no evidence to support defendant's request because the aiding suicide manslaughter instruction applies only to a defendant who furnishes a person with a means of committing suicide, but instead of passively or indirectly participating in the suicidal person's death, defendant actively participated in causing the death of the victim. People v. Gordon, 32 P.3d 575 (Colo. App. 2001).

There is no right to a jury instruction on a lesser included offense if the element that distinguishes the greater from the lesser is uncontested. Where it is undisputed that death occurred as a result of defendant's conduct, there is no right to an instruction on reckless endangerment in a reckless manslaughter case. People v. Hall, 59 P.3d 298 (Colo. App. 2002).

Where jury was instructed that if it found the people had failed to prove the elements of first degree murder beyond a reasonable doubt, it should consider any of the lesser offenses, not just second degree murder but also provoked passion manslaughter, the instructions adequately described the prosecution's burden of proof and did not unconstitutionally shift the burden of proof to the defendant in violation of his due process rights. People v. Seigler, 832 P.2d 980 (Colo. App. 1991), cert. denied, 846 P.2d 189 (Colo. 1993); People v. Wadley, 890 P.2d 151 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where defense did not contemporaneously object, prosecutor's statement in closing arguments that he had not proved heat of passion manslaughter beyond a reasonable doubt was not plain error. Prosecutor also reminded the jury that he had the burden of proving all elements of an offense and the court found that in light of the evidence presented at trial, the prosecutor's comment did not cast doubt on the reliability of the conviction. People v. Wadley, 890 P.2d 151 (Colo. App. 1994).

Where court's heat of passion manslaughter instruction was based on language of § 18-3-104 and terms used were susceptible to general understanding, defendant's tendered instruction which contained definitions of terms used in the "heat of passion manslaughter" instruction was not necessary. People v. Ferrero, 874 P.2d 468 (Colo. App. 1993).

Defendant's tendered instruction defining "cooling time" was not necessary where the court's instruction was based on the language of § 18-3-104 and words used were understandable to person of common intelligence. People v. Wadley, 890 P.2d 151 (Colo. App. 1994).

Jury instruction on a lesser included offense on attempted heat of passion manslaughter is not required to be given unless the defendant requests it. Where no request was made, it was presumed that the defendant elected to take his or her chances on an outright acquittal on an attempted second degree murder charge. People v. Moore, 860 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

Heat of passion manslaughter was a specific, lesser, nonincluded offense of second degree murder rather than a statutory mitigating factor. Walker v. People, 932 P.2d 303 (Colo. 1997) (decided under law in effect prior to deletion by amendment of subsection (1)(c)).

Court may exclude question of manslaughter when no evidence thereof. Notwithstanding the provisions of this section, the court may exclude from the jury the question of manslaughter where there is no evidence of that degree of the crime or the defense is upon a theory having no relation thereto. Sevilla v. People, 65 Colo. 437, 177 P. 135 (1918).

Failure to charge on manslaughter held no error. Under the evidence where there is no element of manslaughter involved, there is no error in the failure of the court to submit that question to the jury. Edwards v. People, 73 Colo. 377, 215 P. 855 (1923).

Under facts of this case, instruction on manslaughter was not necessary. Williams v. People, 114 Colo. 207, 158 P.2d 447 (1945).

Evidence failed to warrant submission of instruction to jury on manslaughter. Berger v. People, 122 Colo. 367, 224 P.2d 228 (1950).

Where no instruction on manslaughter was tendered or requested, even if such an instruction was proper, mere nondirection would not constitute error. Berger v. People, 122 Colo. 367, 224 P.2d 228 (1950).

Where the evidence only shows the killing to have been deliberate and intentional, there is no question of manslaughter present and no reason to submit it to the jury. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

If there be a total absence of evidence relating to the particular grade of homicide disregarded, the charge to the jury cannot be successfully challenged on the ground of such omission. Gallegos v. People, 136 Colo. 321, 316 P.2d 884 (1957).

Where the record is devoid of any evidence which would have supported a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, the court was not obliged to instruct thereon. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 153, 465 P.2d 394 (1970).

No error in failing to give self-defense instruction. When an element of the crime charged is that the defendant acted in a reckless or criminally negligent manner, and the trial court properly instructs the jury as to each element, no error results from the court's failure to give a self-defense instruction. People v. Fink, 194 Colo. 516, 574 P.2d 81 (1978).

To entitle a defendant to a heat of passion instruction, the supporting evidence must tend to establish the four elements of subsection (1)(c). People v. Dooley, 944 P.2d 590 (Colo. App. 1997) (decided under law as it existed prior to the 1996 repeal of subsection (1)(c)).

Instruction on mental condition required if any evidence tends to establish impairment. An instruction on impaired mental condition is required if there is any evidence tending to establish that a blow to the defendant's head impaired his mental condition sufficiently to preclude formation of a conscious objective to cause the victim's death. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Error in charge on first-degree murder not prejudicial to one convicted of lower degree of murder or manslaughter. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

Court's response to jury inquiry on attempted reckless manslaughter, although a comment on the evidence and not a proper instruction on the law, did not constitute plain error. Hypothetical given by the court, when considered in the context of the jury instructions as a whole, neither misled the jury nor cast serious doubt on the verdict. People v. Allen, 43 P.3d 689 (Colo. App. 2001).

Instruction on elements of manslaughter under previous statute held erroneous. People v. Morant, 179 Colo. 287, 499 P.2d 1173 (1972).

Instructions held proper. Balltrip v. People, 157 Colo. 108, 401 P.2d 259 (1965).

18-3-105. Criminally negligent homicide. Any person who causes the death of another person by conduct amounting to criminal negligence commits criminally negligent homicide which is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 419, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-105. L. 77: (1)(b) amended, p. 960, § 7, effective July 1. L. 81: Entire section R&RE, p. 973, § 5, effective July 1. L. 85: Entire section amended, p. 665, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Correcting an Erroneous Judgment in a Criminal Case", see 19 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 295 (1947). For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L. J. 137 (1972). For article, "The Jurisprudence of Death by Another: Accessories and Capital Punishment", see 51 U. Colo. L. Rev. 17 (1979).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-105 is similar to former § 40-2-7, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Classification of first-degree assault as more serious than negligent homicide constitutional. The culpable mental state required for first-degree assault is sufficiently distinguishable from that required for criminally negligent homicide to justify a harsher sentence for the former. People v. Lucero, 714 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1985).

To be guilty of criminally negligent homicide, the defendant must fail to perceive a substantial and unjustifiable risk that a certain result will occur, and the risk must be of such a nature that the defendant's failure to perceive it constitutes a gross deviation from a reasonable person's standard of care. People v. Jones, 193 Colo. 250, 565 P.2d 1333 (1977).

The defendant's guilt in criminally negligent homicide stems from his culpable failure to perceive the risk. People v. Jones, 193 Colo. 250, 565 P.2d 1333 (1977).

Criminally negligent homicide is an unintentional killing caused by the actor's failure to perceive a substantial and unjustifiable risk that a certain result will occur. People v. Hernandez, 44 Colo. App. 161, 614 P.2d 900 (1980).

Criminal negligence, as applied to homicide, means a failure to perceive, through a gross deviation from the standard of reasonable care, a substantial and unjustifiable risk that death will result from certain conduct. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981); People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982).

Attempted criminally negligent homicide logical and legal impossibility. Where the trial court joined criminally negligent homicide and attempt and charged the jury on attempted criminally negligent homicide, the charge was a logical and legal impossibility. People v. Hernandez, 44 Colo. App. 161, 614 P.2d 900 (1980).

Defendant cannot avoid his conviction on the ground that he did not intend death to result from his act. People v. Palumbo, 192 Colo. 7, 555 P.2d 521 (1976).

In this section and § 18-3-106 there is a crucial difference in that the vehicular homicide statute requires for conviction that the prosecution prove the additional element of a death caused through the use of a motor vehicle. People v. Hulse, 192 Colo. 302, 557 P.2d 1205 (1976).

More severe penalty for vehicular homicide does not deny equal protection. It cannot be said that the legislature's decision to provide a more severe penalty for vehicular homicide than for criminal negligent homicide is arbitrary or unreasonable. The state has a legitimate interest in discouraging a specific evil which it believes to be of greater societal consequence. This choice does not offend equal protection. People v. Hulse, 192 Colo. 302, 557 P.2d 1205 (1976).

Classification of child abuse as more serious than negligent homicide constitutional. The legislative classification of child abuse as a crime more serious in penalty than the offense of criminally negligent homicide is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable and does not violate equal protection of the laws. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Sections 18-6-401 and 18-3-405 do not proscribe identical conduct. The proscriptions of § 18-6-401 encompass conduct that is particularly abusive to children, that is directed specifically against a child, and that results in injury to that child. Criminally negligent homicide, on the other hand, proscribes in general terms a gross carelessness that causes death to anyone, adult or child. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Equal protection violated by provisions setting forth same conduct with different sanctions. It is only where the same acts or conduct are set forth in two sections with different criminal sanctions or to which different defenses are available that equal protection guarantees are violated. People v. Gibson, 623 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1981).

Divergent penalties in former versions of criminally negligent homicide and first degree assault violated equal protection because both statutes proscribed similar conduct and intent. People v. Jackson, 198 Colo. 193, 601 P.2d 622 (1979).

The statutory language in this section and §§ 18-3-102 and 18-3-104 creates distinguishable standards which can be fairly applied by jurors. People v. Favors, 192 Colo. 136, 556 P.2d 72 (1976).

The standards of culpability in this section and § 18-3-102 (1)(d) are distinct enough to be intelligently understood and applied, and therefore, the defendant was not denied equal protection of the law by virtue of his conviction under subsection (1)(d) of § 18-3-102. People v. Jones, 193 Colo. 250, 565 P.2d 1333 (1977).

Liability due to mechanical failure of motor vehicles and appurtenances is not conclusive of negligence, criminal or otherwise, where the failure occurred under circumstances beyond one's control. Where acts or circumstances are attributable to either an innocent or a criminal cause, the innocent hypothesis will be adopted. Bennett v. People, 155 Colo. 101, 392 P.2d 657 (1964).

Section 18-1-803 does not require evidence of any psychiatric abnormality or independent testimony to analyze the effect of a blow on the defendant's mental state. This effect may be inferred from the evidence present. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Court may deny admitting testimony that alcohol found in victim's bloodstream. As a matter of law, a trial court does not abuse its discretion in denying the admission of an expert's testimony that some alcohol and drug traces were found in the murder victim's bloodstream without any effort to show how such substances might have affected the victim's behavior. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Instruction on mental condition required if any evidence tends to establish impairment. An instruction on impaired mental condition is required if there is any evidence tending to establish that a blow to the defendant's head impaired his mental condition sufficiently to preclude formation of a conscious objective to cause the victim's death. People v. Delaney, 44 Colo. App. 366, 620 P.2d 44 (1980).

Theory of accidental killing should be submitted to jury. In a prosecution for murder where defendant testified that he did not think the gun used in the killing was loaded, and that he was merely waving it around to scare the deceased away when it was discharged accidentally, refusal to instruct the jury on this theory was error, as the drawing of the weapon could be considered by the jury as a proper and lawful act. Vigil v. People, 143 Colo. 328, 353 P.2d 82 (1960).

Because this section contains all of the elements of the crime in § 18-3-104(1)(a) and is a lesser included offense, the same abundance of competent evidence supports conviction of criminal negligence. People v. Webb, 189 Colo. 400, 542 P.2d 77 (1975).

Failure to give instruction on criminally negligent homicide was harmless, even if assumed to be erroneous, where jury convicted defendant of second degree murder and rejected charge of reckless manslaughter because criminally negligent homicide is a lesser included offense of reckless manslaughter. Jury's selection of the highest available grade of offense was a rejection of the next lower included offense and of all lesser offenses included in the latter. People v. Medina, 51 P.3d 1006 (Colo. App. 2001), aff'd, 71 P.3d 973 (Colo. 2003).

Conviction held constitutional. Where defendant was charged with manslaughter and convicted of criminally negligent homicide as an included offense, the conviction was constitutional. People v. Palumbo, 192 Colo. 17, 555 P.2d 521 (1976).

Conviction not inconsistent with acquittal on charge of vehicular homicide. A conviction on a charge of criminally negligent homicide is not inconsistent with an acquittal on a charge of vehicular homicide. People v. Bettis, 43 Colo. App. 104, 602 P.2d 877 (1979).

Where defendant is charged with reckless manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide, no error occurred where the trial court allowed defendant to present evidence of self defense at trial and properly instructed the jury on the elements of crimes charged. Under these circumstances the trial court is not required to submit defendant's tendered self defense instruction to the jury. Case v. People, 774 P.2d 866 (Colo. 1989).

However, a defendant may present evidence that he was acting in self-defense and such evidence may be considered by the jury in its determination of whether the defendant was acting recklessly or in a criminally negligent manner. When such evidence is presented, the jury should be informed of the right of a defendant to put himself in a position of reasonably defending himself. People v. Roberts, 983 P.2d 11 (Colo. App. 1998).

Criminally negligent homicide is not a lesser included offense of vehicular homicide. People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984).

Criminally negligent homicide is not an enumerated offense for purposes of the direct file statute. The offense is not a per se crime of violence and merely alleging use of deadly weapon as part of the factual basis does not satisfy the requirement of the crime of violence statute. In addition, the elements of the crime do not include the use, possession, or threatened use of a deadly weapon. People v. Vickers, 168 P.3d 9 (Colo. App. 2007).

Reckless manslaughter and criminally negligent homicide distinguished. People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982).

The actions of a defendant convicted under this section may be the same as a person convicted of § 42-4-1402 (2), careless driving resulting in death. The enactment by the general assembly of a specific criminal statute does not preclude prosecution under a general criminal statute unless a legislative intent to limit prosecution to the specific statute is shown. Here no such intent is found. People v. Tow, 992 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1999).

Elements supported by credible evidence. People v. Palumbo, 192 Colo. 17, 555 P.2d 521 (1976).

Conviction as bar to prosecution for assault on another. A conviction of former crime of involuntary manslaughter for fatally wounding one person while shooting at another bars a prosecution upon a charge of assault to kill and murder the person at whom defendant shot. Carson v. People, 4 Colo. App. 463, 36 P. 551 (1894).

Applied in People in Interest of M.A.L., 37 Colo. App. 307, 592 P.2d 415 (1976); People v. District Court, 196 Colo. 116, 581 P.2d 300 (1978); People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 70, 595 P.2d 1045 (1979); People v. DelGuidice, 199 Colo. 41, 606 P.2d 840 (1979); People v. White, 199 Colo. 82, 606 P.2d 847 (1980); People v. Lee, 630 P.2d 583 (Colo. 1981). People v. Mumaugh, 644 P.2d 299 (Colo. 1982); People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982); Castro v. District Court, 656 P.2d 1283 (Colo. 1982).

18-3-106. Vehicular homicide. (1) (a) If a person operates or drives a motor vehicle in a reckless manner, and such conduct is the proximate cause of the death of another, such person commits vehicular homicide.

(b) (I) If a person operates or drives a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or one or more drugs, or a combination of both alcohol and one or more drugs, and such conduct is the proximate cause of the death of another, such person commits vehicular homicide. This is a strict liability crime.

(II) For the purposes of this subsection (1), one or more drugs shall mean all substances defined as a drug in section 27-80-203 (13), C.R.S., and all controlled substances defined in section 18-18-102 (5), and glue-sniffing, aerosol inhalation, or the inhalation of any other toxic vapor or vapors as defined in section 18-18-412.

(III) The fact that any person charged with a violation of this subsection (1) is or has been entitled to use one or more drugs under the laws of this state shall not constitute a defense against any charge of violating this subsection (1).

(IV) "Driving under the influence" means driving a vehicle when a person has consumed alcohol or one or more drugs, or a combination of alcohol and one or more drugs, which alcohol alone, or one or more drugs alone, or alcohol combined with one or more drugs affect such person to a degree that such person is substantially incapable, either mentally or physically, or both mentally and physically, of exercising clear judgment, sufficient physical control, or due care in the safe operation of a vehicle.

(c) Vehicular homicide, in violation of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), is a class 4 felony. Vehicular homicide, in violation of paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), is a class 3 felony.

(2) In any prosecution for a violation of subsection (1) of this section, the amount of alcohol in the defendant's blood or breath at the time of the commission of the alleged offense, or within a reasonable time thereafter, as shown by analysis of the defendant's blood or breath, shall give rise to the following presumptions:

(a) If there was at such time 0.05 or less grams of alcohol per one hundred milliliters of blood, or if there was at such time 0.05 or less grams of alcohol per two hundred ten liters of breath, it shall be presumed that the defendant was not under the influence of alcohol.

(b) If there was at such time in excess of 0.05 but less than 0.08 grams of alcohol per one hundred milliliters of blood, or if there was at such time in excess of 0.05 but less than 0.08 grams of alcohol per two hundred ten liters of breath, such fact may be considered with other competent evidence in determining whether or not the defendant was under the influence of alcohol.

(c) If there was at such time 0.08 or more grams of alcohol per one hundred milliliters of blood, or if there was at such time 0.08 or more grams of alcohol per two hundred ten liters of breath, it shall be presumed that the defendant was under the influence of alcohol.

(3) The limitations of subsection (2) of this section shall not be construed as limiting the introduction, reception, or consideration of any other competent evidence bearing upon the question of whether or not the defendant was under the influence of alcohol.

(4) (a) If a law enforcement officer has probable cause to believe that any person was driving a motor vehicle in violation of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, the person, upon the request of the law enforcement officer, shall take, and complete, and cooperate in the completing of any test or tests of the person's blood, breath, saliva, or urine for the purpose of determining the alcoholic or drug content within his or her system. The type of test or tests shall be determined by the law enforcement officer requiring the test or tests. If the person refuses to take, or to complete, or to cooperate in the completing of any test or tests, the test or tests may be performed at the direction of a law enforcement officer having probable cause, without the person's authorization or consent. If any person refuses to take or complete, or cooperate in the taking or completing of any test or tests required by this paragraph (a), the person shall be subject to license revocation pursuant to the provisions of section 42-2-126 (3), C.R.S. When the test or tests show that the amount of alcohol in a person's blood was in violation of the limits provided for in section 42-2-126 (3) (a), (3) (b), (3) (d), or (3) (e), C.R.S., the person shall be subject to license revocation pursuant to the provisions of section 42-2-126, C.R.S.

(b) Any person who is required to submit to testing shall cooperate with the person authorized to obtain specimens of his blood, breath, saliva, or urine, including the signing of any release or consent forms required by any person, hospital, clinic, or association authorized to obtain such specimens. If such person does not cooperate with the person, hospital, clinic, or association authorized to obtain such specimens, including the signing of any release or consent forms, such noncooperation shall be considered a refusal to submit to testing.

(c) The tests shall be administered at the direction of a law enforcement officer having probable cause to believe that the person committed a violation of subparagraph (I) of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section and in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the state board of health concerning the health of the person being tested and the accuracy of such testing. Strict compliance with such rules and regulations shall not be a prerequisite to the admissibility of test results at trial unless the court finds that the extent of noncompliance with a board of health rule has so impaired the validity and reliability of the testing method and the test results as to render the evidence inadmissible. In all other circumstances, failure to strictly comply with such rules and regulations shall only be considered in the weight to be given to the test results and not to the admissibility of such test results. It shall not be a prerequisite to the admissibility of test results at trial that the prosecution present testimony concerning the composition of any kit used to obtain blood, urine, saliva, or breath specimens. A sufficient evidentiary foundation concerning the compliance of such kits with the rules and regulations of the department of public health and environment shall be established by the introduction of a copy of the manufacturer's or supplier's certificate of compliance with such rules and regulations if such certificate specifies the contents, sterility, chemical makeup, and amounts of chemicals contained in such kit.

(d) No person except a physician, a registered nurse, a paramedic as certified in part 2 of article 3.5 of title 25, C.R.S., an emergency medical service provider as defined in part 1 of article 3.5 of title 25, C.R.S., or a person whose normal duties include withdrawing blood samples under the supervision of a physician or registered nurse is entitled to withdraw blood for the purpose of determining the alcoholic or drug content of the blood for purposes of this section. In a trial for a violation of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, testimony of a law enforcement officer that he or she witnessed the taking of a blood specimen by a person who he or she reasonably believed was authorized to withdraw blood specimens is sufficient evidence that the person was authorized, and testimony from the person who obtained the blood specimens concerning the person's authorization to obtain blood specimens is not a prerequisite to the admissibility of test results concerning the blood specimens obtained. No civil liability shall attach to any person authorized to obtain blood, breath, saliva, or urine specimens or to any hospital, clinic, or association in or for which such specimens are obtained pursuant to this subsection (4) as a result of the act of obtaining the specimens from a person if the specimens were obtained according to the rules prescribed by the state board of health; except that such provision does not relieve the person from liability for negligence in obtaining any specimen sample.

(e) Any person who is dead or unconscious shall be tested to determine the alcohol or drug content of his blood or any drug content of his system as provided in this subsection (4). If a test cannot be administered to a person who is unconscious, hospitalized, or undergoing medical treatment because the test would endanger the person's life or health, the law enforcement agency shall be allowed to test any blood, urine, or saliva which was obtained and not utilized by a health care provider and shall have access to that portion of the analysis and results of any tests administered by such provider which shows the alcohol or drug content of the person's blood or any drug content within his system. Such test results shall not be considered privileged communications and the provisions of section 13-90-107, C.R.S., relating to the physician-patient privilege shall not apply. Any person who is dead, in addition to the tests prescribed, shall also have his blood checked for carbon monoxide content and for the presence of drugs, as prescribed by the department of public health and environment. Such information obtained shall be made a part of the accident report.

(f) If a person refuses to take, or to complete, or to cooperate in the completing of any test or tests as provided in this subsection (4) and such person subsequently stands trial for a violation of subsection (1) (b) of this section, the refusal to take or to complete, or to cooperate with the completing of any test or tests shall be admissible into evidence at the trial, and a person may not claim the privilege against self-incrimination with regard to the admission of his refusal to take, or to complete, or to cooperate with the completing of any test or tests.

(g) Notwithstanding any provision in section 42-4-1301.1, C.R.S., concerning requirements which relate to the manner in which tests are administered, the test or tests taken pursuant to the provisions of this section may be used for the purposes of driver's license revocation proceedings under section 42-2-126, C.R.S., and for the purposes of prosecutions for violations of section 42-4-1301 (1) or (2), C.R.S.

(5) In all actions, suits, and judicial proceedings in any court of this state concerning alcohol-related or drug-related traffic offenses, the court shall take judicial notice of methods of testing a person's alcohol or drug level and of the design and operation of devices, as certified by the department of public health and environment, for testing a person's blood, breath, saliva, or urine to determine his alcohol or drug level. This subsection (5) shall not prevent the necessity of establishing during a trial that the testing devices used were working properly and that such testing devices were properly operated. Nothing in this subsection (5) shall preclude a defendant from offering evidence concerning the accuracy of testing devices.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 419, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-106. L. 75: Entire section amended, p. 624, § 1, effective June 26. L. 77: (1) R&RE, p. 960, § 8, effective July 1. L. 81: (1)(b) amended, p. 1992, § 4, effective June 19. L. 83: (4) added, p. 1648, § 17, effective July 1. L. 88: IP(2) amended, p. 1365, § 5, effective July 1. L. 89: (1)(b), (2), and (3) amended, (4) R&RE, and (5) added, pp. 893, 894, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1986, § 14, effective July 1; (1)(b)(II) amended, p. 1731, § 13, effective July 1. L. 94: (4)(c), (4)(e), and (5) amended, p. 2733, § 356, effective July 1; (4)(a) and (4)(g) amended, p. 2551, § 40, effective January 1, 1995. L. 97: (4)(a) amended, p. 1470, § 18, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4)(g) amended, p. 1915, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2004: (2)(b) and (2)(c) amended, p. 781, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: (4)(a) amended, p. 243, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2012: (1)(b)(II) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1618, § 38, effective July 1; (4)(d) amended, (HB 12-1059), ch. 271, p. 1434, § 12, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (1) in House Bill 93-1302 and House Bill 93-1088 were harmonized.

(2) Section 26 of chapter 271, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (4)(d) applies to acts committed on or after July 1, 2012.

Cross references: (1) For penalties for driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, see § 42-4-1301.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsections (4)(c), (4)(e), and (5), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. Indictment and Information.
 - B. Evidence.
 - C. Jury.
 - D. Instructions.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Body Fluid Tests for Intoxication", see 22 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 91 (1949). For comment on Kallnbach v. People (125 Colo. 144, 242 P.2d 222 (1952)), see 24 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 391 (1952). For comment on Goodell v. People (137 Colo. 507, 327 P.2d 279 (1958)), see 31 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 104 (1958). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 36 Dicta 34 (1959). For comment on Espinosa v. People (142 Colo. 96, 349 P.2d 689 (1960)), see 33 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 425 (1961). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 38 Dicta 65 (1961). For article, "Homicides Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 49 Den. L. J. 137 (1972). For article, "Drinking and Driving: An Update on the 1989 Legislation", see 18 Colo. Law. 1943 (1989).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-106 is similar to former § 40-2-10, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Purpose of section. The offense of driving an automobile in a careless and reckless manner and at an excessive rate of speed, especially when under the influence of intoxicating liquor, was created for the very purpose of preventing collisions and consequent injury to others who may be on the highway. Daniels v. People, 159 Colo. 190, 411 P.2d 316 (1966).

Constitutionality. The requirement of proof of proximate cause in this section is sufficiently intelligible to satisfy both federal and state constitutional standards of due process of law. People v. Rostad, 669 P.2d 126 (Colo. 1983); People v. Baca, 668 P.2d 1370 (Colo. 1983); People v. Ray, 678 P.2d 1019 (Colo. 1984); People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984); People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984); People v. Sutherland, 683 P.2d 1192 (Colo. 1984).

This section is not unconstitutional on the grounds that it denies the accused the opportunity to rebut the presumption raised by his or her blood alcohol content. People v. Rostad, 669 P.2d 126 (Colo. 1983); People v. Ray, 678 P.2d 1019 (Colo. 1984).

Subsection (1) does not violate equal protection rights or due process even though paragraph (c) calls for disparate sentences for violations outlined in paragraphs (a) and (b). People v. Loeser, 981 P.2d 197 (Colo. App. 1998).

No equal protection violation where felony first degree murder carries a greater punishment than aggravated vehicular homicide. These offenses are distinguished by the level of intent, the actus reus (commission or omission), the requirement that the actor operate or drive a motor vehicle for vehicular homicide, and the predicate felonies. People v. Prieto, 124 P.3d 842 (Colo. App. 2005).

Nothing in the language of this section or § 18-1.3-401(8)(g) suggests a legislative intent to preempt the felony murder statute. People v. Prieto, 124 P.3d 842 (Colo. App. 2005).

The gravamen of both this section and vehicular assault, § 18-3-205, is the "reckless" operation or driving of a motor vehicle, which results in the death of or serious bodily injury to another. People v. Sexton, 192 Colo. 81, 555 P.2d 1151 (1976).

Reckless operation of a motor vehicle and driving under the influence are not separate and independent offenses, but alternatives by which criminal liability for vehicular homicide or vehicular assault may be charged and proven. Therefore a defendant may not be convicted under subsection (1)(a) and (1)(b) for the same actions. People v. Lucero, 985 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1999).

In this section and § 18-3-105 there is a crucial difference in that the vehicular homicide statute requires for conviction that the prosecution prove the additional element of a death caused through the use of a motor vehicle. People v. Hulse, 192 Colo. 302, 557 P.2d 1205 (1976).

Offenses of vehicular homicide and driving under influence proscribe dissimilar conduct. Because the death of another is an essential element of vehicular homicide, but not of driving under the influence, the offenses proscribe dissimilar conduct and a person prosecuted under this section is not situated similarly to a person charged with driving under the influence. People v. Duemig, 620 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 971, 101 S. Ct. 2048, 68 L. Ed.2d 350 (1981).

Driving under the influence is a lesser included offense of vehicular homicide. People v. Grassi, 192 P.3d 496 (Colo. App. 2008).

Statutory right to refuse blood test not extended to this offense. The general assembly need not extend the legislative grace of a right to refuse a blood test, a test which is constitutionally permissible, to those charged with vehicular homicide or vehicular assault. People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979).

The general assembly may legitimately decline to extend the privilege to refuse a blood test granted by § 42-4-1202 to persons accused of vehicular homicide. People v. Duemig, 620 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 971, 101 S. Ct. 2048, 68 L. Ed.2d 350 (1981).

Consent is not a prerequisite to the performance of a chemical test to determine the alcohol content of a defendant's blood when the defendant is charged with this offense. People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984).

Consent is not constitutionally required. Equal protection is not violated by the failure of this section and § 18-3-205 to afford an accused the right to refuse a blood test afforded by § 42-4-1202. People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979).

The general assembly's decision to permit one charged with the less grievous offense of driving under the influence to refuse a blood test while not likewise permitting one charged with felonious vehicular homicide or felonious vehicular assault to refuse the test is not arbitrary or unreasonable. People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979).

Blood test may precede formal arrest of defendant. The formal arrest of a defendant is not a prerequisite to obtaining a blood sample under this section as long as probable cause exists for such arrest. People v. Sutherland, 683 P.2d 1192 (Colo. 1984); People v. MacCallum, 925 P.2d 758 (Colo. 1996).

Regulations promulgated pursuant to implied consent statute apply to offenses charged under it and not to felonies charged under this section. People v. Acosta, 620 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984).

More severe penalty for vehicular homicide does not deny equal protection. It cannot be said that the legislature's decision to provide a more severe penalty for vehicular homicide than for criminal negligent homicide is arbitrary or unreasonable. The state has a legitimate interest in discouraging a specific evil which it believes to be of greater societal consequence. This choice does not offend equal protection. People v. Hulse, 192 Colo. 302, 557 P.2d 1205 (1976).

Vehicular homicide while driving under the influence is grave and serious per se for purposes of a proportionality review because of the grave harm caused, the death of a person, and the culpability of the defendant's conduct, to drive while intoxicated. People v. Strock, 252 P.3d 1148 (Colo. App. 2010).

Acquittal not inconsistent with conviction for criminally negligent homicide. A conviction on a charge of criminally negligent homicide is not inconsistent with an acquittal on a charge of vehicular homicide. People v. Bettis, 43 Colo. App. 104, 602 P.2d 877 (1979).

When driver is "intoxicated." When a driver is so under the influence of intoxicating liquor that his capacity to operate an automobile is impaired, he is "intoxicated" within the meaning of that term as used in this section. Stevens v. People, 97 Colo. 559, 51 P.2d 1022 (1935).

"Intoxication" probably covers every condition from slight inebriation to complete paralysis. Patton v. People, 114 Colo. 534, 168 P.2d 266 (1946).

Former offense of involuntary manslaughter was not a lesser included offense in a charge based on this section. Daniels v. People, 159 Colo. 190, 411 P.2d 316 (1966).

Criminally negligent homicide is not a lesser included offense of vehicular homicide. People v. Nhan Dao Van, 681 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1984).

Reckless driving is not a lesser included offense of vehicular homicide or vehicular assault. People v. Clary, 950 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1997).

Vehicular homicide is not a lesser included offense of aggravated motor vehicle theft under the strict elements test even if its proof might satisfy an element of aggravated motor vehicle theft under the facts of a particular case. People v. Marquez, 107 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

For former distinction between causing death and causing injury, see People v. Olona, 180 Colo. 299, 505 P.2d 372 (1973).

Both subsection (2) and § 42-2-1202 (2) permit a jury to infer that a defendant was under the influence of alcohol if it finds that the amount of alcohol in his blood at the time of the commission of the alleged offense "or within a reasonable time thereafter," as shown by chemical analysis of the defendant's blood, is 0.10 percent or more. People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

The delay in obtaining samples did not affect the validity or reliability of the test nor did it affect the admissibility of the test results. The "reasonable time" limitation is to ensure that the request for the test is made close enough in time to the alleged offense that the results will be relevant in the determination of defendant's sobriety at the time of the incident. People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

While the timeliness of the blood test may affect its accuracy, evidence which relates to the accuracy of a chemical test affects the weight to be accorded the evidence, rather than its admissibility. People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

Former "percent by weight" language of subsection (2)(c) intended to mean a "weight per volume" measure and 1989 amendment of statute was clarification of meaning. Rickstrew v. People, 822 P.2d 505 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1989 amendment).

Since former "percent by weight" language of subsection (2)(c) establishes sufficient standard by which to measure blood alcohol levels, such language is not vague and does not violate due process. Rickstrew v. People, 822 P.2d 505 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1989 amendment).

Applied in St. Louis v. People, 120 Colo. 345, 209 P.2d 538 (1949); Jones v. People, 149 Colo. 338, 369 P.2d 65 (1962); People v. Fidler, 175 Colo. 90, 485 P.2d 725 (1971); People v. Dunhill, 40 Colo. App. 137, 570 P.2d 1097 (1977); People v. District Court, 195 Colo. 14, 580 P.2d 388 (1978); Riboni v. District Court, 196 Colo. 272, 586 P.2d 9 (1978); People v. Beltran, 634 P.2d 1003 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Perez, 644 P.2d 40 (Colo. App. 1981).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

The use of the disjunctive "or" in this section cannot be ignored, nor can it be construed to mean "and". Espinosa v. People, 142 Colo. 96, 349 P.2d 689 (1960).

Section sets forth more than one means of causing death. In adopting this section, the general assembly intended to set forth more than one means by which the offense of causing a death while operating an automobile could be committed. Espinosa v. People, 142 Colo. 96, 349 P.2d 689 (1960).

Only one offense, with one punishment, is described in this section, although the offense can be committed in either one of the two ways detailed. People v. Viduya, 703 P.2d 1281 (Colo. 1985).

Death occasioned by specified acts constitutes felony. Neither of the offenses of driving under the influence of alcohol, nor reckless driving, nor causing an accident while under the influence of alcohol or by reckless driving, constitutes felonious acts. Only when these events caused a death or injury to another person does this section specifically provide that a felony had been committed. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 160 Colo. 462, 418 P.2d 50 (1966).

Elements of offense. To sustain a charge of causing a death while driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, it must be established that an accident occurred, that there is evidence that a defendant was intoxicated, that a death resulted, and that the acts or conduct of the defendant were the sole proximate cause of the accident. Goodell v. People, 137 Colo. 507, 327 P.2d 279 (1958).

More than one proximate cause may exist. The function of the concept of proximate cause, to establish a causal connection between conduct and injury, is the same in both civil law and criminal law. In civil tort law there can be more than one proximate cause. Thus, in criminal law there can be more than one proximate cause of death, and defendant's conduct does not have to be the only, nearest, or last cause of death, so long as it is a cause but for which the death would not have occurred. People v. Lopez, 97 P.3d 277 (Colo. App. 2004).

Elements to be proven. In order to obtain a conviction under this statute, the prosecution must prove that the defendant voluntarily drove while intoxicated and that his driving resulted in the victim's death. People v. Garner, 781 P.2d 87 (Colo. 1989).

Unlawful conduct which is broken by independent intervening cause cannot be proximate cause of death of another. People v. Gentry, 738 P.2d 1188 (Colo. 1987).

Negligence plus intoxication constitute offense. A death caused by simple negligence committed by a driver while under the influence of liquor is an offense within the contemplation of this section. Espinosa v. People, 142 Colo. 96, 349 P.2d 689 (1960).

A prosecution under this section may be predicated on only negligent or careless driving, i.e., ordinary or simple negligence, as opposed to gross or criminal negligence. Daniels v. People, 159 Colo. 190, 411 P.2d 316 (1966).

Change should be alleged in the conjunctive. To validate an information based upon a statute such as this under which the several means by which a crime may be committed are set forth in the disjunctive, the charge should be alleged in the conjunctive. Espinosa v. People, 142 Colo. 96, 349 P.2d 689 (1960).

Defendant's fatigue could not be considered an independent intervening cause which would relieve the defendant from liability under the vehicular homicide statute. People v. Chopra, 782 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1989).

Failure of victim to employ a seatbelt not an intervening cause that would shield or partially shield the defendant from liability for a collision that resulted in a charge of vehicular homicide. People v. Lopez, 97 P.3d 277 (Colo. App. 2004).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. Indictment and Information.

Judicial notice of fact that information was based on section. The supreme court will take judicial notice of the fact that an information on which a defendant was tried and found guilty by a jury is based on this section. Hart v. Best, 119 Colo. 569, 205 P.2d 787 (1949).

B. Evidence.

Burden of proof. It is incumbent upon the people to establish beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant violated the provisions of this section. Kallnbach v. People, 125 Colo. 144, 242 P.2d 222 (1952).

In a prosecution for causing a death while driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor, proof of guilt must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, and where the evidence is such that a jury can only speculate as to the proximate cause of the accident, it is insufficient to support a conviction. Goodell v. People, 137 Colo. 507, 327 P.2d 279 (1958).

Since vehicular homicide is a strict liability crime, the contributory negligence of the victim is not a defense. People v. Maire, 705 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1985).

Testimony concerning defendant's drinking admissible as a factor for consideration by the jury in determining the issue of defendant's recklessness. Yerby v. People, 176 Colo. 115, 489 P.2d 1308 (1971).

Subsection (3) pertains to admissibility of evidence of intoxication other than blood test, not the evidentiary significance the jury should accord such evidence. People v. Duemig, 620 P.2d 240 (Colo. 1980), cert. denied, 451 U.S. 971, 101 S. Ct. 2048, 68 L. Ed.2d 350 (1981).

Evidence of blood analysis admissible. The evidence of a registered medical technologist concerning a blood analysis of a defendant being prosecuted under this section is competent. Kallnbach v. People, 125 Colo. 144, 242 P.2d 222 (1952).

Admission of blood analysis is not violative of § 18 of art. II, Colo. Const. Kallnbach v. People, 125 Colo. 144, 242 P.2d 222 (1952); Compton v. People, 166 Colo. 419, 444 P.2d 263 (1968); Gibbons v. People, 167 Colo. 83, 445 P.2d 408 (1968).

Method of driving near scene admissible. A drunken man's method of driving half a mile from where he collided with another machine is admissible as evidence of negligence, recklessness, or want of care at the time of the collision. Patton v. People, 114 Colo. 534, 168 P.2d 266 (1946).

Officer permitted to express opinion of speed. In view of his training, experience, and on-the-scene investigation of the physical facts involved in the accident, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in permitting a police officer to express his opinion concerning the speed of the vehicle at the time of the accident. The weight to be accorded his opinion was solely a question for the jury. Meador v. People, 178 Colo. 383, 497 P.2d 1010 (1972).

Death certificate admissible. Where the death certificate showed the cause of death to be cerebral hemorrhage due to compound skull fractures due to or as a consequence of crushing beneath car, it would have been better to have deleted the phrase "crushing beneath car" from the death certificate before it was admitted into evidence, but since no request on the part of the defendant was made to do so, and the record shows no issue was raised by the defendant as to the cause of death, and it is clear that the victim was a passenger in the vehicle from which he was thrown, and as a consequence was killed, there was no prejudicial error. Meador v. People, 178 Colo. 383, 497 P.2d 1010 (1972).

It was not error to admit photographs taken of automobile involved in the accident after it had been removed from a creek and towed to a nearby filling station, where a proper foundation was laid showing that the automobile was in the same condition at the filling station as it was when resting upside down in the middle of the creek, and the photographs were used to depict facts which are relevant to the issue of recklessness. Meader v. People, 178 Colo. 383, 497 P.2d 1010 (1972).

Automobile scraps near scene of collision one week thereafter were properly rejected when offered as evidence of the place and manner in which the collision occurred, where shortly thereafter highway patrolmen picked up and threw aside, without regard to direction, practically all such debris left by the accident. Patton v. People, 114 Colo. 534, 168 P.2d 266 (1946).

Weight of toxicologist's testimony for trier of fact. The weight of a toxicologist's testimony for purposes of establishing whether the defendant was under the influence of intoxicating liquor in prosecution for vehicular homicide is for the trier of fact. People v. Mascarenas, 181 Colo. 268, 509 P.2d 303 (1973).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction. Patton v. People, 114 Colo. 534, 168 P.2d 266 (1946); Yerby v. People, 176 Colo. 115, 489 P.2d 1308 (1971); People v. McCollum, 38 Colo. App. 283, 555 P.2d 184 (1976); People v. Rodriguez, 645 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1982).

When the toxicologist's testimony is considered together with the testimony of the two investigating officers concerning the alcoholic odor about the defendant immediately after the accident, and the testimony that defendant was driving on the wrong side of the road, the evidence of defendant being under the influence of intoxicating liquor is abundant and sustains the verdict of guilty of vehicular homicide. People v. Mascarenas, 181 Colo. 268, 509 P.2d 303 (1973).

Insufficient evidence to show occupant of automobile was accessory. Where two men were charged with operating a car in a reckless manner while intoxicated, and the only evidence supporting the charge that defendant was an accessory was that he was in the car, and was under the influence of intoxicating liquor at the time of the accident, it was held that it could not be successfully contended from the evidence that defendant in any way aided and abetted in that regard. Quintana v. People, 106 Colo. 174, 102 P.2d 486 (1940).

Evidence did not support jury instructions in lesser nonincluded offenses of either careless driving or improper left turn. People v. Sisneros, 738 P.2d 1196 (Colo. App. 1987).

Admission of blood test results does not limit any efforts by the defendant to challenge the accuracy the results, or the weight they are to be given. Nor does it prohibit the jury from considering any other competent evidence regarding the inference of intoxication. People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

The blood alcohol test results are statutorily deemed to relate back to the alleged offense for purposes of applying the statutory inferences. People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

Jury could infer that the defendant was under the influence at the time of the offense where the prosecution presented evidence that approximately three hours after the accident, defendant's blood alcohol level was above the statutory percentage. Because the circumstances at issue permitted the jury to make such inference, the extrapolation evidence offered to establish a still higher blood alcohol level was neither necessary nor relevant and the admission thereof was harmless error. People v. Emery, 812 P.2d 665 (Colo. App. 1990).

C. Jury.

Connection of injuries to death a jury question. Where defendant struck decedent who was lying injured on street as a result of a prior accident, the question of which accident resulted in decedent's death should be determined by jury, and they should consider not whether injuries inflicted by defendant were the proximate cause of death, but whether they hastened or contributed to death. People v. Cox, 123 Colo. 179, 228 P.2d 163 (1951).

D. Instructions.

Approved instructions. In a prosecution for causing the death of another by driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, a given instruction that a person is intoxicated within the meaning of the law when he is so under the influence of intoxicating liquor that his capacity to operate the automobile is impaired, approved. Rinehart v. People, 105 Colo. 123, 95 P.2d 10 (1939); Block v. People, 125 Colo. 36, 240 P.2d 512 (1951), cert. denied, 343 U.S. 978, 72 S. Ct. 1076, 96 L. Ed. 1370, reh'g denied, 344 U.S. 848, 73 S. Ct. 6, 97 L. Ed. 659 (1952); Kallnbach v. People, 125 Colo. 144, 242 P.2d 222 (1952).

Court properly rejected a tendered instruction that provided that a person was not under the influence or impaired by the ingestion of alcohol or drugs unless such influence or impairment is caused by the psychoactive properties of the substance ingested. Prosecution argued that use of cocaine the day before caused defendant to fall asleep. People v. Lucero, 985 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1999).

Failure to instruct on DUI and DWAI as lesser included offenses, if error, was harmless. Section creates strict liability crimes. When fact of collision and death are undisputed, the only issue was whether defendant was intoxicated or impaired. People v. Lucero, 985 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1999).

The court of appeals declined to judicially legislate a modification of this section and require an instruction on the elements of the offense of vehicular homicide to include a finding of unsafe or negligent driving. People v. McCollum, 38 Colo. App. 283, 555 P.2d 184 (1976).

Instructions on elements of offense insufficient. Goodell v. People, 137 Colo. 507, 327 P.2d 279 (1958); Espinosa v. People, 142 Colo. 96, 349 P.2d 689 (1960).

For discussion of appropriate jury instructions, see People v. Deadmond, 683 P.2d 763 (Colo. 1984).

18-3-107. First degree murder of a peace officer or firefighter - legislative declaration. (1) A person who commits murder in the first degree, as defined in section 18-3-102, and the victim is a peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties, commits the felony crime of first degree murder of a peace officer or firefighter.

(2) As used in this section, “peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties” means a peace officer as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., or a firefighter, as defined in section 18-3-201 (1), who is engaged or acting in, or who is present for the purpose of engaging or acting in, the performance of any duty, service, or function imposed, authorized, required, or permitted by law to be performed by a peace officer or firefighter, whether or not the peace officer or firefighter is within the territorial limits of his or her jurisdiction, if the peace officer or firefighter is in uniform or the person committing an assault upon or offense against or otherwise acting toward such peace officer or firefighter knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a peace officer or firefighter.

(3) A person convicted of first degree murder of a peace officer or firefighter shall be punished by life imprisonment without the possibility of parole for the rest of his or her natural life, unless a proceeding held to determine sentence according to the procedure set forth in section 18-1.3-1201, 18-1.3-1302, or 18-1.4-102 results in a verdict that requires imposition of the death penalty, in which event such person shall be sentenced to death. Nothing in this subsection (3) shall be construed as limiting the power of the governor to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons pursuant to section 7 of article IV of the Colorado constitution.

(4) In the event the death penalty as provided for in this section is held to be unconstitutional by the Colorado supreme court or the United States supreme court, a person convicted of first degree murder of a peace officer or firefighter under subsection (1) of this section shall be punished by life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. In such circumstance, the court which previously sentenced a person to death shall cause such person to be brought before the court, and the court shall sentence such person to life imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

(5) The general assembly recognizes that protection of peace officers and firefighters from crime is a major concern of our state because society depends on peace officers and firefighters for protection against crime and other dangers and because peace officers and firefighters are disproportionately damaged by crime because their duty to protect society often places them in dangerous circumstances. Society as a whole benefits from affording special protection to peace officers and firefighters because such protection deters crimes against them and allows them to better serve and protect our state. The general assembly therefore finds that the penalties for first degree murder of a peace officer or firefighter should be more severe than the penalty for first degree murder of other members of society.

Source: L. 88: Entire section added, p. 718, § 5, effective July 1. L. 95: (3) amended, p. 1294, § 4, effective July 1. L. 97: Entire section amended, p. 1010, § 13, effective August 6. L. 2002: (3) amended, p. 1512, § 185, effective October 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (3) amended, p. 15, §§ 9, 10, effective July 12. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 1624, § 45, effective August 6.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 16 of chapter 1 of the supplement to the Session Laws of Colorado 2002, Third Extraordinary Session.

PART 2

ASSAULTS

18-3-201. Definitions. As used in sections 18-3-201 to 18-3-203, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Firefighter" means an officer or member of a fire department or fire protection or fire-fighting agency of the state, or any municipal or quasi-municipal corporation in this state, whether that person is a volunteer or receives compensation for services rendered as such firefighter.

(2) "Peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties" means a peace officer, as described in section 16-2.5-101, C.R.S., or firefighter who is engaged or acting in, or who is present for the purpose of engaging or acting in, the performance of any duty, service, or function imposed, authorized, required, or permitted by law to be performed by a peace officer or firefighter, whether or not the peace officer or firefighter is within the territorial limits of his or her jurisdiction, if the peace officer or firefighter is in uniform or the person committing an assault upon or offense against or otherwise acting toward such peace officer or firefighter knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a peace officer or firefighter. For the purposes of this subsection (2) and this part 2, the term "peace officer" shall include county enforcement personnel designated pursuant to section 29-7-101 (3), C.R.S.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 419, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-201. L. 96: (2) amended, p. 588, § 2, effective May 1. L. 97: Entire section amended, p. 1011, § 14, effective August 6. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 1628, § 62, effective August 6.

ANNOTATION

Off-duty peace officer included. An off-duty peace officer may be a "peace officer or fireman engaged in the performance of his duties" as defined in this section. People v. Rael, 198 Colo. 225, 597 P.2d 584 (1979).

Paramedic employed by the fire department included. Definition of "peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties" includes a paramedic employed by the fire department to respond to such emergencies as medical calls, fire calls, and car accidents. People v. Montoya, 104 P.3d 303 (Colo. App. 2004).

Applied in People v. Mason, 632 P.2d 616 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-3-202. Assault in the first degree. (1) A person commits the crime of assault in the first degree if:

(a) With intent to cause serious bodily injury to another person, he causes serious bodily injury to any person by means of a deadly weapon; or

(b) With intent to disfigure another person seriously and permanently, or to destroy, amputate, or disable permanently a member or organ of his body, he causes such an injury to any person; or

(c) Under circumstances manifesting extreme indifference to the value of human life, he knowingly engages in conduct which creates a grave risk of death to another person, and thereby causes serious bodily injury to any person; or

(d) Repealed.

(e) With intent to cause serious bodily injury upon the person of a peace officer or firefighter, he or she threatens with a deadly weapon a peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties, and the offender knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a peace officer or firefighter acting in the performance of his or her duties; or

(e.5) With intent to cause serious bodily injury upon the person of a judge of a court of competent jurisdiction or an officer of said court, he threatens with a deadly weapon a judge of a court of competent jurisdiction or an officer of said court, and the offender knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a judge of a court of competent jurisdiction or an officer of said court; or

(f) While lawfully confined or in custody as a result of being charged with or convicted of a crime or as a result of being charged as a delinquent child or adjudicated as a delinquent child and with intent to cause serious bodily injury to a person employed by or under contract with a detention facility, as defined in section 18-8-203 (3), or to a person employed by the division in the department of human services responsible for youth services and who is a youth services counselor or is in the youth services worker classification series, he or she threatens with a deadly weapon such a person engaged in the performance of his or her duties and the offender knows or reasonably should know that the victim is such a person engaged in the performance of his or her duties while employed by or under contract with a detention facility or while employed by the division in the department of human services responsible for youth services. A sentence imposed pursuant to this paragraph (f) shall be served in the department of corrections and shall run consecutively with any sentences being served by the offender. A person who participates in a work release program, a furlough, or any other similar authorized supervised or unsupervised absence from a detention facility, as defined in section 18-8-203 (3), and who is required to report back to the detention facility at a specified time shall be deemed to be in custody.

(2) (a) If assault in the first degree is committed under circumstances where the act causing the injury is performed upon a sudden heat of passion, caused by a serious and highly provoking act of the intended victim, affecting the person causing the injury sufficiently to excite an irresistible passion in a reasonable person, and without an interval between the provocation and the injury sufficient for the voice of reason and humanity to be heard, it is a class 5 felony.

(b) If assault in the first degree is committed without the circumstances provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), it is a class 3 felony.

(c) If a defendant is convicted of assault in the first degree pursuant to subsection (1) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

(d) Repealed.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 420, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-202. L. 75: (1)(d) amended, p. 632, § 6, effective July 1; (1)(a) amended, p. 618, § 7, effective July 21. L. 76, Ex. Sess.: (1)(f) added, p. 8, § 1, effective September 18. L. 77: (1)(c) amended, p. 961, § 9, effective July 1. L. 79: (2) R&RE, p. 732, § 1, effective May 18. L. 81: (1)(d) R&RE, p. 973, § 6, effective July 1. L. 86: (1)(d) amended, p. 770, § 5, effective July 1; (1)(f) amended, p. 789, § 1, effective July 1; (2)(c) and (2)(d) added, p. 776, § 2, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(f) amended, p. 991, § 1, effective April 5; (1)(e.5) added and (2)(c) amended, p. 986, §§ 7, 8, effective April 24. L. 94: (1)(f) amended, p. 2655, § 137, effective July 1. L. 95: (1)(d) and (2)(d) repealed, p. 1250, § 6, effective July 1. L. 97: (2)(a) amended, p. 1544, § 13, effective July 1; (1)(e) amended, p. 1011, § 15, effective August 6. L. 98: (2)(c) amended, p. 1441, § 25, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2)(c) amended, p. 1512, § 186, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1)(f) amended, p. 1430, § 16, effective April 29.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsection (1)(f), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (2)(c), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.

II. Elements of Offense.

III. Trial and Prosecution.

A. In General.

B. Indictment or Information.

C. Evidence.

D. Jury.

E. Instructions.

IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Joinder of Criminal Charges, Election, Duplicity", see 30 Dicta

117 (1953). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law", see 34 Dicta 98 (1957). For article, "The Definition of 'Deadly Weapon' Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 15 Colo. Law, 1663 (1986).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-202 is similar to former § 40-2-34, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Subsection (1)(b) is unconstitutional as violative of a person's right to equal protection of the laws. People v. Dominguez, 193 Colo. 468, 568 P.2d 54 (1977).

Subsection (1)(b) is unconstitutional because it imposes a higher penalty for essentially the same conduct proscribed in § 18-3-203(1)(a). People v. Dominguez, 193 Colo. 468, 568 P.2d 54 (1977).

Subsection (1)(e) is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Jackson, 194 Colo. 93, 570 P.2d 527 (1977).

There is a sufficient pragmatic difference between the first degree assault statute and the second degree assault statute so as not to violate the defendant's constitutional guarantee of equal protection. People v. Jackson, 194 Colo. 93, 570 P.2d 527 (1977).

Divergent penalties in former versions of criminally negligent homicide and first degree assault violated equal protection because both statutes proscribed similar conduct and intent. People v. Jackson, 198 Colo. 193, 601 P.2d 622 (1979).

Different mental states required for first degree assault and criminally negligent homicide justify different penalties, and thus harsher penalty for first degree assault does not violate equal protection. People v. Lucero, 714 P.2d 498 (Colo. App. 1985).

This section does not proscribe conduct identical to § 18-3-203 and therefore does not violate equal protection. People v. Brake, 196 Colo. 575, 588 P.2d 869 (1979); People v. Montoya, 709 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 736 P.2d 1208 (Colo. 1987); People v. Johnson, 923 P.2d 342 (Colo. App. 1996).

Requirement for proof of "extreme indifference to human life" is a sufficient differentiation between first and second degree assault and the statutes do not violate the equal protection clause. People v. Johnson, 923 P.2d 342 (Colo. App. 1996).

The extreme indifference first degree assault statute contains no requirement that universal malice be proved. Therefore, a conviction for extreme indifference first degree assault may be upheld where defendant's conduct is directed at a single individual. Unlike the first degree extreme indifference murder statute, which requires proof of universal malice against human life generally, the assault statute contains no similar language. People v. Baker, 178 P.3d 1225 (Colo. App. 2007).

Special protection of peace officers reasonable. The general assembly recognizes that peace officers are placed in a position of great risk and responsibility, so to invoke a special punishment for an assault upon a peace officer acting in the scope of his official duties is neither arbitrary, capricious, nor unreasonable. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

Assault on off-duty peace officer who is attempting to perform a law enforcement function violates this section. People v. Rael, 198 Colo. 225, 597 P.2d 584 (1979).

Scope of police duties for purposes of assault statutes. A law enforcement officer is "engaged in the performance of his duties" while making in good faith an arrest or stop which may be later adjudged to be invalid, unless he is on a personal frolic or resorts to unreasonable or excessive force. People v. Johnson, 677 P.2d 424 (Colo. App. 1983).

Every attempt to do personal injury involves an assault. Every attempt at robbery, or to commit rape, or to do other like personal injury, involves within it the idea of an assault, either actual or constructive. McNamara v. People, 24 Colo. 61, 48 P. 541 (1897).

Section applies to murder in either of the degrees. In a prosecution under this section it is not required that in order to sustain a conviction an attempt to commit murder in the first degree should be shown. This section applies to murder in either of the degrees. Dillulo v. People, 56 Colo. 339, 138 P. 33 (1914).

A simple assault is necessarily included as a part of aggravated assault. Lane v. People, 102 Colo. 83, 77 P.2d 121 (1938).

Reason for distinction among degrees of assault. This statutory scheme distinguishes between the degrees of assault based upon whether the injury was inflicted by means of a deadly weapon and whether the victim's injuries were so severe as to constitute "serious bodily injury" under the statutory definition. Stroup v. People, 656 P.2d 680 (Colo. 1982); People v. Tyler, 728 P.2d 314 (Colo. 1986).

Under subsection (2), heat of passion is not an affirmative defense to first degree assault. If found by the jury, it merely results in a reduction of penalty. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1991).

Under subsection (1)(d), because defendant could not be convicted of first degree assault without proof that he committed a class 3 felony sexual assault, the latter offense was a lesser included offense of the first degree assault charge and he could not, therefore, be convicted of both offenses. People v. Moore, 860 P.2d 549 (Colo. App. 1993).

By enacting subsection (2)(a), the general assembly maintained the offense of first degree assault, while providing for a lesser sentence if the additional mitigating factor of heat of passion was present. Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

If first degree assault is committed under heat of passion, it is still a crime of violence and defendant must be sentenced in accordance with § 16-11-309. People v. Farbes, 973 P.2d 704 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Ferguson, 43 P.3d 705 (Colo. App. 2001).

The general assembly did not intend for heat of passion to be an affirmative defense to the offense of first degree assault. Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

The predicate offenses for "felony" first degree assault under this section fit the statutory test for a lesser included offense. As such, the conviction of the predicate offense must merge into the conviction for "felony" first degree assault, even though the predicate offense is a more serious offense and carries a greater punishment. People v. Halstead, 881 P.2d 401 (Colo. App. 1994).

Second degree assault is a lesser included offense of first degree assault. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

Assault with intent to rob is lesser included offense of aggravated robbery. Therefore, since assault with intent to rob is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery, it was error for the court to permit both verdicts to stand. Thus, the conviction on the lesser included offense must be set aside. People v. Stephens, 188 Colo. 8, 532 P.2d 728 (1975).

Doctrine of merger required convictions for attempted aggravated robbery to be vacated where separately charged crime of attempted aggravated robbery of each victim was lesser included offense of crime of first degree assault on each victim. People v. Griffin, 867 P.2d 27 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Fisher, 904 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under law as it existed prior to 1995 repeal of subsection (1)(d)).

There is no offense of attempt to commit an assault with a deadly weapon in Colorado. Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971).

There is no crime of attempted assault in Colorado. People v. Gordon, 178 Colo. 406, 498 P.2d 341 (1972).

There is a crime of attempt to commit rape under § 18-2-101 despite the existence of the crime of assault with intent to commit rape under this section for these are separate and distinct offenses. Clark v. People, 176 Colo. 48, 488 P.2d 1097 (1971).

A deadly weapon is one which is likely to produce death or great bodily injury from the manner in which it is used. Armijo v. People, 134 Colo. 344, 304 P.2d 633 (1956).

The offense of assault and battery is a matter of mixed state and local concern. City of Aurora v. Martin, 181 Colo. 72, 507 P.2d 868 (1973).

"Unreasonable but good faith belief" defense not available. The general assembly excluded in this section the defense of "unreasonable but good faith belief", inasmuch as a conviction is required if the jury should find that the defendant should reasonably have known that the police officers were acting within their lawful duties. People v. Estrada, 198 Colo. 188, 601 P.2d 619 (1979).

Applied in Zeiler v. People, 157 Colo. 332, 403 P.2d 439 (1965); Segura v. People, 159 Colo. 371, 412 P.2d 227 (1966); Hammond v. People, 161 Colo. 532, 423 P.2d 331 (1967); People in Interest of D.G.P., 194 Colo. 238, 570 P.2d 1293 (1977); Jones v. District Court, 196 Colo. 261, 584 P.2d 81 (1978); People v. Watkins, 196 Colo. 377, 586 P.2d 43 (1978); People v. Dowdell, 197 Colo. 76, 589 P.2d 948 (1979); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. Trout, 198 Colo. 98, 596 P.2d 762 (1979); Perea v. District Court, 199 Colo. 27, 604 P.2d 25 (1979); Kreiser v. People, 199 Colo. 20, 604 P.2d 27 (1979); People v. Hoehl, 629 P.2d 1083 (Colo. 1980); People v. Lichtenstein, 630 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1981); People v. Valencia, 630 P.2d 85 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jordan, 630 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1981); People v. Henry, 631 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jones, 631 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1981); People v. Walker, 634 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982); People v. Ferguson, 653 P.2d 725 (Colo. 1982); People v. Cole, 654 P.2d 830 (Colo. 1982); People v. Thompson, 655 P.2d 416 (Colo. 1982); People v. Castro, 657 P.2d 932 (Colo. 1983); People v. Martinez, 660 P.2d 1292 (Colo. 1983); People v. Brandt, 664 P.2d 712 (Colo. 1983); People v. Reed, 695 P.2d 806 (Colo. App. 1984), cert. denied, 701 P.2d 603 (Colo. 1985).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

Assault under this section is in part a specific-intent crime, requiring the prosecution to prove that the defendant had the conscious objective to cause serious bodily injury. People v. Gonzales, 926 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1996).

First degree murder statutes (§§ 18-2-101 and 18-3-102) contain rationally different elements than this first degree assault statute, and thus a defendant sentenced under the former and not the latter was not denied equal protection of law. People v. Brewer, 720 P.2d 596 (Colo. App. 1985).

Attempted first degree assault is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. Attempted first degree assault requires that a defendant act with the intent to cause serious bodily injury to another person by means of a deadly weapon. Use of a deadly weapon is not an element of attempted first degree murder after deliberation. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

Proof of actual ability to inflict injury not necessarily essential. The crime of assault with intent to rob under this section may be committed by intimidation as well as by actual force, and the intimidation may be as effectually accomplished by apparent as by actual ability to inflict the injury, hence, proof of actual ability to inflict the injury in the manner threatened is not necessarily essential. McNamara v. People, 24 Colo. 61, 48 P. 541 (1897).

Assault to commit murder requires evidence of defendant's present ability to commit an assault on the victim and specific intent to murder. People v. Baca, 179 Colo. 166, 503 P.2d 348 (1972).

Conviction under this section is not inconsistent with conviction for attempted second degree murder. A defendant can engage in conduct with the intent to cause serious bodily injury while knowing but not caring that the conduct is practically certain to result in death. In such circumstances, the defendant may be found guilty of attempted second degree murder, even though lacking the specific intent to cause death. People v. Gonzales, 926 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1996).

However, attempted second degree murder is not a lesser-included offense of first degree assault. People v. Laurson, 15 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2000).

Intent to cause serious bodily injury is not necessarily an intent to cause only serious bodily injury. People v. Gonzales, 926 P.2d 153 (Colo. App. 1996).

Present ability must be construed in the light of the particular situation. In construing the criminal assault statute, therefore, factors such as the gravity of the potential harm and the uncertainty of the result are to be included in appraising the actor's present ability. Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971); People v. Gordon, 178 Colo. 406, 498 P.2d 341 (1972).

Essential elements of assault are an unlawful attempt to commit a violent injury and the present ability to commit a violent injury, and these elements must be shown to have existed at the time in order to sustain a charge of assault. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

The absence of heat of passion provocation is neither an element nor a sentencing enhancer of first degree assault. People v. Villarreal, 131 P.3d 1119 (Colo. App. 2005).

Although an inconsistency exists between jury verdicts for attempted first degree murder and those for first and second degree assault under the heat of passion, the inconsistency does not require reversal because the existence or absence of heat of passion is not a necessary element of either assault charge. Peo- ple v. Sanchez, 253 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

Defendant can possess the intent to cause death, serious bodily harm, and bodily harm at the same time. Therefore, jury's guilty verdicts for attempted first degree murder and first degree assault based on defendant's stabbing of one person and the jury's guilty verdicts for attempted first degree murder and second degree assault based on defendant's stabbing of a second person are not necessarily inconsistent. People v. Sanchez, 253 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

Specific intent is element of offense. Where a crime consists of an act combined with a specific intent, the intent is just as much an element of the crime as is the act. Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952).

"Specific", as applied to intent to do great bodily harm is an adjective which distinguishes the intent to do great bodily harm from other intentions in the defendant's mind at the time of the commission of the crime, and to require that intention to be in actual existence in defendant's mind at the time of the commission of the alleged crime. Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952); Moyer v. People, 165 Colo. 583, 440 P.2d 783 (1968).

The elements of assault and specific intent on the part of the assaulter must coexist in order to constitute the crime. Crump v. People, 129 Colo. 58, 266 P.2d 1100 (1954); Barnhisel v. People, 141 Colo. 243, 347 P.2d 915 (1959).

The specific intent to commit bodily injury upon the person of another is a necessary and essential element of assault with a deadly weapon. Armijo v. People, 157 Colo. 217, 402 P.2d 79 (1965); Baker v. People, 176 Colo. 99, 489 P.2d 196 (1971).

Specific intent is an essential element of the crime of assault with a deadly weapon. Duran v. People, 156 Colo. 385, 399 P.2d 412 (1965).

Intent to rob requires knowing, deliberate action. Martinez v. People, 172 Colo. 82, 470 P.2d 26 (1970).

The specific intent to do bodily injury to another person is an essential element of the offense of assault with a deadly weapon. People v. Garcia, 186 Colo. 167, 526 P.2d 292 (1974).

Where a defendant engages in only one assaultive act, he or she cannot simultaneously have a specific intent to harm a particular person and universal malice that is not directed at a particular person. People v. Beatty, 80 P.3d 847 (Colo. App. 2003).

"Serious bodily injury" is an element of first degree assault, which the people must prove beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 287, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

"Serious bodily injury" is defined as bodily injury which involves a substantial risk of death, serious permanent disfigurement, or protracted loss or impairment of the function of any part or organ of the body. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 287, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

“Serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury” constitutionally distinguishable. Sections 18-3-202 (1)(a) and 18-3-203 (1)(a), thus, do not proscribe identical conduct and therefore do not violate equal protection. People v. Elam, 198 Colo. 170, 597 P.2d 571 (1979).

The basic element in both first and second degree assault is injury to a person’s body, the difference being one of the degree of the injury. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 287, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

By establishing all of the essential elements of first degree assault, all of the essential elements of second degree assault would necessarily be proven. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 287, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

First degree assault and burglary each require proving additional fact. First degree assault and first degree burglary each require proof of an additional fact not necessary in proof of the other. People v. Rael, 199 Colo. 201, 612 P.2d 1095 (1980).

In order to prove first degree assault and crime of violence instead of second degree assault and crime of violence, an additional element must be proven — that the use of the deadly weapon actually caused the serious bodily injury. People v. Mozee, 723 P.2d 117 (Colo. 1986).

The elements of assault with intent to commit rape are: (1) The assault; (2) the intent to commit rape; and (3) the purpose to effect such intent. Barnhisel v. People, 141 Colo. 243, 347 P.2d 915 (1959).

Unnecessary to show witness in fact resisted. If defendant made the assault with the specific intent to commit rape and to overcome resistance with force, it is unnecessary in a prosecution under this section to establish that the prosecuting witness in fact resisted, or that she failed to resist because of threats of bodily harm. Crump v. People, 129 Colo. 58, 266 P.2d 1100 (1954).

Conditional threat of death will suffice to establish assault against a jail guard even though no attempt was made to commit a battery on the guard. People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 57, 530 P.2d 512 (1974).

Wounds resulting in disfigurement of leg. Pictures of wounds as exhibited to the jury justified the reasonable inference that the wounds resulted in disfigurement of the leg, a necessary element of proof under this section. People v. Strohm, 185 Colo. 260, 523 P.2d 973 (1974).

Requirement of knowledge that victim of assault was peace officer is not constitutionally required and the general assembly could have made the commission of the act as such a crime without regard to the knowledge of the doer that the victim was a peace officer. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

Defendant committed first degree extreme indifference assault when he fired into a closed door upon leaving house and admitted that he was not directing his fire at any particular individual, despite fact that he knew some of the victims inside the house. People v. Ellis, 30 P.3d 774 (Colo. App. 2001).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. In General.

Proof beyond reasonable doubt required.

In order to find one guilty of a violation of this section, it is incumbent upon the people to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant violated the statute with a specific intent so to do. Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952); Baker v. People, 176 Colo. 99, 489 P.2d 196 (1971).

A showing of actual knowledge that the one assaulted was a peace officer engaged in his official duties or proof of the probability of such knowledge beyond a reasonable doubt must precede conviction of assault of a peace officer. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

It is no defense to show that specific intent to do bodily harm was directed at someone else other than victim. Medina v. People, 133 Colo. 67, 291 P.2d 1061 (1956); People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

Failure to advise pleading defendant of specific intent element not “fundamental defect”. The sentencing court’s failure explicitly to advise the defendant of the element of specific intent in the crime of aggravated assault was not such a “fundamental defect” that would result in a “complete miscarriage of justice” upon the defendant’s plea of guilty. Martinez v. Ricketts, 498 F. Supp. 893 (D. Colo. 1980).

Elements of first degree assault are readily understandable to persons of ordinary intelligence and pleading defendant was properly advised of the critical elements through the reading of the information by the district court. People v. Cabral, 698 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1985).

Conviction for both first degree assault and first degree burglary does not violate constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy. People v. Rael, 199 Colo. 201, 612 P.2d 1095 (1980).

Under subsection (1)(d) when there are separate victims for each crime an underlying conviction of sexual assault on a child does not merge into a conviction of first degree assault while committing a crime. People v. Moore, 877 P.2d 840 (Colo. 1994).

Prosecution need not prove, and the jury need not be instructed about, the absence of heat of passion provocation as a sentence enhancer under Apprendi. People v. Villarreal, 131 P.3d 1119 (Colo. App. 2005).

B. Indictment or Information.

Several counts may be united. It is proper to unite in one information counts charging an assault, an assault with a deadly weapon with intent to do bodily injury, and an assault with intent to commit murder, where all refer to the same transaction. Rice v. People, 55 Colo. 506, 136 P. 74 (1913).

Allegation that defendant "did make an assault" sufficient. An indictment for assault with intent to rob under this section, which alleges, as to the assault, that the defendant "did make an assault", without stating all of the particulars comprehended by the statutory definition of that term is sufficient. McNamara v. People, 24 Colo. 61, 48 P. 541 (1897).

Indictment for assault with intent to murder, where word "feloniously" is unnecessarily used, is good. Gile v. People, 1 Colo. 60 (1867).

Information held sufficient. Mayer v. People, 116 Colo. 284, 180 P.2d 1017 (1947).

C. Evidence.

Specific intent not presumed from act. Proof of the commission of the act does not warrant the presumption that accused had the requisite specific intent. Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952); Armijo v. People, 157 Colo. 217, 402 P.2d 79 (1965).

Intent may be inferred from all circumstances. Intent is usually manifested by circumstances and proof thereof necessarily is by circumstantial evidence, and, of course, such intent is ordinarily inferable from the facts. Peterson v. People, 133 Colo. 516, 297 P.2d 529 (1956); Moyer v. People, 165 Colo. 583, 440 P.2d 783 (1968).

Proof of specific intent is necessarily circumstantial and inferable from all the facts and circumstances surrounding the doing of the act. Gonzales v. People, 168 Colo. 545, 452 P.2d 46 (1969).

On a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, while the mere commission of the act does not necessarily mean that the defendant had the requisite specific intent to harm, this intent may nonetheless be found from the defendant's actions and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. Baker v. People, 176 Colo. 99, 489 P.2d 196 (1971).

Specific intent to do great bodily harm may be supplied by inferences drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. Focht, 180 Colo. 259, 504 P.2d 1096 (1972).

It is clear that specific intent may be inferred from the facts and circumstances surrounding the commission of an assault. People v. Edwards, 184 Colo. 440, 520 P.2d 1041 (1974).

While specific intent must be established beyond a reasonable doubt, it may be proven by circumstantial evidence. People v. Walker, 189 Colo. 545, 542 P.2d 1283 (1975).

Intent shown by direct or circumstantial evidence. Under this section general criminal intent is insufficient and there must be a showing of specific intent by direct or circumstantial evidence. Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952); Peterson v. People, 133 Colo. 516, 297 P.2d 529 (1956); Armijo v. People, 157 Colo. 217, 402 P.2d 79 (1965).

On a charge of assault with a deadly weapon, specific intent to do bodily harm need not be proved by direct substantive evidence. Baker v. People, 176 Colo. 99, 489 P.2d 196 (1971).

Intent to cause serious bodily injury may be proven by circumstantial evidence. People v. Olinger, 180 Colo. 58, 502 P.2d 79 (1972).

Evidence which tends to establish motive or intent is not rendered inadmissible merely because it may tend to show commission by the accused of a crime different from the one with which he is charged. Swift v. People, 171 Colo. 178, 465 P.2d 391 (1970).

Evidence of uncommunicated threats by deceased shortly before the killing, together with acts and conduct indicating an intention to put the threats into execution, may be admissible as part of the res gestae. This does not mean, however, that all uncommunicated threats are admissible, for they have to be offered for a proper purpose. Sowards v. People, 158 Colo. 557, 408 P.2d 441 (1965).

A defendant's character, temperament, and status, as well as his reason for acting as he did, are important to enable the jury to arrive at a proper verdict. Sowards v. People, 158 Colo. 557, 408 P.2d 441 (1965).

Section requires sufficient evidence of force. All that is necessary to sustain a verdict of assault with intent to commit rape is that there should be sufficient evidence of force from which the jury can justly find that the defendant intended to overcome the resistance of the woman by the necessary force. Crump v. People, 129 Colo. 58, 266 P.2d 1100 (1954).

Complaint of rape victim corroborates her testimony. In criminal trials for rape, where rape was attempted but not consummated, it may be shown by the testimony of the prosecuting witness or that of other witnesses that the alleged victim made complaint of the outrage soon after its commission for the purpose of corroborating her testimony. Padilla v. People, 156 Colo. 186, 397 P.2d 741 (1964).

Evidence of the failure of the person assaulted to make complaint soon after the commission of the outrage is a circumstance which tends to discredit her testimony. Padilla v. People, 156 Colo. 186, 397 P.2d 741 (1964).

It is not independent evidence of the offense charged. Padilla v. People, 156 Colo. 186, 397 P.2d 741 (1964).

Evidence sufficient to submit to jury issue of intent. People v. Olinger, 180 Colo. 58, 502 P.2d 79 (1972).

Evidence sufficient to show specific intent. Swift v. People, 171 Colo. 178, 465 P.2d 391 (1970); Baker v. People, 176 Colo. 99, 489 P.2d 196 (1971); People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972); People v. Focht, 180 Colo. 259, 504 P.2d 1096 (1972).

Eyewitness testimony established use of weapon. Where three witnesses for the people testified only that they did not see the defendant with a knife, a fourth witness testified unequivocally to possession of a knife by the defendant, and no witness of the people stated that the defendant did not have a knife, there is no internal contradiction, and the evidence of one eyewitness, if believed by the jury, is sufficient to establish that defendant had in his possession a knife and used it to inflict the wounds on the victim of the assault. People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

Impeachment of victim's reputation and credibility. When the reputation and credibility of the victim of an assault is sought to be impeached, the general rule is that evidence as to such reputation must be confined to the community in which the person, whose reputation is sought to be shown, lives, and limited to some reasonable time previous to the time of the present criminal act. However, the general rule does not apply if the defendant contends that he acted in self-defense, and at the time of the criminal act the defendant was aware of the victim's prior acts of violence upon a third person. People v. Burress, 183 Colo. 146, 515 P.2d 460 (1973).

Sufficiency of present ability and intent. When a defendant who threatens to kill a police officer places both hands on the officer's revolver in an attempt to remove it, the evidence of defendant's present ability to commit assault with a deadly weapon as well as possession and control of the weapon by defendant is sufficient to sustain a conviction. People v. Gordon, 178 Colo. 406, 498 P.2d 341 (1972).

When there is no evidence of any nature that a defendant possessed a gun or had the present ability to inflict the victim's injury, and there is no evidence whatsoever from which the jury could draw an inference that the defendant had the specific intent to murder the victim, defendant cannot be convicted of assault to commit murder. People v. Baca, 180 Colo. 166, 503 P.2d 348 (1972).

Evidence of act giving rise to self-defense. Before the defendant, whose defense to an assault is self-defense, can impeach the credibility of the victim by a prior specific violent act, the defendant must lay a proper foundation, and the trial court is justified in excluding the specific act evidence until such time as the defendant establishes that he was aware that the specific violent act took place, and that either the act occurred, or the defendant became aware of its occurrence within a reasonable time of his use of force in self-defense. People v. Burress, 183 Colo. 146, 515 P.2d 460 (1973).

Photographs as evidence. In a child abuse prosecution, the trial court did not err in admitting into evidence photographs of the body of the deceased child. The photographs accurately depicted the burns and the bruises, contusions and abrasions on the child's body. They were relevant and had probative value concerning the nature and permanency of the injuries inflicted upon the child. People v. Strohm, 185 Colo. 260, 523 P.2d 973 (1974).

Testimony of emergency room physician related to substantial risk of permanent injury based upon points of bullet entry and exit, taking into account the structures and vessels in or near the path to the extent that such path could be determined, held proper. People v. Covington, 988 P.2d 657 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 15 (Colo. 2001).

Granting motion for judgment of acquittal was error. Where evidence in prosecution for first degree assault was held sufficient to support jury verdict of guilty, the granting of motion for judgment of acquittal by the trial judge was error. People v. Martinez, 191 Colo. 428, 553 P.2d 774 (1976).

Evidence sufficient to support conviction. Where defendant said that he was going home to get a gun and would be back, and afterwards returned with a gun and stated to complaining witness, "I told you I would do it", the evidence was sufficient to support a verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon. Peterson v. People, 133 Colo. 516, 297 P.2d 529 (1956).

Testimony of an eyewitness in which she spontaneously and unequivocally identified the defendant as the culprit, the testimony of the police officers as to apprehension of the defendant almost immediately after the commission of the offense in the vicinity of the victim's home, and the condition of the defendant's clothing, was sufficient evidence to support the verdict of the jury of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon. Harris v. People, 174 Colo. 483, 484 P.2d 1223 (1971).

Evidence that defendant drove recklessly and with extreme indifference through business and residential areas was sufficient to uphold defendant's conviction for first degree assault. People v. Esparza-Treto, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

D. Jury.

Whether fight was by consent is jury question. A fight by consent is a fight had upon a mutual agreement to fight together. As a proof of such agreement may be direct or circumstantial, it is ordinarily a proper question to be submitted to the jury. Carpenter v. People, 31 Colo. 284, 72 P. 1072 (1903).

As is issue of specific intent. The question of whether there was sufficient evidence to sustain an allegation as to specific intent under this section is not a question of law but a question of fact which rests entirely within the competency of the trier of fact, whether it be a jury or a court, and was thus not reviewable by the supreme court. People v. Archer, 173 Colo. 299, 477 P.2d 791 (1970), overruled on other grounds, People v. Kirkland, 174 Colo. 362, 483 P.2d 1349 (1971).

Knowledge that victim was officer. The question of whether one knew or should have known another to be a peace officer is a purely factual issue and it is the jury's duty to resolve the conflict in evidence on this question. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

Likewise, credibility and weight of testimony. Where a genuine issue as to facts exists, the jury as trier of the facts must be the judge of the credibility of the witnesses and the weight to be accorded their testimony. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

Whether defendant established heat of passion claim was issue for jury to determine. Thompson v. Ricketts, 500 F. Supp. 688 (D. Colo. 1980).

Determination of issue by jury is not vague guide. The fact that a penal statute is framed in a way such as to require a jury to determine a question of reasonableness does not make it too vague to afford a practical guide to acceptable behavior. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

Jury verdict not defective, where record reflects verdict form allowed jury, if it found the defendant guilty of first or second degree assault, to assign the mitigator of heat of passion. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1991).

Record supported jury's determination that defendant was guilty beyond a reasonable doubt of first degree assault where defendant was a complicitor in the robbery of the victim, and in the course of or in furtherance of that crime, the victim was seriously injured by one of the individuals involved in the robbery. People v. Fisher, 904 P.2d 1326 (Colo. App. 1994) (decided under law as it existed prior to 1995 repeal of subsection (1)(d)).

E. Instructions.

Instruction which fails to define all necessary elements of crime is deficient. Barnhisel v. People, 141 Colo. 243, 347 P.2d 915 (1959).

The failure to give an instruction which informed the jury that an essential ingredient of the crime was the specific intent to commit bodily injury upon the person of another and that it was incumbent upon the people to prove, beyond a reasonable doubt, such specific intent was reversible error. Armijo v. People, 157 Colo. 217, 402 P.2d 79 (1965).

Inadequate instruction on specific intent. Instruction on specific intent in prosecution for assault with intent to commit murder which read, "Where a crime consists of an act combined with a specific intent, the intent is just as much an element of the crime as is the act. In such cases, mere general intent is insufficient, and the requisite specific intent must be shown as a matter of fact, either by direct or circumstantial evidence", was too general and failed to advise the jury as to what the requisite specific intent was. People v. Nace, 182 Colo. 127, 511 P.2d 501 (1973).

Instruction on possession of knife erroneous. It was error to instruct the jury that it was unlawful to possess or carry a pocket knife, the blade of which can be opened by mechanical contrivance, where the information charged the defendant with an alleged assault with a deadly weapon, and not with violating such statute. Watts v. People, 159 Colo. 347, 411 P.2d 335 (1966).

Where evidence justifies it, simple assault may be submitted as lesser included offense of an aggravated assault such as assault with a deadly weapon, and an instruction thereon is proper. However, in those cases where the defendant must either be guilty of the offense charged or not guilty of any offense, it is error to submit to the jury an instruction on simple assault as a lesser included offense. Sims v. People, 177 Colo. 279, 493 P.2d 365 (1972).

Where the elements of assault are common in both offenses, the jury should have been instructed on the crime of simple assault as a lesser included offense to the crime of assault with intent to rape and a verdict on simple assault should have been submitted. Barnhisel v. People, 141 Colo. 243, 347 P.2d 915 (1959).

Where defendant was charged with an alleged assault with a deadly weapon, it was not error to refuse to submit an instruction on the lesser included offense of simple assault where there was nothing in the evidence warranting the submission to the jury of that question. Watts v. People, 159 Colo. 347, 411 P.2d 335 (1966).

The court need not invariably submit lesser included assault to the jury. There remains the question whether the evidence justifies this action. Oftentimes the evidence precludes submission even when the offense is charged in a separate count, and in some cases the evidence is such that the jury must determine the case on the greater offense and that alone. Miera v. People, 164 Colo. 254, 434 P.2d 122 (1967).

Where the trial judge submitted to the jury not only the offense of assault with a deadly weapon, but also simple assault as a lesser included offense, this was not error. Plainly, an instruction on general intent was necessary for simple assault, and it was also necessary for the court to instruct on specific intent for the charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Arellano v. People, 174 Colo. 456, 484 P.2d 801 (1971).

Failure to give instruction without request not error. Failure of court to instruct on assault with intent to commit rape as a lesser included offense of forcible rape, where defendant does not request such an instruction or raise this point in motion for new trial, does not constitute reversible error and absent a showing of plain error it will not be considered on appeal. People v. Chavez, 179 Colo. 316, 500 P.2d 365 (1972).

Instruction based on information count proper. Where defendant who was charged duplicitously in one and the same count with assault with intent to murder and assault with a deadly weapon failed to object before trial, it was not error to instruct jury on crime of assault with a deadly weapon. Russell v. People, 155 Colo. 422, 395 P.2d 16 (1964).

Defendant charged with assault with a deadly weapon and conspiracy to assault with deadly weapon was not subjected to double jeopardy by conspiracy instruction in combination with accessory instruction. People v. Grass, 180 Colo. 346, 505 P.2d 1301 (1973).

Instructions taken as whole adequate. In a prosecution for assault with intent to murder, an instruction is not erroneous because omitting the element of defendant's ability to carry his intention into effect at the time, where such element was specifically called to the jury's attention by a subsequent instruction, as the instructions must be considered as a whole. Warford v. People, 43 Colo. 107, 96 P. 556 (1908).

In prosecution for assault on peace officer, trial court did not err in rejecting defendant's tendered instruction on lesser degree of assault, in refusing to limit instruction on general intent to lesser degree of assault, and in dealing with legal effect of intoxication on element of specific intent, where instructions considered as a whole adequately covered law and advised jury as to specific intent and where there was no evidence on lesser degree of assault. People v. Olinger, 180 Colo. 58, 502 P.2d 79 (1972).

Jury was properly instructed to consider whether defendant acted in the heat of passion only after deciding whether defendant committed first degree assault. Under subsection (2)(a), heat of passion is not an affirmative defense, but merely results in the decrease of penalty. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1991).

No error in instructions directing jury to consider whether the People had proven the elements of first degree assault before considering heat of passion and provocation, where the general assembly has not chosen to classify heat of passion as an affirmative defense that exonerates offenders from the offense of first degree assault, but rather, reduces the penalty if an assault occurs in the heat of passion. People v. Pennese, 830 P.2d 1085 (Colo. App. 1991).

No error in refusal of trial court to deliver an instruction stating that the definition of serious bodily injury focuses on the injury which the victim actually suffered and the damage actually caused rather than the risk to the victim and the damages that might have occurred. People v. Covington, 988 P.2d 657 (Colo. App. 1999), rev'd on other grounds, 19 P.3d 15 (Colo. 2001).

Heat of passion instruction. A defendant charged with assault is entitled to a special interrogatory on heat of passion if the evidence supports it. People v. Rowe, 837 P.2d 260 (Colo. App. 1992), rev'd on other grounds, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

Since defendant did not request an instruction or a special interrogatory on sudden heat of passion, no plain error occurred when the trial court did not sua sponte instruct the jury on that theory of the defense. People v. Lee, 18 P.3d 192 (Colo. App. 2000).

Since the general assembly did not intend to create a new offense of first degree assault committed under heat of passion when it enacted subsection (2)(a), there is no chargeable offense of first degree assault committed under heat of passion nor a separate offense to classify as a "lesser included offense" or a "lesser nonincluded offense" of first degree assault; rather, there is only one single crime of first degree assault, albeit one that may have different sentences depending on whether the mitigating factor of heat of passion has been established. Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

The district court erroneously instructed the jury that first degree assault committed under heat of passion was a lesser included offense of first degree assault. Rowe v. People, 856 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1993).

Court did not err in failing to include jury instructions on the meaning of "extreme indifference" and "grave risk of death". The terms are not so technical or mysterious that a reasonable person of common intelligence would not know what they mean. People v. Esparza-Treto, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

Defendant did not receive aggravated sentence for first degree assault crime, therefore, Apprendi v. New Jersey, 530 U.S. 466 (2000), does not apply. First degree assault is a class 3 felony that is a per se crime of violence and an extraordinary risk crime that triggers a special legislatively created penalty range, not a judicially imposed aggravated sentence. Since defendant was sentenced within special penalty range created by the legislature, there was no Apprendi violation. People v. Trujillo, 169 P.3d 235 (Colo. App. 2007).

Consecutive sentences for burglary and assault upheld. Conviction and sentences for two distinct offenses did not put appellees twice in jeopardy as the Colorado statutes separately define the offenses of burglary and assault with intent to rob. The imposition of two consecutive sentences did not constitute a violation of any federally protected right. Trujillo v. Patterson, 266 F. Supp. 901 (D. Colo. 1966), aff'd per curiam, 389 F.2d 1003 (10th Cir. 1967); Trujillo v. People, 178 Colo. 136, 496 P.2d 1026 (1972).

The offense of assault with intent to murder requires proof of a specific intent to kill, a fact not necessary to sustain a charge of aggravated robbery. On the other hand, aggravated robbery requires proof of a robbery, a fact not necessary for assault. Therefore, punishment for both of these offenses committed during one course of conduct does not violate the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy for the same offense. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 62, 507 P.2d 875 (1973).

Evidence determines if acquittal of lesser offense necessary upon acquittal of greater. It is the character of the evidence which must control in determining whether the lesser included offense of assault with intent to commit rape can stand alone or fall on acquittal of rape. Miera v. People, 164 Colo. 254, 434 P.2d 122 (1967).

Where penalty for conviction limited. A person charged with first degree assault, who can establish that he acted in "heat of passion", is constitutionally protected against receiving a greater penalty than he could have received had he caused the death of his victim. People v. Montoya, 196 Colo. 111, 582 P.2d 673 (1978).

18-3-203. Assault in the second degree. (1) A person commits the crime of assault in the second degree if:

- (a) Repealed.
- (b) With intent to cause bodily injury to another person, he or she causes such injury to any person by means of a deadly weapon; or
- (c) With intent to prevent one whom he or she knows, or should know, to be a peace officer or firefighter from performing a lawful duty, he or she intentionally causes bodily injury to any person; or
- (d) He recklessly causes serious bodily injury to another person by means of a deadly weapon; or
- (e) For a purpose other than lawful medical or therapeutic treatment, he intentionally causes stupor, unconsciousness, or other physical or mental impairment or injury to another person by administering to him, without his consent, a drug, substance, or preparation capable of producing the intended harm; or
- (f) While lawfully confined or in custody, he or she knowingly and violently applies physical force against the person of a peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties, or a judge of a court of competent jurisdiction, or an officer of said court, or, while lawfully confined or in custody as a result of being charged with or convicted of a crime or as a result of being charged as a delinquent child or adjudicated as a delinquent child, he or she knowingly and violently applies physical force against a person

Maximum sentence where defendant claims self-defense. A defendant who raises the affirmative defense of self-defense and who was convicted of first degree assault should receive no greater sentence than he could have received if he had been convicted of the criminally negligent homicide statute in effect prior to July 1, 1977. People v. Estrada, 198 Colo. 188, 601 P.2d 619 (1979).

One can be guilty of first degree assault but not attempted second degree murder. A jury's verdict of guilty of first degree assault under this section is not irreconcilable and inconsistent with its verdict of not guilty on the charge of attempted second degree murder under § 18-3-103. These crimes require different elements of proof, and the jury can find from the very same evidence that an element of one crime is present while an element of another charged crime is absent. People v. Ward, 673 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1983).

If first degree assault is committed under heat of passion, it is still a crime of violence and defendant must be sentenced in accordance with § 16-11-309. People v. Farbes, 973 P.2d 704 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Ferguson, 43 P.3d 705 (Colo. App. 2001).

Convictions for both first degree assault and first degree assault extreme indifference cannot be upheld if there is only one victim and one criminal act. People v. Baird, 66 P.3d 183 (Colo. App. 2002).

First degree assault with intent to cause serious bodily injury and first degree assault-extreme indifference are alternative means of committing the same offense; therefore, one of the first degree assault convictions must be vacated. People v. Tallwhiteman, 124 P.3d 827 (Colo. App. 2005).

engaged in the performance of his or her duties while employed by or under contract with a detention facility, as defined in section 18-8-203 (3), or while employed by the division in the department of human services responsible for youth services and who is a youth services counselor or is in the youth services worker classification series, and the person committing the offense knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a peace officer or firefighter engaged in the performance of his or her duties, or a judge of a court of competent jurisdiction, or an officer of said court, or a person engaged in the performance of his or her duties while employed by or under contract with a detention facility or while employed by the division in the department of human services responsible for youth services. A sentence imposed pursuant to this paragraph (f) shall be served in the department of corrections and shall run consecutively with any sentences being served by the offender; except that, if the offense is committed against a person employed by the division in the department of human services responsible for youth services, the court may grant probation or a suspended sentence in whole or in part, and such sentence may run concurrently or consecutively with any sentences being served. A person who participates in a work release program, a furlough, or any other similar authorized supervised or unsupervised absence from a detention facility, as defined in section 18-8-203 (3), and who is required to report back to the detention facility at a specified time shall be deemed to be in custody.

(f.5) (I) While lawfully confined in a detention facility within this state, a person with intent to infect, injure, harm, harass, annoy, threaten, or alarm a person in a detention facility whom the actor knows or reasonably should know to be an employee of a detention facility, causes such employee to come into contact with blood, seminal fluid, urine, feces, saliva, mucus, vomit, or any toxic, caustic, or hazardous material by any means, including but not limited to throwing, tossing, or expelling such fluid or material.

(II) (A) Any adult or juvenile who is bound over for trial for the offense described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (f.5) subsequent to a preliminary hearing or after having waived the right to a preliminary hearing, any person who is indicted for or is convicted of any such offense, or any person who is determined to have provided blood, seminal fluid, urine, feces, saliva, mucus, or vomit to a person bound over for trial for, indicted for, or convicted of such an offense shall be ordered by the court to submit to a medical test for communicable diseases and to supply blood, feces, urine, saliva, or other bodily fluid required for the test. The results of such test shall be reported to the court or the court's designee, who shall then disclose the results to any victim of the offense who requests such disclosure. Review and disclosure of medical test results by the court shall be closed and confidential, and any transaction records relating thereto shall also be closed and confidential. If a person subject to a medical test for communicable diseases pursuant this sub-subparagraph (A) voluntarily submits to a medical test for communicable diseases, the fact of such person's voluntary submission shall be admissible in mitigation of sentence if the person is convicted of the charged offense.

(B) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, the court may order any person who is convicted of the offense described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (f.5) to meet all or any portion of the financial obligations of medical tests performed on and treatment prescribed for the victim or victims of the offense.

(C) At the time of sentencing, the court may order that an offender described in sub-subparagraph (B) of this subparagraph (II) be put on a period of probation for the purpose of paying the testing and treatment costs of the victim or victims; except that the period of probation, when added to any time served, shall not exceed the maximum sentence that can be imposed for the offense.

(III) (A) As used in this paragraph (f.5), "detention facility" means any building, structure, enclosure, vehicle, institution, or place, whether permanent or temporary, fixed or mobile, where persons are or may be lawfully held in custody or confinement under the authority of the state of Colorado or any political subdivision of the state of Colorado.

(B) As used in this paragraph (f.5), “employee of a detention facility” includes employees of the department of corrections, employees of any agency or person operating a detention facility, law enforcement personnel, and any other persons who are present in or in the vicinity of a detention facility and are performing services for a detention facility. “Employee of a detention facility” does not include a person lawfully confined in a detention facility.

(g) With intent to cause bodily injury to another person, he causes serious bodily injury to that person or another.

(2) (a) If assault in the second degree is committed under circumstances where the act causing the injury is performed upon a sudden heat of passion, caused by a serious and highly provoking act of the intended victim, affecting the person causing the injury sufficiently to excite an irresistible passion in a reasonable person, and without an interval between the provocation and the injury sufficient for the voice of reason and humanity to be heard, it is a class 6 felony.

(b) If assault in the second degree is committed without the circumstances provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), it is a class 4 felony.

(b.5) Assault in the second degree by any person under subsection (1) of this section without the circumstances provided in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) is a class 3 felony if the person who is assaulted, other than a participant in the crime, suffered serious bodily injury during the commission or attempted commission of or flight from the commission or attempted commission of murder, robbery, arson, burglary, escape, kidnapping in the first degree, sexual assault, sexual assault in the first or second degree as such offenses existed prior to July 1, 2000, or class 3 felony sexual assault on a child.

(c) If a defendant is convicted of assault in the second degree pursuant to paragraph (b), (c), (d), or (g) of subsection (1) of this section or paragraph (b.5) of this subsection (2), except with respect to sexual assault or sexual assault in the first degree as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406. A defendant convicted of assault in the second degree pursuant to paragraph (b.5) of this subsection (2) with respect to sexual assault or sexual assault in the first degree as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, shall be sentenced in accordance with section 18-1.3-401 (8) (e) or (8) (e.5).

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 420, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-203. L. 76, Ex. Sess.: (1)(f) amended, p. 8, § 2, effective September 18. L. 79: (2) R&RE, p. 732, § 2, effective May 18. L. 81: (1)(f) amended and (1)(g) added, p. 973, § 7, effective July 1. L. 86: (1)(f) amended, p. 789, § 2, effective July 1; (2)(c) added, p. 777, § 3, effective July 1. L. 88: (2)(c) amended, p. 717, § 4, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(f) amended, p. 992, § 2, effective April 5; (1)(f) amended, p. 986, § 9, effective April 24. L. 91: (2)(a) and (2)(c) amended, p. 405, § 9, effective June 6. L. 94: (1)(a) repealed, p. 1717, § 8, effective July 1; (1)(f) amended, p. 2655, § 138, effective July 1. L. 95: (1)(b) and (2)(c) amended and (2)(b.5) added, p. 1250, § 7, effective July 1. L. 97: (1)(f.5) added, p. 1591, § 1, effective July 1; (2)(a) amended, p. 1544, § 14, effective July 1; (1)(c) and (1)(f) amended, p. 1011, § 16, effective August 6. L. 98: (2)(c) amended, p. 1441, § 26, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1)(f) amended, p. 693, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2)(b.5) and (2)(c) amended, p. 757, § 2, effective July 1; (2)(c) amended, p. 1512, § 187, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1)(f) amended, p. 1430, § 17, effective April 29.

Editor’s note: Amendments to subsection (1)(f) in Senate Bill 90-58 and House Bill 90-1255 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (2)(c) in House Bill 02-1046 and House Bill 02-1225 were harmonized.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsection (1)(f), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (2)(c), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. Evidence.
 - B. Jury.
 - C. Instructions.
- IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For comment, "Colorado's First Degree Assault Statute", see 65 U. Colo. L. Rev. 975 (1994).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-203 is similar to former § 40-2-34, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Second degree assault is a lesser included offense of first degree assault. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

But second degree assault is not a lesser included offense of second degree murder because the mens rea for the two crimes is different. People v. Fry, 74 P.3d 360 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd on other grounds, 92 P.3d 970 (Colo. 2004).

By establishing all of the essential elements of first degree assault, all of the essential elements of second degree assault would necessarily be proven. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

When the pertinent provisions of the first and second degree assault statutes are placed parallel to one another, it is obvious that the establishment of the essential elements of the greater necessarily establishes all of the elements required to prove the lesser. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

The basic element in both first and second degree assault is injury to a person's body, the difference being one of the degree of the injury. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

The means of committing the injury under second degree assault subsection (1)(b) is identical to first degree assault. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

The only difference in first and second degree assault under subsection (1)(a) of each section is that in first degree assault the serious bodily injury must be "by means of a deadly weapon", whereas under second degree assault the cause of serious bodily injury may be by any means. People v. Martinez, 189 Colo. 408, 540 P.2d 1091 (1975).

The mental state "knowingly" is implied by the statute and is required for a conviction of second degree assault on a police officer under subsection (1)(f). People v. Hart, 658 P.2d 857 (Colo. 1983).

Application of physical force, rather than a mere attempt to apply force, is required. People v. Schoondermark, 699 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1985).

Subsection (1)(f) creates a separate and distinct offense which turns on substantial differences which have a reasonable relationship to the persons involved and the public purposes to be achieved. People v. Gibson, 623 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1981).

The term "serious bodily injury" is not facially unconstitutionally vague. Defendant's challenge that "serious bodily injury" included subjective undefined terms making it constitutionally infirm did not show the term was so vague that a person of ordinary intelligence must guess at its meaning and may differ as to its application. The term was also constitutional as applied to the defendant. People v. Summitt, 104 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 132 P.3d 320 (Colo. 2006).

The terms "serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury" do not suffer from an equal protection problem, because they only overlap if serious bodily injury is given an unreasonably broad interpretation. People v. Summitt, 104 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 132 P.3d 320 (Colo. 2006).

"Serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury" constitutionally distinguishable. Section 18-3-202 (1)(a) and subsection (1)(a) of this section, thus, do not proscribe identical conduct and therefore do not violate equal protection. People v. Elam, 198 Colo. 170, 597 P.2d 571 (1979).

Any break or fracture is sufficient to establish "serious bodily injury". The term "of the second or third degree" refers only to burns and not to breaks or fractures. People v. Daniels, 240 P.3d 409 (Colo. App. 2009).

"Violently applies physical force". The phrase "violently applies physical force", in subsection (1)(f), does not connote a specific intent to inflict serious bodily injury. People v. Walker, 634 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1981).

In subsection (1)(f), the mental state of "knowingly" also applies to the element of violently applying physical force. People v. Saiz, 660 P.2d 2 (Colo. App. 1982).

There is a sufficient pragmatic difference between subsection (1)(e) of the first degree assault statute and the second degree assault statute so as not to violate the defendant's constitutional guarantee of equal protection. People v. Jackson, 194 Colo. 93, 570 P.2d 527 (1977).

Equal protection not violated by general criminal attempt statute. There was no violation of equal protection in defendant's conviction under the specific attempt provision of second degree assault statute, despite defendant's contention that the general criminal attempt statute, § 18-2-101, proscribes the same conduct. People v. Weller, 679 P.2d 1077 (Colo. 1984).

This section does not proscribe conduct identical to § 18-3-202 and therefore does not violate equal protection. People v. Brake, 196 Colo. 575, 588 P.2d 869 (1979).

Subsection (1)(b) and § 18-2-101 (1) do not proscribe the same conduct, and disparity in applicable punishment does not violate equal protection guarantees. People v. Marez, 916 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1995).

But the sentencing scheme established in subsection (2)(c) did not meet the requirements of equal protection as applied to defendant's sentences because it mandated the imposition of a greater punishment for an attempt to cause bodily injury than for an attempt to cause serious bodily injury. People v. Marez, 916 P.2d 543 (Colo. App. 1995).

Subsection (1)(c) does not violate equal protection by punishing a person who assaults a firefighter acting as a paramedic more severely than a person who assaults a non-firefighter paramedic. The more serious class of assault created by subsection (1)(c) is based on differences that are real and reasonably related to the purposes of the statute. People v. Montoya, 104 P.3d 303 (Colo. App. 2004).

Second degree assault on a peace officer is distinguishable from both third degree assault, as described in § 18-3-204, and resisting arrest, as described in § 18-8-103, and therefore these sections do not violate equal protection. This section requires that the defendant act intentionally, whereas both third degree assault and resisting arrest require only that the defendant act knowingly. Further, this section requires proof that the defendant intended to prevent a police officer from performing a lawful duty, which is not required for a conviction for third degree assault. And finally, this section requires the defendant to intend to cause bodily harm, while resisting arrest requires only that the defendant use or threaten to use physical force. People v. Whatley, 10 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2000).

Second degree assault described under subsection (1)(d) of this section is distinguishable from vehicular assault, described in § 18-3-205, and therefore these sections do not violate equal protection. The statutes differ in three primary ways. Second degree assault applies to a range of unspecified conduct, while vehicular assault applies narrowly to driving or operating a motor vehicle. Second degree assault can apply to acts of omission, while vehicular assault requires acts of commission. Second degree assault applies to any deadly weapon, which may include a motor vehicle, while vehicular assault requires the defendant's reckless driving or operation of a motor vehicle to have proximately caused the serious bodily injury. People v. Stewart, 55 P.3d 107 (Colo. 2002).

The general assembly is free to prescribe different punishments for conduct prescribed to result in varying degrees of social consequences, and the distinction between this section and § 18-8-103 is not arbitrary or inadvertent. Therefore this section is not unconstitutional. People v. Wieder, 693 P.2d 1006 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 722 P.2d 396 (Colo. 1986).

Conviction not reversed when first degree assault statute declared unconstitutional. A conviction on second degree assault where defendant was charged with both first degree and second degree assault is not an inconsistent verdict requiring reversal when the first degree assault statute is later declared unconstitutional by reason of not being distinguishable from the second degree assault statute because the implicit acquittal of first degree assault is not a verdict with which the conviction can be inconsistent. People v. Trout, 198 Colo. 98, 596 P.2d 762 (1979).

Constitutionality of 1976 amendment. Because the call of the governor generally concerned protection of police officers and others while carrying out their duties, the 1976 amendment adding the words "or in custody" to the statute governing assaults upon police officers definitely fell within the subject matter of the call and was therefore constitutional. People v. Wieder, 693 P.2d 1006 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 722 P.2d 396 (Colo. 1986).

Subsection (1)(b) violates equal protection guarantees, because a more severe sentence is imposed for an attempt to commit bodily injury than an attempt to commit serious bodily injury. People v. Duc Nguyen, 900 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1995); People v. Gallegos, 904 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1995); People v. Mitchell, 904 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1995); People v. Palmer, 944 P.2d 634 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 964 P.2d 524 (Colo. 1998).

The only distinction between conduct proscribed under subsection (1)(a) and under subsection (1)(g) is that subsection (1)(a) requires the intent to cause serious bodily injury whereas subsection (1)(g) requires the intent to cause only bodily injury. Subsection (2)(c), however, mandates the imposition of a more severe sentence for a crime under subsection (1)(g) than for one under subsection (1)(a). When an offender who acts with a less culpable intent may receive a greater penalty than the offender who acts with a greater culpable intent, such a statutory scheme is unreasonably structured and does not meet the requirements of equal protection, even though the two offenses result in the same harm. Smith v. People, 852 P.2d 420 (Colo. 1993); People v. Blizzard, 852 P.2d 418 (Colo. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 amendment).

Fists may be a deadly weapon, for purposes of subsection (1)(b), if in the manner they are used or intended to be used they are capable of producing death or serious bodily injury. People v. Ross, 831 P.2d 1310 (Colo. 1992).

Under subsection (1)(d), any object, including a foot, may be a deadly weapon when used to start an unbroken, foreseeable chain of events that results in serious bodily injury. The object does not have to be the direct cause of the injury. Where defendant kicked the victim in the back, causing her to fall down a flight of stairs, it was irrelevant that her injuries were caused by the stairs rather than the defendant's foot. The defendant's foot qualified as a deadly weapon because he used it to set in motion a sequence of events causing a serious bodily injury. People v. Saleh, 45 P.3d 1272 (Colo. 2002).

Subsection (1)(f) applies to field arrest situation. The first clause of (1)(f) which makes no reference to a detention facility employee and uses the disjunctive "or", in addition to a court of appeal's case holding that "confined" has a meaning different from and more restrictive than "custody", makes it plain that (1)(f) applies to field arrest situations as well as to detention facilities. People v. Armstrong, 720 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1986); Wieder v. People, 722 P.2d 396 (Colo. 1986).

An arrest precedes "in custody" for purposes of subsection (1)(f). What constitutes an arrest and what constitutes in custody turn on the same standard, and it is for the trier of fact to determine whether, under the totality of the circumstances, the defendant was under arrest and thus may be guilty of second degree assault. People v. Armstrong, 720 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1986).

When defendant was charged with both resisting arrest and second degree assault, one of the factors in determining whether the defendant is guilty of one or both of the charges shall be whether the actions of the defendant, which caused injury to the officers, were continuous, stemming from his efforts to resist arrest, or whether there was a break between his actions to thwart the officers' efforts to arrest him and the actions which lead to the injury of the officers. People v. Armstrong, 720 P.2d 165 (Colo. 1986).

Once an arrest is made, a person in custody who uses violence against a peace officer commits second degree assault under subsection (1)(f). People v. Stanley, 56 P.3d 1241 (Colo. App. 2002).

The unlawfulness of a detention does not absolve a person of liability for criminal conduct committed during that detention. People ex rel. D.S.L., 134 P.3d 522 (Colo. App. 2006).

Subsection (1)(f) is not unconstitutionally vague, in violation of the due process clauses of the Colorado and United States Constitutions. People v. Schoondermark, 699 P.2d 411 (Colo. 1985).

Constitution proscribes retrial when conviction impliedly acquits defendant. The double jeopardy clause proscribes retrial when a felony menacing conviction impliedly acquits the defendant of a second degree assault charge. Ortiz v. District Court, 626 P.2d 642 (Colo. 1981).

The specific intent required for second degree assault is sufficiently distinguishable from the less culpable mental state required for third degree assault to justify a harsher penalty for the former. People v. Sparks, 914 P.2d 544 (Colo. App. 1996).

Third degree assault is lesser included offense of second degree assault. People v. Thompson, 187 Colo. 252, 529 P.2d 1314 (1975).

Because two counts of second degree assault were premised on identical evidence, once the trial court concluded that the evidence was sufficient to submit an instruction regarding third degree assault as a lesser included offense to count one, it was obligated to make the same conclusion with respect to the defendant's request for a lesser nonincluded instruction as to count two. People v. Castro, 952 P.2d 762 (Colo. App. 1998).

Third degree assault held to be lesser included offense. The offense of assault in the third degree is a lesser included offense of assault in the second degree upon a peace officer. People v. Annan, 665 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1983).

Only difference between second and third degree assault is degree of injury. People v. Thompson, 187 Colo. 252, 529 P.2d 1314 (1975).

Assault is lesser included offense of robbery. Since simple assault contains no elements not contained within attempted aggravated robbery, while the latter contains more elements than the former, the former is included within the latter as a lesser offense. People v. Velasquez, 178 Colo. 264, 497 P.2d 12 (1972).

Assault with a deadly weapon is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery and since the jury convicted the defendant of aggravated robbery, his conviction for the included offense of assault with a deadly weapon must be set aside. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 62, 507 P.2d 875 (1973).

It is possible to commit an aggravated robbery without contemporaneously perpetrating a second degree assault. People v. Grant, 40 Colo. App. 46, 571 P.2d 1111 (1977); People v. Toomer, 43 Colo. App. 182, 604 P.2d 1180 (1979).

There is no offense of attempt to commit an assault with a deadly weapon in Colorado. Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971).

Offense of assault and battery is a matter of mixed state and local concern. City of Au- rora v. Martin, 181 Colo. 72, 507 P.2d 868 (1973).

In determining whether to accept a plea of nolo contendere, the court must inquire of the defendant as to whether he understands the nature of the charge and its elements, and this is of utmost importance in connection with a felony assault charge with a specific intent to prevent a police officer from performing his lawful duty and to cause bodily injury. People v. Kelly, 189 Colo. 31, 536 P.2d 39 (1975).

Statement of elements of the charge of second degree assault did not give pleading defendant notice of the true nature of the charge when, by way of further explanation, the court misstated the deadly weapon element as mere possession. People v. Cabral, 698 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1985).

Case remanded to district court for a new preliminary hearing because district court had interrupted prior hearing before a proper determination of probable cause for second degree assault charges could be made. People v. Nygren, 696 P.2d 270 (Colo. 1985).

The word "confined" in subsection (1)(f) connotes detention in an institution. People v. Olinger, 39 Colo. App. 491, 566 P.2d 1367 (1977).

Applied in People v. Trujillo, 190 Colo. 45, 543 P.2d 523 (1975); Miller v. District Court, 193 Colo. 404, 566 P.2d 1063 (1977); People v. Conner, 195 Colo. 525, 579 P.2d 1160 (1978); Brutcher v. District Court, 195 Colo. 579, 580 P.2d 396 (1978); People v. Kreiser, 41 Colo. App. 210, 585 P.2d 301 (1978); People v. Thompson, 197 Colo. 299, 592 P.2d 803 (1979); People v. Waggoner, 196 Colo. 578, 595 P.2d 217 (1979); Perea v. District Court, 199 Colo. 27, 604 P.2d 25 (1979); People v. Martinez, 43 Colo. App. 419, 608 P.2d 359 (1979); People v. Parsons, 199 Colo. 421, 610 P.2d 93 (1980); People v. Johnson, 644 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Tijerina, 632 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1981); Richardson v. District Court, 632 P.2d 595 (Colo. 1981); People in Interest of R.G., 630 P.2d 89 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. District Court, 652 P.2d 582 (Colo. 1982); People v. Dillon, 655 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hamilton, 662 P.2d 177 (Colo. 1983); People v. Reedy, 705 P.2d 1032 (Colo. App. 1985).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

Essential elements of assault are an unlawful attempt to commit a violent injury and the present ability to commit a violent injury, and these elements must be shown to have existed at the time in order to sustain a charge of assault. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

"Reasonable person" means an objectively reasonable individual and not a subjectively reasonable one possessing the individual defendant's personality traits or defects. Under the circumstances, the defendant did not act as a reasonable person would in the same situation. People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

Defendant was unreasonable in believing that police officer was not performing lawful duty and intended to commit crime of kidnapping when officer, in full police uniform, explained purpose of warrantless entry to check on safety of an infant at the mother's request. People v. Malczewski, 744 P.2d 62 (Colo. 1987).

A paramedic employed by the fire department is included as a "firefighter" for purposes of subsection (1)(c). The statute is not limited to firefighters performing fire suppression functions. People v. Montoya, 104 P.3d 303 (Colo. App. 2004).

An attempt only requires some overt act beyond mere preparation. People v. Marlott, 191 Colo. 304, 552 P.2d 491 (1976); People v. Weller, 679 P.2d 1077 (Colo. 1984).

And it need not be the last proximate act necessary to consummate a battery. People v. Marlott, 191 Colo. 304, 552 P.2d 491 (1976).

Certain weapons are by their very design and make lethal in nature and a trial court should rule as a matter of law that they are deadly weapons. Other instruments or things, including shoes, though perhaps not deadly weapons per se, are within the meaning of our assault with a deadly weapon statute, depending upon the nature of the instrument and the manner in which the instrument or thing is used in accomplishing the assault. Grass v. People, 172 Colo. 223, 471 P.2d 602 (1970).

In order to prove first degree assault and crime of violence instead of second degree assault and crime of violence, an additional element must be proven — that the use of the deadly weapon actually caused the serious bodily injury. People v. Mozee, 723 P.2d 117 (Colo. 1986).

Specific intent to do bodily injury can be inferred from the circumstances of the case where testimony showed that the defendant stabbed victim with a hunting knife. People v. Borrego, 187 Colo. 217, 529 P.2d 639 (1974).

Requisite intent to sustain a conviction under this section may be inferred from the circumstances of the case. People v. Borrego, 187 Colo. 217, 529 P.2d 639 (1974).

Specific intent to cause bodily injury may be found from the defendant's actions and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. White, 191 Colo. 353, 553 P.2d 68 (1976).

Where the defendant was screaming and yelling at the victim and the victim's injuries showed he was struck with a powerful force directly in the face, the evidence was sufficient to establish specific intent to cause bodily injury. People v. Ross, 819 P.2d 507 (Colo. App. 1991).

Defendant's conscious objective to cause father physical pain can be inferred from the defendant's conduct and the overall circumstances of the case where defendant had medical training and recognized that father's condition was worsening, left father bedridden for a significant length of time without proper change of clothing, toileting, or hygiene, failed to seek professional care for father, and verbally abused father, causing him to fear defendant. People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

Present ability must be construed in the light of the particular situation when a person is charged with an assault. In construing the criminal assault statute, factors such as the gravity of the potential harm and the uncertainty of the result are to be included in appraising the actor's present ability. Allen v. People, 175 Colo. 113, 485 P.2d 886 (1971).

Specific intent is an essential element of the proof of assault to be established beyond a reasonable doubt, but this requisite specific intent may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. Prante, 177 Colo. 243, 493 P.2d 1083 (1972).

Trial court did not err in declining defendant's proffered instruction where the jury instruction given accurately informed the jury of the governing law and defendant was not impeded in his ability to convey to the jury his theory of defense. People v. Wylie, 260 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2010).

The mental state "intentionally" applies to each element of the offense. For jury instructions, the best practice is to offset the mental state requirement so that it applies to all elements. Failure to do so does not constitute plain error. People v. Rivas, 77 P.3d 882 (Colo. App. 2003).

"Attempted to cause" should not be included in the jury instruction for second degree assault. However, error was not plain error since the defendant did not contest that element at trial. People v. Rivas, 77 P.3d 882 (Colo. App. 2003).

Conviction for "second degree assault with intent to cause bodily injury" not legally sufficient. Where the jury finds the accused guilty of "second degree assault with intent to cause bodily injury" and the verdict omits the word "serious", it is not clear from the language of the verdict whether the jury concluded that the accused, in committing the assault, had the intent to cause serious bodily injury, and, thus, is guilty of second degree assault or whether he intended to cause only bodily injury and, thus, is guilty of third degree assault; therefore, the verdict is too uncertain to be legally sufficient. Kreiser v. People, 199 Colo. 20, 604 P.2d 27 (1979).

Subsection (1)(d) requires that a defendant consciously disregard a substantial and unjustifiable risk that a result will occur (or that a circumstance exists), not that a defendant disregard the result that ultimately does occur. Therefore, the people did not have to prove that defendant had knowledge of the existence of the specific deadly weapon held by the victim of the assault. People v. Brown, 677 P.2d 406 (Colo. App. 1983).

Elements of subsection (1)(f). One of the elements of assault in the second degree is that the person committing the offense knows or reasonably should know that the victim is a person engaged in the performance of duties while employed by or under contract with a detention facility. People v. Akers, 712 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1985).

Because the statute includes the phrase "lawfully confined or in custody," it is not necessary that defendant be incarcerated at the time of the assault, but may merely be in the lawful custody of a peace officer. People v. Marquez-Lopez, 952 P.2d 788 (Colo. App. 1997).

Detention of a suspect for further investigation rather than arrest is sufficient to establish custody under subsection (1)(f). People v. Ortega, 899 P.2d 236 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Marquez-Lopez, 952 P.2d 788 (Colo. App. 1997).

Formal arrest not required by subsection (1)(f); peace officer need only apply a level of physical control over the person being detained so as reasonably to ensure that the person does not leave. People v. Rawson, 97 P.3d 315 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (1)(f.5) applies to an individual lawfully confined in a vehicle who is lawfully held in custody and whose victim is a law enforcement officer. Although the language "in custody" contained in subsection (1)(f) is not included in subsection (1)(f.5), the legislature intended that the statute would apply to individuals under arrest and confined to a patrol vehicle. People v. Miller, 97 P.3d 171 (Colo. App. 2003).

Felony menacing is not a lesser included offense of second-degree assault. The offense of second-degree assault does not establish every essential element of felony menacing and, therefore, the merger doctrine does not apply. People v. Truesdale, 804 P.2d 287 (Colo. App. 1990).

Obstruction of a peace officer under § 18-8-104 is a lesser included offense of second degree assault under subsection (1)(c) and (1)(f) since all of the elements contained in the definition of obstruction of a peace officer would be necessarily established by the proof of the elements of second degree assault. People v. Stafford, 890 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court's failure to instruct the jury that obstruction of a peace officer under § 18-8-104 was a lesser included offense of second degree assault under subsection (1)(c) was error requiring a new trial where defendant acknowledged the officers sustained bodily injury but there was no admission that he intended to act in a manner that would cause the injury. People v. Stafford, 890 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court's failure to instruct the jury that obstruction of a peace officer under § 18-8-104 was a lesser included offense of second degree assault under subsection (1)(f) was error requiring a new trial where defendant testified that the only action he volitionally took after the first officer entered the cell was to raise his arms. People v. Stafford, 890 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1994).

Crime of second-degree assault requires the intent to cause bodily injury to another person and causing such injury to any person by means of a deadly weapon. People v. Chavez, 730 P.2d 321 (Colo. 1986).

Trial court's instruction to jury that second-degree assault involved force or violence as a matter of law was proper for conviction under statute prohibiting possession of weapons by previous offenders notwithstanding fact that second degree assault could involve injury to another resulting from the administration of a drug or other substance. People v. Allaire, 843 P.2d 38 (Colo. App. 1992).

Equal protection principles are violated by § 18-3-209 (3), which provides that persons charged with third degree assault against the elderly commit a greater classification of crime and may not raise the issue of provocation, while provocation may be raised by a person charged with second degree assault, which is classified as a lower class crime than third degree assault. People v. Suazo, 867 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1993) (decided under law in effect prior to 1991 amendment).

Provocation as used in this section is neither a culpable mental state nor part of a culpable mental state. People v. Suazo, 867 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1993).

In addition, this section does not require that the actor know the age of the victim. People v. Suazo, 867 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1993).

The provocation language in subsection (2)(b) is a sentence mitigating factor that does not involve an element of the offense, give rise to an affirmative defense, or create a separate offense. People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

The provocation language in subsection (2)(b) is not a sentence enhancer requiring an Apprendi jury finding. An Apprendi jury finding is only necessary when the determination of a fact increases the punishment beyond the range the defendant is already subject to. In the case of second degree assault, before the jury can consider the issue of provocation, they have to find the defendant guilty of second degree assault — subjecting the defendant to a class 4 felony. At that point, the jury may consider provocation, and if they find provocation the defendant is subject to a class 6 felony. So, the factual issue of provocation decreases the punishment range making Apprendi inapplicable. People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

A fist is not a deadly weapon for the purposes of subsection (1)(b). People v. Ross, 819 P.2d 507 (Colo. App. 1991).

To be a deadly weapon, an object must be used in connection with assaultive conduct directed toward an intended opponent or adversary. People v. Esparza-Treto, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

It is no defense to show that specific intent was directed at someone else other than the victim. People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

The department of corrections cannot be the "intended victim", within the meaning of subsection (2)(a), and therefore a trial court's refusal to allow defendant to present a provocation defense was not error. People v. Akers, 712 P.2d 1058 (Colo. App. 1985).

Under subsection (2)(a), the class of the felony may be reduced even though the person committing the assault has still engaged in the same conduct with the same mental culpability required for conviction of second degree assault. People v. Duran, 991 P.2d 313 (Colo. App. 1999).

Extent of wound does not negate intent. The extent of the resulting wound from stabbing by defendant does not negate the defendant's intent necessary for conviction under this section. People v. Borrego, 187 Colo. 217, 529 P.2d 639 (1974).

Requirement of custody or confinement. When assaults on police officers occurred, the defendant's arrest was complete and he was not free to leave the presence of the officers, and thus he was in custody for purposes of the statute. People v. Weider, 693 P.2d 1006 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd, 722 P.2d 396 (Colo. 1986).

A formal arrest is not always required before a person may be deemed to be in custody. What is required is that the peace officer have applied a level of physical control over the person being detained so as reasonably to ensure that the person does not leave. People v. Ortega, 899 P.2d 236 (Colo. App. 1994); People ex rel. D.S.L., 134 P.3d 522 (Colo. App. 2006).

Evidence sufficient to show specific intent. People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

Because one of the powers exercised by defendant under father's power of attorney, dealing with personal and family maintenance, required him to maintain father's standard of living, he had a legal duty to exercise that power with due care for father's benefit. People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

Although an inconsistency exists between jury verdicts for attempted first degree murder and those for first and second degree assault under the heat of passion, the inconsistency does not require reversal because the existence or absence of heat of passion is not a necessary element of either assault charge. People v. Sanchez, 253 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

Defendant can possess the intent to cause death, serious bodily harm, and bodily harm at the same time. Therefore, jury's guilty verdicts for attempted first degree murder and first degree assault based on defendant's stabbing of one person and the jury's guilty verdicts for attempted first degree murder and second degree assault based on defendant's stabbing of a second person are not necessarily inconsistent. People v. Sanchez, 253 P.3d 1260 (Colo. App. 2010).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction for second degree assault. There was no evidence that defendant used his car as a deadly weapon, specifically there was no evidence that defendant used his vehicle with assaultive conduct specifically directed toward the other driver. The evidence, in fact, was to the contrary that defendant attempted to avoid the other driver. People v. Esparza-Treto, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. Evidence.

Eyewitness testimony established use of weapon. Where three witnesses for the people testified only that they did not see the defendant with a knife, a fourth witness testified unequivocally to possession of a knife by the defendant, and no witness of the people stated that the defendant did not have a knife, there is no internal contradiction, and the evidence of one eyewitness, if believed by the jury, is sufficient to establish that defendant had in his possession a knife and used it to inflict the wounds on the victim of the assault. People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

Evidence sufficient to sustain convictions. People v. White, 191 Colo. 353, 553 P.2d 68 (1976); People v. Mason, 632 P.2d 616 (Colo. App. 1981).

Sufficient evidence that defendant intended to cause bodily injury where officers present during altercation testified that during the struggle defendant was kicking at all of the officers and continued to kick during efforts to subdue him. People v. Stafford, 890 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1994).

Evidence sufficient to establish specific intent to cause injury. The evidence presented at trial, considered in the light most favorable to the people, showed the defendant was oriented and had control over his body and speech. People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

B. Jury.

Whether defendant established heat of passion claim is issue for jury to determine. Thompson v. Ricketts, 500 F. Supp. 688 (D. Colo. 1980).

When lesser offense submitted to jury. Where there is no evidence of the specific intent required to determine the defendant guilty of the precise offense charged in the information, or where the evidence might be insufficient to remove the reasonable doubt which might be in the minds of the jury as to the intent, under the same evidence the defendant might be found guilty of simple assault. Barnhisel v. People, 141 Colo. 243, 347 P.2d 915 (1959).

Trial by jury of less than twelve. A person who is charged with second degree assault, which is a class 4 felony, may elect to be tried by a jury of fewer than 12, but not less than six persons. People v. Byerley, 635 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1981).

C. Instructions.

Where it was possible for the jury to entertain a reasonable doubt as to defendant's guilt of attempted robbery, and at the same time to be convinced by reason of defendant's admissions that he was guilty of making an assault upon the complaining witness, the evidence justified the giving of an instruction on simple assault as requested in order to submit the lesser included offense to a jury. People v. Velasquez, 177 Colo. 264, 497 P.2d 12 (1972).

Where the jury is unable to unanimously find all the elements of a particular offense, the trial court should instruct the jury to return a guilty verdict on the lesser offense so long as the jurors agree that the defendant is guilty of each element of the lesser offense. People v. Brighi, 755 P.2d 1218 (Colo. 1988).

An optimal instruction would state that attempt requires some substantial step, or some overt act beyond mere preparation. People v. Weller, 679 P.2d 1077 (Colo. 1984).

But court is not required to give the definition of attempt found in the general criminal attempt statute, § 18-2-101. People v. Weller, 679 P.2d 1077 (Colo. 1984).

No plain error found when court failed to instruct on the mental state needed to commit second degree assault. People v. Wells, 734 P.2d 655 (Colo. App. 1986).

When there is no doubt on intent, court should deny third degree assault instruction. People v. Gibson, 623 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1981).

Where there was no evidence that the defendant's assault with a deadly weapon was made with anything less than a conscious disregard to the risk to the victim, the court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury on the lesser included offense of third degree assault. People v. Workman, 885 P.2d 298 (Colo. App. 1994).

Plain error found when court failed to instruct the jury on the mental state needed for the act of “violently apply[ing] physical force”. People v. Stafford, 890 P.2d 244 (Colo. App. 1994).

Court’s use of a repealed version of the second degree assault statute in defendant’s self-defense instruction was plain error. The instruction lessened the prosecution’s burden of disproving defendant’s claim of self-defense. Kaufman v. People, 202 P.3d 542 (Colo. 2009).

Instruction on deadly weapons proper. The trial court did not err in generally instructing the jury that a shoe was not in and of itself a deadly or dangerous weapon and that in determining whether an instrument, not inherently deadly or dangerous, assumes the characteristics of a deadly weapon the jury should consider the nature of the instrument or thing, the manner of its use, the location on the body of the injuries inflicted and the extent of such injuries. Grass v. People, 172 Colo. 223, 471 P.2d 602 (1970).

A defendant’s learning of an injury to a close relative may create a jury question as to provocation in assault cases. No requirement, however, exists under this section for the fact finder to determine whether a sufficient interval has passed for the “voice of reason and humanity to be heard”. Although, as a matter of law, the court may find a sufficient “cooling off” period has occurred. People v. Suazo, 867 P.2d 161 (Colo. App. 1993).

Trial court had no duty to provide an instruction regarding the elements of lesser, non-included offense of obstructing a peace officer. The evidence was undisputed that defendant was in custody. There was no rational basis on which the jury could have acquitted defendant of second degree assault and convicted him of obstructing a police officer. People v. Ortega, 899 P.2d 236 (Colo. App. 1994).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

Subsection (2)(c) requires mandatory sentencing under the provisions of § 16-11-309. The intent of the legislature was to mandate sentencing under § 16-11-309 irrespective of any allegation of a violent crime and irrespective of a specific finding by the trial court that a violent crime has been committed. People v. Terry, 791 P.2d 374 (Colo. 1990).

Thus, trial court’s enhanced sentence for second degree assault with a deadly weapon was not error even though jury did not specifically find that defendant had committed a crime of violence. An offense committed under subsection (1)(b) is a per se crime of violence under subsection (2)(c) and requires enhanced sentencing under § 16-11-309 without the necessity of pleading or proving a separate crime of violence. People v. Hayward, 55 P.3d 803 (Colo. App. 2002).

Subsection (1)(b), which includes attempted assault, combined with the sentencing requirements of subsection (2)(c) violates equal protection requirements because attempted second degree assault, when treated as a crime of violence, would carry a presumptive penalty of five to sixteen years imprisonment and attempted first degree assault would carry a presumptive penalty of two to eight years imprisonment. People v. Nguyen, 900 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1995) (decided under former subsection (1)(b) as it existed prior to amendment in 1995).

The appropriate cure for the constitutional infirmity of subsection (1)(b), consistent with legislative intent, is to strike the crime of violence sentencing as it applies to attempted second degree assault. People v. Nguyen, 900 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1995) (decided under former subsection (1)(b) as it existed prior to amendment in 1995).

A defendant who is convicted of second degree assault on a police officer is subject to the mandatory sentencing range specified for crimes of violence in § 16-11-309, due to the mandatory language of subsection (2)(c). However, the defendant is not subject to sentencing for an extraordinary risk crime under § 18-1-105 (9.7) unless the prosecution has alleged and proved the elements of a crime of violence, as described in § 16-11-309. In sentencing the defendant, the trial court stated that it was sentencing him to a minimum mandatory sentence of five years. Since this sentence presumes application of the sentence enhancing provisions for extraordinary risk crimes, the sentence was imposed in error and the case was remanded for resentencing. People v. Banks, 9 P.3d 1125 (Colo. 2000).

Trial court did not erroneously apply the general sentence enhancer in § 18-1.3-401 (8)(a)(IV) to defendant’s assault conviction under subsection (1)(f.5) of this section. Application of the sentence enhancement provisions of § 18-1.3-401 did not have the effect of raising the class of felony for which defendant was convicted. Plus, the elemental statute under which defendant was charged did not contain specific sentencing requirements that would have superseded the provisions of the sentencing statute. People v. Wylie, 260 P.3d 57 (Colo. App. 2010).

The specific aggravator in subsection (1)(f) applies as opposed to any general aggravator found in § 18-1.3-401. Subsection (1)(f) refers to the second degree assault on a correctional officer and contains its own aggravator. Therefore, the specific aggravator applies, not a general one. People v. Willcoxon, 80 P.3d 817 (Colo. App. 2002).

The consecutive sentencing provision in subsection (1)(f) does not apply to juveniles who are adjudicated delinquent and sentenced to the department of human services. People ex rel. D.S.L., 134 P.3d 522 (Colo. App. 2006).

Section requires consecutive sentences even when in custody only as a result of being charged with a crime. People v. Benavidez, 222 P.3d 391 (Colo. App. 2009).

Third degree assault is a lesser included offense of second degree assault. The third degree assault conviction merges into the conviction for second degree assault. People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

18-3-204. Assault in the third degree. (1) A person commits the crime of assault in the third degree if:

(a) The person knowingly or recklessly causes bodily injury to another person or with criminal negligence the person causes bodily injury to another person by means of a deadly weapon; or

(b) The person, with intent to infect, injure, harm, harass, annoy, threaten, or alarm another person whom the actor knows or reasonably should know to be a peace officer, a firefighter, an emergency medical care provider, or an emergency medical service provider, causes the other person to come into contact with blood, seminal fluid, urine, feces, saliva, mucus, vomit, or toxic, caustic, or hazardous material by any means, including throwing, tossing, or expelling the fluid or material.

(2) (a) An adult or juvenile who has had a court find that there is probable cause to believe that he or she has committed an offense pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section or is convicted of an offense pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section or any person who is determined to have provided blood, seminal fluid, urine, feces, saliva, mucus, or vomit to a person for whom probable cause has been found or been convicted of such an offense shall be ordered by the court to submit to a medical test for communicable diseases and to supply blood, feces, urine, saliva, or other bodily fluid required for the test. The results of such test shall be reported to the court or the court's designee, who shall then disclose the results to any victim of the offense who requests such disclosure. Review and disclosure of medical test results by the court shall be closed and confidential, and any transaction records relating thereto shall also be closed and confidential. If a person subject to a medical test for communicable diseases pursuant to this subsection (2) voluntarily submits to a medical test for communicable diseases, the fact of the person's voluntary submission shall be admissible in mitigation of sentence if the person is convicted of the charged offense.

(b) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, the court may order any person who is convicted of the offense described in paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section to meet all or any portion of the financial obligations of medical tests performed on and treatment prescribed for the victim or victims of the offense.

(3) Assault in the third degree is a class 1 misdemeanor and is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(4) "Emergency medical care provider" means a doctor, intern, nurse, nurse's aid, physician's assistant, ambulance attendant or operator, air ambulance pilot, paramedic, or any other member of a hospital or health care facility staff or security force who is involved in providing emergency medical care at a hospital or health care facility, or in an air ambulance or ambulance as defined in section 25-3.5-103 (1) and (1.5), C.R.S.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-204. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 961, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2004: Entire section amended, p. 635, § 4, effective August 4. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (HB 09-1120), ch. 305, p. 1649, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1)(b) amended and (4) added, (HB 11-1105), ch. 250, p. 1088, § 2, effective August 10. L. 2012: (1)(b) amended, (HB 12-1059), ch. 271, p. 1435, § 13, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 26 of chapter 271, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (1)(b) applies to acts committed on or after July 1, 2012.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-204 is similar to former § 40-2-35, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Essential elements of assault are an unlawful attempt to commit a violent injury and the present ability to commit a violent injury, and these elements must be shown to have existed at the time in order to sustain a charge of assault. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

Assault is an unlawful attempt coupled with a present ability to commit a violent injury on the person of another. Sims v. People, 177 Colo. 229, 493 P.2d 365 (1972).

Conduct which creates substantial risk of serious bodily injury not element of offense. The establishment of every element of third degree assault would not necessarily include proving conduct which creates a substantial risk of serious bodily injury, an element of reckless endangerment. Third degree assault requires proof of bodily injury but not proof of a substantial risk of serious bodily injury. Therefore reckless endangerment is not a lesser included offense of third degree assault. People v. Berner, 42 Colo. App. 520, 600 P.2d 112 (1979).

Separate blows in single criminal transaction are single offense. Where two blows were delivered to the same person within a short period of time as part of a continuous harangue to extract information, these two blows were not separate transactions but were part of a single criminal transaction arising from a single impulse. Therefore it was error to charge and convict defendant twice for the same transaction. People v. Berner, 42 Colo. App. 520, 600 P.2d 112 (1979).

Offense of assault and battery is a matter of mixed state and local concern. City of Aurora v. Martin, 181 Colo. 72, 507 P.2d 868 (1973).

It is no defense to show that the specific intent was directed at someone else other than the victim. People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

Mental impairment evidence admissible to negate mens rea. Opinion evidence of a mental impairment due to a mental disease or defect may be admitted to negate the mens rea for a nonspecific intent crime such as assault in the third degree. Hendershott v. People, 653 P.2d 385 (Colo. 1982), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1225, 103 S. Ct. 1232, 75 L. Ed.2d 466 (1983).

Evidence sufficient to show specific intent. People v. Tafoya, 179 Colo. 438, 501 P.2d 118 (1972).

Bodily injury need not be of a crippling or otherwise incapacitating nature to be within the statutory prohibition. People v. Lobato, 187 Colo. 285, 530 P.2d 493 (1975).

To be a deadly weapon, an object must be used in connection with assaultive conduct directed toward an intended opponent or adversary. People v. Esparza-Treto, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

BB gun can be a deadly weapon. Testimony that if a person hit with a BB in a vulnerable area of the body, such as the eyes, the BB could cause serious bodily injury was sufficient to prove that the BB gun was a deadly weapon. People in Interest of J.R., 867 P.2d 125 (Colo. App. 1993).

The issue in evaluating whether a device is a deadly weapon is whether, in the manner it was used, the device could have caused death or serious bodily injury. The fact that in this particular case death or serious bodily injury did not occur is irrelevant. People in Interest of J.R., 867 P.2d 125 (Colo. App. 1993).

Third degree assault is a lesser included offense of second degree assault. People v. Thompson, 187 Colo. 252, 529 P.2d 1314 (1975); People v. Annan, 665 P.2d 629 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Brown, 677 P.2d 406 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Smith, 682 P.2d 493 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

The third degree assault conviction merges into the conviction for second degree assault. People v. Howard, 89 P.3d 441 (Colo. App. 2003).

And only difference between second and third degree assault is degree of injury. People v. Thompson, 187 Colo. 252, 529 P.2d 1314 (1975); People v. Brown, 677 P.2d 406 (Colo. App. 1983).

Third degree assault is distinguishable from second degree assault on a peace officer, as described in § 18-3-203, and resisting arrest, as described in § 18-8-103, and therefore these sections do not violate equal protection. This section and § 18-8-103 require that the defendant act knowingly, whereas § 18-3-203 requires that the defendant act intentionally. Further, § 18-3-203 requires proof that the defendant intended to prevent a police officer from performing a lawful duty, which is not required for a conviction under this section. People v. Whatley, 10 P.3d 668 (Colo. App. 2000).

Proper to submit different degrees of assault to jury. Where the trial judge submitted to the jury not only the offense of assault with a deadly weapon, but also simple assault as a lesser included offense, this was not error. Plainly, an instruction on general intent was necessary for simple assault, and it was also necessary for the court to instruct on specific intent for the charge of assault with a deadly weapon. Arellano v. People, 174 Colo. 456, 484 P.2d 801 (1971).

Because two counts of second degree assault were premised on identical evidence, once the trial court concluded that the evidence was sufficient to submit an instruction regarding third degree assault as a lesser included offense to count one, it was obligated to make the same conclusion with respect to the defendant's request for a lesser nonincluded instruction as to count two. People v. Castro, 952 P.2d 762 (Colo. App. 1998).

Defendant's prior conviction of assault did not bar his subsequent conviction of sexual assault, as offenses had distinct elements that were not subsumed by each other. People v. Williams, 736 P.2d 1229 (Colo. App. 1986).

When there is no doubt on intent, court should deny third degree assault instruction. People v. Gibson, 623 P.2d 391 (Colo. 1981).

When court instructed jury on third degree assault relating to intentional conduct on lesser-included offense of second degree assault, but refused to instruct on third degree assault relating to criminal negligence, see People v. White, 191 Colo. 353, 553 P.2d 68 (1976).

Third degree assault not included in robbery. Third degree assault requires proof of bodily injury, an element not necessary to culpability under robbery, and therefore, the former offense is not included within the latter. People v. Flores, 39 Colo. App. 556, 575 P.2d 11 (1977).

A misdemeanor conviction under this section for third degree assault involves a crime of violence for purposes of § 4B1.2(a)(2) of the United States sentencing guidelines. United States v. Krejcarek, 453 F.3d 1290 (10th Cir. 2006).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction for second degree assault. There was no evidence that defendant used his car as a deadly weapon, specifically there was no evidence that defendant used his vehicle with assaultive conduct specifically directed toward the other driver. The evidence, in fact, was to the contrary that defendant attempted to avoid the other driver. People v. Esparza-Treto, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Applied in People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 (1977); People v. Sepeda, 196 Colo. 13, 581 P.2d 723 (1978); People in Interest of C.B., 196 Colo. 362, 585 P.2d 281 (1978); People v. Kreiser, 41 Colo. App. 210, 585 P.2d 301 (1978); People v. Dowdell, 197 Colo. 76, 589 P.2d 948 (1979); People v. Trout, 198 Colo. 98, 596 P.2d 762 (1979); Kreiser v. People, 199 Colo. 20, 604 P.2d 27 (1979); People v. Johnson, 644 P.2d 34 (Colo. App. 1980); Godbold v. Wilson, 518 F. Supp. 1265 (D. Colo. 1981); People v. Francis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. Henry, 631 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); People v. Sanchez, 644 P.2d 95 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Dement, 661 P.2d 675 (Colo. 1983); People v. Gouker, 665 P.2d 113 (Colo. 1983); People v. Reedy, 705 P.2d 1032 (Colo. App. 1985).

18-3-205. Vehicular assault. (1) (a) If a person operates or drives a motor vehicle in a reckless manner, and this conduct is the proximate cause of serious bodily injury to another, such person commits vehicular assault.

(b) (I) If a person operates or drives a motor vehicle while under the influence of alcohol or one or more drugs, or a combination of both alcohol and one or more drugs, and this conduct is the proximate cause of a serious bodily injury to another, such person commits vehicular assault. This is a strict liability crime.

(II) For the purposes of this subsection (1), one or more drugs shall mean all substances defined as a drug in section 27-80-203 (13), C.R.S., and all controlled substances defined in section 18-18-102 (5), and glue-sniffing, aerosol inhalation, or the inhalation of any other toxic vapor or vapors as defined in section 18-18-412.

(III) The fact that any person charged with a violation of this subsection (1) is or has been entitled to use one or more drugs under the laws of this state shall not constitute a defense against any charge of violating this subsection (1).

(IV) "Driving under the influence" means driving a vehicle when a person has consumed alcohol or one or more drugs, or a combination of alcohol and one or more drugs, which alcohol alone, or one or more drugs alone, or alcohol combined with one or more drugs affect such person to a degree that such person is substantially incapable, either mentally or physically, or both mentally and physically, of exercising clear judgment, sufficient physical control, or due care in the safe operation of a vehicle.

(c) Vehicular assault, in violation of paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), is a class 5 felony. Vehicular assault, in violation of paragraph (b) of this subsection (1), is a class 4 felony.

(2) In any prosecution for a violation of subsection (1) of this section, the amount of alcohol in the defendant's blood or breath at the time of the commission of the alleged offense, or within a reasonable time thereafter, as shown by analysis of the defendant's blood or breath, shall give rise to the following presumptions:

(a) If there was at such time 0.05 or less grams of alcohol per one hundred milliliters of blood, or if there was at such time 0.05 or less grams of alcohol per two hundred ten liters of breath, it shall be presumed that the defendant was not under the influence of alcohol.

(b) If there was at such time in excess of 0.05 but less than 0.08 grams of alcohol per one hundred milliliters of blood, or if there was at such time in excess of 0.05 but less than 0.08 grams of alcohol per two hundred ten liters of breath, such fact may be considered with other competent evidence in determining whether or not the defendant was under the influence of alcohol.

(c) If there was at such time 0.08 or more grams of alcohol per one hundred milliliters of blood, or if there was at such time 0.08 or more grams of alcohol per two hundred ten liters of breath, it shall be presumed that the defendant was under the influence of alcohol.

(3) The limitations of subsection (2) of this section shall not be construed as limiting the introduction, reception, or consideration of any other competent evidence bearing upon the question of whether or not the defendant was under the influence of alcohol.

(4) (a) If a law enforcement officer has probable cause to believe that any person was driving a motor vehicle in violation of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, the person, upon the request of the law enforcement officer, shall take, and complete, and cooperate in the completing of any test or tests of the person's blood, breath, saliva, or urine for the purpose of determining the alcoholic or drug content within his or her system. The type of test or tests shall be determined by the law enforcement officer requiring the test or tests. If the person refuses to take, or to complete, or to cooperate in the completing of any test or tests, the test or tests may be performed at the direction of a law enforcement officer having probable cause, without the person's authorization or consent. If any person refuses to take, or to complete, or to cooperate in the taking or completing of any test or tests required by this paragraph (a), the person shall be subject to license revocation pursuant to the provisions of section 42-2-126 (3), C.R.S. When the test or tests show that the amount of alcohol in a person's blood was in violation of the limits provided for in section 42-2-126 (3) (a), (3) (b), (3) (d), or (3) (e), C.R.S., the person shall be subject to license revocation pursuant to the provisions of section 42-2-126, C.R.S.

(b) Any person who is required to submit to testing shall cooperate with the person authorized to obtain specimens of his blood, breath, saliva, or urine, including the signing of any release or consent forms required by any person, hospital, clinic, or association authorized to obtain such specimens. If such person does not cooperate with the person, hospital, clinic, or association authorized to obtain such specimens, including the signing of any release or consent forms, such noncooperation shall be considered a refusal to submit to testing.

(c) The tests shall be administered at the direction of a law enforcement officer having probable cause to believe that the person committed a violation of subparagraph (I) of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section and in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the state board of health concerning the health of the person being tested and the accuracy of such testing. Strict compliance with such rules and regulations shall not be a prerequisite to the admissibility of test results at trial unless the court finds that the extent of noncompliance with a board of health rule has so impaired the validity and reliability of the testing method and the test results as to render the evidence inadmissible. In all other circumstances, failure to strictly comply with such rules and regulations shall only be considered in the weight to be given to the test results and not to the admissibility of such test results. It shall not be a prerequisite to the admissibility of test results at trial that the prosecution present testimony concerning the composition of any kit used to obtain blood, urine, saliva, or breath specimens. A sufficient evidentiary foundation concerning the compliance of such kits with the rules and regulations of the department of public health and environment shall be established by the introduction of a copy of the manufacturer's or supplier's certificate of compliance with such rules and regulations if such certificate specifies the contents, sterility, chemical makeup, and amounts of chemicals contained in such kit.

(d) No person except a physician, a registered nurse, a paramedic as certified in part 2 of article 3.5 of title 25, C.R.S., an emergency medical service provider as defined in part 1 of article 3.5 of title 25, C.R.S., or a person whose normal duties include withdrawing blood samples under the supervision of a physician or registered nurse is entitled to withdraw blood to determine the alcoholic or drug content of the blood for purposes of this section. In a trial for a violation of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, testimony of a law enforcement officer that the officer witnessed the taking of a blood specimen by a person who the officer reasonably believed was authorized to withdraw blood specimens is sufficient evidence that the person was authorized, and testimony from the person who obtained the blood specimens concerning the person's authorization to obtain blood specimens is not a prerequisite to the admissibility of test results concerning the blood specimens obtained. No civil liability shall attach to a person authorized to obtain blood, breath, saliva, or urine specimens or to a hospital, clinic, or association in or for which the specimens are obtained in accordance with this subsection (4) as a result of the act of obtaining the specimens from any person if the specimens were obtained according to the rules prescribed by the state board of health; except that the provision does not relieve the person from liability for negligence in obtaining the specimen sample.

(e) Any person who is dead or unconscious shall be tested to determine the alcohol or drug content of his blood or any drug content of his system as provided in this subsection (4). If a test cannot be administered to a person who is unconscious, hospitalized, or undergoing medical treatment because the test would endanger the person's life or health, the law enforcement agency shall be allowed to test any blood, urine, or saliva which was obtained and not utilized by a health care provider and shall have access to that portion of the analysis and results of any tests administered by such provider which shows the alcohol or drug content of the person's blood or any drug content within his system. Such test results shall not be considered privileged communications, and the provisions of section 13-90-107, C.R.S., relating to the physician-patient privilege shall not apply. Any person who is dead, in addition to the tests prescribed, shall also have his blood checked for carbon monoxide content and for the presence of drugs, as prescribed by the department of public health and environment. Such information obtained shall be made a part of the accident report.

(f) If a person refuses to take, or to complete, or to cooperate in the completing of any test or tests as provided in this subsection (4) and such person subsequently stands trial for a violation of subsection (1) (b) of this section, the refusal to take, or to complete, or to cooperate with the completing of any test or tests shall be admissible into evidence at the trial, and a person may not claim the privilege against self-incrimination with regard to the admission of his refusal to take, or to complete, or to cooperate with the completing of any test or tests.

(g) Notwithstanding any provision in section 42-4-1301.1, C.R.S., concerning requirements which relate to the manner in which tests are administered, the test or tests taken pursuant to the provisions of this section may be used for the purposes of driver's license revocation proceedings under section 42-2-126, C.R.S., and for the purposes of prosecutions for violations of section 42-4-1301 (1) or (2), C.R.S.

(5) In all actions, suits, and judicial proceedings in any court of this state concerning alcohol-related or drug-related traffic offenses, the court shall take judicial notice of methods of testing a person's alcohol or drug level and of the design and operation of devices, as certified by the department of public health and environment, for testing a person's blood, breath, saliva, or urine to determine his alcohol or drug level. This subsection (5) shall not prevent the necessity of establishing during a trial that the testing devices used were working properly and that such testing devices were properly operated. Nothing in this subsection (5) shall preclude a defendant from offering evidence concerning the accuracy of testing devices.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-205. L. 75: Entire section amended, p. 625, § 2, effective June 26. L. 77: (1) R&RE, p. 961, § 11, effective July 1. L. 81: (1)(b) amended, p. 1992, § 5, effective June 19. L. 83: (4) added, p. 1648, § 18, effective July 1. L. 88: IP(2) amended, p. 1365, § 6, effective July 1. L. 89: (1)(b), (2), and (3) amended, (4) R&RE, and (5) added, pp.896, 898, §§ 3, 4, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1987, § 15, effective July 1; (1)(b)(II) amended, p. 1731, § 14, effective July 1. L. 94: (4)(c), (4)(e), and (5) amended, p. 2734, § 357, effective July 1; (4)(a) and (4)(g) amended, p. 2552, § 41, effective January 1, 1995. L. 97: (4)(a) amended, p. 1471, § 19, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4)(g) amended, p. 1915, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2004: (2)(b) and (2)(c) amended, p. 781, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2008: (4)(a) amended, p. 244, § 4, effective July 1; (4)(g) amended, p. 1890, § 57, effective August 5. L. 2012: (1)(b)(II) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p.1618, § 39, effective July 1; (4)(d) amended, (HB 12-1059), ch. 271, p. 1435, § 14, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (1) in House Bill 93-1302 and House Bill 93-1088 were harmonized.

(2) Section 26 of chapter 271, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (4)(d) applies to acts committed on or after July 1, 2012.

Cross references: (1) For penalties for driving under the influence of alcohol, see § 42-4-1301.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 1994 act amending subsections (4)(c), (4)(e), and (5), see section 1 of chapter 345, Session Laws of Colorado 1994.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Drinking and Driving: An Update on the 1989 Legislation", see 18 Colo. Law. 1943 (1989).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-205 is similar to former § 40-2-11, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Constitutionality. This section is not unconstitutional on the grounds that it denies the accused the opportunity to rebut the presumption raised by his or her blood alcohol content. People v. Rostad, 669 P.2d 126 (Colo. 1983); People v. Ray, 678 P.2d 1019 (Colo. 1984); People v. Sutherland, 683 P.2d 1192 (Colo. 1984).

Legislative concern is for result of reckless driving. This statute is not concerned with drunk driving or reckless driving, as such. Rather, this statute evidences a legislative concern for the result which flows from the reckless operation of a motor vehicle by one who is under the influence of intoxicating liquor, the result being the injury of a human being. People v. Smith, 182 Colo. 228, 512 P.2d 269 (1973).

Reckless driving is not a lesser included offense of vehicular homicide or vehicular assault. People v. Clary, 950 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1997).

Driving under the influence is a lesser included offense of vehicular assault. If a person is guilty of vehicular assault by virtue of driving under the influence, driving under the influence is a lesser included offense prohibited by the double jeopardy clause. People v. Cruthers, 124 P.3d 887 (Colo. App. 2005).

The gravamen of both vehicular homicide, § 18-3-106, and this section is the "reckless" operation or driving of a motor vehicle, which results in the death of or serious bodily injury to another. People v. Sexton, 192 Colo. 81, 555 P.2d 1151 (1976).

Vehicular assault is distinguishable from second degree assault described in § 18-3-203 (1)(d), and therefore these sections do not violate equal protection. The statutes differ in three primary ways. Second degree assault applies to a range of unspecified conduct, while vehicular assault applies narrowly to driving or operating a motor vehicle. Second degree assault can apply to acts of omission, while vehicular assault requires acts of commission. Second degree assault applies to any deadly weapon, which may include a motor vehicle, while vehicular assault requires the defendant's reckless driving or operation of a motor vehicle to have proximately caused the serious bodily injury. People v. Stewart, 55 P.3d 107 (Colo. 2002).

Elements of offense. This statute requires proof of two elements for conviction in addition to that of driving while under the influence: First, driving in a reckless manner; and second, the infliction of bodily injury while so doing. People v. Smith, 182 Colo. 228, 512 P.2d 269 (1973).

Finding of knowing or wilful conduct is sufficient to establish recklessness. People v. Yanaga, 635 P.2d 925 (Colo. 1981).

Offense requires injury. Neither offenses of driving under the influence of alcohol, nor reckless driving, nor causing an accident while under the influence of alcohol or by reckless driving, constitute felonious acts. Only when these events caused a death or injury to another person does the statute specifically provide that an offense has been committed. Penn Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Gibson, 160 Colo. 462, 418 P.2d 50 (1966).

Vehicular assault while driving under the influence is a strict liability crime, and jury was properly instructed on obligation to prove proximate cause beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Hall, 722 P.2d 447 (Colo. App. 1986).

“Person”, as used in this section to describe a victim of vehicular assault, includes a fetus that is injured while in the womb, is subsequently born and lived outside the womb, and then dies from the injuries sustained. While Colorado has no provisions criminalizing the injuring or killing of a fetus, the state common law “born alive” doctrine permits a criminal prosecution of the perpetrator when a child is born alive and then dies of the prenatal injuries, and civil law in the state has held that such a victim is a person within Colorado’s wrongful death statute. People v. Lage, 232 P.3d 138 (Colo. App. 2009).

Subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b) set forth two alternative ways of committing the singular crime of vehicular assault; they do not create two separate crimes. People v. Acosta, 860 P.2d 1376 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Lucero, 985 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1999).

Defendant must be operating or driving the motor vehicle. Britto v. People, 178 Colo. 216, 497 P.2d 325 (1972).

There was substantial evidence that defendant’s actions caused defendant’s injuries, so there was no err in failing to instruct the jury that acts of omission cannot constitute vehicular assault. People v. Smith, 121 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2005).

Misdemeanor offenses under § 42-4-1202 are not the same as felony offenses under this section. People v. Smith, 182 Colo. 228, 512 P.2d 269 (1973).

Driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor and driving while ability is impaired are not lesser included offenses of the felony charge of inflicting bodily injury while under the influence of intoxicating liquor by driving an automobile in a reckless manner. People v. Smith, 182 Colo. 228, 512 P.2d 269 (1973); People v. Lucero, 985 P.2d 87 (Colo. App. 1999).

Prosecution not barred under this section. The court’s dismissal of a misdemeanor count under § 42-4-1202, which placed the defendant in jeopardy as to that count, did not bar prosecution on felony count under this section. People v. Smith, 182 Colo. 228, 512 P.2d 269 (1973).

Right to refuse to submit to blood alcohol test does not apply. The right of refusal to submit to a blood alcohol test under the Colorado implied consent law applied only to the misdemeanor offense of driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor and not to the felony offense of causing an injury while driving under the influence of intoxicating liquor. People v. Blandon, 194 Colo. 102, 568 P.2d 1171 (1977).

The general assembly need not extend the legislative grace of a right to refuse a blood test, a test which is constitutionally permissible, to those charged with vehicular homicide or vehicular assault. People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979).

Equal protection is not violated by the failure of § 18-3-106 and this section to afford an accused the right to refuse a blood test afforded by § 42-4-1202. People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979).

The general assembly’s decision to permit one charged with the less grievous offense of driving under the influence to refuse a blood test while not likewise permitting one charged with felonious vehicular homicide or felonious vehicular assault to refuse the test is not arbitrary or unreasonable. People v. Myers, 198 Colo. 295, 599 P.2d 891 (1979).

In order for an officer to require a test under this section, the motorist must first be given the opportunity to refuse consent to the test. People v. Maclaren, 251 P.3d 578 (Colo. App. 2010).

Failure of an officer to obtain consent prior to subjecting a motorist to a test under this section does not require suppression of the test result or dismissal of the case. Court has broad discretion to suppress evidence or dismiss the case as a sanction for improper police conduct. People v. Maclaren, 251 P.3d 578 (Colo. App. 2010).

Where officer made no attempt to comply with the requirements of the statute and there were no circumstances that would have prevented compliance, trial court did not abuse its discretion by suppressing results of blood test. People v. Maclaren, 251 P.3d 578 (Colo. App. 2010).

Regulations promulgated pursuant to implied consent statute apply to offenses charged under it and not to felonies charged under this section. People v. Acosta, 620 P.2d 55 (Colo. App. 1980).

Failure of police to obtain test from unconscious victim pursuant to subsection (4)(e) does not entitle defendant to a dismissal of the charges under this section when the defendant cannot show that the failure was in bad faith. People v. Kearns, 988 P.2d 189 (Colo. App. 1999).

Sentence of three years plus two years probation for class 4 felony conviction under subsection (1)(b) was not disproportionate. People v. Kearns, 988 P.2d 189 (Colo. App. 1999).

Performance and consent to breathalyzer test. People v. Sanchez, 173 Colo. 188, 476 P.2d 980 (1970).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction. People v. Rodriguez, 645 P.2d 857 (Colo. App. 1982).

As to former element of intent, see Britto v. People, 178 Colo. 216, 497 P.2d 325 (1972).

Violation of reckless vehicular assault statute is a predicate crime of violence for purposes of the United States sentencing guidelines. Subsection (1)(a) creates a categorical crime of violence because it reaches only conduct involving the use of force as required under the sentencing guidelines. United States v. Grajeda-Ramirez, 348 F.3d 1123 (9th Cir. 2003).

Applied in People v. Beltran, 634 P.2d 1003 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Roybal, 655 P.2d 410 (Colo. 1982).

18-3-206. Menacing. (1) A person commits the crime of menacing if, by any threat or physical action, he or she knowingly places or attempts to place another person in fear of imminent serious bodily injury. Menacing is a class 3 misdemeanor, but, it is a class 5 felony if committed:

(a) By the use of a deadly weapon or any article used or fashioned in a manner to cause a person to reasonably believe that the article is a deadly weapon; or

(b) By the person representing verbally or otherwise that he or she is armed with a deadly weapon.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-206. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 961, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 694, § 5, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Definition of 'Deadly Weapon' Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 15 Colo. Law. 1663 (1986).

Statute did not unconstitutionally violate the defendant's equal protection rights, despite the defendant's claim that the conduct proscribed by this section, a class 5 felony, was indistinguishable from the conduct proscribed in § 18-9-106 (1)(f) (disorderly conduct with a deadly weapon), a class 2 misdemeanor, in which the actus reus is less specific than the actus reus in this section. People v. Ibarra, 849 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1993).

It is only when the same conduct is proscribed in two statutes and different criminal sanctions apply, that problems arise under equal protection. People v. Ibarra, 849 P.2d 33 (Colo. 1993).

Felony menacing is a specific intent crime. People v. Lundborg, 39 Colo. App. 498, 570 P.2d 1303 (1977).

Felony menacing is not a lesser included offense of second-degree assault. The offense of second-degree assault does not establish every essential element of felony menacing and, therefore, the merger doctrine does not apply. People v. Truesdale, 804 P.2d 287 (Colo. App. 1990).

Menacing is not a lesser included offense of attempted extreme indifference murder. People v. Portillo, 251 P.3d 483 (Colo. App. 2010).

The actus reus of felony menacing is "placing another person in fear of imminent serious bodily injury by the use of a deadly weapon", an act more specific than the actus reus of disorderly conduct with a deadly weapon, which is displaying a deadly weapon in an alarming manner in a public place. Therefore, it does not violate the equal protection clause of article II, section 25, of the Colorado constitution to subject defendants to potential criminal liability under both statutes. People v. Torres, 848 P.2d 911 (Colo. 1993).

Court did not err in denying motion for acquittal when defendant charged with felony menacing and evidence showed the victims believed themselves to be in danger of imminent serious bodily harm. People v. Manzanares, 942 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1996).

Failure to instruct jury on "imminent" element was harmless error where prosecutor argued fear was imminent and defense did not challenge whether fear was imminent. Evidence clearly showed fear was imminent. People v. Geisendorfer, 991 P.2d 308 (Colo. App. 1999).

The phrase "use of a deadly weapon" is broad enough to include the act of holding a weapon in the presence of another in a manner that causes the other person to fear for his safety, even if the weapon is not pointed at the other person. People v. Hines, 780 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1989); People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

Felony menacing requires use of deadly weapon. The elements of misdemeanor menacing and felony menacing are identical but for the added requirement of the use of a deadly weapon. People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (1980).

Under the felony provision of this section unloaded firearm is a deadly weapon. People v. McPherson, 200 Colo. 429, 619 P.2d 38 (1980).

An unloaded firearm is a deadly weapon. People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (1980).

Defendant "used" his or her purported HIV status in a manner that could cause the victim to fear for his or her safety where the evidence showed that the defendant stated he or she was HIV positive, pinched and scratched the victim, and attempted to bite him or her. People v. Shawn, 107 P.3d 1033 (Colo. App. 2004).

Felony menacing distinguished from first degree burglary. It is possible to commit a first degree burglary without also perpetrating felony menacing. The merger doctrine does not apply because there is no requirement in the first degree burglary statute that a victim be placed in fear of imminent serious bodily injury by a deadly weapon as there is in the felony menacing statute. People v. Sisneros, 44 Colo. App. 65, 606 P.2d 1317 (1980).

Voluntary intoxication is not a defense to felony menacing, which is a general intent crime. People v. Breland, 728 P.2d 763 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Esparza, 757 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1988).

And from aggravated robbery. The offense of aggravated robbery may be committed without also committing felony menacing. No merger occurs because the requirement in the felony menacing statute that the actor knowingly places a victim in fear of "serious bodily injury" is distinguishable from the requirement that the robber knowingly places a victim in fear of "bodily injury". People v. Sisneros, 44 Colo. App. 65, 606 P.2d 1317 (1980).

An essential element of the offense is a specific intent to cause fear. People v. Stout, 193 Colo. 466, 568 P.2d 52 (1977).

The specific intent of the defendant to cause fear is the gravamen of the offense of felony menacing. People v. McPherson, 200 Colo. 429, 619 P.2d 38 (1980).

No reversible error committed when court refused to instruct the jury that if it found the affirmative defense of self-defense applied to any one defendant it applied to them all. Court not persuaded of real possibility that jury could convict the defendant, finding that he acted reasonably toward one victim but not another. People v. Manzanares, 942 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1996).

Court erroneously submitted instruction to jury which included "specific intent" element for "general intent" crime of felony menacing. People v. Crump, 769 P.2d 496 (Colo. 1989).

Menacing is a general intent crime requiring only that the defendant be aware that the defendant's conduct is practically certain to cause the result. People v. Zieg, 841 P.2d 342 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Segura, 923 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1995); People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996); People v. Saltray, 969 P.2d 729 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Shawn, 107 P.3d 1033 (Colo. App. 2004).

It is unnecessary for the victim actually to hear or to be cognizant of any threat from defendant; instead, if there is evidence from which the jury could reasonably find that the defendant knew his actions, if discovered, would place the victim in fear of imminent serious bodily injury by use of a deadly weapon, then the intent element of the offense may be established. People v. Saltray, 969 P.2d 729 (Colo. App. 1998).

The jury instruction which did not specify a particular victim, coupled with the comments of the prosecutor, invited the jury to convict without regard to the identity of the victim, making it impossible to determine whether the jury unanimously convicted defendant on the basis of menacing the same victim. People v. Simmons, 973 P.2d 627 (Colo. App. 1998).

Where the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming and the issue of whether the defendant acted knowingly was not contested at trial, the trial court's error in instructing the jury on the meaning of "knowingly" is not plain error in defendant's conviction for menacing. Espinoza v. People, 712 P.2d 476 (Colo. 1985).

The trial court's omission of the definition of "serious bodily injury" from the jury instructions, although erroneous, did not rise to the level of plain error because the issue of the degree of bodily injury the victim feared from the defendant was not contested at trial. People v. Fichtner, 869 P.2d 539 (Colo. 1994).

Intent to inflict injury not gist of crime. Whether the defendant had the intent of actually to inflict injury is not the gist of felony menacing. People v. McPherson, 200 Colo. 429, 619 P.2d 38 (1980).

Conditional or contingent threat satisfies the "threat" element of felony menacing. People v. Hines, 780 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1989); People v. Segura, 923 P.2d 266 (Colo. App. 1995).

The term "use" is broad enough to include the act of holding a weapon in the presence of another in a manner that causes the other person to fear for his safety. People v. Hines, 780 P.2d 556 (Colo. 1989).

The term "use" necessarily includes the physical possession of a deadly weapon at the time of the crime. People v. Adams, 867 P.2d 54 (Colo. App. 1993).

The term "use" is broad enough to allow the jury to convict the defendant of felony menacing for defendant's act of returning to the victim at the location where the defendant previously sexually assaulted the victim while holding a gun to the victim's head, even though the victim did not see the gun upon the defendant's return. The jury and victim could reasonably believe the defendant still had the gun after the sexual assault and could use it to cause fear in the victim. People v. Frye, 872 P.2d 1316 (Colo. App. 1993).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of felony menacing is not inconsistent with the jury's verdict acquitting defendant of first degree sexual assault. People v. Frye, 872 P.2d 1316 (Colo. App. 1993).

Actual subjective fear on the part of the victim is not a necessary element of this crime. People v. Stout, 193 Colo. 466, 568 P.2d 52

(1977); People v. Williams, 827 P.2d 612 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

Nonetheless, what the victim saw or heard, and his reactions thereto, are relevant considerations in determining whether the defendant had the requisite intent to place him in fear. People v. Gagnon, 703 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1985).

Rather, it is only necessary that the defendant be aware that his conduct is practically certain to cause fear. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996); United States v. Blackwell, 323 F.3d 1256 (10th Cir. 2003).

When there is one count of felony menacing it is not necessary to prove each of the named victims was placed in fear of imminent serious bodily injury. It is sufficient to prove that the defendant committed the offense against the same listed persons. People v. Manzanares, 942 P.2d 1235 (Colo. App. 1996).

The crime of menacing does not require proof of the intent to rob. People v. Marlott, 191 Colo. 304, 552 P.2d 491 (1976).

Intoxication as defense. If at the time of the incident in question, felony menacing was a specific intent crime, intoxication is available as a defense to negate the requisite specific intent. People v. Sandoval, 42 Colo. App. 503, 596 P.2d 1225 (1979).

Evidence held sufficient to bind police officer over for trial. Johns v. District Court, 192 Colo. 462, 561 P.2d 1 (1977).

Evidence sufficient to indicate that felony prosecution under this section was proper. Biddle v. District Court, 183 Colo. 281, 516 P.2d 645 (1973); People v. Stout, 193 Colo. 466, 568 P.2d 52 (1977); People v. Gonzales, 43 Colo. App. 312, 602 P.2d 6 (1978), rev'd on other grounds, 198 Colo. 450, 601 P.2d 1366 (1979).

Where evidence supports felony conviction, improper misdemeanor instruction does not affect misdemeanor conviction. Where the evidence supported a conviction for felony menacing, the fact that the trial court improperly submitted an instruction on misdemeanor menacing to the jury did not affect the defendant's conviction for the lesser included offense, misdemeanor menacing. People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (1980).

Felony menacing is not a lesser included offense of attempted second degree murder. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

The offense of second degree murder does not establish every element of felony menacing. Attempted second degree murder requires a defendant to knowingly engage in conduct that is a substantial step toward causing the death of a person. There is no requirement that the victim be in fear of imminent serious bodily injury. Thus, an attempted second degree murder conviction does not necessarily establish all the elements of menacing. People v. Torres, 224 P.3d 268 (Colo. App. 2009).

Misdemeanor menacing is not a lesser included offense of use of a stun gun. People v. Wheeler, 170 P.3d 817 (Colo. App. 2007).

Constitution proscribes retrial when conviction impliedly acquits defendant. The double jeopardy clause proscribes retrial when a felony menacing conviction impliedly acquits the defendant of a second-degree assault charge. Ortiz v. District Court, 626 P.2d 642 (Colo. 1981).

Trial court abused discretion in refusing to grant a continuance to allow stabbing victim's prior felony drug convictions to become final so that defendant could cross-examine victim concerning the convictions for impeachment purposes. People v. Gagnon, 703 P.2d 661 (Colo. App. 1985).

No error where court excluded evidence of actions of victim after menacing occurred, since, in determining the issue of reasonable belief of imminent injury, it is the actions and demeanor of the believed assailant which first occurred that are relevant. People v. Beckett, 782 P.2d 812 (Colo. App. 1989), aff'd, 800 P.2d 74 (Colo. 1990).

Defendant's act of touching a knife to the officer's person was not sufficient to establish the elements of assault-during-escape. To hold, under the present criminal code, that a threat with a deadly weapon constitutes an assault with intent to commit bodily injury would eliminate any distinction between the crimes of menacing and assault with intent to commit bodily injury. People v. Wilson, 791 P.2d 1247 (Colo. App. 1990).

Viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, the evidence was sufficient to induce a person of ordinary prudence to entertain a reasonable belief that defendant committed the crime of felony menacing where evidence indicated that defendant, while holding the knife that mortally wounded victim, threatened to kill other person if that person did not leave his residence. People v. District Ct., 17th Jud. Dist., 926 P.2d 567 (Colo. 1996).

A violation of this section qualifies as a violent felony under the federal Armed Career Criminals Act, 18 U.S.C. § 924(e). United States v. Herron, 432 F.3d 1127 (10th Cir. 2005), cert. denied, 547 U.S. 1104, 126 S. Ct. 1895, 164 L. Ed. 2d 579 (2006).

Felony menacing is a crime of violence for purposes of the United States sentencing guidelines. United States v. Armijo, 651 F.3d 1226 (10th Cir. 2011).

A conviction for violation of this section is a conviction of a crime of violence as defined by 18 U.S.C. § 16, and therefore an aggravated felony under 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(43)(F), making alien removable under 8 U.S.C.

§ 1227(a)(2)(A)(iii). Damaso-Mendoza v. Holder, 653 F.3d 1245 (10th Cir. 2011).

Applied in Miller v. District Court, 1931 Colo. 404, 566 P.2d 1063 (1977); Jones v. District Court, 196 Colo. 1, 584 P.2d 81 (1978); People v. Chavez, 629 P.2d 1040 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lichtenstein, 630 P.2d 70 (Colo. 1981); People v. Francis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. Trujillo, 631 P.2d 146 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jones, 631 P.2d 1132 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo.

1981); People v. Stoppel, 637 P.2d 384 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mack, 638 P.2d 257 (Colo. 1981); People v. Sanchez, 649 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1982); People v. Brassfield, 652 P.2d 588 (Colo. 1982); People v. Ferguson, 653 P.2d 725 (Colo. 1982); Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982); People v. Dillon, 655 P.2d 841 (Colo. 1982); People v. Shearer, 650 P.2d 1293 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983); People v. Jones, 140 P.3d 325 (Colo. App. 2006).

18-3-207. Criminal extortion - aggravated extortion. (1) A person commits criminal extortion if:

(a) The person, without legal authority and with the intent to induce another person against that other person's will to perform an act or to refrain from performing a lawful act, makes a substantial threat to confine or restrain, cause economic hardship or bodily injury to, or damage the property or reputation of, the threatened person or another person; and

(b) The person threatens to cause the results described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1) by:

(I) Performing or causing an unlawful act to be performed; or

(II) Invoking action by a third party, including but not limited to, the state or any of its political subdivisions, whose interests are not substantially related to the interests pursued by the person making the threat.

(1.5) A person commits criminal extortion if the person, with the intent to induce another person against that other person's will to give the person money or another item of value, threatens to report to law enforcement officials the immigration status of the threatened person or another person.

(2) A person commits aggravated criminal extortion if, in addition to the acts described in subsection (1) of this section, the person threatens to cause the results described in paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section by means of chemical, biological, or harmful radioactive agents, weapons, or poison.

(3) For the purposes of this section, "substantial threat" means a threat that is reasonably likely to induce a belief that the threat will be carried out and is one that threatens that significant confinement, restraint, injury, or damage will occur.

(4) Criminal extortion, as described in subsections (1) and (1.5) of this section, is a class 4 felony. Aggravated criminal extortion, as described in subsection (2) of this section, is a class 3 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-207. L. 75: Entire section amended, p. 618, § 8, effective July 21. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 981, § 4, effective May 13; entire section amended, p. 974, § 8, effective July 1. L. 82: (2) amended, p. 623, § 17, effective April 2. L. 94: Entire section R&RE, p. 1619, § 1, effective May 31. L. 2006, 1st Ex. Sess.: (1.5) added and (4) amended, p. 11, § 1, effective July 31.

Editor's note: Amendments to this section by House Bill 81-1167 and Senate Bill 81-183 were harmonized.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with extortion, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 153 (1985). For article, "2006 Immigration Legislation in Colorado", see 35 Colo. Law. 79 (October 2006).

This section is applicable to efforts to collect a legally enforceable debt. People v.

Rosenberg, 194 Colo. 423, 572 P.2d 1211 (1978).

This section and § 18-9-111, which classifies harassment as a misdemeanor, address separate and distinct crimes and the classification of such offenses have a rational basis in fact and are reasonably related to legitimate government interests. People v. Czemerynski, 786 P.2d 1100 (Colo. 1990).

Statute is facially overbroad because it sweeps within its reach both protected and unprotected speech. Whimbush v. People, 869 P.2d 1245 (Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 1994 repeal and reenactment).

Statute is facially overbroad because it also covers constitutionally protected threats of collective action in support of group demands. Whimbush v. People, 869 P.2d 1245 (Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 1994 repeal and reenactment).

A specific intent requirement does not eliminate overbreadth concerns when the effect associated with the intent provision, here, to induce another to act against his or her will, encompasses a substantial amount of protected activity. Whimbush v. People, 869 P.2d 1245 (Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 1994 repeal and reenactment).

The trial court must vacate defendant's conviction and sentence for criminal extortion where the statute requires extensive revision to comply with constitutional requirements and rewriting the statute is more appropriately left to the general assembly rather than to the court. Whimbush v. People, 869 P.2d 1245 (Colo. 1994) (decided prior to 1994 repeal and reenactment).

Subsection (1) does not include within its reach protected speech, and therefore, it is not unconstitutionally overbroad. The legislature repealed and reenacted this section in 1994 with substantial modifications. Thus, the types of protected speech found to be criminalized under the prior statute are no longer included within the definition of extortion. People v. Campbell, 174 P.3d 860 (Colo. App. 2007).

This section gives sufficient notice of the proscribed conduct and is not unconstitutionally vague. A person of reasonable intelligence could conclude that phone calls made with the intent to threaten the victim is prohibited. People v. Czemyrnski, 786 P.2d 1100 (Colo. 1990).

Indictment did not adequately allege a violation of the threat to confine or restrain element of the criminal extortion charge where it did not allege that sheriff made a substantial threat to confine or restrain an inmate who was already confined as an inmate. The indictment and the bill of particulars alleged only that sheriff threatened to transfer the inmate to another jail if inmate did not agree to work on sheriff's home. People v. Gallegos, 260 P.3d 15 (Colo. App. 2010).

Even if evidence of threatened loss of good time would otherwise have been sufficient to establish a violation of the extortion statute, it cannot cure the absence of such a factual allegation in the indictment or bill of particulars. People v. Gallegos, 260 P.3d 15 (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in People v. Hearty, 644 P.2d 302 (Colo. 1982).

18-3-208. Reckless endangerment. A person who recklessly engages in conduct which creates a substantial risk of serious bodily injury to another person commits reckless endangerment, which is a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-208.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "The Legal Risks of AIDS: Moving Beyond Discrimination", see 18 Colo. Law. 606 (1989).

Offense not lesser included offense of third degree assault. The establishment of every element of third degree assault would not necessarily include proving conduct which creates a substantial risk of serious bodily injury, an element of reckless endangerment. Third degree assault requires proof of bodily injury but not proof of a substantial risk of serious bodily injury. Therefore reckless endangerment is not a lesser included offense of third degree assault. People v. Berner, 42 Colo. App. 520, 600 P.2d 112 (1979).

Trial court did not err by refusing to instruct the jury on the lesser nonincluded offense of reckless endangerment, because there was no rational basis upon which the jury could have convicted defendant of that offense and acquitted him of child abuse resulting in death. People v. Cauley, 32 P.3d 602 (Colo. App. 2001).

There is no right to a jury instruction on a lesser included offense if the element that distinguishes the greater from the lesser is uncontested. Where it is undisputed that death occurred as a result of defendant's conduct, there is no right to an instruction on reckless endangerment in a reckless manslaughter case. People v. Hall, 59 P.3d 298 (Colo. App. 2002).

Applied in People v. Sepeda, 196 Colo. 13, 581 P.2d 723 (1978); Perea v. District Court, 199 Colo. 27, 604 P.2d 25 (1979); People v. McPherson, 200 Colo. 429, 619 P.2d 38 (1980).

18-3-209. Assault on the elderly or persons with disabilities - legislative declaration. (Repealed)

Source: L. 84: Entire section added, p. 542, § 2, effective April 12. L. 86: (2) amended, p. 777, § 4, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1634, § 18, effective July 1. L. 95: Entire section repealed, p. 1251, § 8, effective July 1.

PART 3

KIDNAPPING

18-3-301. First degree kidnapping. (1) Any person who does any of the following acts with the intent thereby to force the victim or any other person to make any concession or give up anything of value in order to secure a release of a person under the offender's actual or apparent control commits first degree kidnapping:

- (a) Forcibly seizes and carries any person from one place to another; or
- (b) Entices or persuades any person to go from one place to another; or
- (c) Imprisons or forcibly secretes any person.

(2) Whoever commits first degree kidnapping is guilty of a class 1 felony if the person kidnapped shall have suffered bodily injury; but no person convicted of first degree kidnapping shall suffer the death penalty if the person kidnapped was liberated alive prior to the conviction of the kidnapper.

(3) Whoever commits first degree kidnapping commits a class 2 felony if, prior to his conviction, the person kidnapped was liberated unharmed.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-301.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-301 is similar to former § 40-2-44, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

For a discussion of the legislative history of first-degree kidnapping, see People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Section not vague. The kidnapping statutes, by using words such as "seize" and "imprison" to define the offenses, are not so vague that men of common intelligence and understanding are required to guess as to their application. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

Essential elements of the crime of kidnapping are: (1) Wilfulness or intent to do the act; (2) the act must be done without lawful authority; (3) there must be a seizing, or imprisoning; and (4) the act must be done against the victim's will, by means of force or otherwise. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

All elements of crime of kidnapping must be present or the crime is not committed. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

Prosecution must prove movement and intent to force victim to make concession. For first degree kidnapping, the prosecution must prove, in addition to movement, that the intent of the defendant is to force the victim to make a concession or give up a thing of value in order to secure release. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980); People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981).

Movement which is more than incidental to the commission of an underlying crime is circumstantial evidence of specific intent to kidnap, and a jury could be so instructed. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Evidence of intent to sustain conviction derived from examining movement surrounding underlying crime. Circumstantial evidence of intent sufficient to sustain a conviction for first degree kidnapping may be derived from an examination of the amount and character of the movement surrounding an underlying crime, taking into account, for example, the time of detention, the distance, any changed environmental factors, whether the commission of the underlying crime and the movement were simultaneous, and the consistency of the defendant's actions with an independent intent to kidnap. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (Colo. 1980); People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981).

Section imposes only a single intent requirement: Namely an intent "to force the victim or any other person to make any concession or give up anything of value in order to secure a release". First degree kidnapping does not require proof that the kidnapper intended to release the victim upon obtaining the concession sought. People v. Weare, 155 P.3d 527 (Colo. App. 2006).

"Any concession" includes sexual assault. The phrase "any concession" is sufficiently broad to encompass submission to a sexual assault as a basis for a verdict of guilty. People v. Molina, 41 Colo. App. 128, 584 P.2d 634 (1978).

Submission to sexual assault not sufficient per se. Proof of the victim's submission to a sexual assault is not sufficient per se to establish the concession required for first degree kidnapping. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Assault is not a necessary element of the crime of kidnapping. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

Multiple punishment is not permitted where one act of forcible abduction results in kidnapping of two victims. People v. Duran, 183 Colo. 180, 515 P.2d 1117 (1973).

Venue in a kidnapping case may be either in the county in which the offense was committed or in any county through which the person kidnapped was taken or kept while under confinement or restraint. Claxton v. People, 164 Colo. 283, 434 P.2d 407 (1967).

Information charging kidnapping held sufficient. Mayer v. People, 116 Colo. 284, 180 P.2d 1017 (1947).

Evidence sufficient to support conviction. Tomsak v. People, 166 Colo. 226, 442 P.2d 825 (1968); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); Chatfield v. Ricketts, 673 F.2d 330 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 843, 103 S. Ct. 96, 74 L. Ed.2d 88 (1982).

Where an individual was pursued, her car rammed, and the road blocked by defendant who got into her car, shoved her to the passenger side, and then drove away until the victim was able to break from defendant's grasp and jump from the moving car, the crime of kidnapping was clearly established. Ortega v. People, 178 Colo. 419, 498 P.2d 1121 (1972).

Where the assault by the defendant was a crime of physical force or violence, the victim had no choice in the matter, and the assault ended when the police arrived, the evidence was insufficient to support a first degree kidnapping charge but was sufficient to sustain a conviction for second degree kidnapping. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 1, 612 P.2d 1099 (1980).

The evidence is insufficient to sustain a conviction on a first degree kidnapping charge where the victim of a first degree sexual assault is forced to submit without having any choice in the matter, there existing no "concession" or intent to obtain a concession within the meaning of the first degree kidnapping statute. People v. Nunez, 673 P.2d 53 (Colo. App. 1983).

Evidence did not require instruction on false imprisonment. When both the victim and the defendant's accomplice testify that the defendant committed acts which constitute kidnapping, the only theory of defense is alibi, and the defendant denies the commission of any act which could lead to the conviction of either false imprisonment or kidnapping and no evidence is presented from which the jury might find that the defendant is only guilty of false imprisonment, the defendant is either guilty of kidnapping or nothing at all and is not entitled to an instruction on false imprisonment even though it is a lesser included offense of kidnapping. Ortega v. People, 178 Colo. 419, 498 P.2d 1121 (1972).

This section is sufficiently definite to give reasonable notice of the proscribed conduct to one who would avoid its penalties, to guide the trial judge in its application, and to guide counsel in defending one charged with its violation. People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 284, 572 P.2d 467 (1977).

Because this section does not proscribe the same criminal conduct as § 18-3-302, it does not violate the requirements of equal protection. This section requires the kidnapper to force the victim or any other person to make any concession or give up anything of value in order to secure a release, an element not required for second degree kidnapping. People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 284, 572 P.2d 467 (1977).

Inclusion of the terms "entices" and "decoys" in § 18-3-302 (2) does not mean that the word "takes" necessarily prohibits only forcible seizures therefore prohibiting the same conduct defined in subsection (1)(a) of this section. A taking could occur without force, with the intent to keep or conceal the child from his or her parent or guardian or with intent to sell, trade, or barter the child for consideration, but without the child's being enticed or decoyed away. The terms "entices" and "decoys", therefore, are not rendered meaningless by an interpretation of "takes" that encompasses nonforcible seizures. People v. Kendall, 174 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2007).

The obvious distinction between subsection (1)(a) of this section and § 18-3-302 (2) is that § 18-3-302 (2) applies only to children. Subsection (1)(a) of this section and § 18-3-302 (2) do not prohibit exactly the same criminal conduct while imposing disparate penalties. People v. Kendall, 174 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2007).

The different penalties provided for in subsections (2) and (3) of this section do not violate the equal protection clause because subsection (2) requires a finding of bodily injury, an additional element of proof which justifies the imposition of different penalties. People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 284, 572 P.2d 467 (1977).

It is not unconstitutional to try the felony murder and first degree kidnapping charges together under the current statutory scheme.

People v. Cunningham, 194 Colo. 198, 570 P.2d 1086 (1977).

Prohibition against double punishment for same criminal act is not violated where a defendant is found guilty of first degree kidnapping and first degree sexual assault for same criminal episode. People v. Molina, 41 Colo. App. 128, 584 P.2d 634 (1978).

To convict an individual of first degree kidnapping, the movement of the victim must be more than incidental to the commission of some other underlying offense. Although the defendant forced the victim into the manager's office at knife point and ordered the manager to retrieve cash from the safe to secure the victim's release, the movement of the victim had no purpose or effect beyond robbery. People v. Owens, 97 P.3d 227 (Colo. App. 2004).

Forcible sexual acts which cause extreme physical pain and a subsequent kidney infection clearly satisfy the statutory definition of bodily injury under this section. People v. Hines, 194 Colo. 284, 572 P.2d 467 (1977).

Case remanded to correct excessive sentence. Abeyta v. People, 112 Colo. 49, 145 P.2d 884 (1944); People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Merger doctrine inapplicable to convictions for kidnapping, assault, and robbery. The merger doctrine does not apply to a single transaction resulting in convictions under this section and §§ 18-3-402 and 18-4-301 (1). People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 110 (1980).

If victim is injured, section applies even though victim is later liberated. Miller v. District Court, 197 Colo. 485, 593 P.2d 1379 (1979).

18-3-302. Second degree kidnapping. (1) Any person who knowingly seizes and carries any person from one place to another, without his consent and without lawful justification, commits second degree kidnapping.

(2) Any person who takes, entices, or decoys away any child not his own under the age of eighteen years with intent to keep or conceal the child from his parent or guardian or with intent to sell, trade, or barter such child for consideration commits second degree kidnapping.

(3) Second degree kidnapping is a class 2 felony if any of the following circumstances exist:

(a) The person kidnapped is a victim of a sexual offense pursuant to part 4 of this article; or

(b) The person kidnapped is a victim of a robbery.

(4) (a) Unless it is a class 2 felony under subsection (3) of this section, second degree kidnapping is a class 3 felony if any of the following circumstances exist:

(I) The kidnapping is accomplished with intent to sell, trade, or barter the victim for consideration; or

(II) The kidnapping is accomplished by the use of a deadly weapon or any article used or fashioned in a manner to cause a person to reasonably believe that the article is a deadly weapon; or

(III) The kidnapping is accomplished by the perpetrator representing verbally or otherwise that he or she is armed with a deadly weapon.

(b) A defendant convicted of second degree kidnapping committed under any of the

If the victim is forced to submit to sexual assault without having a choice in the matter, there generally is no concession within the meaning of this section. People v. San Emerterio, 819 P.2d 516 (Colo. App. 1991), rev'd on other grounds, 839 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1992).

The term "concession" as used in this section need not apply only to things with objective value but is broad enough to include a promise that has sufficient subjective value to a kidnapper to be exchanged for release. People v. San Emerterio, 839 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1992).

The term "concession" is not so restrictive as to impose a control requirement to make a promise sufficiently valuable. People v. San Emerterio, 839 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1992).

All of the elements of first degree kidnapping are present if a defendant forcibly seizes a victim and carries her away with the intent to force her to make a promise to complete a future act in order to secure her release. Such circumstances are sufficient to constitute a "concession" within the meaning of this section. People v. San Emerterio, 839 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1992).

Applied in Raullerson v. People, 157 Colo. 462, 404 P.2d 149 (1965); People v. McGill, 190 Colo. 443, 548 P.2d 600 (1976); People v. Glenn, 200 Colo. 416, 615 P.2d 700 (Colo. 1980); People v. Francis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Reynolds, 638 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1981); People v. Gonzales, 631 P.2d 1170 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983); People ex rel. Faulk v. District Court, 667 P.2d 1384 (Colo. 1983).

circumstances set forth in this subsection (4) shall be sentenced by the court in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

(5) Second degree kidnapping is a class 4 felony, except as provided in subsections (3) and (4) of this section.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 421, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-302. L. 77: Entire section R&RE, p. 961, § 13, effective July 1. L. 81: Entire section R&RE, p. 983, § 1, effective July 1. L. 86: (4) amended, p. 777, § 5, effective July 1. L. 87: (1) amended, p. 615, § 4, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) and (4) amended, p. 902, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (4) amended, p. 694, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2001: (3), (4), and (5) amended, p. 857, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4)(b) amended, p. 1512, § 188, effective October 1. L. 2003: (3)(a) amended, p. 1432, § 20, effective April 29. L. 2007: (4) amended, p. 1687, § 5, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4)(b), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "Recovering the Parentally Kidnapped Child", see 12 Colo. Law. 1798 (1983). For article, "Missing Children", see 13 Colo. Law. 1005 (1984).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-302 is similar to former § 40-2-44, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Second degree kidnapping statute criminalizing "knowingly, forcibly, or otherwise" seizing and carrying any person from one place to another is unconstitutionally vague. However, the phrase "forcibly or otherwise" is severable from the constitutional sections of the statute, leaving the remainder complete and in accord with legislative intent. People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986) (decided prior to 1987 amendment).

No equal protection violation where general assembly chose to punish with the same severity all cases where kidnapping was accompanied by sexual assault, making no distinction between misdemeanor and felony sexual assault. People v. Williams, 89 P.3d 492 (Colo. App. 2003).

Because this section does not proscribe the same criminal conduct as § 18-3-301, it does not violate the requirements of equal protection. Inclusion of the terms "entices" and "decoys" in subsection (2) of this section does not mean that the word "takes" necessarily prohibits only forcible seizures therefore prohibiting the same conduct defined in § 18-3-301 (1)(a). A taking could occur without force, with the intent to keep or conceal the child from his or her parent or guardian or with intent to sell, trade, or barter the child for consideration, but without the child's being enticed or decoyed away. The terms "entices" and "decoys", therefore, are not rendered meaningless by an interpretation of "takes" that encompasses nonforcible seizures. People v. Kendall, 174 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2007).

The obvious distinction between § 18-3-301 (1)(a) and subsection (2) of this section is that subsection (2) of this section applies only to children. Section 18-3-301 (1)(a) and subsection (2) of this section do not prohibit exactly the same criminal conduct while imposing disparate penalties. People v. Kendall, 174 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2007).

Term "seize" does not imply the use of force. Where defendant conceded that evidence was sufficient to show he "took" his daughter from her custodial parent, conviction under subsection (1) was proper although taking was not by force. People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

Taking a person through the use of deceit falls within the term "seize" because it is a taking without the consent of the victim. Consent obtained through deceit is invalid. People v. Maass, 981 P.2d 177 (Colo. App. 1988).

Forcing customer of movie theater to accompany defendant at gunpoint to theater manager's office with threats of retribution if he called the police satisfies "seize and carry" requirement for purposes of second degree kidnapping. People v. Ridenour, 878 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

The court did not commit plain error in instructing the jury that "seized and carried" means any movement, however short in distance. The court's instruction accurately states the law. Further, it was appropriate for the court to instruct the jury on the phrase "seized and carried" since it has special meaning in the context of kidnapping and is a statutory term of art. People v. Rogers, 220 P.3d 931 (Colo. App. 2008).

Phrase "without lawful justification" is not a term of art, nor does it connote some additional legal purpose ulterior to the act of seizing and transporting a nonconsenting victim. Instructing jury to give phrase “the common meaning that the words imply” was not plain error. People v. Schuett, 833 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1992).

Conviction for second degree kidnapping that involves sexual assault requires proof of sexual assault beyond reasonable doubt. People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986).

A defendant convicted of sexual assault and second degree kidnapping under subsection (3) is not subjected to unconstitutional “double punishment” in the sense of being convicted of two substantive offenses for the same conduct. The sexual assault factor under subsection (3) is a sentence enhancement factor, and, where, as here, the intent of the legislature clearly authorizes a conviction of second degree kidnapping as a class 2 felony on the basis of a related conviction for sexual assault, the kidnapping conviction must be upheld. People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986); People v. Turner, 730 P.2d 333 (Colo. App. 1986).

Analysis is identical for purposes of double jeopardy and merger doctrines. Sexual assault is not a lesser included offense of second degree kidnapping where the fact that sexual assault occurred in conjunction with kidnapping is used to raise the kidnapping from a class 4 to a class 2 felony. People v. Henderson, 810 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1991); People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Aguilar-Ramos, 224 P.3d 402 (Colo. App. 2009); Lewis v. People, 261 P.3d 480 (Colo. 2011).

Distinction between sentence-enhancement factor and element of separate offense. Subsection (3)(a) of this section does not create a separate and definable offense from that created in subsection (1) or (2); it simply relates to what felony level the offense entails. People v. Henderson, 810 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1991); People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001); Lewis v. People, 261 P.3d 480 (Colo. 2011).

Sexual assault is not a lesser included offense of, and therefore not merged into, second degree kidnapping involving sexual assault. People v. Henderson, 810 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1991); People v. McKnight, 813 P.2d 331 (Colo. 1991); People v. Johnson, 815 P.2d 427 (Colo. 1991); People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001); People v. Ramirez, 140 P.3d 169 (Colo. App. 2005); People v. Baker, 178 P.3d 1225 (Colo. App. 2007); Lewis v. People, 261 P.3d 480 (Colo. 2011).

Section not vague. The kidnapping statutes, by using words such as “seize” and “imprison” to define the offenses, are not so vague that men of common intelligence and understanding are required to guess as to their application. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

Essential elements of the crime of kidnapping are: (1) Willfulness or intent to do the act; (2) the act must be done without lawful authority; (3) there must be a seizing, or imprisoning; and (4) the act must be done against the victim’s will, by means of force or otherwise. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

A material element of the crime of kidnapping is that a person must be held against his or her will. People v. Johnson, 183 Colo. 219, 516 P.2d 116 (1973).

Person is guilty of attempted second degree kidnapping if he knowingly engaged in conduct which is strongly corroborative of the firmness of his purpose to knowingly seize or carry another person from one place to another without his consent and without lawful justification. People v. Lahr, 200 Colo. 425, 615 P.2d 707 (1980).

To sustain a conviction, prosecution must prove victim was seized and transported without consent, but it is not necessary to show that the involuntariness exists from the beginning of the transaction if subsequently the victim is forcibly detained. People v. Brown, 622 P.2d 109 (Colo. App. 1980).

Robbery is not a lesser included offense to second degree kidnapping even though a robbery in conjunction with the second degree kidnapping may lead to an enhanced penalty for that crime. People v. Huggins, 825 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1991).

Movement for a “substantial” distance is not required as an element of second degree kidnapping. People v. Apodaca, 668 P.2d 941 (Colo. App. 1982), aff’d in part and rev’d in part on other grounds, 712 P.2d 467 (Colo. 1985).

Insubstantial movement of the victim is sufficient to satisfy the element of second degree kidnapping that the victim be carried from one place to another if the insubstantial movement causes increased risk of harm to the victim. People v. Huggins, 825 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1991).

The evidence, viewed in a light most favorable to the prosecution, satisfied the asportation element of second degree kidnapping. Even though moving the victim from the living room to the bedroom and then hallway was an insubstantial seizure and carrying, the movement did increase the risk of harm to the victim, thus satisfying the asportation element. Defendant increased the risk of harm to the victim by moving the victim to an area of the residence where an escape was less likely, and to an area where he was less likely to be detected since there were no windows. People v. Rogers, 220 P.3d 931 (Colo. App. 2008).

Where it is unclear whether movement was substantial, jury should be instructed on relevance of increased risk of harm. People v. Owens, 97 P.3d 227 (Colo. App. 2004).

The element of this offense which requires that a person be moved “from one place to another” is not met where the victim is forced to move from his living room to his bedroom at gunpoint. People v. Bell, 809 P.2d 1026 (Colo. App. 1990).

“Significant movement” of the victim is not required as an element of kidnapping, but merely some movement which substantially increases the risk of harm to the victim. People v. Unrein, 677 P.2d 951 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Fuller, 791 P.2d 702 (Colo. 1990).

The asportation element of second degree kidnapping is the movement by the defendant of the victim from one place to another. Evidence that the defendant's actions substantially increased a risk of harm to the victim may be relevant to whether asportation was proved in some cases, but creating such a risk is not an essential element of the offense. People v. Harlan, 8 P.3d 448 (Colo. 2000).

The term “without lawful justification” in subsection (1) means acting in a manner not authorized or permitted by law and does not connote some additional illegal purpose ulterior to the act of seizing and transporting a nonconsenting victim from one place to another. People v. Schuett, 833 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1992).

Trial court did not commit plain error by failing to provide the jury with a clarifying definition of “without lawful justification”. People v. Schuett, 833 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1992).

Although the jury was instructed as to first degree kidnapping and not second degree kidnapping, where the jury found all of the elements necessary to prove second degree kidnapping beyond a reasonable doubt, the judgment of conviction for second degree kidnapping should be entered upon remand to the trial court. People v. San Emerterio, 819 P.2d 516 (Colo. App. 1991), rev'd on other grounds, 839 P.2d 1161 (Colo. 1992).

All elements of crime of kidnapping must be present or the crime is not committed. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

The element contained in second degree kidnapping and not contained in false imprisonment, a lesser included offense, is that of transportation of the victim. People v. Arispe, 191 Colo. 555, 555 P.2d 525 (1976).

False imprisonment is not a lesser included offense of attempted second degree kidnapping. Thus, a prosecutor can prove attempted second degree kidnapping without showing that the victim was actually seized or falsely imprisoned. People v. Joyce, 68 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2002).

Prosecution must prove every material element of kidnapping including consent. People v. Rutt, 179 Colo. 180, 500 P.2d 362 (1972).

Specific intent need not be proved by direct evidence but may be inferred from the circumstances surrounding the commission of the offense. People v. McGill, 190 Colo. 443, 548 P.2d 600 (1976).

Assault is not necessary element of the crime of kidnapping. People v. Cardwell, 181 Colo. 421, 510 P.2d 317 (1973).

Subsection (2) prohibits unauthorized interference with parents' custodial right to their children. People v. Woodward, 631 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1981).

Conduct constituting child kidnapping. Keeping a child in physical seclusion or keeping accurate information regarding the child's location from her parents, making it more difficult for the child's parents to discover her location, constitutes child kidnapping. People v. Woodward, 631 P.2d 1188 (Colo. App. 1981).

Subsection (2) does not require proof that a child be taken for any particular duration to show the actor's intent. Evidence proving that defendant violently took the child from the victim without telling her where he was going is sufficient to sustain the jury's guilty verdict. People v. Ortiz, 155 P.3d 532 (Colo. App. 2006).

The offense of second degree kidnapping of a child in violation of subsection (2) does not impliedly require proof that the perpetrator took the child without the consent of a parent. Nothing in the language of this section suggests that the parent or guardian must be aware of the defendant's intent at the time the child is taken. People v. Ortiz, 155 P.3d 532 (Colo. App. 2006).

False imprisonment is a lesser nonincluded offense of second degree kidnapping committed in violation of subsection (2). Nothing in the language of subsection (2) suggests that the parent or guardian must be aware of the defendant's intent at the time the child is taken. Therefore, the absence of consent is not an implied element of second degree kidnapping committed in violation of subsection (2). People v. Ortiz, 155 P.3d 532 (Colo. App. 2006).

Both parents share an equal right to the custody of a child in the absence of a court order granting legal or physical custody to one parent or the other for purpose of application of this section. Armendariz v. People, 711 P.2d 1268 (Colo. 1986); People v. Haynie, 826 P.2d 371 (Colo. App. 1991).

Therefore, even though the defendant father took his child from the mother, the prosecution was unable to prove the essential element of consent in the absence of a court order granting legal or physical custody of the child to the mother. Armendariz v. People, 711 P.2d 1268 (Colo. 1986).

The “taking” of a child under subsection (2) could occur without force with the intent to keep or conceal the child from his or her parent or guardian. The terms “entices” or “decoys” are not rendered meaningless by an interpretation of “takes” that encompasses nonforcible seizures. People v. Kendall, 174 P.3d 791 (Colo. App. 2007).

Failure to include element of “knowingly” in instruction is error. The trial court’s failure to include the element of “knowingly” in a second degree kidnapping instruction is plain error. People v. Clark, 662 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982).

Justification is not affirmative defense, but rather the state must prove unlawful justification as an essential element of the offense of second degree kidnapping. People v. Rex, 636 P.2d 1282 (Colo. App. 1981).

Voluntary intoxication not defense. The mental culpability requirement of both second degree kidnapping and first degree sexual assault is “knowingly”; therefore, they are, by statutory definition, general intent crimes and voluntary intoxication is not a defense to either crime. People v. Vigil, 43 Colo. App. 121, 602 P.2d 884 (1979).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction. Yescas v. People, 197 Colo. 379, 593 P.2d 358 (1979); People v. Nunez, 673 P.2d 53 (Colo.

App. 1983); People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986).

Where the assault by the defendant was a crime of physical force or violence, the victim had no choice in the matter, and the assault ended when the police arrived, the evidence was insufficient to support a first degree kidnapping charge but was sufficient to sustain a conviction for second degree kidnapping. People v. Naranjo, 612 P.2d 1099 (Colo. 1980).

Jury instruction held proper. People v. Johnson, 183 Colo. 219, 516 P.2d 116 (1973).

Applied in People v. Wilkerson, 192 Colo. 386, 559 P.2d 1107 (1977); Goodwin v. District Court, 197 Colo. 6, 588 P.2d 874 (1979); People v. Blalock, 197 Colo. 320, 592 P.2d 406 (1979); People v. Goodwin, 197 Colo. 47, 593 P.2d 326 (1979); People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981); People v. Sharpless, 635 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Sanchez, 649 P.2d 1049 (Colo. 1982); People v. Gouker, 665 P.2d 113 (Colo. 1983).

18-3-303. False imprisonment. (1) Any person who knowingly confines or detains another without the other’s consent and without proper legal authority commits false imprisonment. This section shall not apply to a peace officer acting in good faith within the scope of his or her duties.

(2) False imprisonment is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that false imprisonment is a class 5 felony if:

- (a) The person uses force or threat of force to confine or detain the other person; and
- (b) The person confines or detains the other person for twelve hours or longer.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 422, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-303. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 961, § 14, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section amended, p. 1579, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

The element contained in second degree kidnapping and not contained in false imprisonment, a lesser included offense, is that of transportation of the victim. People v. Arispe, 191 Colo. 555, 555 P.2d 525 (1976).

False imprisonment is not a lesser included offense of attempted second degree kidnapping. People v. Joyce, 68 P.3d 521 (Colo. App. 2002).

Probable cause for arrest prevents liability for false imprisonment. Where police officer had both probable cause to believe that an offense had been committed and that the plaintiff was the person who had committed it, he was not civilly liable for false arrest and false imprisonment. Beyer v. Young, 32 Colo. App. 273, 513 P.2d 1086 (1973).

Acquittal not determinative of lawfulness of arrest. Acquittal of the plaintiff of the charge for which he was arrested and imprisoned is not determinative of the lawfulness of the arrest, as the officer’s right to make an arrest is dependent upon the facts and circumstances in existence at the time of the arrest and not dependent upon the outcome of a subsequent trial. Beyer v. Young, 32 Colo. App. 273, 513 P.2d 1086 (1973).

Applied in People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Smith, 638 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1981); People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

18-3-304. Violation of custody order or order relating to parental responsibilities.

(1) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2.5) of this section, any person, including a natural or foster parent, who, knowing that he or she has no privilege to do so or heedless in that regard, takes or entices any child under the age of eighteen years from the custody or care of the child's parents, guardian, or other lawful custodian or person with parental responsibilities with respect to the child commits a class 5 felony.

(2) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2.5) of this section, any parent or other person who violates an order of any district or juvenile court of this state, granting the custody of a child or parental responsibilities with respect to a child under the age of eighteen years to any person, agency, or institution, with the intent to deprive the lawful custodian or person with parental responsibilities of the custody or care of a child under the age of eighteen years, commits a class 5 felony.

(2.5) Any person who, in the course of committing the offenses described in subsections (1) and (2) of this section, removes a child under the age of eighteen years from this country commits a class 4 felony.

(3) It shall be an affirmative defense either that the offender reasonably believed that his conduct was necessary to preserve the child from danger to his welfare, or that the child, being at the time more than fourteen years old, was taken away at his own instigation without enticement and without purpose to commit a criminal offense with or against the child.

(4) Any criminal action charged pursuant to this section may be tried in either the county where the act is committed or in which the court issuing the orders granting custody or allocating parental responsibilities is located, if such court is within this state.

(5) Repealed.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 422, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-3-304. L. 85: (4) amended, p. 618, § 11, effective July 1. L. 86: (5) added, p. 779, § 1, effective April 3. L. 98: (1) and (2) amended and (2.5) added, p. 1442, § 27, effective July 1; (1), (2), and (4) amended, p. 1403, § 56, effective February 1, 1999.

Editor's note: (1) Subsection (5)(c) provided for the repeal of subsection (5), effective December 2, 1986. (See L. 86, p. 779.)

(2) Amendments made to subsections (1) and (2) by House Bill 98-1160 and House Bill 98-1183 were harmonized, effective February 1, 1999.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "Recovering the Parentally Kidnapped Child", see 12 Colo. Law. 1798 (1983).

Defendant failed to carry his burden of proving this section unconstitutional by being so vague and overbroad that it failed to give fair notice of the criminal activity proscribed and therefore denied due process. People v. Moore, 193 Colo. 81, 562 P.2d 749 (1977).

This section is not unconstitutionally overbroad because a statute preventing the taking of a child in violation of a court order regarding custody is a legitimate exercise of police power. People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

Use of the word "custody" in subsection (2) is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

Use of the words "an order . . . granting custody . . ." in subsection (2), is not limited or qualified by type and court will not read into statute an exception, limitation, or qualifier that its plain language does not suggest, warrant, or mandate; subsection (2) penalizes violations of temporary and permanent custody orders alike and the rule of lenity does not apply. People v. Sorrendino, 37 P.3d 501 (Colo. App. 2001).

Temporary "care and control" provisions of restraining orders issued pursuant to §§ 14-4-102 and 14-10-108 qualify as an order granting custody within the meaning of subsection (2). People v. Sorrendino, 37 P.3d 501 (Colo. App. 2001).

A person awarded permanent custody becomes for all practical purposes "a parent". The legal custodian has a duty to care for a child, providing the basic necessities of life. The legal custodian has such rights to the exclusion of the natural parent. In addition, the general assembly has strengthened the position of a custodian through criminal sanctions for violation of a custody order. A natural parent may be charged criminally for violating a custody order if there is intent to deprive the custodian of custody of a child. U.S. v. Al-Ahmad, 996 F. Supp. 1055 (D. Colo. 1998) (decided prior to the 1998 amendment).

Violation of custody is a separate and distinct offense from second degree kidnapping. People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987); People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

Culpable mental state required by subsection (2) is the intent to deprive the lawful custodian of custody. No "knowing" mental state with respect to the custodial order itself is implied or needs be proven. People v. Metcalf, 926 P.2d 133 (Colo. App. 1996).

Jury instructions adequately encompassed defendant's theory of affirmative defense based on subsection (3). People v. Tippet, 733 P.2d 1183 (Colo. 1987).

Effect of habeas corpus on custody decree. Where the original custody award of a child and a subsequent habeas corpus proceeding are in the same state, but in different courts, although the habeas corpus court would not have jurisdiction to test the wisdom of or to modify the custody decree, it can and should make the writ permanent to enforce the decree and should order the child returned to the one lawfully entitled to custody. Wood v. District Court, 181 Colo. 95, 508 P.2d 134 (1973).

Evidence in support of affirmative defense to violation of custody may be limited to defendant's state of mind at or shortly before the time he took his daughter. People v. Mossman, 17 P.3d 165 (Colo. App. 2000).

The determination of temporal limitations upon the admission of affirmative defense evidence is within the sound discretion of the trial court. People v. Beilke, 232 P.3d 146 (Colo. App. 2009).

Exclusion of evidence of defendant's state of mind led to the incorrect denial of defendant's request for an affirmative defense instruction. People v. Mossman, 17 P.3d 165 (Colo. App. 2000).

Evidence held sufficient. People v. Moore, 193 Colo. 81, 562 P.2d 749 (1977).

Applied in People v. Coyle, 654 P.2d 815 (Colo. 1982).

18-3-305. Enticement of a child. (1) A person commits the crime of enticement of a child if he or she invites or persuades, or attempts to invite or persuade, a child under the age of fifteen years to enter any vehicle, building, room, or secluded place with the intent to commit sexual assault or unlawful sexual contact upon said child. It is not necessary to a prosecution for attempt under this subsection (1) that the child have perceived the defendant's act of enticement.

(2) Enticement of a child is a class 4 felony. It is a class 3 felony if the defendant has a previous conviction for enticement of a child or sexual assault on a child or for conspiracy to commit or the attempted commission of either offense, or if the enticement of a child results in bodily injury to that child.

(3) When a person is convicted, pleads nolo contendere, or receives a deferred sentence for a violation of the provisions of this section and the court knows the person is a current or former employee of a school district in this state or holds a license or authorization pursuant to the provisions of article 60.5 of title 22, C.R.S., the court shall report such fact to the department of education.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 715, § 2, June 7. L. 87: (2) amended, p. 606, § 12, effective July 1. L. 90: (3) added, p. 1025, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) amended, p. 711, § 48, effective July 1; (3) amended, p. 1846, § 30, effective August 2.

ANNOTATION

Attempted sexual assault of any degree sufficient. This statute requires proof only that the defendant acted with the intent to cause the result of a sexual assault of some degree upon a victim younger than fifteen years of age. Failure to complete sexual assault of particular degree is irrelevant. People v. Black, 759 P.2d 746 (Colo. App. 1988).

This section does not preclude a presentence remedy such as a deferred sentence under § 18-1.3-102. Until defendant is sentenced, the Lifetime Supervision Act does not apply. People v. Loveall, 203 P.3d 540 (Colo. App. 2008), aff'd, 231 P.3d 408 (Colo. 2010).

18-3-306. Internet luring of a child. (1) An actor commits internet luring of a child if the actor knowingly communicates over a computer or computer network, telephone network, or data network or by a text message or instant message to a person who the actor knows or believes to be under fifteen years of age and, in that communication or in any subsequent communication by computer, computer network, telephone network, data network, text message, or instant message, describes explicit sexual conduct as defined in section 18-6-403 (2) (e), and, in connection with that description, makes a statement persuading or inviting the person to meet the actor for any purpose, and the actor is more than four years older than the person or than the age the actor believes the person to be.

(2) It shall not be a defense to this section that a meeting did not occur.

(a) and (b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1688, § 8, effective July 1, 2007.)

(3) Internet luring of a child is a class 5 felony; except that luring of a child is a class 4 felony if committed with the intent to meet for the purpose of engaging in sexual exploitation as defined in section 18-6-403 or sexual contact as defined in section 18-3-401.

(4) For purposes of this section, “in connection with” means communications that further, advance, promote, or have a continuity of purpose and may occur before, during, or after the invitation to meet.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 2055, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1) and (2) amended, p. 1688, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2009: (1) amended, (HB 09-1132), ch. 341, p. 1792, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

The statute is not unconstitutionally overbroad. The statute does not suppress a large amount of speech subject to constitutional protection. People v. Boles, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

The statute is not unconstitutionally vague. A person of common intelligence can determine what is prohibited by the statute. People v. Boles, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

The statute does not violate the dormant commerce clause. Since the statute regulates conduct by adults who send sexually explicit messages that endanger the welfare of minors, there is no legitimate commerce that would be limited by the statute. People v. Boles, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

The statute as applied to defendant was not unconstitutional. The record contains numerous sexually explicit messages from the defendant that were obscene in nature. People v. Boles, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

PART 4

UNLAWFUL SEXUAL BEHAVIOR

Editor’s note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971, and this part 4 was subsequently repealed and reenacted in 1975, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this part 4 prior to 1975, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume and the editor’s note following the title heading. Former C.R.S. section numbers prior to 1975 are shown in editor’s notes following those sections that were relocated.

Cross references: For introduction of evidence of similar acts or transactions by a defendant prosecuted pursuant to this part 4, see § 16-10-301.

18-3-401. Definitions. As used in this part 4, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Actor” means the person accused of a sexual offense pursuant to this part 4.

(1.5) “Consent” means cooperation in act or attitude pursuant to an exercise of free will and with knowledge of the nature of the act. A current or previous relationship shall not be sufficient to constitute consent under the provisions of this part 4. Submission under the influence of fear shall not constitute consent. Nothing in this definition shall be construed to affect the admissibility of evidence or the burden of proof in regard to the issue of consent under this part 4.

(1.7) “Diagnostic test” means a human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) screening test followed by a supplemental HIV test for confirmation in those instances when the HIV screening test is repeatedly reactive.

(2) "Intimate parts" means the external genitalia or the perineum or the anus or the buttocks or the pubes or the breast of any person.

(2.5) "Pattern of sexual abuse" means the commission of two or more incidents of sexual contact involving a child when such offenses are committed by an actor upon the same victim.

(3) "Physically helpless" means unconscious, asleep, or otherwise unable to indicate willingness to act.

(3.5) One in a "position of trust" includes, but is not limited to, any person who is a parent or acting in the place of a parent and charged with any of a parent's rights, duties, or responsibilities concerning a child, including a guardian or someone otherwise responsible for the general supervision of a child's welfare, or a person who is charged with any duty or responsibility for the health, education, welfare, or supervision of a child, including foster care, child care, family care, or institutional care, either independently or through another, no matter how brief, at the time of an unlawful act.

(4) "Sexual contact" means the knowing touching of the victim's intimate parts by the actor, or of the actor's intimate parts by the victim, or the knowing touching of the clothing covering the immediate area of the victim's or actor's intimate parts if that sexual contact is for the purposes of sexual arousal, gratification, or abuse.

(5) "Sexual intrusion" means any intrusion, however slight, by any object or any part of a person's body, except the mouth, tongue, or penis, into the genital or anal opening of another person's body if that sexual intrusion can reasonably be construed as being for the purposes of sexual arousal, gratification, or abuse.

(6) "Sexual penetration" means sexual intercourse, cunnilingus, fellatio, analingus, or anal intercourse. Emission need not be proved as an element of any sexual penetration. Any penetration, however slight, is sufficient to complete the crime.

(7) "Victim" means the person alleging to have been subjected to a criminal sexual assault.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 627, § 1, effective July 1. L. 83: (4) amended, p. 697, § 1, effective March 3; (3.5) added, p. 693, § 1, effective June 15. L. 86: (3.5) amended, p. 770, § 6 effective July 1. L. 88: (2) amended, p. 712, § 17, effective July 1. L. 89: (2.5) added, p. 903, § 1, effective June 1. L. 90: (3.5) amended, p. 1028, § 15, effective July 1. L. 92: (1.5) added, p. 322, § 3, effective July 1. L. 93: (2) and (4) amended, p. 1731, § 15, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1.7) added, p. 452, § 5, effective April 24. L. 2003: (1) amended, p. 1432, § 22, effective April 29.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-3-409 as it existed prior to 1975.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note discussing changes in terminology and classification of offenses of part 4 of this article, and constitutional issues raised thereunder, see 53 Den. L.J. 349 (1976).

Statute not void for vagueness due to definition of "position of trust", since a person of ordinary intelligence could readily understand its meaning and application. People v. Duncan, 33 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant charged under former section where conduct occurred prior to effective time of amendatory section. Where the criminal conduct charged in a prosecution for rape occurred prior to 3:50 p.m., July 1, 1975, the time the governor signed the bill amending this section and therefore the effective time of the amendment, the defendant was properly charged with rape under former § 18-3-401. People v. Glenn, 200 Colo. 416, 615 P.2d 700 (1980).

Where assault established by evidence, intent to commit rape no defense. Where all the elements of the crime charged (attempt to commit third degree sexual assault) were established by the evidence, the fact that the defendant's actions might also be construed as evincing an intent to commit rape did not constitute a defense to the charge. People v. DeLeon, 44 Colo. App. 146, 613 P.2d 639 (1980).

Scientific evidence to support the victim's testimony is not a legal prerequisite to a jury's finding that the defendant is guilty of unlawful sexual behavior. People v. Graham, 678 P.2d 1043 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1216, 104 S. Ct. 2660, 81 L. Ed.2d 366 (1984).

Definition of "sexual contact" construed. People v. Myers, 714 P.2d 513 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. West, 724 P.2d 623 (Colo. 1986); People in Interest of J.A., 733 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1987).

Definition of the term "sexual contact" is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. West, 724 P.2d 623 (Colo. 1986); People in the Interest of J.A., 733 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1987); People v. Jensen, 747 P.2d 1247 (Colo. 1987).

The court interpreted "any sexual contact" as an unlimited, nonrestrictive phrase that generally encompasses a multitude of types of sexual contacts. People v. Woellhaf, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

The distinction of numerous "intimate parts" merely demarcates different intimate parts of the human anatomy and has no effect on the scope of conduct the general assembly sought to criminalize. People v. Woellhaf, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

Ejaculation of semen onto clothing covering another person's intimate parts may constitute "touching" for purposes of establishing "sexual contact". People v. Vinson, 42 P.3d 86 (Colo. App. 2002).

"Consent" and the affirmative defense of consent discussed in People v. Williams, 899 P.2d 306 (Colo. App. 1995).

Jury instruction on "consent" properly provided to jury. The instruction substantially tracked the language of this section. The slight variance from the statute was only to clarify properly that the definition was applicable to first degree sexual assault. The definition was important to explain to the jury the specialized meaning of "consent" in the context of sexual assault. People v. Pahlavan, 83 P.3d 1138 (Colo. App. 2003).

The term "pattern of sexual abuse" is clearly and unambiguously defined in this section and, therefore, the sentencing enhancement provision of § 18-3-405 (2)(c) which incorporates that term is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Longoria, 862 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1993).

The phrase "two or more incidents of sexual contact" in the definition of "pattern of sexual abuse" means that the sexual contacts must occur during distinct episodes of sexual assault and be separated by time or an intervening event. People v. Woellhaf, 87 P.3d 142 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

The term "victim" means "intended victim" in the context of a conviction for attempted sexual assault. People v. Buerge, 240 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2009).

A defendant can be charged with one pattern count for each underlying substantive count. People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Evidence sufficient to establish victim was "physically helpless". Record demonstrated that there was sufficient evidence from which the jury could find that the victim was unable to indicate a willingness to act and therefore "physically helpless" within the statutory definition of that term. There was testimony that the victim was virtually unable to converse and required total care; that she needed assistance in everything she did; that while she could at times respond to a simple yes-or-no question, her answers could be nonsensical or inaccurate; that she was physically incapable of protecting herself against any attack; that she was in a locked facility for her own protection, because she would otherwise wander away; and that the Alzheimer's disease affected her both mentally and physically. People v. Klausner, 74 P.3d 421 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court committed reversible error by refusing defendants' request to instruct the jury on the affirmative defense of consent where the evidence bearing on the possible existence of consent, while not strong, at least satisfied the "scintilla" standard required for an instruction on an affirmative defense. People v. Cruz, 903 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1995).

Because the alleged victim's alleged consent would have "negative[d] an element of the [sexual assault] offense", the trial court was required to instruct the jury on the affirmative defense of consent. People v. Cruz, 903 P.2d 1198 (Colo. App. 1995).

A stepparent is in a position of trust for purposes of this section. People v. Brown, 749 P.2d 436 (Colo. App. 1987); People v. Brown, 761 P.2d 261 (Colo. App. 1988).

Jury could conclude that defendant was "in a position of trust" relative to the victim within the meaning of the applicable statute, where defendant lived in the same residence with the victim and her family and contributed to the household income, the victim spent hours alone with the defendant in his room, the victim was the only child the defendant allowed in his room, and neither the victim's mother nor any other individual intervened during the time that the victim was alone in the defendant's room. People v. Luman, 994 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1999) (decided prior to 1990 amendment).

Upon taking the victim to defendant's home where the two of them were to be alone, defendant assumed responsibility for the welfare and supervision of the child both en route and in the home. People v. Duncan, 33 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant in "position of trust" even though he was not performing a specific supervisory duty at the time of the unlawful act. Where victim was pastor's daughter and defendant previously taught victim in Sunday school, defendant and his wife babysat for victim and her sister on several occasions, defendant joined victim's family often for dinner, defendant helped victim and her sisters with their school work, defendant chaperoned church trip for victim, and victim's parents allowed victim to go to defendant's house by herself to ride horses, defendant assumed a position of trust through an ongoing and continuous supervisory relationship with victim. Pellman v. People, 252 P.3d 1122 (Colo. 2011).

A "position of trust" for purposes of § 18-3-405.3 and subsection (3.5) of this section may be a supervisory position that exists for a "brief" period—a matter of hours or days—or it may extend over a long relationship. Defendant's discrete acts of supervision were the product of the general position of trust that defendant assumed in relation to victim. Pellman v. People, 252 P.3d 1122 (Colo. 2011).

Any deficiency in instructions with respect to definition of sexual contact was harmless error when evidence concerning defendant's touching of victim could not reasonably be construed as being for any purpose other than sexual arousal, gratification, or abuse. People in Interest of B.D.S., 739 P.2d 902 (Colo. App. 1987).

Trial court properly refused to instruct jury concerning consent as an affirmative defense in sexual assault case. Affirmative defense not warranted where one victim testified that she did not resist or cry out when defendant assaulted her and another testified that her failure to resist or cry out was motivated by fear and that her submission was induced by fear. People v. Braley, 879 P.2d 410 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in People v. Osborn, 42 Colo. App. 376, 599 P.2d 937 (1979); People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980); People v. Opson, 632 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Reynolds, 638 P.2d 43 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mack, 638 P.2d 257 (Colo. 1981); People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981); People v. Salazar, 648 P.2d 157 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-3-402. Sexual assault. (1) Any actor who knowingly inflicts sexual intrusion or sexual penetration on a victim commits sexual assault if:

(a) The actor causes submission of the victim by means of sufficient consequence reasonably calculated to cause submission against the victim's will; or

(b) The actor knows that the victim is incapable of appraising the nature of the victim's conduct; or

(c) The actor knows that the victim submits erroneously, believing the actor to be the victim's spouse; or

(d) At the time of the commission of the act, the victim is less than fifteen years of age and the actor is at least four years older than the victim and is not the spouse of the victim; or

(e) At the time of the commission of the act, the victim is at least fifteen years of age but less than seventeen years of age and the actor is at least ten years older than the victim and is not the spouse of the victim; or

(f) The victim is in custody of law or detained in a hospital or other institution and the actor has supervisory or disciplinary authority over the victim and uses this position of authority to coerce the victim to submit, unless the act is incident to a lawful search; or

(g) The actor, while purporting to offer a medical service, engages in treatment or examination of a victim for other than a bona fide medical purpose or in a manner substantially inconsistent with reasonable medical practices; or

(h) The victim is physically helpless and the actor knows the victim is physically helpless and the victim has not consented.

(2) Sexual assault is a class 4 felony, except as provided in subsections (3), (3.5), (4), and (5) of this section.

(3) If committed under the circumstances of paragraph (e) of subsection (1) of this section, sexual assault is a class 1 misdemeanor and is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(3.5) Sexual assault is a class 3 felony if committed under the circumstances described in paragraph (h) of subsection (1) of this section.

(4) Sexual assault is a class 3 felony if it is attended by any one or more of the following circumstances:

(a) The actor causes submission of the victim through the actual application of physical force or physical violence; or

(b) The actor causes submission of the victim by threat of imminent death, serious bodily injury, extreme pain, or kidnapping, to be inflicted on anyone, and the victim believes that the actor has the present ability to execute these threats; or

(c) The actor causes submission of the victim by threatening to retaliate in the future against the victim, or any other person, and the victim reasonably believes that the actor will execute this threat. As used in this paragraph (c), “to retaliate” includes threats of kidnapping, death, serious bodily injury, or extreme pain; or

(d) The actor has substantially impaired the victim’s power to appraise or control the victim’s conduct by employing, without the victim’s consent, any drug, intoxicant, or other means for the purpose of causing submission.

(e) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2002, p. 1578, § 2, effective July 1, 2002.)

(5) (a) Sexual assault is a class 2 felony if any one or more of the following circumstances exist:

(I) In the commission of the sexual assault, the actor is physically aided or abetted by one or more other persons; or

(II) The victim suffers serious bodily injury; or

(III) The actor is armed with a deadly weapon or an article used or fashioned in a manner to cause a person to reasonably believe that the article is a deadly weapon or represents verbally or otherwise that the actor is armed with a deadly weapon and uses the deadly weapon, article, or representation to cause submission of the victim.

(b) (I) If a defendant is convicted of sexual assault pursuant to this subsection (5), the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with section 18-1.3-401 (8) (e). A person convicted solely of sexual assault pursuant to this subsection (5) shall not be sentenced under the crime of violence provisions of section 18-1.3-406 (2). Any sentence for a conviction under this subsection (5) shall be consecutive to any sentence for a conviction for a crime of violence under section 18-1.3-406.

(II) The provisions of this paragraph (b) shall apply to offenses committed prior to November 1, 1998.

(6) Any person convicted of felony sexual assault committed on or after November 1, 1998, under any of the circumstances described in this section shall be sentenced in accordance with the provisions of part 10 of article 1.3 of this title.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 628, § 1, effective July 1. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 962, § 15, effective July 1. L. 83: IP(1) amended, p. 698, § 1, effective July 1. L. 85: (2) R&RE and (3) and (4) amended, pp. 666, 667, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 95: (4) amended, p. 1252, § 9, effective July 1. L. 98: (4) amended, p. 1293, § 13, effective November 1. L. 2000: Entire section R&RE, p. 698, § 18, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1)(g), (2), and (4)(e) amended and (1)(h) and (3.5) added, p. 1578, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1; (5)(b)(I) and (6) amended, p. 1512, § 189, effective October 1. L. 2004: (3) and (6) amended, p. 635, § 5, effective August 4.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 18-3-401 as it existed prior to 1975.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (5)(b)(I) and (6), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Indictment or Information.
 - C. Evidence.
 - D. Jury.
 - E. Instructions.
- IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, “Criminality of Voluntary Sexual Acts in Colorado”, see 40 U.

Colo. L. Rev. 268 (1968). For article, “Reform Rape Legislation: A New Standard of Sexual Responsibility”, see 49 U. Colo. L. Rev. 185 (1978). For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For comment, “Warning Bell: The Inherent Difficulties of Responding to Student-on-Student Sexual Harassment in Colorado Middle Schools”, see 76 U. Colo. L. Rev. 813 (2005).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-3-402 is similar to § 18-3-402 as it existed prior to its 2000 repeal and reenactment, and former § 18-3-402 is similar to former § 18-3-401, as it existed prior to the 1975 revision of this part, and § 40-2-25, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is not unconstitutionally vague where it sets out the act, the requisite mental state, and the content of the threat used to force the victim's submission, and each of these elements is defined. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

This section does not violate equal protection. Putting a victim of sexual assault in fear — and in danger — of losing life and limb is a graver and more morally reprehensible act than subjecting the victim to lesser threats. The two kinds of threats are constitutionally distinguishable. Statutes proscribing acts based on this distinction do not violate equal protection. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

Prohibition against double punishment for same criminal act is not violated where a defendant is found guilty of first degree kidnapping and first degree sexual assault for the same criminal episode. People v. Molina, 41 Colo. App. 128, 584 P.2d 634 (1978).

Application of 2008 Colorado sex offender management board handbook not ex post facto violation in regard to pre-2008 misdemeanor sexual assault because sexually violent predator statute, not the handbook, applied to defendant's case. Said statute clearly covered defendant's misdemeanor sexual assault for the time the crime was committed. People v. Tuffo, 209 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2009).

It is clear that the general assembly intended to impose a more severe punishment in situations in which more than one person commits the sexual assault. People v. Osborne, 973 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1998).

Rape and incest were separate and distinct crimes with certain different elements essential to their proof; either or both of these crimes may be charged in an appropriate factual situation. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

Before July 1, 1977, "knowingly" was not statutory element of first degree sexual assault, and it was not necessary, therefore, to include that factor in the definition of the crime, so long as the general intent factor was covered elsewhere in the instruction. People v. Mattas, 44 Colo. App. 139, 618 P.2d 675 (1980), aff'd, 645 P.2d 254 (Colo. 1982).

Merger doctrine inapplicable to convictions for kidnapping, assault, and robbery. The merger doctrine does not apply to a single transaction resulting in convictions under § 18-3-301 (1)(a), this section, and § 18-4-301 (1). People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

For lesser included offense of crime of rape, see People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959); People v. Barger, 191 Colo. 152, 550 P.2d 1281 (1976); People v. Hansen, 191 Colo. 175, 551 P.2d 710 (1976).

Section 18-3-409 and this section are severable so that even if the former were invalidated, the latter would still be capable of enforcement. People v. Brown, 632 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1981).

Individuals convicted of misdemeanor sexual assaults in violation of subsection (1)(e) should not be excluded from designation as sexually violent predators. People v. Tuffo, 209 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2009).

Because sexually violent predator statute, § 18-3-414.5, plainly covers misdemeanor sexual assault, court need not consider any agency publications. People v. Tuffo, 209 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2009).

Even if the defendant's 18-year-old wife could not be prosecuted for having sex with a 15-year-old girl, the defendant could still be prosecuted for photographing his wife with the girl pursuant to § 18-6-403. People v. Campbell, 94 P.3d 1186 (Colo. App. 2004).

Victim's submission to assault insufficient concession for first degree kidnapping. Proof of the victim's submission to a sexual assault is not sufficient per se to establish the concession required for first degree kidnapping. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Voluntary intoxication not defense. The mental culpability requirement of both second degree kidnapping and first degree sexual assault is "knowingly"; therefore, they are, by statutory definition, general intent crimes and voluntary intoxication is not a defense to either crime. People v. Vigil, 43 Colo. App. 121, 602 P.2d 884 (1979).

For constitutionality of former statute relating to deviate sexual intercourse by force or its equivalent, see People v. Beaver, 190 Colo. 554, 549 P.2d 1315 (1976).

For lesser included offense of former crime of deviate sexual intercourse by force or its equivalent, see People v. Barger, 191 Colo. 152, 550 P.2d 1281 (1976).

For cases construing former statute relating to deviate sexual intercourse by force or its equivalent, see Martin v. People, 114 Colo. 120, 162 P.2d 597 (1945); Huerta v. People, 168 Colo. 276, 450 P.2d 648 (1969); White v. People, 177 Colo. 386, 494 P.2d 585 (1972).

The offenses of first and second degree sexual assault are mutually exclusive. Second degree sexual assault is not a lesser included offense of the crime of first degree sexual assault. People v. Shields, 822 P.2d 15 (Colo. 1991) (reversing People v. Silburn, 807 P.2d 1167 (Colo. App. 1990)).

There is no merger between what was formerly first degree sexual assault and second degree assault even if both involved the proof of serious bodily injury. Although the infliction of serious bodily injury for purposes of the sexual assault statute raised the class of felony for which one could be convicted, it was not an element of the offense itself. People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001).

The aggravators found in subsection (4) apply to attempted sexual assaults in addition to completed sexual assaults. People v. King, 151 P.3d 594 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 195 Colo. 1, 575 P.2d 405 (1978); People v. Reynolds, 195 Colo. 386, 578 P.2d 647 (1978); People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978); People v. Blalock, 197 Colo. 320, 592 P.2d 406 (1979); People v. Jacobs, 198 Colo. 75, 596 P.2d 1187 (1979); People v. Mikkleson, 42 Colo. App. 77, 593 P.2d 975 (1979); People v. Osborn, 42 Colo. App. 376, 599 P.2d 937 (1979); People v. DeLeon, 44 Colo. App. 126, 613 P.2d 639 (1980); People v. Frysig, 628 P.2d 1004 (Colo. 1981); People v. Williams, 628 P.2d 1011 (Colo. 1981); People v. Francis, 630 P.2d 82 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jordan, 630 P.2d 613 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Anderson, 637 P.2d 354 (Colo. 1981); People v. Smith, 638 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mack, 638 P.2d 257 (Colo. 1981); People v. Evans, 630 P.2d 94 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Crespin, 631 P.2d 1144 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Hamling, 634 P.2d 1023 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Sharpless, 635 P.2d 896 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Flowers, 644 P.2d 916 (Colo. 1982); People v. Constant, 645 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1982); People v. Phillips, 652 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1982); People v. White, 656 P.2d 690 (Colo. 1983); People v. Clark, 662 P.2d 1100 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983); People v. District Court, 663 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1983); People v. Brandt, 664 P.2d 712 (Colo. 1983); People v. Vigil, 718 P.2d 496 (Colo. 1986).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

Victim must show resistance or that resistance was overcome by fear. To constitute the crime of rape there must be the utmost reluctance and resistance on the part of the female complainant, or her will must be overcome by fear and terror so extreme as to preclude resistance. Bigcraft v. People, 30 Colo. 298, 70 P. 417 (1902).

This section recognizes the offense even though there is no actual resistance where the female person is prevented from resistance by threats of immediate and great bodily harm, accompanied by apparent power of execution. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959).

Acts and circumstances may obviate the necessity of proof of physical resistance, as where they show fear making it impossible, or conditions making it useless. Cortez v. People, 155 Colo. 317, 394 P.2d 346 (1964).

Proof of sexual intrusion is sufficient to support a conviction for first degree sexual assault. People v. Lankford, 819 P.2d 520 (Colo. App. 1991).

Sexual intercourse for the purposes of sexual assault does not include simulated intercourse. People v. Jurado, 30 P.3d 769 (Colo. App. 2001).

Where the jury is properly instructed as to the elements of the offense and the term "knowingly," the jury should properly focus on whether the defendant knowingly caused submission of the victim through the application of physical force or violence. The defendant's awareness of the victim's nonconsent is neither an element of the offense nor a topic for argument to the jury. People v. Dunton, 881 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1994).

Nothing in the plain language of subsection (1)(b) suggests that the section is limited to cases involving victims who suffer from a mental infirmity. People v. Platt, 170 P.3d 802 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 201 P.3d 545 (Colo. 2009).

The coexistence of subsections (1)(b) and (1)(h) represents a reasoned legislative determination that, depending on the facts of a particular case, a victim who is partially asleep and incapable of appraising the nature of his or her own conduct may not necessarily be physically "unable to indicate willingness to act." People v. Platt, 170 P.3d 802 (Colo. App. 2007), aff'd, 201 P.3d 545 (Colo. 2009).

Proof of defendant's awareness of nonconsent is not necessary under this section, except under the circumstances described in subsection (1)(e). In all other circumstances, the prohibited conduct by its very nature negates the existence of the victim's consent. Dunton v. People, 898 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1995); Platt v. People, 201 P.3d 545 (Colo. 2009).

And it is not error for trial court to refuse jury instruction on the affirmative defense of consent where the statute equates the victim's nonconsent with proof that defendant had caused the victim's submission by means "of sufficient consequence reasonably calculated to cause submission against the victim's will". In such case, the jury can only convict a defendant after concluding that the prosecution has proved the victim's lack of consent beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Martinez, 36 P.3d 154 (Colo. App. 2001).

Submission induced by fear of great bodily harm does not constitute consent, especially where the threats are accompanied by a demonstration of actual force. Cortez v. People, 155 Colo. 317, 394 P.2d 346 (1964).

Principles of complicity apply to sexual assault in the first degree such that, if the actor or an accomplice is armed with and uses a deadly weapon, then both may be found to have committed a class 2 felony. People v. Walford, 716 P.2d 137 (Colo. App. 1985).

Sexual assault is not a lesser included offense of, and therefore not merged into, second-degree kidnapping involving sexual assault. People v. Henderson, 810 P.2d 1058 (Colo. 1991); People v. McKnight, 813 P.2d 331 (Colo. 1991); People v. Johnson, 815 P.2d 427 (Colo. 1991); People v. Martinez, 32 P.3d 520 (Colo. App. 2001).

For first degree assault to be elevated from a class 3 felony to a class 2 felony, there must be more than one person involved in the sexual assault. People v. Osborne, 973 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1998).

Evidence insufficient to support jury's determination that defendant physically aided or abetted in the commission of the sexual assault. People v. Osborne, 973 P.2d 666 (Colo. App. 1998).

The term "extreme pain" is one of ordinary and not technical usage. People v. Albo, 195 Colo. 102, 575 P.2d 427 (1978).

Extreme pain measure of criminal conduct. The term "extreme pain" as used in subsection (1)(b) of this section is a measure of criminal conduct and a gauge for determining whether the threat was the cause for the victim's submission; it is not so vague or overbroad as to render the section unconstitutional. People v. Albo, 195 Colo. 102, 575 P.2d 427 (1978).

Evidence that defendant's body weight caused victim to submit against his or her will is sufficient to establish probable cause to believe that defendant applied the physical force required under subsection (4)(a). Physical force means force applied to the body and physical violence means unjust or unwarranted exercise of physical force. These definitions do not require an extra application of force other than any force applied to the body, but the physical force or physical violence must cause the victim to submit to sexual intrusion or sexual penetration. People v. Keene, 226 P.3d 1140 (Colo. App. 2009).

Element of submission through actual application of physical force or physical violence is applied in People v. Cole, 926 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1996).

Term "attended" in subsection (3) is applied in People v. Cole, 926 P.2d 164 (Colo. App. 1996).

Threats of future retaliation not made until after the assault were insufficient to establish the class 3 felony aggravator under subsection (4)(c). People v. Baker, 178 P.3d 1225 (Colo. App. 2007).

Unlawful sexual contact is a lesser included offense of sexual assault based on sexual intrusion. Proof of sexual intrusion requires proof of sexual contact with a person's intimate parts satisfying the strict elements test, and unlawful sexual contact involves less serious injury than sexual intrusion and lesser culpability than sexual assault. People v. Loyas, 259 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2010).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. In General.

Where acts were continuous people may be compelled to rely on certain act. Where in a prosecution under this section of a male for having carnal knowledge of an unmarried female, it appearing that the illicit intercourse was continuous, the people may on motion be compelled to select the occasion upon which they will demand a conviction, and this selection must be made before the accused is required to proceed to his defense. The prosecutor is not required to select any specific date, but must individualize a certain act upon which he will rely. Laycock v. People, 66 Colo. 441, 182 P. 880 (1919).

Where there was evidence of several different acts committed at different times, it was error to refuse to require the prosecuting attorney to elect upon which offense he would rely for a conviction. Schuetz v. People, 33 Colo. 325, 80 P. 890 (1905).

On the trial of a statutory rape case, election of the district attorney to rely upon a particular offense committed on or about a certain date, at the conclusion of the state's case and before the beginning of the case for the defense, held not to violate the rule in Laycock v. People (66 Colo. 441, 182 P. 880 (1919)). Wills v. People, 100 Colo. 127, 66 P.2d 329 (1937).

Leading questions addressed to prosecuting witness 14 years of age on direct examination may be permitted in the discretion of the trial court, and the supreme court will not reverse an action on such ground unless it clearly appears that defendant was denied a fair trial. Ewing v. People, 87 Colo. 6, 284 P. 341 (1930).

Discretionary power of court to permit district attorney to reopen case. Permission to the district attorney in a prosecution for rape to reopen his case for the purpose of showing the age of defendant is properly granted by the court as within its discretionary powers. Monchego v. People, 105 Colo. 486, 99 P.2d 193 (1940).

B. Indictment or Information.

Information need not follow exact language of section. It is sufficient that the offense be charged in language from which the nature of it may be readily understood by the accused and the jury. Tracy v. People, 65 Colo. 226, 176 P. 280 (1918); Sarno v. People, 74 Colo. 528, 223 P. 41 (1924).

One count may contain different ways crime committed. It is proper in one count of an information to charge in all ways in which a crime may be committed by the use of the word "and" even where the statute uses "or". Cortez v. People, 155 Colo. 317, 394 P.2d 346 (1964).

Information which contained substantially same language as this section not defective as description of charges permitted defendant to adequately defend himself and ensured defendant would not be prosecuted again for same offense. People v. Mogul, 812 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1991).

C. Evidence.

Law reviews. For comment, "Expert Testimony on Rape Trauma Syndrome in Colorado: Broadening Admissibility to Address the Question of Consent in Sexual Assault Prosecutions", see 61 U. Colo. L. Rev. 833 (1990).

Evidence necessary to prove act. Though it is true that the law does not require the female's statement of actual penetration, nevertheless, some evidence other than an inference is essential to prove the act. Generally, it is held that uncorroborated evidence by the prosecution must be clear and convincing or that it should be scrutinized carefully. Martinez v. People, 160 Colo. 534, 422 P.2d 44 (1966).

When the evidence of defendant's guilt was overwhelming and the issue of whether the defendant acted knowingly was not contested at trial, the trial court's error in instructing the jury on the meaning of "knowingly" is not plain error in defendant's conviction for sexual assault in the first degree. Espinoza v. People, 712 P.2d 476 (Colo. 1985).

Circumstances tending to discredit prosecutrix. The failure of the prosecutrix to avail herself of assistance when at hand, to report the assault at the earliest possible moment, and to call immediate attention to the injuries received and afterwards complained of, are circumstances tending to discredit the testimony of the party alleged to have been outraged. Bueno v. People, 1 Colo. App. 232, 28 P. 248 (1891).

For complaint of prosecutrix as evidence, see Donaldson v. People, 33 Colo. 333, 80 P. 906 (1905).

Corroborative testimony of prompt complaint by an alleged victim is properly admitted in a rape case, but even that exception is restricted to the mere fact of complaint, and the details of the occurrence as related to an investigating officer by a prosecutrix and his opinions as to the seriousness of the charge and the difficulties of prosecution as told to the prosecutrix are never admissible in evidence. People v. Montague, 181 Colo. 143, 508 P.2d 388 (1973).

A complaint about a sexual assault, made soon after its occurrence, can constitute corroboration of the victim's testimony. People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980).

In sexual assault cases, testimony tending to prove the promptness of the victim's complaint to the police is admissible corroboration evidence. People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

An eleven-year-old victim's complaint to her nine-year-old sister on the day immediately following a sexual assault by their father was sufficient to corroborate the victim's testimony to the effect that sexual penetration had occurred during the assault. People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980).

Evidence that the victim of a sexual assault failed to make a complaint soon after the crime is admissible as a circumstance which tends to discredit that person's testimony. People v. Oliver, 665 P.2d 152 (Colo. App. 1983).

Testimony of officer as to victim's credibility improper. When a police officer who investigates a rape complaint made by a prosecutrix, is permitted to testify as to statements he made to her about his opinions on the seriousness and difficulties experienced by a prosecutrix in rape prosecutions, there is error because the testimony improperly lends credibility to the testimony of the prosecuting witness. People v. Montague, 181 Colo. 143, 508 P.2d 388 (1973).

Permissible police testimony is restricted to the mere fact of the victim's complaint and may not encompass the details related to the investigating officer. People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982).

Testimony of prosecutrix' physical handicap is admissible on issue of her ability to resist forcible attack, notwithstanding contention that such testimony is offered solely to invoke sympathy. People v. Chavez, 179 Colo. 316, 500 P.2d 365 (1972).

Evidence as to day of offense. Under an information charging the crime of rape to have been committed on a certain day, evidence is admissible of any rape committed by defendant on the prosecuting witness prior to the filing of the information and within the statute of limitations. Schuetz v. People, 33 Colo. 325, 80 P. 890 (1905).

Approximate date sufficient where there is evidence of several offenses. In a prosecution for rape, there being evidence of the commission of several offenses, the district attorney is not required to fix a definite date of the occurrence upon which he relies for a conviction, the time being alleged as "on or about" a certain date. The approximate date is sufficient, the specific occasion being definitely identified. Wills v. People, 100 Colo. 127, 66 P.2d 329 (1937).

Birth of child is sufficient to establish sexual intercourse. In a prosecution for rape, the fact that prosecutrix gave birth to a child was sufficient evidence to establish sexual intercourse. Monchego v. People, 105 Colo. 486, 99 P.2d 193 (1940).

Evidence of abortion not error. Where defendant convicted of statutory rape contends admission of doctor's testimony to prosecutrix' therapeutic abortion is error, court will not consider such for first time on appeal. People v. Chavez, 179 Colo. 316, 500 P.2d 365 (1972).

Evidence of intercourse insufficient. It cannot be inferred in law that because defendant intended to rape his victim or that her clothes were torn that an act of sexual intercourse took place or that there was any penetration. The latter is mere conjecture and does not rise to the dignity of legal proof. Martinez v. People, 160 Colo. 534, 422 P.2d 44 (1966).

Evidence sufficient to support jury's conclusion that defendant used deadly weapon to force victim to submit to first-degree sexual assault. People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986).

Other crimes related to force and were properly admitted. Where evidence of kidnapping, assault, and the forced commission of another sexual act tended to prove the res gestae and the force element of rape, it was not error to admit such evidence of other crimes because they were not wholly independent of the offense charged. White v. People, 177 Colo. 386, 494 P.2d 585 (1972).

Aiding or abetting does not require physical assistance during the actual act of penetration. People v. Beigel, 646 P.2d 948 (Colo. App. 1982).

Evidence sufficient to support a general verdict based upon the alternative methods of committing sexual assault in the first degree, including the third alternative of causing the victim's submission with threats of future retaliation. James v. People, 727 P.2d 850 (Colo. 1986).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction. Harlan v. People, 32 Colo. 397, 76 P. 792 (1904); Boegel v. People, 95 Colo. 319, 35 P. 2d 855 (1934); Davis v. People, 112 Colo. 452, 150 P.2d 67 (1944); Armstead v. People, 168 Colo. 485, 452 P.2d 8 (1969); People v. Duran, Jr., 179 Colo. 129, 498 P.2d 937 (1972); Yescas v. People, 197 Colo. 379, 593, P.2d 358 (1979); People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986); People v. Mogul, 812 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1991).

Evidence to support multiple convictions. Evidence of three separate and distinct incidents of sexual assault which occurred in three different ways, each in a separate time period, is sufficient to support a finding of guilty on three separate counts under this section. People v. Saars, 196 Colo. 294, 584 P.2d 622 (1978).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction. A conviction for rape based solely upon the evidence of the prosecuting witness, who had passed the age of consent at the time of the alleged crime, where there was no evidence as to what force was used or what resistance was made, and no evidence that the consent of the prosecuting witness was obtained or her resistance prevented by any threat of defendant or fear of violence at his hands, the only threat testified to being a threat to kill her and the rest of the family if she told of the acts, evidence was insufficient to support conviction. Bigcraft v. People, 30 Colo. 298, 70 P. 417 (1902).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction as a matter of law under the "physically aided and abetted" standard of subsection (3)(a). People v. Higa, 735 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1987).

There was sufficient evidence of the required element of penetration beyond a reasonable doubt where the victim testified to the occurrence of penetration and the codefendant pleaded guilty to a crime involving penetration, admitted intrusion with his fingers, and admitted he and the defendant "raped" the victim. People v. Lankford, 819 P.2d 520 (Colo. App. 1991).

The victim's testimony describing soreness, the counselor's testimony that both defendant and the victim were naked from the waist down, and the defendant's statement that "it was consensual" were sufficient circumstantial evidence to prove penetration occurred. People v. Hoskay, 87 P.3d 194 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court did not err in providing a dictionary definition of the term "submission" which did not include physical force or violence in response to a jury inquiry, where the jury was explicitly instructed that one of the elements of first degree sexual assault was that the defendant caused the victim's submission through the actual application of physical force or physical violence. People v. Cruz, 923 P.2d 311 (Colo. App. 1996).

D. Jury.

Evidence determines if lesser offense is submitted to jury. It does not follow from the conclusion that the aggravated assault need not be specifically pleaded that a court is invariably required to submit the lesser included crime to the jury. There remains the question whether the evidence justifies this action. Oftentimes the evidence precludes submission even when the offense is charged in a separate count, and in some cases the evidence is such that the jury must determine the case on the greater offense and that alone. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959).

Where there was uncontroverted evidence that the sexual penetration was obtained by means of physical force, it was not error for the trial court to refuse to instruct the jury on the lesser offense of second degree sexual assault. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 1, 612 P.2d 1099 (1980).

Where the evidence is sufficient to support a charge of assault with intent to commit rape, and such as to justify a simultaneous acquittal of the charge of rape, refusal of a trial court to submit a verdict and instruction on assault with intent to commit rape is error. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959).

Failure of the court to construct an assault with intent to commit rape as a lesser included offense of forcible rape does not affect substantial rights of defendant, and is therefore not cognizable as plain error where defendant was convicted of statutory rape and at trial had denied both assault and commission of act itself. People v. Chavez, 179 Colo. 316, 500 P.2d 365 (1972).

Jury to evaluate threat. It is for the jury to decide the magnitude of the threat and to evaluate the victim's belief of the defendant's ability at the time the threats were made to carry them out. People v. Thatcher, 638 P.2d 760 (Colo. 1981).

E. Instructions.

"Force" requires no further definition. The trial court does not commit reversible error by failing to define "force" in its instructions. An instruction which contains the word "force", with no further definition, is written in plain understandable English. People v. Johnson, 671 P.2d 1017 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Powell, 716 P.2d 1096 (Colo. 1986).

The court properly defined "physical force" and "physical violence" in its instructions. People v. Holwuttel, 155 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2006).

Instructions as to corroboration. Instruction to the effect that testimony of prosecutrix must be corroborated by other evidence, such as evidence of a struggle, or by making proof of complaint by prosecutrix at her earliest opportunity, or by other evidence tending to prove the commission of the offense charged was held not subject to the criticism that it authorized conviction of forcible rape without any corroboration of testimony of prosecutrix with respect to the question of whether or not the act of intercourse was accompanied by force. Davis v. People, 112 Colo. 452, 150 P.2d 67 (1944).

Complicity instruction not error simply because possibility of inconsistent verdict. The trial court did not err by instructing on complicity and on sexual assault when the defendant was aided or abetted by others simply because the instructions, when given together, could lead to an inconsistent verdict. People v. Naranjo, 200 Colo. 11, 612 P.2d 1106 (1980).

Aiding or abetting must be established beyond a reasonable doubt. Jury instructions which did not inform the jury that being "physically aided or abetted" had to be established beyond a reasonable doubt, coupled with conflicting evidence presented at trial on the issue of aiding or abetting, requires reversal of defendant's conviction for first degree sexual assault as a class two felony. Beigel v. People, 683 P.2d 1188 (Colo. 1984).

For deadly weapon sexual assault, it is sufficient to instruct the jury that it needs to consider whether a deadly weapon was used to cause submission. The jury does not need to determine whether submission was obtained by actual physical force or by sufficient consequences reasonably calculated to cause submission. People v. Lehmkuhl, 117 P.3d 98 (Colo. App. 2004).

Instruction on fear as substitute for force required. In a prosecution for rape following a vicious assault on a victim, the people are entitled to an instruction which adequately and clearly defines fear and apprehension of bodily injury as a substitute for the ingredient of force. People v. Futamata, 140 Colo. 233, 343 P.2d 1058 (1959).

Failure of trial court to include the sentencing enhancement factor in the elemental instruction to the substantive charge was not plain error. People v. Torres, 701 P.2d 78 (Colo. App. 1984).

Sentence enhancers in subsection (4) are not additional substantive elements of the crime and do not require proof of a mens rea. Instruction on enhancer did not need to include "knowingly". People v. Santana-Medrano, 165 P.3d 784 (Colo. App. 2006).

The courts failure to give a straightforward negative response to the jurors' question concerning the definition of "sexual penetration" was harmless error. In order to convict the defendant of first degree sexual assault or incest the jurors had to accept the victim's testimony because the victim testified unequivocally to actual sexual intercourse while the defendant denied any improper touching at all. People v. Fell, 832 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

The trial court erred by failing to respond adequately to the jury's question regarding the difference between first and second degree sexual assault. A jury should be referred back to the instructions only when it is apparent that it has overlooked some portion of the instructions or when the instructions clearly answer its inquiry. People v. Shields, 805 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1990).

The court must take adequate measures to insure that the jury understands the difference between the principal charged offense and the lesser included offense if a lesser included offense instruction is given. COLJI-Crim. No. 12:05 is insufficient to apprise the jury of the differences between first and second degree sexual assault, and, accordingly, the conviction for first degree sexual assault should be reversed. People v. Shields, 805 P.2d 1140 (Colo. App. 1990).

Sexual assault in the second degree is a lesser included offense of sexual assault in the first degree. People v. Silburn, 807 P.2d 1167 (Colo. App. 1990).

Trial court did not err in refusing to give the consent defense jury instruction tendered by the defendant in a first degree sexual assault case where the crime itself requires that the prosecution prove a lack of consent. People v. Cruz, 923 P.2d 311 (Colo. App. 1996).

The jury was not instructed on both elements of alternative (c) and could not have assessed whether the prosecution had proven each element of that alternative beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Rodriguez, 914 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1996).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

A sentence imposed beyond the presumptive range for a defendant convicted of both first degree sexual assault with a deadly weapon and a crime of violence does not deny equal protection of law since it cannot be said that the sentencing statutes permit different degrees of punishment for persons in the defendant's situation. People v. Haymaker, 716 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1986).

A rational distinction exists in the sentencing scheme for people convicted of first degree sexual assault with a deadly weapon in contrast to convictions of the same crime without a deadly weapon since the legislature could rationally perceive that use of a deadly weapon during the course of such an assault is more reprehensible and dangerous than commission of such a crime without a deadly weapon. People v. Haymaker, 716 P.2d 110 (Colo. 1986), disapproving People v. Montoya, 709 P.2d 58 (Colo. App. 1985), rev'd, 736 P.2d 1208 (Colo. 1987).

Evidence controls whether lesser included offense of assault with intent to rape can stand alone or fall on acquittal of forcible rape. Miera v. People, 164 Colo. 254, 434 P.2d 122 (1967).

Section not inconsistent with § 18-3-405. Charges under each section are distinguishable by the nature of the prohibited sexual activity. People v. Hawkins, 728 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1986).

18-3-403. Sexual assault in the second degree. (Repealed)

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 628, § 1, effective July 1. L. 77: IP(1) amended, p. 962, § 16, effective July 1. L. 83: (1)(b) and (2) amended, p. 698, § 2, effective July 1. L. 88: (1)(e) amended, p. 725, § 1, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(f) repealed, p. 1033, § 25, effective July 1. L. 99: (1)(e.5) added and (2) amended, p. 347, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 700, § 19, effective July 1.

18-3-404. Unlawful sexual contact. (1) Any actor who knowingly subjects a victim to any sexual contact commits unlawful sexual contact if:

- (a) The actor knows that the victim does not consent; or
- (b) The actor knows that the victim is incapable of appraising the nature of the victim's conduct; or

Conviction of sexual assault under this section meets conviction of sexual offense criterion within the meaning of § 18-1.3-1001 et seq. The defendant is subject to indeterminate sentencing accordingly. People v. Klausner, 74 P.3d 421 (Colo. App. 2003).

Trial court's omission of the word "physically" from its interrogatory distinguishing class 2 from class 4 felony sexual assault did not amount to plain error under the circumstances, and there was no indication that the trial court failed to exercise its discretion with regard to the full range of penalties available for class 2 felonies. Sentencing court's choice of 16 years for the lower component of its indeterminate sentence was well within the permissible range, according to any of the arguably applicable statutes, and the sentencing court supported its exercise of discretion with reference to the nature of the particular offense, the character of the offender, and the public interest. Tumentsereg v. People, 247 P.3d 1015 (Colo. 2011).

Sentence found not excessive. A sentence of 27 to 50 years for sexual assault in the first degree was not excessive. People v. Hall, 619 P.2d 492 (Colo. 1980).

Sentence of six years was not inappropriate. The prosecutor recommended a minimum sentence of four years, but it is not improper for the sentencing court, on its own volition, to sentence contrary to the district attorney's recommendation. People v. Fell, 832 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

Sentence found excessive. Defendant's sentence of a minimum of 32 years exceeded what is authorized by § 18-1.3-401 (6), since the minimum sentence is greater than twice the 12-year presumptive maximum for a class 3 felony. People v. Clark, 214 P.3d 531 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds, 232 P.3d 1287 (Colo. 2010).

Jury verdict convicting defendant of felony menacing is not inconsistent with the jury's verdict acquitting defendant of first degree sexual assault. People v. Frye, 872 P.2d 1316 (Colo. App. 1993).

(c) The victim is physically helpless and the actor knows that the victim is physically helpless and the victim has not consented; or

(d) The actor has substantially impaired the victim's power to appraise or control the victim's conduct by employing, without the victim's consent, any drug, intoxicant, or other means for the purpose of causing submission; or

(e) Repealed.

(f) The victim is in custody of law or detained in a hospital or other institution and the actor has supervisory or disciplinary authority over the victim and uses this position of authority, unless incident to a lawful search, to coerce the victim to submit; or

(g) The actor engages in treatment or examination of a victim for other than bona fide medical purposes or in a manner substantially inconsistent with reasonable medical practices.

(1.5) Any person who knowingly, with or without sexual contact, induces or coerces a child by any of the means set forth in section 18-3-402 to expose intimate parts or to engage in any sexual contact, intrusion, or penetration with another person, for the purpose of the actor's own sexual gratification, commits unlawful sexual contact. For the purposes of this subsection (1.5), the term "child" means any person under the age of eighteen years.

(1.7) Repealed.

(2) (a) Unlawful sexual contact is a class 1 misdemeanor and is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(b) Notwithstanding the provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), unlawful sexual contact is a class 4 felony if the actor compels the victim to submit by use of such force, intimidation, or threat as specified in section 18-3-402 (4) (a), (4) (b), or (4) (c) or if the actor engages in the conduct described in paragraph (g) of subsection (1) of this section or subsection (1.5) of this section.

(3) If a defendant is convicted of the class 4 felony of unlawful sexual contact pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406; except that this subsection (3) shall not apply if the actor engages in the conduct described in paragraph (g) of subsection (1) of this section.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 629, § 1, effective July 1. L. 77: IP(1) amended, p. 962, § 17, effective July 1. L. 86: (3) added, p. 777, § 6, effective July 1. L. 89: (1.5) added and (2) and (3) amended, p. 830, § 41, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(e) repealed, p. 1033, § 25, effective July 1. L. 91: (3) amended, p. 1912, § 21, effective June 1. L. 92: (1.5) amended and (1.7) added, p. 404, § 15, effective June 3. L. 94: (1.5) and (1.7) amended, p. 1717, § 9, effective July 1. L. 95: (3) amended, p. 1252, § 10, effective July 1. L. 96: (1.7) amended, p. 1581, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2000: IP(1), (1.5), (1.7), (2), and (3) amended, p. 700, § 20, effective July 1. L. 2002: (3) amended, p. 1513, § 190, effective October 1. L. 2004: (2) and (3) amended, p. 635, § 6, effective August 4. L. 2010: (1.7)(b) added by revision, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, pp. 2045, 2049, §§ 1, 12.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former §§ 18-3-403, 18-3-404, and 18-3-410 as they existed prior to 1975.

(2) Subsection (1.7)(b) provided for the repeal of subsection (1.7), effective July 1, 2012. (See L. 2010, pp. 2045, 2049.)

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment, "Expert Testimony on Rape Trauma Syndrome in Colorado: Broadening Admissibility to Address the Question of Consent in Sexual Assault Prosecutions", see 61 U. Colo. L. Rev. 833 (1990). For comment, "Warning Bell: The Inherent Difficulties of Responding to Student-on-Student Sexual Harassment in Colorado Middle Schools", see 76 U. Colo. L. Rev. 813 (2005).

Where assault established by evidence, intent to commit rape no defense. Where all the elements of the crime charged (attempt to commit third degree sexual assault) were established by the evidence, the fact that the defendant's actions might also be construed as evincing an intent to commit rape did not constitute a defense to the charge. People v. DeLeon, 44 Colo. App. 146, 613 P.2d 639 (1980).

No violation of equal protection of the laws under the Colorado Constitution is created even though subsection (1)(e) and the offense described in § 18-3-405 (2)(b) contain some similar elements. The offenses also contain elements which make them distinguishable. The fact that a single act may give rise to more than one criminal violation does not, by itself, create an equal protection problem. People v. Madril, 746 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1987).

The general assembly determined that persons who commit unlawful sexual contact with force must be sentenced to at least the midpoint of the sentencing range. People v. Holwuttel, 155 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2006).

It was proper for the court to include the definition of "consent" from § 18-1-505 (3)(d) in its instruction for unlawful sexual contact. People v. Holwuttel, 155 P.3d 447 (Colo. App. 2006).

Defendant's prior conviction of assault did not bar his subsequent conviction of sexual assault, as offenses had distinct elements that were not subsumed by each other. People v. Williams, 736 P.2d 1229 (Colo. App. 1986).

Attempted third degree sexual assault is a lesser included offense of attempted first degree sexual assault. People v. Staggs, 740 P.2d 21 (Colo. App. 1987).

The court's failure to give a straightforward negative response to the jurors' question concerning the definition of "sexual penetration" was harmless error. Because third degree sexual assault may be committed without proof of sexual penetration, defendant's conviction of that crime could not have been affected by the lack of response to the jurors' inquiry. People v. Fell, 832 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

A difference in the description of third degree sexual assault between the charging document and the jury instructions was not unconstitutional. The defendant received adequate notice that he could potentially have to defend against allegations that he subjected the victim to sexual contact in the course of attempting to induce her to expose intimate parts. People v. Madden, 111 P.3d 452 (Colo. 2005).

To be used as a ground for discipline in an attorney disciplinary proceeding sexual assault in the third degree need only be proved by clear and convincing evidence. In re Egbune, 971 P.2d 1065 (Colo. 1999).

Notwithstanding the entry of attorney's "Alford" plea in sexual assault proceedings, for purpose of disciplinary proceeding the attorney was held to have actually committed the acts necessary to accomplish third degree sexual assault and therefore the attorney knowingly had sexual contact with a former client and with a current client without either woman's consent. People v. Bertagnolli, 922 P.2d 935 (Colo. 1996).

Unlawful sexual contact is a lesser included offense of sexual assault based on sexual intrusion. Proof of sexual intrusion requires proof of sexual contact with a person's intimate parts satisfying the strict elements test, and unlawful sexual contact involves less serious injury than sexual intrusion and lesser culpability than sexual assault. People v. Loyas, 259 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2010).

Evidence of coercion sufficient to sustain conviction. Using bribes and other manipulation to get juveniles to engage in sexual conduct satisfied the coercion element. People v. Walker, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Evidence of sexual gratification sufficient to sustain conviction. Testimony regarding defendant's demeanor during photo sessions, defendant's verbal directions during photo sessions, and defendant's possession of photos and videos all support the sexual gratification element. People v. Walker, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

A conviction under subsection (1) of this section constitutes a forcible sex offense and therefore is a crime of violence under § 2L1.2 of the United States sentencing guidelines. United States v. Romero-Hernandez, 505 F.3d 1082 (10th Cir. 2007), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1066, 128 S. Ct. 2500, 171 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2008); United States v. Reyes-Alfonso, 653 F.3d 1137 (10th Cir. 2011), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 132 S. Ct. 828, ___ L. Ed. 2d ___, 80 U.S.L.W. 3334 (U.S. Dec. 5, 2011) (No. 11-7115).

A sex offense may be committed by means that do not involve physical force, yet the offense may still be forcible. When an offense involves sexual contact with another person, it is necessarily forcible when that person does not consent. The use of disparities in situational power, influence, or control meet the definition of force. United States v. Romero-Hernandez, 505 F.3d 1082 (10th Cir. 2007), cert. denied, 553 U.S. 1066, 128 S. Ct. 2500, 171 L. Ed. 2d 790 (2008).

Applied in People in Interest of M.M., 43 Colo. App. 65, 599 P.2d 968 (1979); People v. Opson, 632 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1980); People v. Johnson, 653 P.2d 737 (Colo. 1982).

18-3-405. Sexual assault on a child. (1) Any actor who knowingly subjects another not his or her spouse to any sexual contact commits sexual assault on a child if the victim is less than fifteen years of age and the actor is at least four years older than the victim.

(2) Sexual assault on a child is a class 4 felony, but it is a class 3 felony if:

(a) The actor applies force against the victim in order to accomplish or facilitate sexual contact; or

(b) The actor, in order to accomplish or facilitate sexual contact, threatens imminent death, serious bodily injury, extreme pain, or kidnapping against the victim or another person, and the victim believes that the actor has the present ability to execute the threat; or

(c) The actor, in order to accomplish or facilitate sexual contact, threatens retaliation by causing in the future the death or serious bodily injury, extreme pain, or kidnapping against the victim or another person, and the victim believes that the actor will execute the threat; or

(d) The actor commits the offense as a part of a pattern of sexual abuse as described in subsection (1) of this section. No specific date or time must be alleged for the pattern of sexual abuse; except that the acts constituting the pattern of sexual abuse, whether charged in the information or indictment or committed prior to or at any time after the offense charged in the information or indictment, shall be subject to the provisions of section 16-5-401 (1) (a), C.R.S., concerning sex offenses against children. The offense charged in the information or indictment shall constitute one of the incidents of sexual contact involving a child necessary to form a pattern of sexual abuse as defined in section 18-3-401 (2.5).

(3) If a defendant is convicted of the class 3 felony of sexual assault on a child pursuant to paragraphs (a) to (d) of subsection (2) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 630, § 1, effective July 1. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 962, § 18, effective July 1. L. 83: (5) amended, p. 693, § 2, effective June 15. L. 86: (3) added, p. 777, § 7, effective July 1. L. 89: (2)(b) and (3) amended and (2)(c) added, p. 903, §§ 2, 3, effective June 1. L. 90: (2)(b) repealed, p. 1033, § 25, effective July 1. L. 95: (2) and (3) amended, p. 1252, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2)(d) amended, p. 1582, § 8, effective July 1; (3) amended, p. 1513, § 191, effective October 1. L. 2006: (2)(d) amended, p. 413, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-3-408 as it existed prior to 1975.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "One Year Review of Constitutional Law", see 41 Den. L. Ctr. J. 77 (1964). For article, "The Adolescent Sex Offender: An Overview", see 16 Colo. Law. 1844 (1987). For comment, "Warning Bell: The Inherent Difficulties of Responding to Student-on-Student Sexual Harassment in Colorado Middle Schools", see 76 U. Colo. L. Rev. 813 (2005).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-405 is similar to former § 18-3-408, as it existed prior to the 1975 revision of this part, and § 40-2-32, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Enhanced crime of violence sentence on conviction for pattern of sexual assault on a child does not violate defendant's due process and equal protection guarantees. Prosecution not required to charge and prove a separate crime of violence count pursuant to § 16-11-

309 (4) and (5) for per se crimes of violence even though the elements of the pattern sentence enhancer do not overlap with the elements of a crime of violence. People v. Brown, 70 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2002).

Neither § 18-3-403 (1) nor subsection (1) is lesser included offense of the other, as each contains elements not found in the other. People v. Opson, 632 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1980).

Convictions under both not double jeopardy. Convictions for violations of § 18-3-403 (1) and subsection (1) arising from the same act do not constitute double jeopardy. People v. Opson, 632 P.2d 602 (Colo. App. 1980).

But sexual assault on a child, as described in subsection (1), is a lesser included offense of second degree sexual assault, as described in § 18-3-403 (1)(e). Accordingly, defendant could not be convicted of both offenses, and the court was required to vacate the conviction that would effectuate as fully as possible the jury's verdict. As such, the court was required to consider the general assembly's felony classification of the various crimes committed by the defendant, together with the length of sentences, and maximize the jury's verdict, which gives effect to the most serious offense. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

The "pattern" provision of subsection (2)(d) does not violate the double jeopardy protection against multiple punishments. Separate convictions and punishments authorized by the legislature never violate double jeopardy. The general assembly intended to authorize separate convictions for each incident of sexual assault on a child and authorized enhanced punishment of each assault that is committed as part of a "pattern of sexual abuse". People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

No double jeopardy violation for imposing sentences under §§ 18-3-405 and 18-3-405.3. Each section required a different element, a pattern of abuse for the first and being in a position of trust for the second, thus, there was no double jeopardy violation. People v. Tillery, 231 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd sub nom. People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

No double jeopardy violation for conviction of sexual assault on a child and conviction of sexual assault on a child-pattern. Each count was based on a separate volitional incident that was separated by time and intervening events. People v. Greer, 262 P.3d 920 (Colo. App. 2011).

Conviction under this section is not violative of equal protection on grounds that § 18-3-404 prohibits the same conduct with a lesser penalty. Statutory classifications are valid, even if difference in prohibited conduct is only a matter of degree. People v. Oliver, 745 P.2d 222 (Colo. 1987).

This section does not violate equal protection of the laws under the Colorado Constitution because, although the felony offense of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust and the misdemeanor offense of sexual assault in the third degree under § 18-3-404 (1)(e) contain some of the same elements, the two offenses contain elements which make them distinguishable. The fact that a single act may give rise to more than one criminal violation does not, by itself, create an equal protection problem. People v. Madril, 746 P.2d 1329 (Colo. 1987).

Subsection (2)(c) does not violate due process by allowing the prosecution to use evidence of alleged uncharged crimes since evidence of multiple instances of sexual abuse is not similar transaction evidence but rather evidence that forms integral part of the offense. People v. Bowring, 902 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1995).

Conduct proscribed by this section is different than conduct proscribed by § 18-6-

403, sexual exploitation of a child, and imposing different penalties for the two sections does not offend equal protection. People v. Slusher, 844 P.2d 1222 (Colo. App. 1992).

Subsection (2)(c) does not violate equal protection of the law since the classification of those charged with pattern sexual offense involving children has a rational basis in fact and is reasonably related to the legitimate governmental interest of protecting young children. People v. Bowring, 902 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1995).

Subsection (2)(c) is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Longoria, 862 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1993); People v. Graham, 876 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1994); People v. Luman, 994 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1999).

Subsection (2)(c) was possibly applied ex post facto, therefore, enhancement portion of conviction is reversed where several assaults occurred before this law was enacted, the verdict could have been based on an act that preceded the law's enactment, and the jury was not instructed that the conviction had to be based on an act that occurred after the law's passage. People v. Graham, 876 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1994).

If the acts preceding the date of the enactment of the statute are included in the charges, the jury must be instructed not to consider them in determining defendant's guilt or innocence with respect to sexual abuse as a part of a pattern of sexual abuse. If the jury is permitted to consider them, the statute, as applied to the defendant, is retrospective and violates the ex post facto prohibition. People v. Luman, 994 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1999).

Subsection (2)(c) did not violate the prohibition against ex post facto laws since the defendant had the requisite fair warning of the consequences of committing the offense with which he was charged. People v. Bowring, 902 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1995).

Subsection (2)(c) did not violate the prohibition against ex post facto laws since the conduct that triggered the pattern sexual abuse statute occurred after the statute's effective date. People v. Bowring, 902 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1995).

Although defendant's criminal acts were committed prior to the effective date of subsection (2)(d), application of this subsection to him did not violate the ex post facto clauses of the federal and state constitutions, because the general assembly had passed legislation increasing the penalty for sexual assault as a pattern of sexual abuse as early as 1989, before defendant committed the acts for which he was convicted. Because the acts were therefore not innocent when committed and the changes to subsection (2)(d) did not change the punishment or deprive defendant of a defense, subsection

(2)(d) was not an ex post facto law. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

The 1982 amendment extending the statute of limitations from a three-year period to a seven-year period for the offense of sexual assault on a child applies to all offenses which are not time-barred as of the effective date of the amendatory legislation. People v. Whitesell, 729 P.2d 985 (Colo. 1986).

Section not inconsistent with § 18-3-402. Charges under each section are distinguishable by the nature of the prohibited sexual activity. People v. Hawkins, 728 P.2d 385 (Colo. App. 1986).

Convictions on four separate counts of sexual assault on a child, based upon different types of sexual contact, but not clearly separate incidents, violates constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy. Defendant, therefore, received more than one sentence for each single contact, and the charges were multiplicative. People v. Woellhaf, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

But, if evidence supports a conclusion that the offenses were separated in time or location, and comprised separate volitional departures, defendant may be charged and convicted on separate offenses for identically worded counts of sexual assault on a child without violating constitutional prohibitions on double jeopardy. Quintano v. People, 105 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2005).

Ejaculation of semen onto clothing covering another person's intimate parts may constitute "touching" for purposes of establishing the "sexual contact" element of sexual assault on a child. People v. Vinson, 42 P.3d 86 (Colo. App. 2002).

The term "pattern of sexual abuse" is clearly and unambiguously defined in § 18-3-401 (2.5) and, therefore, the sentencing enhancement provision of subsection (2)(c) which incorporates that term is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Longoria, 862 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1993).

Defining sexual assault on a child as part of a "pattern of sexual abuse" is a sentencing enhancer of sexual assault on a child because it increases the punishment for that offense from a class 4 felony to a class 3 felony. People v. Luman, 994 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1999).

The "pattern" provision of subsection (2)(d) is not a separate offense, rather it allows each incident to be elevated to a class 3 felony. The definition of "pattern of sexual abuse" does not establish a separate offense; the unit of prosecution remains the substantive crime. The plain language of the statute authorizes greater punishment for the substantive crime, which is sexual assault on a child. People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

A pattern count citing both the statute on sexual assault on a child and the pattern sentence enhancer is sufficient to charge both charges. People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Although a conviction for sexual assault on a child as part of a pattern of abuse requires violent crime sentencing, that fact does not make it a violent crime as defined in § 18-1.3-406. People ex rel. A.B.-B., 215 P.3d 1205 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court did not err in denying the request for a jury trial. Since defendant's charge of sexual assault on a child did not include charges of bodily injury, intimidation, threats, or force, defendant was not charged with a crime of violence as defined in § 18-1.3-406 and, subsequently, was not entitled to a jury trial. People ex rel. A.B.-B., 215 P.3d 1205 (Colo. App. 2009).

In order to impose the pattern of sexual abuse sentence enhancer, defendant must be convicted of at least two completed acts of sexual contact against a child. The jury found defendant guilty of only attempted, not completed offenses, and there was no other conduct that the jury could have relied upon to come to the conclusion there was a pattern of sexual abuse. People v. Day, 230 P.3d 1194 (Colo. 2010).

Defendant's position of trust in relation to victim could not be used as aggravating factor under § 18-1-105 where it was also element of substantive crime. People v. Garciadealba, 733 P.2d 1240 (Colo. App. 1986).

The crime of sexual assault on a child as part of a pattern of sexual abuse is not a lesser included offense of the crime of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. In addition, neither of these are sentence enhancers for a person convicted of sexual assault on a child. All are separate crimes and each requires proof of facts not required by any of the others. People v. Valdez, 874 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1994).

Dismissal of specific counts alleging a violation of subsection (1) does not preclude conviction on subsection (2)(d). People v. Melillo, 976 P.2d 353 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd, 25 P.3d 769 (Colo. 2001).

Verdicts for sexual assault on a child as part of a pattern of sexual abuse and sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust were not inconsistent and were based upon separate statutory provisions requiring proof of different elements. People v. Hoefer, 961 P.2d 563 (Colo. App. 1998).

Where the jury instructions invited the jury to find defendant guilty of a pattern of sexual abuse count based on any two sexual acts, regardless of when they occurred, the conviction required reversal. Since the pattern of sexual abuse under subsection (2)(d) is a sentence enhancer to a crime charged under subsection (1), only a count charged under subsection (1) can serve as the predicate offense, and the jury must find the defendant guilty both of the predicate offense and of another act of sexual abuse occurring within 10 years prior to the period in which the predicate offense occurred. Reversal of the conviction was required where the jury instruction did not specify the 10-year requirement. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

Jury verdict form for sexual assault on a child should not have included the word "pattern" because pattern is a sentence enhancement and not a separate offense. However, use of such instruction was not plain error because there was no reasonable possibility that it contributed to defendant's convictions. People v. Brown, 70 P.3d 489 (Colo. App. 2002).

The people adequately elected the specific acts underlying each count that constituted the pattern of sexual abuse. People v. Greer, 262 P.3d 920 (Colo. App. 2011).

Both the predicate act and the earlier pattern act or acts may occur within the period alleged in the pattern of sexual assault count in the information. The period in the information was less than ten years, therefore it would have been impossible to find the defendant guilty of the enhancer unless the jury found the defendant committed two separate acts within the period in the information. People v. Honeysette, 53 P.3d 714 (Colo. App. 2002).

Enhanced penalty under subsection (2)(d) improper when, based on jury instruction and argument of prosecutor, jury could have found a pattern of abuse from multiple sexual contacts during a single sexual assault episode. People v. Woellhaf, 87 P.3d 142 (Colo. App. 2003), rev'd on other grounds, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

Former section held constitutional. Gallegos v. People, 176 Colo. 191, 489 P.2d 1301 (1971).

Purpose of former statute was to protect morals of children. The evident purpose of former statute was to protect children under a certain age from those acts which would tend to corrupt their morals, so that the question of the consent or nonconsent of those included within the law was not material, because its prime object was to protect the morals of such youth. Dekelt v. People, 44 Colo. 525, 99 P. 330 (1908); Martinez v. People, 111 Colo. 52, 137 P.2d 690 (1943); Cross v. People, 122 Colo. 469, 223 P.2d 202 (1950).

Former statute was designed to protect children from depravity and licentiousness. Kidder v. People, 115 Colo. 72, 169 P.2d 181 (1946).

Former statute was neither obscure nor indefinite. It was designed to protect the morals of children in any place, and arbitrary rules of construction were not to be invoked to restrict its meaning. Martinez v. People, 111 Colo. 52, 137 P.2d 690 (1943).

Evidence on age of juvenile-defendant required. Where the petition in delinquency states the respondent's age, although § 19-3-106 and C.R.J.P. 8 specify that "jurisdictional matters of the age and residence of the child shall be deemed admitted . . . unless specifically denied", the juvenile-defendant's age is not thereby admitted, and it is necessary to present evidence specifically on that element of an offense when it is critical under this section. People in Interest of M. M., 41 Colo. App. 44, 582 P.2d 692 (1978).

Effect of lack of evidence on four-year age differential. Since the four-year age differential is an essential element of the offense, a conviction cannot be sustained where no evidence was adduced as to that element. People in Interest of M. M., 41 Colo. App. 44, 582 P.2d 692 (1978).

Evidence of age differential admitted. An eleven-year-old child's estimate of her father's age as within a range greater than her own by only four years is not so inherently speculative as to be without probative value. People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980).

Where evidence of many acts, prosecution compelled to select specific transaction for conviction. Where there is evidence of many acts, any one of which would constitute the offense charged, the prosecution may be compelled to select the transaction on which it relies for a conviction, and although it is not required to identify the exact date of the offense, it must individualize and select a specific act. People v. Estorga, 200 Colo. 78, 612 P.2d 520 (1980); People v. Quintano, 105 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2005).

The appropriate "unit of prosecution" for the crime of sexual assault on a child is "any sexual contact" not each separate offense of touching within a single incident that encompasses a multitude of types of sexual contacts. People v. Woellhaf, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

Mental state required is "knowingly". The general assembly intended that the mental state requirement for this crime be "knowingly", and that this supersedes any indication of mens rea suggested by the term "intentional" in § 18-3-401. People v. Salazar, 648 P.2d 157 (Colo. App. 1981).

Evidence of similar offenses committed by accused against same child is admissible in prosecutions for taking indecent liberties with the child. Godfrey v. People, 168 Colo. 299, 451 P.2d 291 (1969).

The exception to the general rule excluding evidence of other offenses allows such evidence to show design, motive, or intent. The exception is broadened in cases of sexual offenses. Huerta v. People, 168 Colo. 276, 450 P.2d 648 (1969).

Evidence of prior sexual episodes with the victim which goes to prove a common plan, scheme, or design, is admissible under § 16-10-301 (1). People v. Whitesel, 200 Colo. 362, 615 P.2d 678 (1980).

Evidence of uncharged sexual contact properly admitted as evidence of pattern of sexual assault against same victim. Since the incident occurred within 10 years of the predicate offenses charged under this section, it was evidence that could be used to prove the pattern under this section. People v. Tillery, 231 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd on other grounds sub nom. People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

Similar acts as to other persons cannot be shown in evidence. Huerta v. People, 168 Colo. 276, 450 P.2d 648 (1969).

Other offenses inadmissible where guilty knowledge is necessary conclusion. Where the intent or guilty knowledge is a necessary conclusion from the act done, proof of other offenses of a similar character is inadmissible, and violates the rule that the evidence must be confined to the issue. Huerta v. People, 168 Colo. 276, 450 P.2d 648 (1969).

Testimony of prior offenses not prejudicial. Each of the witnesses testified that defendant had perpetrated indecent liberties on occasions prior to the ones with which he was charged. The witnesses gave no dates or in any other manner identified or testified about any particular occurrence. In this circumstance no election is required because the evidence only tends to show one particular transaction, which in each instance was the transaction charged in the information. Examination of the record fails to disclose that the jury could have somehow convicted defendant for some act other than the very ones with which he was charged. Nowels v. People, 166 Colo. 140, 442 P.2d 410 (1968).

Attempt to commit sexual assault on child is offense under Colorado law. People v. Martinez, 42 Colo. App. 257, 592 P.2d 1358 (1979).

Evidence sufficient to support conviction. Rapue v. People, 171 Colo. 324, 466 P.2d 925 (1970); People v. Ortega, 672 P.2d 215 (Colo. App. 1983).

Evidence sufficient to support a charge of sexual assault on a child beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Carmichael, 179 P.3d 47 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 206 P.3d 800 (Colo. 2009).

Evidence sufficient for conviction. Victim's testimony, if believed by the jury, was enough to convict defendant, and the credibility of witness is almost solely within the province of the jury. People v. McNeely, 222 P.3d 370 (Colo. App. 2009).

Conviction on one count may not be set aside simply because it is factually inconsistent with acquittals on other counts. People v. McNeely, 222 P.3d 370 (Colo. App. 2009).

Evidence insufficient for class 3 conviction sufficient for class 4 conviction. Evidence which was insufficient to support a conviction for a class 3 felony charge was sufficient to convict for a lesser included class 4 felony. People v. Whitesel, 200 Colo. 362, 615 P.2d 678 (1980).

Verdicts of guilty under this section and of contributing to juvenile delinquency. Verdicts of guilty under this section and also as to a count of contributing to juvenile delinquency were not inconsistent. Warren v. People, 121 Colo. 118, 213 P.2d 381 (1949).

In a trial for commission of a crime under subsection (2)(c), no limiting instructions were required, as evidence of multiple sexual abuse incidents is not similar transaction evidence but is evidence of an integral part of the offense. People v. Graham, 876 P.2d 68 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court's failure to instruct the jury that voluntary intoxication may apply to sexual assault on a child does not constitute plain error for there is doubt whether the issue is yet settled. People v. O'Connell, 134 P.3d 460 (Colo. App. 2005).

Sentence enhancement under subsection (2)(c) is not precluded by fact that prior conduct contributing to the establishment of pattern sexual abuse occurred in another state. People v. Bowring, 902 P.2d 911 (Colo. App. 1995).

Conviction for attempted sexual assault on a child constitutes sexual abuse of a minor and therefore is a crime of violence under the United States sentencing guidelines. United States v. De La Cruz-Garcia, 590 F.3d 1157 (10th Cir. 2010).

When a defendant is convicted of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, the offense of sexual assault on a child is not a lesser included offense. People v. Leske, 957 P.2d 1030 (Colo. 1998); People v. Duncan, 33 P.3d 1180 (Colo. App. 2001).

A victim's belief that defendant would continue to hold her against her will unless she complied with his sexual demands could constitute a continuing threat of imminent kidnap sufficient to support defendant's conviction for violating subsection (2)(b). People v. Zamora, 940 P.2d 939 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because sexual assault on a child is based not on a sexually exploitative image but on evidence of a sexual contact, it was appropriate for the trial court to impose the felony sexual exploitation sentences consecutive to defendant's other sentences. People v. Rabes, 258 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in Continental Liquor Co. v. Kalbin, 43 Colo. App. 438, 608 P.2d 353 (1977); People v. Lake, 195 Colo. 454, 580 P.2d 788 (1978); People v. Cavalier, 41 Colo. App. 119, 584 P.2d 92 (1978); People v. Boyette, 635 P.2d 552 (Colo. 1981); People in Interest of W.C.L., 650 P.2d 1302 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Green, 658 P.2d 281 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Corbett, 656 P.2d 687 (Colo. 1983); People v. Lindsey, 660 P.2d 502 (Colo. 1983); People v. Wood, 743 P.2d 422 (Colo. 1987); People v. Melillo, 25 P.3d 769 (Colo. 2001).

18-3-405.3. Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. (1) Any actor who knowingly subjects another not his or her spouse to any sexual contact commits sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust if the victim is a child less than eighteen years of age and the actor committing the offense is one in a position of trust with respect to the victim.

(2) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust is a class 3 felony if:

(a) The victim is less than fifteen years of age; or

(b) The actor commits the offense as a part of a pattern of sexual abuse as described in subsection (1) of this section. No specific date or time need be alleged for the pattern of sexual abuse; except that the acts constituting the pattern of sexual abuse whether charged in the information or indictment or committed prior to or at any time after the offense charged in the information or indictment, shall be subject to the provisions of section 16-5-401 (1) (a), C.R.S., concerning sex offenses against children. The offense charged in the information or indictment shall constitute one of the incidents of sexual contact involving a child necessary to form a pattern of sexual abuse as defined in section 18-3-401 (2.5).

(3) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust is a class 4 felony if the victim is fifteen years of age or older but less than eighteen years of age and the offense is not committed as part of a pattern of sexual abuse, as described in paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section.

(4) If a defendant is convicted of the class 3 felony of sexual assault on a child pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

Source: L. 90: Entire section added, p. 1028, § 16, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 1444, § 33, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2)(b) amended, p. 1582, § 9, effective July 1; (4) amended, p. 1513, § 192, effective October 1. L. 2006: (2)(b) amended, p. 413, § 3, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Application of this section to the defendant violated the ex post facto clauses of the federal and state constitutions because, while defendant's conviction was based on incidents occurring between June 1, 1990, and June 1, 1991, jurors were not clearly instructed that defendant's conviction had to be based on an act that occurred after July 1, 1990, the effective date of the statute. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

The "pattern" provision of subsection (2)(b) does not violate the double jeopardy protection against multiple punishments. Separate convictions and punishments authorized by the legislature never violate double jeopardy. The general assembly intended to authorize separate convictions for each incident of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust and authorized enhanced punishment of each assault that is committed as part of a "pattern of sexual abuse". People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

No double jeopardy violation for imposing sentences under §§ 18-3-405 and 18-3-405.3. Each section required a different element, a pattern of abuse for the first and being in a position of trust for the second, thus, there was no double jeopardy violation. People v. Tillery, 231 P.3d 36 (Colo. App. 2009), aff'd sub nom. People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

Convictions on four separate counts of sexual assault on a child, based upon different types of sexual contact, but not clearly separate incidents, violates constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy. Defendant, therefore, received more than one sentence for each single contact, and the charges were multiplicative. People v. Woellhaf, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

The appropriate "unit of prosecution" for the crime of sexual assault on a child is "any sexual contact" not each separate offense of touching within a single incident that encompasses a multitude of types of sexual contacts. People v. Woellhaf, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005); People v. Mintz, 165 P.3d 829 (Colo. App. 2007).

The "unit of prosecution" for the crime of aggravated incest is the same as for the crime of sexual assault on a child because there is no discernible difference between the language used in § 18-6-302 (1)(a) and the phrase “any sexual contact” used in this section. People v. Mintz, 165 P.3d 829 (Colo. App. 2007).

To determine if defendant’s actions satisfy more than one unit of prosecution, the court looks at all evidence introduced at trial to determine whether evidence relied upon by the jury for conviction supports distinct and separate offenses. Factors to determine distinct offenses include contacts occurring at different locations or times or whether they were the product of new volitional departures. If the acts are not distinct offenses, they merge into a single conviction. People v. Mintz, 165 P.3d 829 (Colo. App. 2007).

The crime of sexual assault on a child as part of a pattern of sexual abuse is not a lesser included offense of the crime of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. In addition, neither of these are sentence enhancers for a person convicted of sexual assault on a child. All are separate crimes and each requires proof of facts not required by any of the others. People v. Valdez, 874 P.2d 415 (Colo. App. 1994).

The “pattern” provision of subsection (2)(b) is not a separate offense, rather it allows each incident to be elevated to a class 3 felony. The definition of “pattern of sexual abuse” does not establish a separate offense; the unit of prosecution remains the substantive crime. The plain language of the statute authorizes greater punishment for the substantive crime, which is sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. People v. Simon, 266 P.3d 1099 (Colo. 2011).

The crime of sexual assault on a child is not a lesser included offense of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust under analysis of either § 18-1-408 (5)(a) or 18-1-408 (5)(c). People v. Leske, 957 P.2d 1030 (Colo. 1998).

Violent crime sentencing for patterned enhanced counts of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust only apply to offenses committed on or after July 1, 1998. People v. Bobrik, 87 P.3d 865 (Colo. App. 2003).

Because this section requires a “knowingly” culpable mental state, the requisite intent by the assailant could be demonstrated in a juvenile proceeding. Swentkowski v. Dawson, 881 P.2d 437 (Colo. App. 1994).

Jury could conclude that defendant was “in a position of trust” relative to the victim within the meaning of the applicable statute, where defendant lived in the same residence with the victim and her family and contributed to the household income, the victim spent hours alone with the defendant in his room, the victim was the only child the defendant allowed in his room, and neither the victim’s mother nor any other individual intervened during the time that the victim was alone in the defendant’s room. People v. Luman, 994 P.2d 432 (Colo. App. 1999) (decided under law in effect prior to 1990 amendment to § 18-3-401 (3.5)).

Defendant in “position of trust” even though he was not performing a specific supervisory duty at the time of the unlawful act. Where victim was pastor’s daughter and defendant previously taught victim in Sunday school, defendant and his wife babysat for victim and her sister on several occasions, defendant joined victim’s family often for dinner, defendant helped victim and her sisters with their school work, defendant chaperoned church trip for victim, and victim’s parents allowed victim to go to defendant’s house by herself to ride horses, defendant assumed a position of trust through an ongoing and continuous supervisory relationship with victim. Pellman v. People, 252 P.3d 1122 (Colo. 2011).

A “position of trust” for purposes of this section and § 18-3-401 (3.5) may be a supervisory position that exists for a “brief” period — a matter of hours or days — or it may extend over a long relationship. Defendant’s discrete acts of supervision were the product of the general position of trust that defendant assumed in relation to victim. Pellman v. People, 252 P.3d 1122 (Colo. 2011).

Defendant must be in position of trust at time of unlawful act. Court properly dismissed charges against defendant who met victim while in a position of trust but who was no longer in a position of trust at the time of the unlawful act. People v. Johnson, 167 P.3d 207 (Colo. App. 2007).

Ejaculation of semen onto clothing covering another person’s intimate parts may constitute “touching” for purposes of establishing the “sexual contact” element of sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust. People v. Vinson, 42 P.3d 86 (Colo. App. 2002).

Enhanced penalty under subsection (2)(b) improper when, based on jury instruction and argument of prosecutor, jury could have found a pattern of abuse from multiple sexual contacts during a single sexual assault episode. People v. Woellhaf, 87 P.3d 142 (Colo. App. 2003), rev’d on other grounds, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

Evidence sufficient to support a charge of sexual assault by one in a position of trust beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Carmichael, 179 P.3d 47 (Colo. App. 2007), rev’d on other grounds, 206 P.3d 800 (Colo. 2009).

Because sexual assault on a child is based not on a sexually exploitative image but on evidence of a sexual contact, it was appropriate for the trial court to impose the felony sexual exploitation sentences consecutive to defendant’s other sentences. People v. Rabes, 258 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2010).

18-3-405.4. Internet sexual exploitation of a child. (1) An actor commits internet sexual exploitation of a child if the actor knowingly importunes, invites, or entices through communication via a computer network or system, telephone network, or data network or by a text message or instant message, a person whom the actor knows or believes to be under fifteen years of age and at least four years younger than the actor, to:

(a) Expose or touch the person's own or another person's intimate parts while communicating with the actor via a computer network or system, telephone network, or data network or by a text message or instant message; or

(b) Observe the actor's intimate parts via a computer network or system, telephone network, or data network or by a text message or instant message.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2009, (HB 09-1163), ch. 343, p. 1797, § 1, effective July 1, 2009.)

(3) Internet sexual exploitation of a child is a class 4 felony.

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 2056, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (HB 09-1163), ch. 343, p. 1797, § 1, effective July 1; (1) amended, (HB 09-1132), ch. 341, p. 1793, § 3, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (1) by House Bill 09-1163 and House Bill 09-1132 were harmonized.

18-3-405.5. Sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist. (1) (a) Any actor who knowingly inflicts sexual penetration or sexual intrusion on a victim commits aggravated sexual assault on a client if:

(I) The actor is a psychotherapist and the victim is a client of the psychotherapist; or

(II) The actor is a psychotherapist and the victim is a client and the sexual penetration or intrusion occurred by means of therapeutic deception.

(b) Aggravated sexual assault on a client is a class 4 felony.

(2) (a) Any actor who knowingly subjects a victim to any sexual contact commits sexual assault on a client if:

(I) The actor is a psychotherapist and the victim is a client of the psychotherapist; or

(II) The actor is a psychotherapist and the victim is a client and the sexual contact occurred by means of therapeutic deception.

(b) Sexual assault on a client is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(3) Consent by the client to the sexual penetration, intrusion, or contact shall not constitute a defense to such offense.

(4) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Client" means a person who seeks or receives psychotherapy from a psychotherapist.

(b) "Psychotherapist" means any person who performs or purports to perform psychotherapy, whether the person is licensed or registered by the state pursuant to title 12, C.R.S., or certified by the state pursuant to part 5 of article 1 of title 25, C.R.S.

(c) "Psychotherapy" means the treatment, diagnosis, or counseling in a professional relationship to assist individuals or groups to alleviate mental disorders, understand unconscious or conscious motivation, resolve emotional, relationship, or attitudinal conflicts, or modify behaviors which interfere with effective emotional, social, or intellectual functioning.

(d) "Therapeutic deception" means a representation by a psychotherapist that sexual contact, penetration, or intrusion by the psychotherapist is consistent with or part of the client's treatment.

Source: L. 88: Entire section added, p. 726, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (3) amended, p. 831, § 42, effective July 1. L. 2011: IP(4) and (4)(b) amended, (SB 11-187), ch. 285, p. 1327, § 69, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the licensing of mental health professionals, see article 43 of title 12.

ANNOTATION

Section is not unconstitutionally overbroad. Neither the treating psychotherapist nor the psychotherapy client has a fundamental constitutional right to engage in sexual intercourse with each other during the existence of the psychotherapist-client relationship. Ferguson v. People, 824 P.2d 803 (Colo. 1992).

Although consent is eliminated as a defense, prosecution must still prove mental culpability of the crime. Crime is not a strict liability offense. Ferguson v. People, 824 P.2d 803 (Colo. 1992).

18-3-405.6. Invasion of privacy for sexual gratification. (1) A person who knowingly observes or takes a photograph of another person's intimate parts without that person's consent, in a situation where the person observed or photographed has a reasonable expectation of privacy, for the purpose of the observer's own sexual gratification, commits unlawful invasion of privacy for sexual gratification.

(2) (a) Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2), invasion of privacy for sexual gratification is a class 1 misdemeanor and is an extraordinary risk crime subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(b) Invasion of privacy for sexual gratification is a class 6 felony and is an extraordinary risk crime subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-401 (10) if either of the following circumstances exist:

(I) The offense is committed subsequent to a prior conviction, as defined in section 16-22-102 (3), C.R.S., for unlawful sexual behavior as defined in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S.; or

(II) The person observes or takes a photograph of the intimate parts of a person under fifteen years of age. This subparagraph (II) shall not apply if the defendant is less than four years older than the person observed or photographed.

(3) For purposes of this section, "photograph" includes a photograph, motion picture, videotape, live feed, print, negative, slide, or other mechanically, electronically, or chemically produced or reproduced visual material.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, p. 2045, § 2, effective July 1, 2012.

18-3-406. Criminality of conduct. (Repealed)

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 630, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2001: Entire section repealed, p. 859, § 5, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Current provisions relating to criminality of conduct are contained in § 18-1-503.5.

18-3-407. Victim's and witness's prior history - evidentiary hearing - victim's identity - protective order. (1) Evidence of specific instances of the victim's or a witness's prior or subsequent sexual conduct, opinion evidence of the victim's or a witness's sexual conduct, and reputation evidence of the victim's or a witness's sexual conduct may be admissible only at trial and shall not be admitted in any other proceeding except at a proceeding pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (2) of this section. At trial, such evidence shall be presumed to be irrelevant except:

(a) Evidence of the victim's or witness' prior or subsequent sexual conduct with the actor;

(b) Evidence of specific instances of sexual activity showing the source or origin of semen, pregnancy, disease, or any similar evidence of sexual intercourse offered for the purpose of showing that the act or acts charged were or were not committed by the defendant.

(2) In any criminal prosecution for class 4 felony internet luring of a child, as described in section 18-3-306 (3) or under sections 18-3-402 to 18-3-405.5, 18-6-301, 18-6-302, 18-6-403, and 18-6-404, or for attempt or conspiracy to commit any of said crimes, if evidence, that is not excepted under subsection (1) of this section, of specific instances of the victim's or a witness's prior or subsequent sexual conduct, or opinion evidence of the victim's or a witness's sexual conduct, or reputation evidence of the victim's or a witness's sexual conduct, or evidence that the victim or a witness has a history of false reporting of sexual assaults is to be offered at trial, the following procedure shall be followed:

(a) A written motion shall be made at least thirty-five days prior to trial, unless later for good cause shown, to the court and to the opposing parties stating that the moving party has an offer of proof of the relevancy and materiality of evidence of specific instances of the victim's or witness's prior or subsequent sexual conduct, or opinion evidence of the victim's or witness's sexual conduct, or reputation evidence of the victim's or witness's sexual conduct, or evidence that the victim or witness has a history of false reporting of sexual assaults that is proposed to be presented.

(b) The written motion shall be accompanied by an affidavit in which the offer of proof shall be stated.

(c) If the court finds that the offer of proof is sufficient, the court shall notify the other party of such. If the prosecution stipulates to the facts contained in the offer of proof, the court shall rule on the motion based upon the offer of proof without an evidentiary hearing. Otherwise, the court shall set a hearing to be held in camera prior to trial. In such hearing, to the extent the facts are in dispute, the court may allow the questioning of the victim or witness regarding the offer of proof made by the moving party or otherwise allow a presentation of the offer of proof, including but not limited to the presentation of witnesses.

(d) An in camera hearing may be held during trial if evidence first becomes available at the time of the trial or for good cause shown.

(e) At the conclusion of the hearing, or by written order if no hearing is held, if the court finds that the evidence proposed to be offered regarding the sexual conduct of the victim or witness is relevant to a material issue to the case, the court shall order that evidence may be introduced and prescribe the nature of the evidence or questions to be permitted. The moving party may then offer evidence pursuant to the order of the court.

(f) All motions and supporting documents filed pursuant to this section shall be filed under seal and may be unsealed only if the court rules the evidence is admissible and the case proceeds to trial. If the court determines that only part of the evidence contained in the motion is admissible, only that portion of the motion and supporting documents pertaining to the admissible portion may be unsealed.

(g) The court shall seal all court transcripts, tape recordings, and records of proceedings, other than minute orders, of a hearing held pursuant to this section. The court may unseal the transcripts, tape recordings, and records only if the court rules the evidence is admissible and the case proceeds to trial. If the court determines that only part of the evidence is admissible, only the portion of the hearing pertaining to the admissible evidence may be unsealed.

(3) (a) In a criminal prosecution including an offense described in subsection (2) of this section, the court may, at any time upon motion of the prosecution or on the court's own motion, issue a protective order pursuant to the Colorado rules of criminal procedure concerning disclosure of information relating to the victim or a witness. The court may punish a violation of a protective order by contempt of court.

(b) The victim who would be the subject of the protective order may object to the motion for a protective order.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 630, § 1, effective July 1. L. 91: IP(2) amended, p. 405, § 10, effective June 6. L. 98: Entire section amended and IP(2) amended, pp. 399, 400, §§ 7, 8, effective April 21. L. 2004: (3) added, p. 375, § 1, effective April 8. L. 2005: IP(1), (2)(c), and (2)(e) amended and (2)(f) and (2)(g) added, p. 426, § 5, effective April 29. L. 2006: IP(2) amended, p. 2056, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2012: (2)(a) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 871, § 127, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to the introductory portion to subsection (2) by sections 7 and 8 of House Bill 98-1177 were harmonized.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending (2)(a) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Hearsay in Criminal Cases Under The Colorado Rules of Evidence: An Overview”, see 50 U. Colo. L. Rev. 277 (1979).

Basic purpose of section is one of public policy: to provide rape and sexual assault victims greater protection from humiliating and embarrassing public “fishing expeditions” into their past sexual conduct, without a preliminary showing that evidence thus elicited will be relevant to some issue in the pending case. People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978); People v. Braley, 879 P.2d 410 (Colo. App. 1993); People v. Murphy, 919 P.2d 191 (Colo. 1996); People in Interest of K.N., 977 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1999); People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004); People v. Golden, 140 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2005).

This section reflects the general assembly’s intent to prevent victims of sexual assaults from being subjected to psychological or emotional abuse as the price of their cooperation in prosecuting sex offenders. People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

Section held not to apply where victim was not a rape victim, the defendant was not accused of sexual assault, the defense asserted was not consent, nor was the evidence offered to impeach the victim’s credibility. People v. Miller, 981 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1998); People v. Carlson, 72 P.3d 411 (Colo. App. 2003).

Homosexual orientation is within the purview of this section. People v. Koon, 713 P.2d 410 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Murphy, 919 P.2d 191 (Colo. 1996).

Prosecution may “open the door” to inadmissible evidence of a rape victim’s sexual orientation and past sexual conduct, allowing the defendant to inquire into the previously barred matter. People v. Murphy, 919 P.2d 191 (Colo. 1996).

But the concept of “opening the door” is subject to the considerations of relevance and prejudice required under C.R.E. 401 and C.R.E. 403. People v. Melillo, 25 P.3d 769 (Colo. 2001).

But “opening the door” to evidence on an issue does not mean that any evidence on that issue is automatically admissible. Where prosecution opened the door to evidence of victim’s homosexuality, defendant was still required to present such evidence via reputation or opinion evidence, not via a specific instance of conduct. People v. Miller, 981 P.2d 654 (Colo. App. 1998).

Victim’s statements that he was “not into whatever it is”, that he believed the defendant was a “sick bastard”, and that he was “not that kind” did not necessarily suggest that the victim was heterosexual, opening the door to evidence of the victim’s sexual orientation or past sexual contact. People v. Murphy, 919 P.2d 191 (Colo. 1996).

No denial of right to confront accuser. This section strikes a balance by conditioning admission of evidence of the victim’s sexual history on the defendant’s preliminary showing that it is relevant, and involves no denial of the defendant’s right to confront his accuser for there is no constitutional right to introduce irrelevant and highly inflammatory evidence. People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978).

This section does not deny a defendant’s right to confront his accuser. Certain exceptions are made therein to preserve such rights of the defendant. People v. Johnson, 671 P.2d 1017 (Colo. App. 1983).

This section does not violate defendant’s confrontation rights. Defendant’s inability to confront the victim at trial resulted not from the provisions of this section, but from his failure to follow the procedure set forth in this section or to show good cause why he should have been excused from following that procedure. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

Section neither wholly substantive nor procedural. This section cannot be characterized as either purely substantive and thus entirely within the general assembly’s power, or purely procedural and thus subject solely to this court’s rulemaking power, but rather it is “mixed” in nature. People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978); People in Interest of K.N., 977 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1999).

Section does not unconstitutionally intrude into matters exclusively judicial nor does it violate § 21 of art. III or art. VI, Colo. Const. People v. McKenna, 196 Colo. 367, 585 P.2d 275 (1978).

Evidence of prior sex act of prosecutrix. It is essential that an accused lay a proper foundation for the introduction of the evidence of the prosecutrix’s prior sex act. People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Prentiss, 172 P.3d 917 (Colo. App. 2006).

Evidence of a specific instance of sexual activity, offered to show the source or origin of semen, is not precluded by the statutory presumption of irrelevance or the procedural safeguards which are given to other evidence of a prosecutrix’s past sexual activity. People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981).

Evidence of a prior sexual act with another man, which could explain the presence of semen in the prosecutrix's vaginal tract, is relevant in that it tends to render more probable the inference that defendant did not have sexual intercourse with the prosecutrix. People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981).

Victim's testimony about lack of prior sex. This section does not specifically prohibit the victim from testifying as to the lack of prior sexual activity. People v. Johnson, 671 P.2d 1017 (Colo. App. 1983).

Evidence of victim's virginity should not have been admitted because it was so over-inclusive that its prejudicial nature outweighed its probative value. Even evidence falling within an exception to the rape shield statute is not automatically admissible. Fletcher v. People, 179 P.3d 969 (Colo. 2007).

Deletion of reference to prior sexual conduct in sexual assault victim's personal diary that was admitted into evidence after she relied on it to pinpoint the date of offense was proper under rape shield law. People v. Wilson, 678 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1984).

Under subsection (1), evidence of prior or subsequent sexual conduct is presumptively irrelevant unless such contact is with the defendant or unless there are specific instances of sexual activity showing the source or origin of semen, pregnancy, disease, or similar evidence that would show that the act charged was not committed by the defendant. People v. Braley, 879 P.2d 410 (Colo. App. 1993).

The term "similar evidence" in subsection (1)(b) refers to evidence having characteristics in common with, or very much like, evidence showing the source or origin of semen, pregnancy, or disease, all of which are examples of physical evidence or condition. People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

If the evidence does not fall within one of the statutory exceptions contained in subsection (1), the presumption of irrelevance may nevertheless be rebutted when the defendant offers proof that the evidence is relevant to a material issue in the case. If the trial court determines the offer of proof to be sufficient, it must conduct an in-camera hearing regarding the evidence. People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section applies to evidence of a sexual assault witness's sexual history. There is no exception to the statute if the proffered evidence is not being offered for the truth of the matter asserted. The proponent of such evidence must comply with the offer of proof procedure and in camera hearing requirement to ensure that the evidence is relevant and material before it can be introduced at trial. People v. MacLeod, 176 P.3d 75 (Colo. 2008).

Evidence within the ambit of subsection (2) is not automatically admissible, as it remains subject to the usual rules of evidence. Specifically, a trial court must apply C.R.E. 403 to balance the probative value of the proffered evidence against any possible unfair prejudice. People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

Exception for "similar evidence of sexual intercourse" does not include evidence of a victim's prior sexual conduct because that would defeat the purpose of the rape shield statute. People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (2) only requires defense counsel to file a motion and an affidavit in which the offer of proof is stated, and it does not indicate any limitations upon, nor does it identify, who may be an affiant. People in Interest of K.N., 977 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1999).

Evidence does not become inadmissible under this section or under C.R.E. 404 simply because it might indirectly cause the finder of fact to make an inference concerning the victim's prior sexual conduct. People v. Cobb, 962 P.2d 944 (Colo. 1998); People v. Williamson, 249 P.3d 801 (Colo. 2011).

Prior sexual conduct evidence not presumptively irrelevant is also not automatically admissible; trial court must apply C.R.E. 403 to balance the probative value of the proffered evidence against any possible unfair prejudice. People v. Harris, 43 P.3d 221 (Colo. 2002).

Evidence of victim's rape fantasy and victim's statements regarding fantasy admissible under rape shield statute. The evidence and supporting statements should be admitted since the evidence and statements were material and relevant to the issue of consent. People v. Garcia, 179 P.3d 250 (Colo. App. 2007).

Evidence of defendant's prior sexual relationship with victim subject to "prior sexual contact with actor" exception to rape shield statute. The evidence should be admitted since it is material and relevant to the issue of consent and supported defendant's theory of the case. People v. Garcia, 179 P.3d 250 (Colo. App. 2007).

Statements acknowledging the existence of a committed romantic relationship are evidence of neither sexual conduct nor sexual orientation. As such, if evidence of such a committed romantic relationship is otherwise relevant to the case, it is admissible and not barred by the rape shield statute. People v. Golden, 140 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2005).

If initial questions into the existence of such a relationship are ruled in order, a court cannot foreclose cross-examination through use of prior inconsistent statements in that regard. People v. Golden, 140 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2005).

Evidence of victim's prior sexual encounter was not logically relevant to the question of whether the defendant committed sexual assault or whether victim consented to intercourse and trial court properly excluded it under the rape shield statute's presumption of irrelevance. People v. Harris, 43 P.3d 221 (Colo. 2002).

Trial court did not commit error in denying defendant's motion to admit witness testimony in sexual assault prosecution without a hearing where defendant sought to admit testimony that one of the victims had stated that she was having a sexual relationship with defendant and that she had sex for money. Such evidence was presumptively irrelevant and court properly concluded that offer of proof was insufficient to require evidentiary hearing. People v. Braley, 879 P.2d 410 (Colo. App. 1993).

Proffered testimony that victim owned condoms and had a male visitor was only marginally probative as to whether the victim was sexually active prior to the incidents involving the defendant. Richmond v. Embry, 122 F.3d 866 (10th Cir. 1997).

In addition, the proffered testimony was not the type that if believed would have, by necessity, exculpated the defendant. Richmond v. Embry, 122 F.3d 866 (10th Cir. 1997).

Moreover, in the context of the entire record, the appellate court was not persuaded that the proffered testimony, even if admitted, would have created a reasonable doubt that did not exist without the evidence. Richmond v. Embry, 122 F.3d 866 (10th Cir. 1997).

Trial court properly excluded evidence under the rape shield statute. The rape shield statute is designed to keep out evidence offered to show the victim was predisposed to homosexual, pedophilic experiences. People v. Dembry, 91 P.3d 431 (Colo. App. 2003).

Credibility of a victim in a sexual assault case may be attacked by showing that she has a history of making false accusations. People v. Wilson, 678 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 843, 105 S. Ct. 148, 83 L. Ed.2d 87 (1984).

Trial court erred in precluding defendant from inquiring into, and if necessary, presenting evidence of, a romantic relationship between alleged victim and a friend. Evidence of alleged victim's romantic and sexual relationship with friend was relevant to a material issue in the case, namely, victim's motive to lie. Trial court's exclusion of the motive evidence infringed upon defendant's constitutional right to confront witnesses. People v. Owens, 183 P.3d 568 (Colo. App. 2007).

Allegation that charges were not brought as a result of other sexual assault allegations is insufficient to warrant the court convening an evidentiary hearing under subsection (2)(c). To invoke such a hearing, the statute requires that the affidavit accompanying the defendant's offer of proof must articulate facts that, if demonstrated at the evidentiary hearing by a preponderance of the evidence, would show that the alleged victim made multiple prior or subsequent reports of sexual assault that were in fact false. People v. Weiss, 133 P.3d 1180 (Colo. 2006).

Evidence that a third person claimed that the victim had been previously raped while the victim denied the alleged prior rape properly excluded because it was not evidence of false reporting of a rape incident. People v. Schmidt, 885 P.2d 312 (Colo. App. 1994).

Evidence of victim's reputation for sexual conduct was not relevant, in order to show defendant's state of mind at time he committed alleged sexual assault, where there was no indication that defendant knew anything about victim's reputation at time of assault; accordingly, evidence was properly excluded. People v. Moreno, 739 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1987).

Where the material issue at trial is whether the complainant consented to the sexual contact, the understanding or state of mind of the accused regarding the complainant's sexual history is neither material nor relevant to the issue of whether the complainant consented, and a trial court may only allow the admission of such evidence that is relevant to a material issue to the case. People in Interest of K.N., 977 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1999).

Defendant cannot justify his behavior or mitigate his culpability through his knowledge of the victim's sexual history; accordingly, evidence of the victim's sexual history contained in defendant's offer of proof was held irrelevant and immaterial because it only served to foster an impermissible inference, namely, that the victim's prior sexual activity demonstrated that she did not refuse the defendant's sexual advances. People in Interest of K.N., 977 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1999).

Propounding questions with no reasonable basis in fact for the interrogation. Under C.R.E. 403 and this section, the defendant held not to have established entitlement to elicit the name of the male whom the child sexual assault victim allegedly had intercourse with days before the date of the sexual assault. People v. Vialpando, 804 P.2d 219 (Colo. App. 1990).

Evidence of victim's sexual history inadmissible to attack her credibility as a witness after victim stated to a treating nurse that the defendant had taken her virginity, because victim's statement related to a collateral issue, and extrinsic evidence is generally inadmissible to contradict a witness's testimony on a collateral matter. People in Interest of K.N., 977 P.2d 868 (Colo. 1999).

Evidence of past acts of solicitation of prostitution, even when no sexual contact or intercourse occurred, is "sexual conduct" and protected under this statute. The general assembly intended the term "sexual conduct" to encompass a broader range of behaviors than those that it defined in § 18-3-401. People v. Williamson, 249 P.3d 801 (Colo. 2011).

The term “prior sexual conduct” includes prior sexual assaults. People v. Aldrich, 849 P.2d 821 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

The term “prior or subsequent sexual conduct” includes sexual assaults perpetrated by the victim. Because perpetrators may also be the victims of sexual assault, the court concluded that, under the plain language of this section, such perpetrators are within the statute’s protection. Because the defendant failed to comply with the procedural requirements of this section for the introduction of testimony regarding the victim’s sexual conduct, such testimony was appropriately barred. People v. Gholston, 26 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2000).

Applied in People v. Blalock, 197 Colo. 320, 592 P.2d 406 (1979); People in Interest of M.M., 43 Colo. App. 65, 599 P.2d 968 (1979); People v. Gallegos, 644 P.2d 920 (Colo. 1982); People v. Rice, 709 P.2d 67 (Colo. App. 1985); People v. Meis, 837 P.2d 258 (Colo. App. 1992); People v. Wallen, 996 P.2d 182 (Colo. App. 1999).

18-3-407.5. Victim evidence - forensic evidence - electronic lie detector exam without victim’s consent prohibited. (1) Any direct cost associated with the collection of forensic evidence from the victim shall be paid by the referring or requesting law enforcement agency.

(2) A law enforcement agency, prosecuting officer, or other government official may not ask or require a victim of a sexual offense to submit to a polygraph examination or any form of a mechanical or electrical lie detector examination as a condition for proceeding with any criminal investigation or prosecution of an offense. A law enforcement agency shall conduct the examination only with the victim’s written informed consent. Consent shall not be considered informed unless the law enforcement agency informs the victim in writing of the victim’s right to refuse to submit to the examination. In addition, the law enforcement agency shall orally provide to the victim information about the potential uses of the results of the examination.

(3) (a) A law enforcement agency, prosecuting officer, or other government official may not ask or require a victim of a sexual offense to participate in the criminal justice system process or cooperate with the law enforcement agency, prosecuting officer, or other government official as a condition of receiving a forensic medical examination that includes the collection of evidence.

(b) A victim of a sexual offense shall not bear the cost of a forensic medical examination that includes the collection of evidence that is used for the purpose of evidence collection even if the victim does not want to participate in the criminal justice system or otherwise cooperate with the law enforcement agency, prosecuting officer, or other government official. The division of criminal justice in the department of public safety shall pay the cost of the examination.

(c) When personnel at a medical facility perform a forensic medical examination that includes the collection of evidence based on the request of a victim of a sexual offense, not in connection with a referring or requesting law enforcement agency, and the medical facility performing the examination knows where the crime occurred, the facility shall contact the law enforcement agency in whose jurisdiction the crime occurred regarding preservation of the evidence. If the medical facility does not know where the crime occurred, the facility shall contact its local law enforcement agency regarding preservation of the evidence. Notwithstanding any other statutory requirements regarding storage of biological evidence, the law enforcement agency contacted by the medical facility shall retrieve the evidence from the facility and store it for at least two years.

Source: L. 95: Entire section added, p. 948, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2008: (2) amended and (3) added, p. 263, § 1, effective March 31.

18-3-408. Jury instruction prohibited. In any criminal prosecution under sections 18-3-402 to 18-3-405, or for attempt or conspiracy to commit any crime under sections 18-3-402 to 18-3-405, the jury shall not be instructed to examine with caution the testimony of the victim solely because of the nature of the charge, nor shall the jury be instructed that such a charge is easy to make but difficult to defend against, nor shall any similar instruction be given. However, the jury shall be instructed not to allow gender bias or any kind of prejudice based upon gender to influence the decision of the jury.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 631, § 1, effective July 1. L. 90: Entire section amended, p. 925, § 8, effective March 27.

ANNOTATION

Section not unconstitutional. This section does not operate to deprive a defendant of due process of law by prohibiting the exercise of trial court discretion with respect to giving this instruction, nor does it violate the constitutional requirement of separation of powers by interfering with the rule-making power of the Colorado supreme court. People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980).

This section does not violate the constitutional requirement of separation of powers (art. III, Colo. Const.) by interfering with the rule-making power of the court established in § 21 of art. VI, Colo. Const. People v. Estorga, 200 Colo. 78, 612 P.2d 520 (1980).

Failure to instruct the jury on gender bias was not a "structural defect" or plain error requiring reversal of third degree sexual assault conviction where gender bias was not raised during the trial and the jury was instructed sympathy or prejudice should not influence its decision. People v. Johnson, 870 P.2d 571 (Colo. App. 1993).

Where the case involved a homosexual act and the defendant's theory of the case was consent, omission of a gender bias instruction did not rise to the level of plain error. Defendant erroneously equated gender bias with bias against homosexuals, and the record provided no reason to believe the jury would confuse the two concepts. In addition, the trial court instructed the jury not to allow prejudice to influence its decision. Further, omission of the instruction was not a structural error and did not require reversal because it was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Hoskay, 87 P.3d 194 (Colo. App. 2003).

18-3-408.5. Jury instruction on consent - when required. (1) In any criminal prosecution for a crime listed in subsection (2) of this section or for attempt or conspiracy to commit a crime listed in subsection (2) of this section, upon request of any party to the proceedings, the jury shall be instructed on the definition of consent as set forth in section 18-3-401 (1.5). Notwithstanding the provisions of section 18-1-505 (4), an instruction on the definition of consent given pursuant to this section shall not constitute an affirmative defense, but shall only act as a defense to the elements of the offense.

- (2) The provisions of subsection (1) of this section shall apply to the following crimes:
- (a) Sexual assault as described in section 18-3-402 (1) (a);
 - (b) Sexual assault as described in section 18-3-402 (1) (b), (1) (c), or (1) (e), as they existed prior to July 1, 2000, for offenses committed prior to July 1, 2000;
 - (c) Sexual assault in the second degree as described in section 18-3-403 (1) (a) or (1) (b), as they existed prior to July 1, 2000, for offenses committed prior to July 1, 2000;
 - (d) Unlawful sexual contact as described in section 18-3-404 (1) (a), (1) (c), or (1) (d);
 - (e) Unlawful sexual contact as described in section 18-3-404 (1.7), as it existed prior to July 1, 2010, for offenses committed prior to July 1, 2010;
 - (f) Invasion of privacy for sexual gratification as described in section 18-3-405.6; or
 - (g) Criminal invasion of privacy in violation of section 18-7-801.

Source: L. 92: Entire section added, p. 322, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2002: Entire section amended, p. 757, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2010: Entire section amended, (SB 10-128), ch. 415, p. 2047, § 7, effective July 1, 2012.

18-3-409. Marital defense. Any marital relationship, whether established statutorily, putatively, or by common law, between an actor and a victim shall not be a defense to any offense under this part 4 unless such defense is specifically set forth in the applicable statutory section by having the elements of the offense specifically exclude a spouse.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 631, § 1, effective July 1. L. 88: Entire section R&RE, p. 725, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator’s note. The cases annotated below were all decided prior to the 1988 amendment to this section.

Marital exception of this section is neither arbitrary nor irrational as it may remove an obstacle to the resumption of normal marital relations and also avoids the difficult emotional issues and problems of proof inherent in this sensitive area. People v. Brown, 632 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1981).

Section 18-3-402 and this section are severable, so that even if the former were invalidated the latter would still be capable of enforcement. People v. Brown, 632 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1981).

Former law. For cases construing requirement of former rape statute that the victim could not be the wife of the actor, see Waelchi v. People, 77 Colo. 147, 234 P. 1113 (1925); Schreiner v. People, 95 Colo. 392, 36 P.2d 764 (1934); Efsiever v. People, 105 Colo. 88, 96 P.2d 8 (1939); McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

18-3-410. Medical exception. The provisions of this part 4 shall not apply to any act performed for bona fide medical purposes if such act is performed in a manner which is not inconsistent with reasonable medical practices.

Source: L. 75: Entire part R&RE, p. 631, § 1, effective July 1.

18-3-411. Sex offenses against children - “unlawful sexual offense” defined - limitation for commencing proceedings - evidence - statutory privilege. (1) As used in this section, “unlawful sexual offense” means enticement of a child, as described in section 18-3-305, sexual assault, as described in section 18-3-402, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age, sexual assault in the first degree, as described in section 18-3-402, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age; sexual assault in the second degree, as described in section 18-3-403 (1) (a), (1) (b), (1) (c), (1) (d), (1) (g), or (1) (h), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age, or as described in section 18-3-403 (1) (e), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim is less than fifteen years of age and the actor is at least four years older than the victim; unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404 (1) (a), (1) (b), (1) (c), (1) (d), (1) (f), or (1) (g), when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age; sexual assault in the third degree, as described in section 18-3-404 (1) (a), (1) (b), (1) (c), (1) (d), (1) (f), or (1) (g), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age; sexual assault on a child, as described in section 18-3-405; sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, as described in section 18-3-405.3; aggravated incest, as described in section 18-6-302; trafficking in children, as described in section 18-3-502; sexual exploitation of a child, as described in section 18-6-403; procurement of a child for sexual exploitation, as described in section 18-6-404; indecent exposure, as described in section 18-7-302, soliciting for child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-402; pandering of a child, as described in section 18-7-403; procurement of a child, as described in section 18-7-403.5; keeping a place of child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-404; pimping of a child, as described in section 18-7-405; inducement of child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-405.5; patronizing a prostituted child, as described in section 18-7-406; class 4 felony internet luring of a child, as described in section 18-3-306 (3); internet sexual exploitation of a child, as described in section 18-3-405.4; or criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the acts specified in this subsection (1).

(2) No person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for a misdemeanor offense specified in section 18-3-402 or 18-3-404, unless the indictment, information, complaint, or action for the same is found or instituted within five years after the commission of the offense. The limitation for commencing criminal proceedings and juvenile delinquency proceedings concerning unlawful sexual offenses that are felonies shall be governed by section 16-5-401 (1) (a), C.R.S.

(3) Out-of-court statements made by a child describing any act of sexual contact, intrusion, or penetration, as defined in section 18-3-401, performed with, by, or on the child declarant, not otherwise admissible by a statute or court rule which provides an exception to the objection of hearsay, may be admissible in any proceeding in which the child is a victim of an unlawful sexual offense pursuant to the provisions of section 13-25-129, C.R.S.

(4) All cases involving the commission of an unlawful sexual offense shall take precedence before the court; the court shall hear these cases as soon as possible after they are filed.

(5) The statutory privilege between the husband and the wife shall not be available for excluding or refusing testimony in any prosecution of an unlawful sexual offense.

Source: L. 82: Entire section added, p. 313, § 1, effective July 1. L. 83: (3) added, p. 630, § 2, effective May 25; (4) and (5) added, p. 694, § 3, effective June 15. L. 85: (1) and (2) amended, p. 618, § 12, effective July 1. L. 88: (5) amended, p. 713, § 19, effective July 1. L. 91: (1) amended, p. 406, § 11, effective June 6. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 1717, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) and (2) amended, p. 704, § 29, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2) amended, p. 1128, § 2, effective June 3. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 2056, § 8, effective July 1; (2) amended, p. 413, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2010: (1) amended, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 538, § 9, effective April 21.

Cross references: For provisions concerning child abuse that are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-6-401.1; for the husband-wife privilege, see § 13-90-107.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law", see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982). For article, "The Child Sex Abuse Case in the Courtroom", see 15 Colo. Law. 807 (1986).

Specific expression of legislative intent to apply ten-year statute of limitations to offenses occurring on or after July 1, 1979, overcomes presumption of prospective operation. People v. Midgley, 714 P.2d 902 (Colo. 1986).

Flat 10-year statute of limitations applies to offenses allegedly committed before June 3, 2002, due to an ambiguity created in the act enacting the 2002 amendments to this section. The general statutory construction rule of lenity requires that ambiguity in the meaning of a criminal statute must be interpreted in favor of the defendant. Thus, effective date section of the 2002 enacting legislation stating that the act applies to offenses committed on or after passage of the act (June 3, 2002) is controlling despite July 1, 1992 date set forth in the substantive provisions of the statute. People v. Sum- mers, 208 P.3d 251 (Colo. 2009) (decided based upon statute as it existed at the time the alleged crimes were committed prior to 2006 amendments).

In prosecution for sexual assault, the prosecutor had obligation to provide defense counsel with a victim's prior, allegedly false, rape report because the rape report was highly probative of the victim's credibility as a witness. People v. Wilson, 678 P.2d 1024 (Colo. App. 1983), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 843, 105 S. Ct. 148, 83 L. Ed.2d 87 (1984).

No error in instructing jury that exact dates of two offenses charged need not be proved, where evidence clearly showed two different incidents, defendant was charged in connection with both, and neither could have occurred outside the applicable limitation period. People v. Bolton, 859 P.2d 303 (Colo. App. 1993).

Applied in People v. Wood, 743 P.2d 422 (Colo. 1987); People v. District Court, 743 P.2d 432 (Colo. 1987).

18-3-412. Habitual sex offenders against children - indictment or information - verdict of the jury. (1) For the purpose of this section, "unlawful sexual offense" means sexual assault, as described in section 18-3-402, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age, sexual assault in the first degree, as described in section 18-3-402, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age; sexual assault in the second degree, as described in section 18-3-403 (1) (a), (1) (b), (1) (c), (1) (d), (1) (g), or (1) (h), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age, or as described in section 18-3-403 (1) (e), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim is less than fifteen years of age and the actor is at least four years older than the victim; unlawful sexual contact, as described in section 18-3-404 (1) (a), (1) (b), (1) (c), (1) (d), (1) (f), or (1) (g), when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age; sexual assault in the third degree, as described in section 18-3-404 (1) (a), (1) (b), (1) (c), (1) (d), (1) (f), or (1) (g), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age; sexual assault on a child, as described in section 18-3-405; sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, as described in section 18-3-405.3; aggravated incest, as described in section 18-6-302; trafficking in children, as described in section 18-3-502; sexual exploitation of a child, as described in section 18-6-403; procurement of a child for sexual exploitation, as described in section 18-6-404; soliciting for child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-402; pandering of a child, as described in section 18-7-403; procurement of a child, as described in section 18-7-403.5; keeping a place of child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-404; pimping of a child, as described in section 18-7-405; inducement of child prostitution, as described in section 18-7-405.5; patronizing a prostituted child, as described in section 18-7-406; or criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of the acts specified in this subsection (1).

(2) Every person convicted in this state of an unlawful sexual offense who has been previously convicted upon charges prior to the commission of the present act, which were separately brought, either in this state or elsewhere, of an unlawful sexual offense or who has been previously convicted under the laws of any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States of an unlawful act that, if committed within this state, would be an unlawful sexual offense shall be adjudged an habitual sex offender against children. If the second or subsequent unlawful sexual offense for which a defendant is convicted constitutes a felony, the court shall impose a sentence to the department of corrections of not less than three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for that class felony as set out in section 18-1.3-401. If the second or subsequent unlawful sexual offense for which a defendant is convicted constitutes a misdemeanor, the court shall impose a sentence to the county jail of not less than three times the maximum sentence for that class misdemeanor as set out in section 18-1.3-501.

(3) Any previous conviction of an unlawful sexual offense shall be set forth in apt words in the complaint, indictment, or information. For purposes of trial, a duly authenticated copy of the record of previous convictions and judgments of any court of record for any of said crimes of the party indicted, charged, or informed against shall be prima facie evidence of such convictions and may be used in evidence against such party. A duly authenticated copy of the records of institutions of treatment or incarceration, including, but not limited to, records pertaining to identification of the party indicted, charged, or informed against, shall be prima facie evidence of the facts contained therein and may be used in evidence against such party.

(4) Any person who is subject to the provisions of this section shall not be eligible for suspension of sentence.

(5) The procedures specified in section 18-1.3-803 shall govern in a trial to which the provisions of this section are alleged to apply based on a previous conviction or convictions for an unlawful sexual offense as set out in the complaint, indictment, or information.

Source: L. 82: Entire section added, p. 316, § 1, effective July 1. L. 85: (1) amended, p. 619, § 13, effective July 1. L. 96: (5) amended, p. 1846, § 18, effective July 1. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 1154, § 18, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) amended, p. 711, § 49, effective July 1; (2) amended, p. 249, § 1, effective August 2. L. 2002: (2) and (5) amended, p. 1513, § 193, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2) and (4) amended, p. 1427, § 7, effective April 29. L. 2010: (1) amended, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 539, § 10, effective April 21.

Cross references: (1) For provisions concerning habitual child abusers that are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-6-401.2; for limitations on collateral attacks on prior convictions, see § 16-5-402.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (2) and (5), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Review of New Legislation Relating to Criminal Law", see 11 Colo. Law. 2148 (1982).

The fact that this section allows a judge, not a jury, to find facts that increase a defendant's sentence beyond that authorized by the jury's verdict is not unconstitutional pursuant to Ring v. Arizona, 536 U.S. 584, 122 S.

Ct. 24228, 153 L. Ed. 2d 556 (2002); People v. Kyle, 111 P.3d 491 (Colo. App. 2004).

There was no abuse of discretion by the court in the use of a prior conviction for sentencing purposes. People v. Quintano, 81 P.3d 1093 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 105 P.3d 585 (Colo. 2005).

18-3-412.5. Failure to register as a sex offender. (1) A person who is required to register pursuant to article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., and who fails to comply with any of the requirements placed on registrants by said article, including but not limited to committing any of the acts specified in this subsection (1), commits the offense of failure to register as a sex offender:

- (a) Failure to register pursuant to article 22 of title 16, C.R.S.;
 - (b) Submission of a registration form containing false information or submission of an incomplete registration form;
 - (c) Failure to provide information or knowingly providing false information to a probation department employee, to a community corrections administrator or his or her designee, or to a judge or magistrate when receiving notice pursuant to section 16-22-106 (1), (2), or (3), C.R.S., of the duty to register;
 - (d) If the person has been sentenced to a county jail, otherwise incarcerated, or committed, due to conviction of or disposition or adjudication for an offense specified in section 16-22-103, C.R.S., failure to provide notice of the address where the person intends to reside upon release as required in sections 16-22-106 and 16-22-107, C.R.S.;
 - (e) Knowingly providing false information to a sheriff or his or her designee, department of corrections personnel, or department of human services personnel concerning the address where the person intends to reside upon release from the county jail, the department of corrections, or the department of human services. Providing false information shall include, but is not limited to, providing false information as described in section 16-22-107 (4) (b), C.R.S.
 - (f) Failure when registering to provide the person's current name and any former names;
 - (g) Failure to register with the local law enforcement agency in each jurisdiction in which the person resides upon changing an address, establishing an additional residence, or legally changing names;
 - (h) Failure to provide the person's correct date of birth, to sit for or otherwise provide a current photograph or image, to provide a current set of fingerprints, or to provide the person's correct address;
 - (i) Failure to complete a cancellation of registration form and file the form with the local law enforcement agency of the jurisdiction in which the person will no longer reside;
 - (j) When the person's place of residence is a trailer or motor home, failure to register an address at which the trailer or motor home is lawfully located pursuant to section 16-22-109 (1) (a.3), C.R.S.;
 - (k) Failure to register an e-mail address, instant-messaging identity, or chat room identity prior to using the address or identity if the person is required to register that information pursuant to section 16-22-108 (2.5), C.R.S.
- (1.5) (a) In a prosecution for a violation of this section, it is an affirmative defense that:
- (I) Uncontrollable circumstances prevented the person from complying;
 - (II) The person did not contribute to the creation of the circumstances in reckless disregard of the requirement to comply; and
 - (III) The person complied as soon as the circumstances ceased to exist.
- (b) In order to assert the affirmative defense pursuant to this subsection (1.5), the defendant shall provide notice to the prosecuting attorney as soon as practicable, but not later than thirty-five days prior to trial, of his or her notice of intent to rely upon the affirmative defense. The notice shall include a description of the uncontrollable circumstance or circumstances and the dates the uncontrollable circumstances began and ceased to exist in addition to the names and addresses of any witnesses the defendant plans to call to support the affirmative defense. The prosecuting attorney shall advise the defendant of the names and addresses of any additional witnesses who may be called to refute such affirmative defense as soon as practicable after their names become known. Upon the request of the prosecution, the court shall first rule as a matter of law whether the claimed facts and circumstances would, if established, constitute sufficient evidence to support submission to the jury.

(2) (a) Failure to register as a sex offender is a class 6 felony if the person was convicted of felony unlawful sexual behavior, or of another offense, the underlying factual basis of which includes felony unlawful sexual behavior, or if the person received a disposition or was adjudicated for an offense that would constitute felony unlawful sexual behavior if committed by an adult, or for another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves felony unlawful sexual behavior; except that any second or subsequent offense of failure to register as a sex offender by such person is a class 5 felony.

(b) Any person convicted of felony failure to register as a sex offender shall be sentenced pursuant to the provisions of section 18-1.3-401. If such person is sentenced to probation, the court may require, as a condition of probation, that the person participate until further order of the court in an intensive supervision probation program established pursuant to section 18-1.3-1007. If such person is sentenced to incarceration and subsequently released on parole, the parole board may require, as a condition of parole, that the person participate in an intensive supervision parole program established pursuant to section 18-1.3-1005.

(c) A person who is convicted of a felony sex offense in another state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military or federal jurisdiction, and who commits failure to register as a sex offender in this state commits felony failure to register as a sex offender as specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2) and shall be sentenced as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (2).

(3) (a) Failure to register as a sex offender is a class 1 misdemeanor if the person was convicted of misdemeanor unlawful sexual behavior, or of another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves misdemeanor unlawful sexual behavior, or if the person received a disposition or was adjudicated for an offense that would constitute misdemeanor unlawful sexual behavior if committed by an adult, or for another offense, the underlying factual basis of which involves misdemeanor unlawful sexual behavior. A class 1 misdemeanor conviction pursuant to this subsection (3) is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(b) A person who is convicted of a misdemeanor sex offense in another state or jurisdiction, including but not limited to a military or federal jurisdiction, and who commits failure to register as a sex offender in this state commits misdemeanor failure to register as a sex offender as specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3).

(4) (a) Any juvenile who receives a disposition or is adjudicated for a delinquent act of failure to register as a sex offender that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult shall be sentenced to a forty-five-day mandatory minimum detention sentence; except that any juvenile who receives a disposition or is adjudicated for a second or subsequent delinquent act of failure to register as a sex offender that would constitute a felony if committed by an adult shall be placed or committed out of the home for not less than one year.

(b) Any juvenile who receives a disposition or is adjudicated for a delinquent act of failure to register as a sex offender that would constitute a misdemeanor if committed by an adult shall be sentenced to a thirty-day mandatory minimum detention sentence; except that any juvenile who receives a disposition or is adjudicated for a second or subsequent delinquent act of failure to register as a sex offender that would constitute a misdemeanor if committed by an adult shall be sentenced to a forty-five-day mandatory minimum detention sentence.

(5) For purposes of this section, unless the context otherwise requires, "unlawful sexual behavior" has the same meaning as set forth in section 16-22-102 (9), C.R.S.

(6) (a) When a peace officer determines that there is probable cause to believe that a crime of failure to register as a sex offender has been committed by a person required to register as a sexually violent predator in this state pursuant to article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., or in any other state, the officer shall arrest the person suspected of the crime. It shall be a condition of any bond posted by such person that the person shall register pursuant to the provisions of section 16-22-108, C.R.S., within seven days after release from incarceration.

(b) When a peace officer makes a warrantless arrest pursuant to this subsection (6), the peace officer shall immediately notify the Colorado bureau of investigation of the arrest. Upon receiving the notification, the Colorado bureau of investigation shall notify the jurisdiction where the sexually violent predator last registered. The jurisdiction where the sexually violent predator last registered, if it is not the jurisdiction where the probable cause arrest is made, shall coordinate with the arresting jurisdiction immediately to determine the appropriate jurisdiction that will file the charge. If the sexually violent predator is being held in custody after the arrest, the appropriate jurisdiction shall have no less than seven days after the date of the arrest to charge the sexually violent predator.

Source: L. 91: Entire section added, p. 393, § 1, effective April 17. L. 94: Entire section R&RE, p. 1736, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: (6) amended and (6.5) and (9) added, p. 1309, § 1, effective June 5; (3) and (4) amended, p. 468, § 16, effective July 1. L. 96: (1), (2), (4), and (6) amended and (6.7) added, p. 1581, § 5, effective July 1; (8) amended, p. 1691, § 25, effective January 1, 1997. L. 97: IP(6.7) amended, p. 173, § 1, effective March 31; (1)(f) amended, p. 1547, § 19, effective July 1; (2) and (6.7)(c) amended and (6.7)(e) added, pp. 1553, 1554, §§ 6, 7, effective July 1; (3.5) added and IP(7) and (8) amended, p. 1563, § 9, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 389, § 1, effective April 21. L. 99: (1)(a)(II), IP(1)(b), (1)(b)(XXI) to (1)(b)(XXIII), (1)(c), (2)(a), (2)(c), (3)(d), (6)(b), (6.5)(b), (6.5)(c), (7)(a)(II), and (7)(a)(III) amended and (1)(d), (4)(a)(III.5), and (6)(b.5) added, pp. 1144, 1146, 1150, 1156, 1155, 1151, §§ 2, 6, 13, 20, 19, 14, 21, effective July 1; IP(4)(a) amended, p. 799, § 19, effective July 1. L. 2000: (2)(a)(I) and (6)(b) amended and (3)(e), (3.5)(e), (3.5)(f), and (4)(a)(VI) added, pp. 718, 719, §§ 2, 5, 3, 1, 4, effective May 23; IP(1)(b), (1)(d), (2)(a)(I), (3)(a), (3)(d), (3.5)(a), (6)(c), (6.5)(d), and IP(7)(a) amended and (1)(b)(XXIV), (3.7), (4)(a)(VII), (5)(c), (6)(e), (6.5)(e), and (7)(c) added, pp. 915, 919, 920, 918, §§ 1, 5, 6, 8, 2, 3, 4, effective July 1; (1)(b)(I), (1)(b)(II), (1)(b)(III), (7)(a)(II), and (7)(a)(III) amended, p. 705, § 30, effective July 1; (8.5) added, p. 432, § 2, effective July 1; (6.5)(b) amended, p. 250, § 3, effective August 2. L. 2001: (4)(b) and (4)(c) amended, p. 567, § 2, effective May 29; (3)(a)(I.5) and (3.9) added and (7)(c) amended, pp. 656, 658, §§ 1, 8, 2, effective May 30; (2)(a)(I), (2)(a)(II), (3)(e), (3.5)(e), (3.5)(f), (6)(b), (6.5)(c), (6.5)(d), IP(7)(a), (7)(a)(I), (7)(a)(II), and (7)(a)(III) amended and (3.6) and (7)(a)(VI) added, pp. 962, 960, 961, §§ 3, 1, 2, effective June 5. L. 2002: Entire section R&RE, p. 1178, § 2, effective July 1; (2)(b) amended, p. 1567, § 393, effective October 1. L. 2004: (2)(c) and (5) added and (3) amended, p. 1119, §§ 17, 18, effective May 27; (3) amended, p. 635, § 7, effective August 4. L. 2006: (6) added, p. 1313, § 7, effective May 30. L. 2007: IP(1) amended and (1)(j) added, p. 211, § 4, effective March 26; (1)(k) added, p. 1682, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1.5) added and (2)(b) amended, (HB 11-1278), ch. 224, p. 965, § 10, effective May 27. L. 2012: (1.5)(b) and (6) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 872, § 128, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (2)(a)(I) by House Bill 00-1232 and House Bill 00-1317 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (3) by House Bill 04-1388 and Senate Bill 04-154 were harmonized.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsections (1.5)(b) and (6) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

Cross references: (1) For provisions relating to sex offender registration requirements, see article 22 of title 16.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2000 act enacting subsection (8.5), see section 1 of chapter 125, Session Laws of Colorado 2000. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2001 act amending subsections (4)(b) and (4)(c), see section 1 of chapter 176, Session Laws of Colorado 2001. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (2)(b), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Failure to register as a sex offender is a continuing offense. Since the general assembly determined that sex offenders pose a continuous threat to society and registration is necessary to continually monitor sex offenders, it follows that the failure to register offense is a continuing offense. People v. Lopez, 140 P.3d 106 (Colo. App. 2005).

When the prosecution relies on the continuing offense doctrine to prosecute a failure to register offense, the prosecution must provide the court and defense the dates that the prosecution intends to rely on to prosecute the failure to register offense. The jury instructions should also reflect the dates provided by the prosecution. People v. Lopez, 140 P.3d 106 (Colo. App. 2005).

Failure to register as a sex offender is not a strict liability offense but includes the mental state of knowingly. People v. Lopez, 140 P.3d 106 (Colo. App. 2005).

A person who fails to comply with any of the requirements placed on registrants in subsections (1)(a) through (1)(k) commits the offense of failure to register as a sex offender. Subsections (1)(a) through (1)(k) are not merely examples of failure to register. People v. Poage, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Subsection (1)(i) requires that prosecution prove defendant moved away from the county of his or her last registration. The prosecution presented no evidence that defendant, who was homeless, had moved out of the county. Therefore, the conviction must be vacated. People v. Poage, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Failure to register as a sex offender is not a crime involving moral turpitude under the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1227(a)(2)(A)(ii). Efagene v. Holder, 642 F.3d 918 (10th Cir. 2011).

18-3-412.6. Failure to verify location as a sex offender. (1) A person who is required to register pursuant to article 22 of title 16, C.R.S., and who lacks a fixed residence, as defined in that article, and who fails to comply with the provisions of section 16-22-109 (3.5) (c) (I) or 16-22-109 (3.5) (c) (II), C.R.S., commits the offense of failure to verify location as a sex offender.

(2) (a) In a prosecution for a violation of this section, it is an affirmative defense that:

(I) Uncontrollable circumstances prevented the person from complying; and

(II) The person did not contribute to the creation of the circumstances in reckless disregard of the requirement to comply; and

(III) The person complied as soon as the circumstances ceased to exist.

(b) In order to assert the affirmative defense pursuant to this subsection (2), the defendant shall provide notice to the prosecuting attorney as soon as practicable, but not later than thirty days prior to trial, of his or her notice of intent to rely upon the affirmative defense. The notice shall include a description of the uncontrollable circumstance or circumstances and the dates that the uncontrollable circumstances began and ceased to exist in addition to the names and addresses of any witnesses the defendant plans to call to support the affirmative defense. The prosecuting attorney shall advise the defendant of the names and addresses of any additional witnesses who may be called to refute the affirmative defense as soon as practicable after their names become known. Upon the request of the prosecution, the court shall first rule as a matter of law whether the claimed facts and circumstances would, if established, constitute sufficient evidence to support submission to the jury.

(3) Failure to verify location as a sex offender is an unclassified misdemeanor punishable by a sentence of up to thirty days in the county jail; except that a third or subsequent violation of this section is an unclassified misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in the county jail.

(4) Failure to verify location as a sex offender is not a sexual offense subject to the provisions of sections 16-11.7-104 and 16-11.7-105, C.R.S., and, notwithstanding any other provision of law to the contrary, offenders convicted of a violation of this section are not eligible for probation pursuant to part 2 of article 1.3 of this title.

Source: L. 2012: Entire section added, (HB 12-1346), ch. 220, p. 945, § 6, effective July 1.

18-3-413. Video tape depositions - children - victims of sexual offenses. (1) When a defendant has been charged with an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), or incest, as defined in section 18-6-301, and when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age, the prosecution may apply to the court for an order that a deposition be taken of the victim's testimony and that the deposition be recorded and preserved on video tape.

(2) The prosecution shall apply for the order in writing at least three days prior to the taking of the deposition. The defendant shall receive reasonable notice of the taking of the deposition.

(3) Upon timely receipt of the application, the court shall make a preliminary finding regarding whether, at the time of trial, the victim is likely to be medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of rule 804 (a) of the Colorado rules of evidence. Such finding shall be based on, but not be limited to, recommendations from the child's therapist or any other person having direct contact with the child, whose recommendations are based on specific behavioral indicators exhibited by the child. If the court so finds, it shall order that the deposition be taken, pursuant to rule 15 (d) of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure, and preserved on video tape. The prosecution shall transmit the video tape to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending.

(4) If at the time of trial the court finds that further testimony would cause the victim emotional trauma so that the victim is medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of rule 804 (a) of the Colorado rules of evidence, the court may admit the video tape of the victim's deposition as former testimony under rule 804 (b) (1) of the Colorado rules of evidence.

(5) Nothing in this section shall prevent the admission into evidence of any videotaped statements of children which would qualify for admission pursuant to section 13-25-129, C.R.S., or any other statute or rule of evidence.

Source: L. 83: Entire section added, p. 694, § 4, effective June 15. L. 91: (5) added, p. 406, § 12, effective June 6. L. 2003: (1) amended, p. 974, § 6, effective April 17.

Cross references: For provisions concerning video tape depositions of victims of child abuse that are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-6-401.3.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Child Sex Abuse Case in the Courtroom", see 15 Colo. Law. 807 (1986). For comment, "Confrontation of Child Victim-Witnesses: Trauma, Unavailability, and Colorado's Hearsay Exceptions for Statements Describing Sexual Abuse", see 60 Colo. L. Rev. 659 (1989). For article, "Children as Witnesses", see 31 Colo. Law. 15 (October 2002).

Constitutionality. Implementation of this statute in a manner which preserves other aspects of the right to confrontation is not violative of the defendant's constitutional rights even though witness does not look directly upon the defendant or testify in the defendant's direct physical presence. People v. Thomas, 770 P.2d 1324 (Colo. App. 1988), rev'd on other grounds, 803 P.2d 144 (Colo. 1990).

As subsection (5), enacted in 1991, did not apply to offenses committed before June 6, 1991, this subsection was not applicable to offenses committed between June 1, 1989, and April 10, 1990. People v. Carter, 919 P.2d 862 (Colo. App. 1996).

Medical unavailability includes a situation in which testifying in front of the defendant would cause the child substantial and long term emotional or psychological harm. Thomas v. People, 803 P.2d 144 (Colo. 1990); People v. Newbrough, 803 P.2d 155 (Colo. 1990).

Specific findings required. Testimony about the likely impact of the child's age and emotional inability to testify must be related to the particular child witness. The mere unwillingness, nervousness, excitement, or reluctance to testify are not sufficient to render the child medically unavailable. People v. Thomas, 770 P.2d 1324 (Colo. App. 1988).

Children's videotaped depositions were admitted at sexual abuse trial where evidence established that both victims were medically unavailable and would be severely traumatized by the defendant's presence during their testimony. Thomas v. Guenther, 754 F. Supp. 833 (D. Colo. 1990), aff'd, 962 F.2d 1477 (10th Cir. 1992).

This section governs all videotaped statements obtained from child sexual abuse victims. People v. Newbrough, 803 P.2d 155 (Colo. 1990).

18-3-413.5. Use of closed circuit television - child victims of sexual offenses. (Repealed)

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 677, § 1, effective May 2. L. 2003: IP(1)(a) amended, p. 974, § 7, effective April 17. L. 2004: (2)(a)(V) amended, p. 1380, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2005: Entire section repealed, p. 427, § 8, effective April 29.

18-3-414. Payment of treatment costs for the victim or victims of a sexual offense against a child. (1) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, the court may order any person who is convicted of an unlawful sexual offense, as defined in section 18-3-411 (1), or of incest, as defined in section 18-6-301, when the victim was under the age of fifteen at the time of the commission of the offense, to meet all or any portion of the financial obligations of treatment prescribed for the victim or victims of his or her offense.

(2) At the time of sentencing, the court may order that an offender described in subsection (1) of this section be put on a period of probation for the purpose of paying the treatment costs of the victim or victims.

Source: L. 83: Entire section added, p. 694, § 5, effective June 15. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 974, § 8, effective April 17.

Cross references: For provisions concerning payment of treatment costs for child abuse victims that are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-6-401.4.

18-3-414.5. Sexually violent predators - assessment - annual report. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Sexually violent predator" means an offender:

(I) Who is eighteen years of age or older as of the date the offense is committed or who is less than eighteen years of age as of the date the offense is committed but is tried as an adult pursuant to section 19-2-517 or 19-2-518, C.R.S.;

(II) Who has been convicted on or after July 1, 1999, of one of the following offenses, or of an attempt, solicitation, or conspiracy to commit one of the following offenses, committed on or after July 1, 1997:

(A) Sexual assault, in violation of section 18-3-402 or sexual assault in the first degree, in violation of section 18-3-402, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(B) Sexual assault in the second degree, in violation of section 18-3-403, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(C) Unlawful sexual contact, in violation of section 18-3-404 (1.5) or (2) or sexual assault in the third degree, in violation of section 18-3-404 (1.5) or (2), as it existed prior to July 1, 2000;

(D) Sexual assault on a child, in violation of section 18-3-405; or

(E) Sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, in violation of section 18-3-405.3;

(III) Whose victim was a stranger to the offender or a person with whom the offender established or promoted a relationship primarily for the purpose of sexual victimization; and

(IV) Who, based upon the results of a risk assessment screening instrument developed by the division of criminal justice in consultation with and approved by the sex offender management board established pursuant to section 16-11.7-103 (1), C.R.S., is likely to subsequently commit one or more of the offenses specified in subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a) under the circumstances described in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (a).

(b) "Convicted" includes having received a verdict of guilty by a judge or jury, having pleaded guilty or nolo contendere, or having received a deferred judgment and sentence.

(2) When a defendant is convicted of one of the offenses specified in subparagraph (II) of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section, the probation department shall, in coordination with the evaluator completing the mental health sex offense specific evaluation, complete the sexually violent predator risk assessment, unless the evaluation and assessment have been completed within the six months prior to the conviction or the defendant has been previously designated a sexually violent predator. Based on the results of the assessment, the court shall make specific findings of fact and enter an order concerning whether the defendant is a sexually violent predator. If the defendant is found to be a sexually violent predator, the defendant shall be required to register pursuant to the provisions of section 16-22-108, C.R.S., and shall be subject to community notification pursuant to part 9 of article 13 of title 16, C.R.S. If the department of corrections receives a mittimus that indicates that the court did not make a specific finding of fact or enter an order regarding whether the defendant is a sexually violent predator, the department shall immediately notify the court and, if necessary, return the defendant to the custody of the sheriff for delivery to the court, and the court shall make a finding or enter an order regarding whether the defendant is a sexually violent predator; except that this provision shall not apply if the court was not required to enter the order when imposing the original sentence in the case.

(3) When considering release on parole or discharge for an offender who was convicted of one of the offenses specified in subparagraph (II) of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section, if there has been no previous court order, the parole board shall make specific findings concerning whether the offender is a sexually violent predator, based on the results of a sexually violent predator assessment. If no previous assessment has been completed, the parole board shall order the department of corrections to complete a sexually violent predator assessment. If the parole board finds that the offender is a sexually violent predator, the offender shall be required to register pursuant to the provisions of section 16-22-108, C.R.S., and shall be subject to community notification pursuant to part 9 of article 13 of title 16, C.R.S.

(4) On or before January 15, 2008, and on or before January 15 each year thereafter, the judicial department and the department of corrections shall jointly submit to the judiciary committees of the senate and the house of representatives, or any successor committees, to the division of criminal justice in the department of public safety, and to the governor a report specifying the following information:

(a) The number of offenders evaluated pursuant to this section in the preceding twelve months;

(b) The number of sexually violent predators identified pursuant to this section in the preceding twelve months;

(c) The total number of sexually violent predators in the custody of the department of corrections at the time of the report, specifying those incarcerated, those housed in community corrections, and those on parole, including the level of supervision for each sexually violent predator on parole;

(d) The length of the sentence imposed on each sexually violent predator in the custody of the department of corrections at the time of the report;

(e) The number of sexually violent predators discharged from parole during the preceding twelve months;

(f) The total number of sexually violent predators on probation at the time of the report and the level of supervision of each sexually violent predator on probation; and

(g) The number of sexually violent predators discharged from probation during the preceding twelve months.

Source: L. 97: Entire section added, p. 1564, § 10, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 397, § 2, effective April 21. L. 99: Entire section amended, p. 1148, § 9, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1)(a)(II)(A), (1)(a)(II)(B), and (1)(a)(II)(C) amended, p. 706, § 31, effective July 1. L. 2001: (2) amended, p. 657, § 4, effective May 30. L. 2002: (2) and (3) amended, p. 1186, § 22, effective July 1. L. 2006: IP(1)(a)(II), (1)(b), (2), and (3) amended, p. 1314, § 8, effective May 30. L. 2007: (4) added, p. 254, § 1, effective March 26. L. 2008: (2) amended, p. 214, § 1, effective March 26.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Constitutional Challenges to Sex Offender Registration and Community Notification Laws”, see 30 Colo. Law. 51 (February 2001).

Trial court’s adjudication of defendant as a sexually violent predator under this section did not violate defendant’s right to trial under Apprendi v. New Jersey. Lifetime duty to register as a sex offender and posting of defendant’s personal information on internet were not additional punishments giving rise to right to trial by jury. People v. Stead, 66 P.3d 117 (Colo. App. 2002).

Trial court’s adjudication of defendant as a sexually violent predator subjecting him to community notification did not violate defendant’s right to trial under Apprendi v. New Jersey. Community notification is not additional punishment giving rise to right to trial by jury. People v. Rowland, 207 P.3d 890 (Colo. App. 2009).

Sexually violent predator statute does not violate equal protection based on a slight difference between the arrest rate of a sexually violent predator versus a non-sexually violent predator for a sexual offense. People v. Mendoza, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Sexually violent predator statute does not violate procedural due process because some of the evaluation scoring is subjective. Sufficient safeguards are present to ensure that, when an evaluator makes a judgment, it is based on an equal application of the criteria. In addition, defendant had a hearing before the district court that ultimately made the decision. People v. Mendoza, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

There is no ex post facto violation when a current qualifying sexually violent predator offense was not a qualifying offense at the time it was committed. Since sexually violent predator status is not punishment, there is no constitutional violation. People v. Mendoza, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Defendant’s due process rights violated when the court determined his sexually violent predator status based upon a sexually violent predator risk assessment test without making specific findings of fact. People v. Tuffo, 209 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2009).

This section covers offense of misdemeanor sexual assault by including among its enumerated crimes “[s]exual assault, in violation of section 18-3-402”. Misdemeanor sexual assault is set forth in § 18-3-402 (1)(e). People v. Tuffo, 209 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2009).

Individuals convicted of misdemeanor sexual assaults should not be excluded from designation as sexually violent predators. Because this section plainly covers misdemeanor sexual assault, court need not consider any agency publications. People v. Tuffo, 209 P.3d 1226 (Colo. App. 2009).

The term “victim” means “intended victim” in the context of a conviction for attempted sexual assault. People v. Buerge, 240 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2009).

A fictional 14-year-old girl created by police officers conducting an Internet sting operation, therefore, can be a victim within the meaning of this section. People v. Buerge, 240 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2009).

The victim of an attempted sexual assault need not have actually been victimized and need not be an actual person. People v. Buerge, 240 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2009).

When perpetrator has been convicted of an attempted sexual assault, the definition of “victim” does not preclude a finding that defendant is a sexually violent predator. People v. Buerge, 240 P.3d 363 (Colo. App. 2009).

A court may find that a defendant is a sexually violent predator when the screening instrument and evaluator make a contrary recommendation as long as the court states specific reasons for doing so in the record. The screening instrument and evaluator’s opinion are intended to assist the court in making a decision, but the court is not bound by the recommendation. People v. Allen, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

The sex offender risk scale meets the statutory requirements for a “risk assessment screening instrument”. The sex offender management board satisfied the objectives and criteria set forth in § 16-11.7-103 for developing the screening instrument. People v. Brosh, 251 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 2010).

Court improperly found defendant to be a sexually violent predator under this section when there was no evidence in the record to establish that the victim was a stranger or that the defendant established or promoted a relationship for the purpose of sexual victimization. People v. Woellhaf, 87 P.3d 142 (Colo. App. 2003), rev’d on other grounds, 105 P.3d 209 (Colo. 2005).

Court improperly found defendant to be sexually violent predator. When the defendant is a neighbor of the victims, helped one of the victim’s carry in groceries, had dinner with both of the victims in his trailer, and had a nickname for one of the victims, the defendant is not a stranger for purposes of satisfying the third element of sexually violent predator status. People v. Hunter, 240 P.3d 424 (Colo. App. 2009).

Trial court erred in concluding defendant satisfied the third element of the sexually violent predator requirement and, thus, in designating him a sexually violent predator, since there was no evidence that he had previously promoted a relationship with the victim to facilitate that assault. People v. Valencia, 257 P.3d 1203 (Colo. App. 2011).

In case of stepfather who sexually assaulted adolescent stepdaughter, court properly interpreted phrase “promoted a relationship” to include failed attempts to establish a relationship with a stranger or known victim, as well as efforts to encourage a victim with whom the offender has a limited relationship, such as stepfather, to enter into a broader relationship primarily for the purpose of sexual victimization. People v. Tixier, 207 P.3d 844 (Colo. App. 2008).

In case of offender who sexually abused the daughter of his girlfriend, the court erred in its interpretation of “establishing a relationship”. That statutory criterion of “establishing a relationship” applies only when an offender, from the outset, seeks out a victim with whom he or she has no definable relationship for the primary purpose of sexual victimization. Where the offender already has a relationship with the victim independent of the sexual victimization, the offender cannot be considered to have established the relationship for that purpose. People v. Gallegos, 240 P.3d 882 (Colo. App. 2009).

Evidence supports court’s designation of defendant as a sexually violent predator. The fact that defendant used alcohol to drug the victim during the sexual assaults supports the fact that defendant promoted the relationship with the victim for the purpose of sexual victimization. Next, the court determined that the public is at-risk for defendant to repeat the crimes and that defendant is unable to abstain from alcohol. Those findings supported the court’s conclusion that defendant was likely to reoffend. People v. Brosh, 251 P.3d 456 (Colo. App. 2010).

Court did not err in designating defendant a sexually violent predator. The court found that defendant fostered the relationship to sexually victimize the child. People v. Mendoza, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

This section does not mandate an evidentiary hearing on whether an offender is a sexually violent predator. People v. Rowland, 207 P.3d 890 (Colo. App. 2009).

The court’s findings were sufficient to conclude that defendant was a sexually violent predator. People v. Loyas, 259 P.3d 505 (Colo. App. 2010).

18-3-415. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons charged with any sexual offense. Any adult or juvenile who is bound over for trial for any sexual offense involving sexual penetration as defined in section 18-3-401 (6), subsequent to a preliminary hearing or after having waived the right to a preliminary hearing, or any person who is indicted for or is convicted of any such offense, shall be ordered by the court to submit to a diagnostic test for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said diagnostic test to be ordered in conjunction with the diagnostic test ordered pursuant to section 18-3-415.5. The results of such diagnostic test shall be reported to the court or the court’s designee, who shall then disclose the results to any victim of the sexual offense who requests such disclosure. Review and disclosure of diagnostic test results by the courts shall be closed and confidential, and any transaction records relating thereto shall also be closed and confidential. If the person who is bound over for trial or who is indicted for or convicted of any such offense voluntarily submits to a diagnostic test for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), the fact of such person’s voluntary submission shall be admissible in mitigation of sentence if the person is convicted of the charged offense.

Source: L. 88: Entire section added, p. 728, § 1, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1731, § 16, effective July 1. L. 99: Entire section amended, p. 1003, § 10, effective May 29. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 451, § 1, effective April 24.

Cross references: (1) For the provision allowing the test to be done without the knowledge and consent of the person, see § 25-4-1405 (8)(a)(V).

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 1999 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 254, Session Laws of Colorado 1999.

18-3-415.5. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons charged with certain sexual offenses - mandatory sentencing. (1) For purposes of this section, “sexual offense” is limited to a sexual offense that consists of sexual penetration, as defined in section 18-3-401 (6), involving sexual intercourse or anal intercourse.

(2) Any adult or juvenile who is bound over for trial subsequent to a preliminary hearing or after having waived the right to a preliminary hearing on a charge of committing a sexual offense shall be ordered by the court to submit to a diagnostic test for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, said diagnostic test to be ordered in conjunction with the diagnostic test ordered pursuant to section 18-3-415. The results of said diagnostic test shall be reported to the district attorney. The district attorney shall keep the results of such diagnostic test strictly confidential, except for purposes of pleading and proving the mandatory sentencing provisions specified in subsection (5) of this section.

(3) (a) If the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section tests positive for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome, the district attorney may contact the state department of public health and environment or any county, district, or municipal public health agency to determine whether said person had been notified prior to the date of the offense for which the person has been bound over for trial that he or she tested positive for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

(b) If the district attorney determines that the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section had notice of his or her HIV infection prior to the date the offense was committed, the district attorney may file an indictment or information alleging such knowledge and seeking the mandatory sentencing provisions authorized in subsection (5) of this section. Any such allegation shall be kept confidential from the jury and under seal of court.

(c) The state department of public health and environment or any county, district, or municipal public health agency shall provide documentary evidence limited to whether the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section had notice of or had discussion concerning his or her HIV infection and the date of such notice or discussion. The parties may stipulate that the person identified in said documents as having notice or discussion of his or her HIV infection is the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section. Such stipulation shall constitute conclusive proof that said person had notice of his or her HIV infection prior to committing the substantive offense, and the court shall sentence said person in accordance with subsection (5) of this section.

(d) If the parties do not stipulate as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (3), an officer or employee of the state department of public health and environment or of the county, district, or municipal public health agency who has had contact with the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section regarding his or her HIV infection and can identify said person shall provide, for purposes of pretrial preparation and in court proceedings, oral and documentary evidence limited to whether said person had notice of or had discussion concerning his or her HIV infection and the date of such notice or discussion. If the state department or the county, district, or municipal public health agency no longer employs an officer or employee who has had contact with the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section regarding the person's HIV infection, the state department or the county, district, or municipal public health agency shall provide:

(I) The names of and current addresses, if available, for each former officer or employee who had contact with the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section regarding the person's HIV infection;

(II) Documentary evidence concerning whether the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section was provided notice of or had discussion concerning his or her HIV infection and the date of such notice or discussion; and

(III) If none of said former officers or employees are available, any officer or employee who has knowledge regarding whether the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section was provided notice of or had discussion concerning his or her HIV infection and the date of such notice or discussion. Said officer or employee shall provide such evidence for purposes of pretrial preparation and in court proceedings.

(4) Nothing in this section shall be interpreted as abridging the confidentiality requirements imposed on the state department of public health and environment and the county, district, and municipal public health agencies pursuant to part 14 of article 4 of title 25, C.R.S., with regard to any person or entity other than as specified in this section.

(5) (a) If a verdict of guilty is returned on the substantive offense with which the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section is charged, the court shall conduct a separate sentencing hearing as soon as practicable to determine whether said person had notice of his or her HIV infection prior to the date the offense was committed, as alleged. The sentencing hearing shall be conducted by the judge who presided at trial or before whom the guilty plea was entered or a replacement for said judge in the event he or she dies, resigns, is incapacitated, or is otherwise disqualified as provided in section 16-6-201, C.R.S. At the sentencing hearing, the district attorney shall have the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that said person had notice of his or her HIV infection prior to the date the offense was committed, as alleged.

(b) If the court determines that the person tested pursuant to subsection (2) of this section had notice of his or her HIV infection prior to the date the offense was committed, the judge shall sentence said person to a mandatory term of incarceration of at least three times the upper limit of the presumptive range for the level of offense committed, up to the remainder of the person's natural life, as provided in section 18-1.3-1004.

Source: L. 99: Entire section added, p. 1000, § 5, effective May 29. L. 2000: (2) amended, p. 451, § 2, effective April 24. L. 2002: (5)(b) amended, p. 1514, § 195, effective October 1. L. 2010: (3)(a), (3)(c), IP(3)(d), and (4) amended, (HB 10-1422), ch. 419, p. 2073, § 33, effective August 11.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (5)(b), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-3-416. Reports of convictions to department of education. When a person is convicted, pleads nolo contendere, or receives a deferred sentence for a violation of the provisions of this part 4 when the victim is a child and the court knows the person is a current or former employee of a school district in this state or holds a license or authorization pursuant to the provisions of article 60.5 of title 22, C.R.S., the court shall report such fact to the department of education.

Source: L. 90: Entire section added, p. 1025, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 1847, § 31, effective August 2.

18-3-417. Reports of sexual assault by applicants, registrants, or licensed professionals. When the director of the division of professions and occupations or a board or commission within the division of professions and occupations in the department of regulatory agencies refers a case to the office of expedited settlement or the office of the attorney general for disciplinary action related to an alleged offense described in this part 4, the office of expedited settlement or the office of the attorney general shall forward the victim's contact information to a victim's advocate in the office of the attorney general. The victim's advocate shall make reasonable efforts to advise the victim of the right to pursue criminal action, the right to pursue civil action, the applicable statutes of limitations, and contact information for the police, sheriff, and community-based resources in the jurisdiction where the alleged offense occurred. This provision shall not prohibit additional reporting of criminal offenses by the attorney general.

Source: L. 2007: Entire section added, p. 1109, § 1, effective May 23.

PART 5

HUMAN TRAFFICKING AND SLAVERY

Editor's note: This part 5 was added with relocations in 2010. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

18-3-501. Trafficking in adults. (1) A person commits trafficking in adults if he or she:

(a) Sells, exchanges, barter, or leases an adult and receives any money or other consideration or thing of value for the adult as a result of such transaction; or

(b) Receives an adult as a result of a transaction described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(2) As used in this section, “adult” means a person eighteen years of age or older.

(3) Trafficking in adults is a class 3 felony unless the adult or adults who have been trafficked are illegally present in the United States, in which case trafficking in adults is a class 2 felony.

Source: L. 2010: Entire part added with relocations, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 535, § 1, effective April 21.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 18-13-127 as it existed prior to 2010.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “2006 Immigration Legislation in Colorado”, see 35 Colo. Law. 79 (October 2006).

18-3-502. Trafficking in children. (1) A person commits trafficking in children if he or she:

(a) Sells, exchanges, barter, or leases a child and receives any money or other consideration or thing of value for the child as a result of such transaction; or

(b) Receives a child as a result of a transaction described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(2) As used in this section, “child” means a person under eighteen years of age.

(3) Trafficking in children is a class 2 felony.

Source: L. 2010: Entire part added with relocations, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 535, § 1, effective April 21.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 18-6-402 as it existed prior to 2010.

18-3-503. Coercion of involuntary servitude. (1) A person commits coercion of involuntary servitude if he or she coerces another person to perform labor or services by:

(a) Withholding or threatening to destroy documents relating to a person’s immigration status;

(b) Threatening to notify law enforcement officials that a person is present in the United States in violation of federal immigration laws;

(c) Threatening serious harm or physical restraint against that person or another person;

(d) Means of a scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause the person to believe that, if the person does not perform the labor or services, he or she or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint; or

(e) Abusing or threatening abuse of law or the legal process.

(2) A person may commit coercion of involuntary servitude regardless of whether the person provides compensation to the person who is coerced.

(3) Coercion of involuntary servitude is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 2010: Entire part added with relocations, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 536, § 1, effective April 21.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 18-13-129 as it existed prior to 2010.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “2006 Immigration Legislation in Colorado”, see 35 Colo. Law. 79 (October 2006).

PART 6

STALKING

Editor’s note: This part 6 was added with relocations in 2010. Former C.R.S. section numbers are shown in editor’s notes following those sections that were relocated.

18-3-601. Legislative declaration. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares that:

- (a) Stalking is a serious problem in this state and nationwide;
- (b) Although stalking often involves persons who have had an intimate relationship with one another, it can also involve persons who have little or no past relationship;
- (c) A stalker will often maintain strong, unshakable, and irrational emotional feelings for his or her victim and may likewise believe that the victim either returns these feelings of affection or will do so if the stalker is persistent enough. Further, the stalker often maintains this belief, despite a trivial or nonexistent basis for it and despite rejection, lack of reciprocation, efforts to restrict or avoid the stalker, and other facts that conflict with this belief.

(d) A stalker may also develop jealousy and animosity for persons who are in relationships with the victim, including family members, employers and co-workers, and friends, perceiving them as obstacles or as threats to the stalker’s own “relationship” with the victim;

(e) Because stalking involves highly inappropriate intensity, persistence, and possessiveness, it entails great unpredictability and creates great stress and fear for the victim;

(f) Stalking involves severe intrusions on the victim’s personal privacy and autonomy, with an immediate and long-lasting impact on quality of life as well as risks to security and safety of the victim and persons close to the victim, even in the absence of express threats of physical harm.

(2) The general assembly hereby recognizes the seriousness posed by stalking and adopts the provisions of this part 6 with the goal of encouraging and authorizing effective intervention before stalking can escalate into behavior that has even more serious consequences.

Source: L. 2010: Entire part added with relocations, (HB 10-1233), ch. 88, p. 293, § 1, effective August 11.

Editor’s note: This section is similar to former § 18-9-111 (4)(a) as it existed prior to 2010.

18-3-602. Stalking - penalty - definitions - Vonnies law. (1) A person commits stalking if directly, or indirectly through another person, the person knowingly:

(a) Makes a credible threat to another person and, in connection with the threat, repeatedly follows, approaches, contacts, or places under surveillance that person, a member of that person’s immediate family, or someone with whom that person has or has had a continuing relationship; or

(b) Makes a credible threat to another person and, in connection with the threat, repeatedly makes any form of communication with that person, a member of that person’s immediate family, or someone with whom that person has or has had a continuing relationship, regardless of whether a conversation ensues; or

(c) Repeatedly follows, approaches, contacts, places under surveillance, or makes any form of communication with another person, a member of that person’s immediate family, or someone with whom that person has or has had a continuing relationship in a manner that would cause a reasonable person to suffer serious emotional distress and does cause that person, a member of that person's immediate family, or someone with whom that person has or has had a continuing relationship to suffer serious emotional distress. For purposes of this paragraph (c), a victim need not show that he or she received professional treatment or counseling to show that he or she suffered serious emotional distress.

(2) For the purposes of this part 6:

(a) Conduct "in connection with" a credible threat means acts that further, advance, promote, or have a continuity of purpose, and may occur before, during, or after the credible threat.

(b) "Credible threat" means a threat, physical action, or repeated conduct that would cause a reasonable person to be in fear for the person's safety or the safety of his or her immediate family or of someone with whom the person has or has had a continuing relationship. The threat need not be directly expressed if the totality of the conduct would cause a reasonable person such fear.

(c) "Immediate family" includes the person's spouse and the person's parent, grandparent, sibling, or child.

(d) "Repeated" or "repeatedly" means on more than one occasion.

(3) A person who commits stalking:

(a) Commits a class 5 felony for a first offense except as otherwise provided in subsection (5) of this section; or

(b) Commits a class 4 felony for a second or subsequent offense, if the offense occurs within seven years after the date of a prior offense for which the person was convicted.

(4) Stalking is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified presumptive sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-401 (10).

(5) If, at the time of the offense, there was a temporary or permanent protection order, injunction, or condition of bond, probation, or parole or any other court order in effect against the person, prohibiting the behavior described in this section, the person commits a class 4 felony.

(6) Nothing in this section shall be construed to alter or diminish the inherent authority of the court to enforce its orders through civil or criminal contempt proceedings; however, before a criminal contempt proceeding is heard before the court, notice of the proceedings shall be provided to the district attorney for the judicial district of the court where the proceedings are to be heard and the district attorney for the judicial district in which the alleged act of criminal contempt occurred. The district attorney for either district shall be allowed to appear and argue for the imposition of contempt sanctions.

(7) A peace officer shall have a duty to respond as soon as reasonably possible to a report of stalking and to cooperate with the alleged victim in investigating the report.

(8) (a) When a person is arrested for an alleged violation of this section, the fixing of bail for the crime of stalking shall be done in accordance with section 16-4-103 (2) (d), C.R.S., and a protection order shall issue in accordance with section 18-1-1001(5).

(b) This subsection (8) shall be known and may be cited as "Vonnie's law".

(9) When a violation under this section is committed in connection with a violation of a court order, including but not limited to any protection order or any order that sets forth the conditions of a bond, any sentences imposed pursuant to this section and pursuant to section 18-6-803.5 or any sentence imposed in a contempt proceeding for violation of the court order shall be served consecutively and not concurrently.

Source: L. 2010: Entire part added with relocations, (HB 10-1233), ch. 88, p. 294, § 1, effective August 11. L. 2012: (5) amended and (8) and (9) added, (HB 12-1114), ch. 176, pp. 632, 631, § 4, 1, effective May 11.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-9-111 (4)(b), (4)(c), (5), and (6), as they existed prior to 2010.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-3-602 is similar to § 18-9-111 as it existed prior to the 2010 amendments to this part, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Subsection (4)(a)(II) held constitutional. By burdening only those communications furthering, promoting, or advancing an expressed credible threat, subsection (4)(a)(II) does not reach protected conduct. People v. Baer, 973 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1999) (decided prior to 1999 amendment to subsection (4)).

Nor is the provision void for vagueness since a person of ordinary intelligence can know what conduct is proscribed. People v. Baer, 973 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1999) (decided prior to 1999 amendment to subsection (4)).

Requiring a jury to determine "reasonableness" does not make subsection (4)(b)(III) unconstitutionally vague. The statute prohibits contact that inflicts "serious emotional distress" and provides an objective "reasonable person" standard to measure whether the emotional distress inflicted upon the victim was "serious". Thus, it provides notice that conduct that would cause a reasonable person serious emotional distress is prohibited. The only uncertainty raised by the statute is whether the conduct would cause a reasonable person serious emotional distress, and the determination of "reasonableness" is a question for the jury. People v. Yascavage, 80 P.3d 899 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd on other grounds, 101 P.3d 1090 (Colo. 2004).

Subsections (4)(b)(I) and (4)(b)(III) are not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad. The definition of "credible threat" does not substantially burden speech and is specifically sufficient to provide guidance to the public. The term "serious emotional distress" sets forth an identifiable objective standard for measuring the proscribed conduct and therefore is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Cross, 114 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2004), rev'd on other grounds, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006); People v. Richardson, 181 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2007).

Right to access to courts does not include right to file lawsuits in abusive manner; therefore, the stalking convictions that were based, in part, on defendant filing 13 frivolous lawsuits against the victim did not violate the defendant's right to access the courts. People v. Richardson, 181 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2007).

A defendant does not need to know that his or her conduct would cause a reasonable person serious emotional distress. This reading of subsection (4)(b)(III) would impart a nonexistent requirement that the defendant must intend to cause serious emotional distress. The defendant must only be aware of his or her conduct, and the result of that conduct is evaluated under an objective standard to which his or her specific intent is irrelevant. People v. Yascavage, 80 P.3d 899 (Colo. App. 2003), aff'd, 101 P.3d 1090 (Colo. 2004).

The mens rea of knowingly in the crime of emotional distress harassment by stalking does not apply to the element that the stalker be aware that his or her conduct would cause serious emotional distress to a reasonable person. Generally, the mental state applies to all elements of an offense unless the legislative intent is to limit its application. The general assembly recognized the stalker may be oblivious to reality of the emotional distress he or she is causing, and, therefore, it would be absurd to allow a defendant so out-of-touch with reality to avoid criminal prosecution. People v. Cross, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006).

An electronic surveillance device installed on the victim's car "repeatedly" stored information about her movements thereby allowing the defendant to gain information about her on repeated occasions, and therefore satisfying the requirements of this section. People v. Sullivan, 53 P.3d 1181 (Colo. App. 2002).

The phrase "in connection with" indicates an intention by the general assembly that a continued relationship between the credible threat and the repeated communications is contemplated. People v. Baer, 973 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1999) (decided prior to 1999 amendment to subsection (4)).

A person must directly, or indirectly through another person, knowingly make a credible threat to another person and repeatedly make any form of communication with the recipient of the threat. People v. Baer, 973 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1999) (decided prior to 1999 amendment to subsection (4)).

The repeated communications may occur before, during, or after the credible threat but they must be connected to the threat. People v. Baer, 973 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1999) (decided prior to 1999 amendment to subsection (4)).

Whether the repeated communications are "in connection with" the threat is a matter of fact just as the existence of a credible threat itself. People v. Baer, 973 P.2d 1225 (Colo. 1999) (decided prior to 1999 amendment to subsection (4)).

Trial court erred in not instructing the jury that defendant must knowingly engage in conduct taken in connection with the threat. People v. Suazo, 87 P.3d 124 (Colo. App. 2003).

The defendant could not have been charged with a violation of subsection (4) until all of the elements of the crime are completed. People v. Bastian, 981 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1998).

The defendant may be charged with increased penalties because of amendments to subsection

(4) that became effective in July of 1995 when the defendant did not consummate following the victim until August, but had committed elements of the offense prior to July. People v. Bastian, 981 P.2d 203 (Colo. App. 1998).

The phrase “under surveillance” includes electronic surveillance that records a person’s whereabouts as that person moves from one location to another and allows the stalker to access that information either simultaneously or shortly thereafter. People v. Sullivan, 53 P.3d 1181 (Colo. App. 2002).

Defendant’s statement that he was going to kill the victim if she did not see him was sufficient evidence to support a finding that he had made a credible threat. People v. Suazo, 87 P.3d 124 (Colo. App. 2003).

Evidence sufficient to support a finding that contact was made in connection with a credible threat. Defendant called the victim repeatedly on one day and threatened that he would kill her if she did not see him. Following this threat, defendant contacted the victim numerous times in person and by telephone and repeatedly asked to see her. This evidence is sufficient to support a finding that the contact was made in connection with a credible threat. People v. Suazo, 87 P.3d 124 (Colo. App. 2003).

Serious emotional distress was supported by the evidence where the victim testified that she suspected the defendant was stalking her for over a month, that she was concerned about constantly being watched, that she took alternate routes to her destinations, that she was uncomfortable and had stomach aches, that she had trouble sleeping and was anxious, and that she took a leave of absence from work to enter a safe house for her safety. People v. Sullivan, 53 P.3d 1181 (Colo. App. 2002).

Evidence sufficient to support a finding beyond a reasonable doubt of serious emotional distress where the victim testified that defendant’s behavior caused her to change her work schedule, take days off from work, and feel unsafe; she was nervous and had trouble sleeping; and she felt she was constantly being watched by defendant. The statute is clear that serious emotional distress need not be such as would compel professional treatment or a breakdown. People v. Cross, 114 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2004), rev’d on other grounds, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006).

Evidence sufficient to establish a “credible threat”. The credible threat does not need to be separate from the harassing behavior or verbal. Therefore, evidence that the defendant was only at the victim’s place of employment when the victim was there, the defendant would approach and make eye contact with the victim, and the defendant found out where the victim went to church and attended that church was sufficient to establish a “credible threat”. People v. Cross, 114 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2004), rev’d on other grounds, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006).

Court’s instruction for harassment by stalking was appropriate. The court instructed the jury that “knowingly” applied to both the credible threat and to the conduct in connection with the threat. People v. Cross, 114 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2004), rev’d on other grounds, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006).

The mens rea of knowingly in the crime of emotional distress harassment by stalking does not apply to the element that the stalker be aware that his or her conduct would cause serious emotional distress to a reasonable person. Generally, the mental state applies to all elements of an offense unless the legislative intent is to limit its application. The general assembly recognized the stalker may be oblivious to reality of the emotional distress he or she is causing, and, therefore, it would be absurd to allow a defendant so out-of-touch with reality to avoid criminal prosecution. People v. Cross, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006).

The penalty provision in subsection (5)(a.5) establishes a sentencing enhancer. Since the statute does not prescribe a burden of proof, the prosecution is required to prove the prior conviction by only a preponderance of the evidence, and the court may properly determine the issue without the jury. Therefore, the court erred in admitting the prior conviction into evidence as an element of the harassment by stalking offense. The error required reversal since the evidence was highly prejudicial and had no or little probative value. People v. Cross, 114 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2004), rev’d on other grounds, 127 P.3d 71 (Colo. 2006).

Because the elements of violation of a mandatory restraining order and the elements of harassment by stalking are not the same, the subsequent prosecution of defendant did not violate double jeopardy protections. People v. Carey, 198 P.3d 1223 (Colo. App. 2008).

Defendant’s course of conduct amounted to a single crime for which the general assembly has not authorized multiple punishments. The plain words of the statute define the unit of prosecution for the crime of stalking as a continuous course of conduct by which one repeatedly follows, approaches, contacts, or places another under surveillance. Furthermore, the statute requires that the acts constituting stalking must be performed “repeatedly”. Consequently, per victim, stalking can occur only when there is conduct comprising two or more occurrences of the specified acts. People v. Herron, 251 P.3d 1190 (Colo. App. 2010).

ARTICLE 3.5

Unlawful Termination of Pregnancy

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2003 act enacting this article, see section 1 of chapter 340, Session Laws of Colorado 2003.

18-3.5-101.	Unlawful termination of pregnancy.	18-3.5-102.	Exclusions.
-------------	------------------------------------	-------------	-------------

18-3.5-101. Unlawful termination of pregnancy. (1) A person commits the offense of unlawful termination of a pregnancy if, with intent to terminate unlawfully the pregnancy of another person, the person unlawfully terminates the other person's pregnancy.
(2) Unlawful termination of a pregnancy is a class 4 felony.

Source: L. 2003: Entire article added, p. 2162, § 2, effective July 1.

18-3.5-102. Exclusions. Nothing in this article shall permit the prosecution of a person for providing medical treatment, including but not limited to an abortion, in utero treatment, or treatment resulting in live birth, to a pregnant woman for which the consent of the pregnant woman, or a person authorized by law to act on her behalf, has been obtained or for which consent is implied by law.

Source: L. 2003: Entire article added, p. 2163, § 2, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 4

Offenses Against Property

Editor's note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment, see the editor's note following the title heading.

PART 1		18-4-302.	Aggravated robbery.
ARSON		18-4-303.	Aggravated robbery of controlled substances.
18-4-101.	Definitions.	18-4-304.	Robbery of the elderly or disabled - legislative declaration. (Repealed)
18-4-102.	First degree arson.	18-4-305.	Use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property.
18-4-103.	Second degree arson.	PART 4
18-4-104.	Third degree arson.	THEFT
18-4-105.	Fourth degree arson.
PART 2
BURGLARY AND RELATED OFFENSES
18-4-201.	Definitions.	18-4-401.	Theft.
18-4-202.	First degree burglary.	18-4-402.	Theft of rental property.
18-4-202.1.	Habitual burglary offenders - punishment - legislative declaration. (Repealed)	18-4-403.	Statutory intent.
18-4-203.	Second degree burglary.	18-4-404.	Obtaining control over any stolen thing of value - conviction.
18-4-204.	Third degree burglary.	18-4-405.	Rights in stolen property.
18-4-205.	Possession of burglary tools.	18-4-406.	Concealment of goods.
PART 3		18-4-407.	Questioning of person suspected of theft without liability.
ROBBERY		18-4-408.	Theft of trade secrets - penalty.
18-4-301.	Robbery.	18-4-409.	Aggravated motor vehicle theft.

- 18-4-410. Theft by receiving.
- 18-4-411. Transactions for profit in stolen goods.
- 18-4-411.5. Interagency task force on organized retail theft - legislative declaration - repeal. (Repealed)
- 18-4-412. Theft of medical records or medical information - penalty.
- 18-4-413. Mandatory sentencing for repeated felony theft from a store - store defined.
- 18-4-414. Evidence of value.
- 18-4-415. Use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property.
- 18-4-416. Theft by resale of a lift ticket or coupon.
- 18-4-417. Unlawful acts - theft detection devices.
- 18-4-418. Fuel piracy.
- 18-4-419. Newspaper theft.

PART 5

TRESPASS, TAMPERING, AND CRIMINAL MISCHIEF

- 18-4-501. Criminal mischief.
- 18-4-502. First degree criminal trespass.
- 18-4-503. Second degree criminal trespass.
- 18-4-504. Third degree criminal trespass.
- 18-4-504.5. Definition of premises.
- 18-4-505. First degree criminal tampering.
- 18-4-506. Second degree criminal tampering.
- 18-4-506.3. Tampering with equipment associated with oil or gas gathering operations - penalty.
- 18-4-506.5. Tampering with a utility meter - penalty.
- 18-4-507. Defacing or destruction of written instruments.
- 18-4-508. Defacing, destroying, or removing landmarks, monuments, or accessories.

- 18-4-509. Defacing property - definitions.
- 18-4-510. Defacing posted notice.
- 18-4-511. Littering of public or private property.
- 18-4-512. Abandonment of a motor vehicle.
- 18-4-513. Criminal use of a noxious substance.
- 18-4-514. Use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property.
- 18-4-515. Entry to survey property - exception to criminal trespass.
- 18-4-516. Criminal operation of a device in motion picture theater.

PART 6

THEFT OF SOUND RECORDINGS

- 18-4-601. Definitions.
- 18-4-602. Unlawful transfer for sale.
- 18-4-603. Unlawful trafficking in unlawfully transferred articles.
- 18-4-604. Dealing in unlawfully packaged recorded articles.
- 18-4-604.3. Unlawful recording of a live performance.
- 18-4-604.7. Trafficking in unlawfully recorded live performance.
- 18-4-605. Applicability.
- 18-4-606. Confiscation and disposition of items.
- 18-4-607. Restitution.

PART 7

THEFT OF CABLE TELEVISION SERVICE

- 18-4-701. Theft of cable service - definitions.
- 18-4-702. Civil action - damages.
- 18-4-703. Severability.

PART 8

THEFT OF PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SERVICES

- 18-4-801 and
- 18-4-802. (Repealed.)

PART 1

ARSON

Cross references: For the “Fraudulent Claims and Arson Information Reporting Act”, see part 10 of article 4 of title 10.

18-4-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Building” means a structure which has the capacity to contain, and is designed for the shelter of, man, animals, or property, and includes a ship, trailer, sleeping car, airplane, or other vehicle or place adapted for overnight accommodations of persons or animals, or for carrying on of business therein, whether or not a person or animal is actually present.

(2) “Occupied structure” means any area, place, facility, or enclosure which, for particular purposes, may be used by persons or animals upon occasion, whether or not included within the definition of "building" in subsection (1) of this section, and which is in fact occupied by a person or animal, and known by the defendant to be thus occupied at the time he acts in violation of one or more of sections 18-4-102 to 18-4-105.

(3) Property is that of "another" if anyone other than the defendant has a possessory or proprietary interest therein.

(4) If a building is divided into units for separate occupancy, any unit not occupied by the defendant is a "building of another".

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 425, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-101.

ANNOTATION

The words used in subsection (1) of § 18-4-105 are without technical meaning except for "building", "property of another", and "occupied structure", which are all adequately defined by statute in this section. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Scope of generic term "building". In adopting the generic term "building" in amending the burglary statute, the general assembly intended to encompass not only the structures previously listed, but also to cover all types of structures known but not then included. Sanchez v. People, 142 Colo. 58, 349 P.2d 561 (1960) (decided under former § 40-3-6, CRS 53).

Rather than limiting the definition of a building to a structure with walls and a roof, which would include a telephone booth, it was the legislative intent that a building is a structure which has the capacity to contain and is designed for the habitation of man or animals or for the sheltering of property. Sanchez v. People, 142 Colo. 58, 349 P.2d 561 (1960) (decided under former § 40-3-6, CRS 53).

A trailer pulled by a truck tractor, with the capacity to contain, and the design for the sheltering of, property, which is hauled to a construction site and left there for the purpose of storing materials to be used on the project, is clearly a "building" within the statutory definition. People v. Simien, 671 P.2d 1021 (Colo. App. 1983).

When fenced enclosure not "building". A fenced enclosure surrounding a concrete building which serves as a dog pound is not within the statutory meaning of "building" in subsection (1) so as to support a second degree burglary charge for the unlawful entry of the enclosure, where the fenced enclosure's design is directed to containment or exclusion and affords little protection against inclement weather and extreme temperatures. People v. Moyer, 635 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1981).

But within definition of "occupied structure". A fenced enclosure surrounding a concrete building which serves as a dog pound is within the definition of "occupied structure" in subsection (2), so as to support a second degree burglary charge for the unlawful entry of the enclosure. People v. Moyer, 635 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1981).

Unfinished structure. Under former section, a structure was held to be a building, although it was yet incomplete and unfurnished. El Jebel Shrine Ass'n v. McGlone, 93 Colo. 334, 26 P.2d 108 (1933).

"Dwelling" includes attached garage. A garage attached to a residence is part of a "dwelling" within the meaning of § 18-4-203(2), burglary of a dwelling. People v. Jiminez, 651 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1982).

"Proprietary interest" is a protean concept, the meaning of which emerges from contextual use and application. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 619 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1980).

Term "proprietary interest" is sufficiently broad to include a legally recognized security interest, such as that of a credit union, which the defendant has neither the right nor the authority to defeat or impair, even though he also had an interest in the secured property. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 619 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1980).

The fact that wife's clothing may have been acquired during the course of her marriage to the defendant and may constitute "marital property" under § 14-10-113 does not create an ownership interest in that property in the defendant for purposes of § 18-4-103. The evidence presented at the trial concerning wife's ownership is sufficient to support a finding of "property of another" and therefore defendant's arson conviction. People v. Sullivan, 53 P.3d 1181 (Colo. App. 2002).

18-4-102. First degree arson. (1) A person who knowingly sets fire to, burns, causes to be burned, or by the use of any explosive damages or destroys, or causes to be damaged or destroyed, any building or occupied structure of another without his consent commits first degree arson.

(2) First degree arson is a class 3 felony.

(3) A defendant convicted of committing first degree arson by the use of any explosive shall be sentenced by the court in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 426, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-102. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 962, § 19, effective July 1. L. 86: (3) added, p. 777, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2002: (3) amended, p. 1515, § 196, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-102 is similar to former § 40-3-1, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

At the common law, arson was a crime against the habitation, rather than against property rights. Lipschitz v. People, 25 Colo. 261, 53 P. 1111 (1898).

At common law arson was crime against possession or occupancy, rather than ownership. People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 619 P.2d 494 (Colo. 1980).

Conviction of this offense not equal protection violation. Prosecution, conviction, and sentencing for a class 3 felony under this section, rather than for a class 4 felony under the third degree arson statute, § 18-4-104(1), did not violate defendant's right to equal protection under the fourteenth amendment to the United States Constitution. People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

Distinguished from third degree arson. The more serious first degree arson statute contains an element not contained in the less serious third degree arson statute: The requirement that the property damaged or destroyed be a "building or occupied structure of another". People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

Distinction not unreasonable. The general assembly's decision to provide a more serious penalty for intentionally burning a "building or occupied structure" than for intentionally burning "any property" is not arbitrary or unreasonable. People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

Person may be guilty of arson although he is in possession of property. The legal title of property conveyed by deed of trust to secure a debt is in the trustee, and an indictment for conspiracy to commit arson properly alleges the ownership of such property in the trustee. The grantor in a deed of trust may be guilty of arson of the property although he is in possession and occupancy of the property, and has a right to redeem from the trust deed. Lipschitz v. People, 25 Colo. 261, 53 P. 111 (1898).

Jury may infer lack of consent where defendant owed a large sum of money to the previous owner and defendant was still making payments to him; it is not necessary for the prosecution to show that the previous owner affirmatively did not consent. People v. Espinoza, 989 P.2d 178 (Colo. App. 1999).

Tenant may commit arson upon building owned by other. Where a tenant sets fire to a unit which he occupies, he also damages the property interests of the owner in that building; thus, he may be deemed to have committed first degree arson upon the building of another. People v. Brown, 44 Colo. App. 397, 622 P.2d 573 (1980).

The terms "burn" or "set fire to" require more than a mere scorching or discoloration. People v. LeFebre, 190 Colo. 307, 546 P.2d 952 (1976).

However, it is not necessary that the entire "building" or "structure" be totally destroyed or materially injured as long as any part of the "building" or "structure", regardless of its size, is burned or set afire. People v. LeFebre, 190 Colo. 307, 546 P.2d 952 (1976).

Sheetrock ceiling and wooden joists were a part of "building" or "structure" for purposes of arson statute. People v. LeFebre, 190 Colo. 307, 546 P.2d 952 (1976).

Where evidence indicated that it was possible for sheetrock to "burn", defendant's claim of impossibility under this section must fail. People v. LeFebre, 190 Colo. 307, 546 P.2d 952 (1976).

Proof of corpus delicti and intent. In prosecutions for arson, the rule as to proof of corpus delicti and intent is the same as in prosecutions for other crimes where direct evidence is relied on. Exclusion of every possible theory other than guilt is not required. Exclusion of every other rational hypothesis, which means reasonable hypothesis, is the test, and this jury was so instructed. Militello v. People, 95 Colo. 519, 37 P.2d 527 (1934).

Variance in proof that dwelling was burned fatal. The property answering the description contained in the information was never burned, and the defendant cannot stand convicted of burning it. The defendant was never notified or informed of the fact that he was accused of burning a building other than the dwelling named in the information, and yet the trial court submitted the question to the jury, which found him guilty of an offense with which he was never charged, the nature of which was never disclosed to him. Skidmore v. People, 154 Colo. 363, 390 P.2d 944 (1964).

Testimony showing motive admissible. Introduction of evidence that defendant's father was the major creditor and general manager of the club allegedly arsoned, that the club had been financially unsuccessful and had lost its lease, and that the club premises were insured, offered to show defendant's motive for setting the fire, was admissible when offered in combination with testimony concerning the close business association between the defendant and his father and defendant's desire to ensure the financial success of his father's investment in the club. People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

Evidence that defendant raised his insurance coverage six months before the fire is properly admitted as tending to prove a motive on the part of the defendant to burn his store. People v. Elkhatab, 632 P.2d 275 (Colo. 1981).

18-4-103. Second degree arson. (1) A person who knowingly sets fire to, burns, causes to be burned, or by the use of any explosive damages or destroys, or causes to be damaged or destroyed, any property of another without his consent, other than a building or occupied structure, commits second degree arson.

(2) Second degree arson is a class 4 felony, if the damage is one hundred dollars or more.

(3) Second degree arson is a class 2 misdemeanor, if the damage is less than one hundred dollars.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 426, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-103. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 962, § 20, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Arson of nondwelling cannot be substituted for charge as to dwelling. Where a count of an information identifies with particularity the exact section of the statute upon which prosecution is based, namely burning a certain dwelling, no other statute can be substituted for the one actually selected as forming the subject matter of the prosecution, namely the burning of a nondwelling, in a different location, and belonging to a different person. Skidmore v. People, 154 Colo. 363, 390 P.2d 944 (1964) (decided under former § 40-3-1, CRS 53).

The fact that wife's clothing may have been acquired during the course of her marriage to Evidence of the underlying reasons for an insurance company's denial of coverage is not relevant in that it has no logical relation to any motive defendant may have had prior to the fire, nor is it probative of any elements of the crime charged. People v. Carlson, 677 P.2d 390 (Colo. App. 1983), aff'd, 712 P.2d 1018 (Colo. 1986).

Denial of fire loss claim. Testimony of insurer that defendant's claim for fire loss to her business had been denied because insurer believed it had a provable arson defense to claim failed to meet logical relevancy requirement of rule of evidence and therefore was not admissible as probative of mens rea element of arson charge since such testimony was directed toward insurer's opinion or belief and not toward defendant's motive. People v. Carlson, 712 P.2d 1018 (Colo. 1986).

Question of guilt for jury. It is the sole province of the jury, upon all of the testimony, to determine the precise question of guilt. Goldberger v. People, 45 Colo. 327, 101 P. 407 (1909).

Applied in People v. Hinchman, 196 Colo. 526, 589 P.2d 917 (1978); People in Interest of M.R.J., 633 P.2d 474 (Colo. 1981); People v. Moyer, 635 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1981); People v. Stoppel, 637 P.2d 384 (Colo. 1981).

the defendant and may constitute "marital property" under § 14-10-113 does not create an ownership interest in that property in the defendant for purposes of this section. The evidence presented at the trial concerning wife's ownership is sufficient to support a finding of "property of another" and therefore defendant's arson conviction. People v. Sullivan, 53 P.3d 1181 (Colo. App. 2002).

Applied in People v. Ray, 640 P.2d 262 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-4-104. Third degree arson. (1) A person who, by means of fire or explosives, intentionally damages any property with intent to defraud commits third degree arson.

(2) Third degree arson is a class 4 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 426, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-104.

ANNOTATION

Distinguished from first degree arson. The more serious first degree arson statute, § 18-4-102, contains an element not contained in this section: The requirement that the property damaged or destroyed be a “building or occupied structure of another”. People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

Distinction not unreasonable. The general assembly’s decision to provide a more serious penalty for intentionally burning a “building or occupied structure” than for intentionally burning “any property” is not arbitrary or unreasonable.

People v. Calvaresi, 198 Colo. 321, 600 P.2d 57 (1979).

Construed in accordance with 18-1-502, this section would be inapplicable to those situations in which there was no voluntary act or omission to perform an act within the physical capabilities of the person. Thus, the statute would not apply to a fire started by events beyond the actor’s control. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Applied in People v. Elkhatib, 632 P.2d 275 (Colo. 1981).

18-4-105. Fourth degree arson. (1) A person who knowingly or recklessly starts or maintains a fire or causes an explosion, on his own property or that of another, and by so doing places another in danger of death or serious bodily injury or places any building or occupied structure of another in danger of damage commits fourth degree arson.

(2) Fourth degree arson is a class 4 felony if a person is thus endangered.

(3) Fourth degree arson is a class 2 misdemeanor if only property is thus endangered and the value of the property is one hundred dollars or more.

(4) Fourth degree arson is a class 3 misdemeanor if only property is thus endangered and the value of the property is less than one hundred dollars.

(5) It shall not be an arson offense pursuant to this section if:

(a) A person starts and maintains a fire as a controlled agricultural burn in a reasonably cautious manner; and

(b) No person suffers any of the following as a result of the fire:

(I) Bodily injury;

(II) Serious bodily injury; or

(III) Death.

(6) For purposes of this section, “controlled agricultural burn” means a technique used in farming to clear the land of any existing crop residue, kill weeds and weed seeds, or reduce fuel buildup and decrease the likelihood of a future fire.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 426, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-105. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 962, § 21, effective July 1. L. 2010: (5) and (6) added, (HB 10-1123), ch. 121, p. 404, § 1, effective August 11.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Control of fire is a matter of great public concern. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Thus the general assembly may make the commission of a prohibited act a crime, irrespective of scienter, when public policy dictates it for the protection of the public health, safety, and welfare. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

The general assembly is not constitutionally restricted to punishing conduct that only “imminently” puts a structure in danger of damage. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Not facially vague. Absent indications that this section is being applied to conduct which a citizen could not reasonably have known was forbidden, the statute should not be ruled unconstitutional on grounds of facial vagueness. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

This is not a statute that employs technical terms with inadequate definitions but uses words of common understanding. This section is drafted in words that are not susceptible to difficulties of interpretation by a person of common understanding and intelligence. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Subsection (1) contains ordinary language with an obvious purpose and a clear meaning. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

The phrase "starts or maintains a fire" conveys a plain meaning as to the general conduct proscribed by the statute. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

However, the phrase "starts or maintains a fire" in this section must be read in accordance with §§ 18-1-501(9) and 18-1-502. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

The statutory requirement that a structure be placed "in danger of damage" gives both the defendant and the jury a practical guideline to acceptable behavior. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

"Building", "property of another", and "occupied structure". The words used in subsection (1) are without technical meaning except for "building", "property of another", and "occupied structure", which are all adequately defined by statute in § 18-4-101. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Section 18-1-502 expressly removes any ambiguity as to the culpability requirement of this section. That section states that if an offense does not require a culpable mental state on the part of the actor, the offense is one of strict liability. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Prosecution need not prove intent to endanger the person or building. People v. Owens, 670 P.2d 1233 (Colo. 1983); People v. Copeland, 976 P.2d 334 (Colo. App. 1998), aff'd, 2 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2000).

The knowingly or recklessly mens rea requirement only applies to starting or maintaining a fire, not to the endangerment provisions. Copeland v. People, 2 P.3d 1283 (Colo. 2000).

This section would not apply to a fire started by events beyond the actor's control; the actor must purposefully start a fire, though he may not intend or foresee the consequences. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Construed in accordance with § 18-1-502, this section would be inapplicable to those situations in which there was no voluntary act or omission to perform an act within the physical capabilities of the person. Thus, the statute would not apply to a fire started by events beyond the actor's control. People v. Garcia, 189 Colo. 347, 541 P.2d 687 (1975).

Applied in People v. Johnson, 757 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1988).

PART 2

BURGLARY AND RELATED OFFENSES

18-4-201. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

- (1) "Premises" means any real estate and all improvements erected thereon.
- (2) "Separate building" means each unit of a building consisting of two or more units separately secured or occupied.
- (3) A person "enters unlawfully" or "remains unlawfully" in or upon premises when the person is not licensed, invited, or otherwise privileged to do so. A person who, regardless of his or her intent, enters or remains in or upon premises that are at the time open to the public does so with license and privilege unless the person defies a lawful order not to enter or remain, personally communicated to him or her by the owner of the premises or some other authorized person. A license or privilege to enter or remain in a building that is only partly open to the public is not a license or privilege to enter or remain in that part of the building that is not open to the public. Except as is otherwise provided in section 33-6-116 (1), C.R.S., a person who enters or remains upon unimproved and apparently unused land that is neither fenced nor otherwise enclosed in a manner designed to exclude intruders does so with license and privilege unless notice against trespass is personally communicated to the person by the owner of the land or some other authorized person or unless notice forbidding entry is given by posting with signs at intervals of not more than four hundred forty yards or, if there is a readily identifiable entrance to the land, by posting with signs at such entrance to the private land or the forbidden part of the land. In the case of a designated access road not otherwise posted, said notice shall be posted at the entrance to private land and shall be substantially as follows:

“ENTERING PRIVATE PROPERTY REMAIN ON ROADS”.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 426, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-201. L. 75: (3) amended, p. 634, § 1, effective July 1. L. 84: (3) amended, p. 922, § 9, effective January 1, 1985. L. 99: (3) amended, p. 326, § 1, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the definition of the word “premises” as used in criminal trespass, see § 18-4-504.5.

ANNOTATION

Burglary of hotel room. Under this section, one who enters a room of a hotel with intent to commit larceny therein is guilty of burglary, and the argument that the offense should have been alleged against the hotel rather than against the guest occupying such room is without merit. Gallegos v. People, 150 Colo. 37, 370 P.2d 755 (1962) (decided under former § 40-3-6, CRS 53).

“Open to the public” defined. “Open to the public” means premises which by their physical nature, function, custom, usage, notice or lack thereof, or other circumstances at the time would cause a reasonable person to believe no permission to enter or remain is required. People v. Bozeman, 624 P.2d 916 (Colo. App. 1980).

Theater manager’s office in a completely enclosed space within theater not “open to public” for purposes of subsection (3) of this section. Defendant’s use of a pretense to gain entrance to manager’s office indicates that he was aware that the office was not open to public and was therefore “unlawfully entering” premises. People v. Ridenour, 878 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

Applied in People v. Marshall, 196 Colo. 381, 586 P.2d 41 (1978); Bollier v. People, 635 P.2d 543 (Colo. 1981).

18-4-202. First degree burglary. (1) A person commits first degree burglary if the person knowingly enters unlawfully, or remains unlawfully after a lawful or unlawful entry, in a building or occupied structure with intent to commit therein a crime, other than trespass as defined in this article, against another person or property, and if in effecting entry or while in the building or occupied structure or in immediate flight therefrom, the person or another participant in the crime assaults or menaces any person, or the person or another participant is armed with explosives or a deadly weapon.

(2) First degree burglary is a class 3 felony.

(3) If under the circumstances stated in subsection (1) of this section the property involved is a controlled substance, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), within a pharmacy or other place having lawful possession thereof, such person commits first degree burglary of controlled substances, which is a class 2 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 427, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-202. L. 73: p. 572, § 10. L. 81: (3) amended, p. 737, § 20, effective July 1. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 327, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2012: (3) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1618, § 40, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code”, see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-4-202 is similar to former § 40-3-5, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

For conspiracy to commit burglary, see People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

Conviction for both assault and burglary constitutional. A conviction for both first degree assault and first degree burglary does not violate the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy. People v. Rael, 199 Colo. 201, 612 P.2d 1095 (1980).

Assault is clearly a lesser included offense of first degree burglary when assault is the predicate offense. Under the terms of subsection (1), assault is one of four predicate offenses for first degree burglary in Colorado. Where assault is the predicate offense, the elements of first degree burglary necessarily include all of the elements of assault. Litwinsky v. Zavaras, 132 F. Supp.2d 1316 (D. Colo. 2001).

Assault, a predicate offense for first degree burglary, is a lesser included offense of first degree burglary. Therefore, the two counts merge. In a case where the lesser included offense carries a higher penalty, the court must vacate the conviction carrying the lower penalty and impose the higher penalty in order maximize the jury's verdict. People v. Delci, 109 P.3d 1035 (Colo. App. 2004).

Burglary is an offense against property, and the general assembly intended the additional element of assault in this section to modify and aggravate the offense of burglary and not to change the gravamen of the crime. People v. Fuentes, 258 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2011).

A single entry can support only one conviction of first degree burglary, even if multiple assaults occur. People v. Fuentes, 258 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2011).

The element of intent has remained unchanged in burglary cases. Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972).

Specific intent to commit a specific crime is an essential element of the offense of burglary. Garcia v. People, 174 Colo. 372, 483 P.2d 1347 (1971).

Although the jury must agree on the underlying felony defendant intended to commit, the jury is not required to agree on the intended victim of the underlying crime. To commit an actual crime, there must be a victim, however, a person can have the mental state of intent to commit a crime without having an identified specific victim. People v. Palmer, 87 P.3d 137 (Colo. App. 2003).

Violation of a restraining order is a sufficient predicate offense for conviction under this section. People v. Widhalm, 991 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1999).

Burglary is complete when burglar enters with requisite intent, even though object of entry may be impossible. People v. Gill, 180 Colo. 382, 506 P.2d 134 (1973).

Subsection (1) contains no "surreptitious" requirement concerning remaining unlawfully. People v. Simpson, 93 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

Formal defects in information could not be raised after verdict where the information under this section for burglary, charged the use of explosives "with the purpose, etc.", instead of "for the purpose, etc.". The information also failed to aver expressly the incorporation of the owner of the building. Howard v. People, 62 Colo. 131, 160 P. 1060 (1916).

Criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of burglary since the crime of criminal trespass contains essential elements which are not elements of the offense of burglary. Garcia v. People, 174 Colo. 372, 483 P.2d 1347 (1971).

First degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of first degree burglary. However, it is a lesser non-included offense, and the trial court may instruct a jury on such offense over the objection of the defendant if the charging document provides notice that defendant might have to defend against that charge. People v. Satre, 950 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1997).

The crime of criminal mischief is not a lesser-included burglary offense because the elements are far different. While criminal mischief requires damage to property, burglary does not. People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 380, 566 P.2d 703 (1977).

Attempted first degree burglary is a lesser-included offense of first degree burglary. People v. Simien, 656 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1983).

Distinguished from felony menacing. It is possible to commit a first degree burglary without also perpetrating felony menacing. The merger doctrine does not apply because there is no requirement in this section that a victim be placed in fear of imminent serious bodily injury by a deadly weapon as there is in the felony menacing statute. People v. Sisneros, 44 Colo. App. 65, 606 P.2d 1317 (1980).

There is no requirement that victim be placed in fear of imminent serious bodily injury by a deadly weapon under the first degree burglary statute. People v. Montanez, 944 P.2d 529 (Colo. App. 1996).

Specific intent may be inferred from the circumstances surrounding the accused's entry into an apartment, together with what occurred after the entry was gained. People v. McCormick, 181 Colo. 162, 508 P.2d 1270 (1973).

Sufficient evidence of specific intent. Where defendant was caught by the police inside a pharmacy while armed and while taking drugs off the shelves, and a crowbar and suitcases were found inside the pharmacy, and during his arrest, he told the police that "he did it for the drugs", and even admitted during cross-examination that he "broke into the pharmacy" to get drugs, this evidence amply supports a jury finding that defendant had the requisite specific intent to commit first degree burglary. People v. Thomas, 189 Colo. 490, 542 P.2d 387 (1975).

The immediate flight standard of this section requires that the entry, the assault, and the flight be close in time and that the assault occur while fleeing from the building or occupied structure. Therefore, a person commits an assault in immediate flight from a building where the assault is part of a continuous integrated attempt to get away from the building. People v. Fuentes, 258 P.3d 320 (Colo. App. 2011).

Evidence relevant to show plan, scheme, or design. Where evidence relating to the burglary of another apartment was of a transaction similar in nature and closely related to the transaction upon which the defendant was being tried in point of time, in the areas where the burglaries were committed, and in the methods used in obtaining entrance, this evidence was relevant to show plan, scheme, or design, and the trial court committed no error in admitting it into evidence. People v. Moen, 186 Colo. 196, 526 P.2d 654 (1974).

Possession of stolen goods after burglary is sufficient to warrant conviction, unless the attending circumstances or other evidence is such as to overcome the presumption raised by such possession, sufficient to create a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. People v. Moen, 186 Colo. 196, 526 P.2d 654 (1974).

Use of explosive with intent to commit crime sufficient. The breaking and entering must have been with the intent to commit the crime of larceny and the explosive must have been used for the purpose of committing such a crime. It was sufficient if the forcible entry and the use of an explosive were with the intent to and for the purpose of committing the crime. Howard v. People, 62 Colo. 131, 160 P. 1060 (1916).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction. Where the facts adduced at the trial are just as consistent with a theory of innocence of burglary as of guilt, the conviction cannot stand. Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972).

Where the only evidence that defendant entered a room with intent to commit theft is the strong circumstantial evidence that he took a billfold, the evidence is insufficient to establish intent. Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972).

Refusal to instruct on criminal trespass not error. In a prosecution for burglary, the contention that the trial court erred in refusing to instruct the jury on a misdemeanor of criminal trespass, as a lesser included offense of the crime of burglary, is without merit. Howard v. People, 173 Colo. 209, 477 P.2d 378 (1970).

Circumstantial evidence as foundation for instructions. Circumstantial evidence, when tied together, can support and provide a foundation for instructions on each of the crimes of first degree murder, first degree burglary, and theft arising out of the same transaction. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

Intent must coincide with the moment of trespass. If burglary is based upon remaining in a structure unlawfully, intent must be present at that time. Pattern jury instruction sufficiently described elements of crime. People v. Ramirez, 18 P.3d 822 (Colo. App. 2000).

Jury instruction is sufficient if it conveys that the intent to commit a crime must be contemporaneous with the moment of trespass. People v. Simpson, 93 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

Instructions for crimes of theft and burglary which were phrased in language of statutes were sufficient. People v. Bowen, 182 Colo. 294, 512 P.2d 1157 (1973).

The court did not commit plain error when it failed to instruct the jury that it must unanimously agree on the underlying felony for the first degree burglary conviction. Because the jury unanimously found defendant guilty of attempted aggravated robbery, the finding satisfied the intent requirement of first degree burglary as well as any requirement that the jury agree unanimously to the underlying offense. Therefore, the court's failure to give a unanimity instruction was not plain error because there was no reasonable possibility that any error contributed to defendant's conviction. People v. Linares-Guzman, 195 P.3d 1130 (Colo. App. 2008).

Verdicts of guilt as to theft, but not as to burglary, are consistent. Where evidence linking the defendant with the burglary was conflicting or was rebutted, but the evidence clearly established that the defendant was in possession of property recently taken in a burglary, there was evidence to sustain a conviction of larceny and the verdicts of not guilty of burglary but guilty of larceny were not inconsistent as being irreconcilable with the evidence of each case. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971).

Guilty verdicts for first degree burglary and attempted second degree murder are consistent where reasonable jury could find that defendant entered or remained in home with intent to menace and while there took a substantial step toward causing occupant's death. People v. Simpson, 93 P.3d 551 (Colo. App. 2003).

Sentence, on separate counts, for first degree burglary-assault/menace and for first degree burglary-deadly weapon was erroneous because, while the general assembly may proscribe alternative means of committing the same offense, a court may not impose multiple punishments for each prohibited method a defendant uses if he or she uses more than one of the proscribed methods to accomplish the offense. People v. Moore, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Sentence concurrent with life sentence proper. Where the defendant was sentenced for life imprisonment for first degree murder and lesser sentences for first degree burglary and theft which the jury found he had committed, and all sentences were imposed concurrently with the life sentence which the jury ordered, there was no error. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

Sentence of 10 to 20 years did not constitute an abuse of discretion. People v. McKenna, 199 Colo. 452, 611 P.2d 574 (1980).

Where the only evidence concerning the presence of deadly weapons at the time of the robbery was that defendant was carrying stolen items, including weapons, in a canvas sack during commission of the burglary, such evidence was insufficient to prove that defendant was armed with a deadly weapon, a requisite element of burglary. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

Second degree burglary is a lesser included offense of first degree burglary. Armintrout v. People, 864 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1993).

Second degree burglary becomes first degree burglary when the perpetrator increases the risk of deadly or bodily harm to an occupant or other person present by possessing a deadly weapon such that he knowingly places or attempts to place such person in fear of serious bodily injury or intends to and does cause serious bodily injury to any person. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

If the defendant steals a deadly weapon and thereby becomes armed with a deadly weapon, the burglary is elevated to first degree, and there is no requirement that the prosecution show that the defendant assaulted or menaced anyone with the deadly weapon. People v. Loomis, 857 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1992).

The defendant is considered "armed" with a deadly weapon if the weapon is easily accessible and readily available for use by the defendant. The court need not consider the defendant's willingness or present ability to use the deadly weapon. People v. Loomis, 857 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1992).

Applied in People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976); Pigford v. People, 197 Colo. 358, 593 P.2d 354 (1979); People v. Johnson, 634 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1981); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982); People v. District Court, 663 P.2d 616 (Colo. 1983).

18-4-202.1. Habitual burglary offenders - punishment - legislative declaration. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire section added, p. 985, § 1, effective July 1. L. 82: (1) and (2) amended, p. 253, § 10, effective May 3. L. 2002: Entire section repealed, p. 1463, § 3, effective October 1.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-1.3-804 in 2002.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act repealing this section, see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-4-203. Second degree burglary. (1) A person commits second degree burglary, if the person knowingly breaks an entrance into, enters unlawfully in, or remains unlawfully after a lawful or unlawful entry in a building or occupied structure with intent to commit therein a crime against another person or property.

(2) Second degree burglary is a class 4 felony, but it is a class 3 felony if:

(a) It is a burglary of a dwelling; or

(b) It is a burglary, the objective of which is the theft of a controlled substance, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), lawfully kept within any building or occupied structure.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 427, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-203. L. 81: (2) amended, p. 974, § 9, effective July 1; (2)(b) amended, p. 2031, § 44, effective July 14. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 327, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2012: (2)(b) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1618, § 41, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

I. General Consideration.

II. Elements of Offense.

III. Trial and Prosecution.

A. In General.

B. Indictment or Information.

C. Evidence.

1. In General.

2. Possession of Stolen Property.

3. Sufficiency.

D. Jury.

E. Instructions.

IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 89 (1963). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-203 is similar to former § 40-3-5, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Second degree burglary and second degree sexual assault are not the same offense for purposes of the prohibition against double jeopardy because the elements of the two offenses are different. Childs v. Zavaras, 90 F. Supp.2d 1141 (D. Colo. 1999).

Common-law burglary consisted of breaking and entering a dwelling at night with felonious intent. Sanchez v. People, 142 Colo. 58, 349 P.2d 561 (1960).

By statute in Colorado the common law definition of burglary has been modified and broadened to include in some instances, and under some circumstances, a legal entry into the building of another with felonious intent. Macias v. People, 161 Colo. 233, 421 P.2d 116 (1966).

In determining whether the crime of burglary has been committed, the focus is upon the possessory rights of the parties, and not their ownership rights. The law of burglary was designed to protect the dweller, and hence, the controlling question is occupancy rather than ownership. People v. Hollenbeck, 944 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Mondragon, 217 P.3d 936 (Colo. App. 2009).

A person can be convicted of a burglary if previously granted permission to enter the premises is withdrawn and the person enters or remains on the premises with the intent to commit a crime therein. People v. Ager, 928 P.2d 784 (Colo. App. 1996).

"Open to the public" defined. "Open to the public" means premises which by their physical nature, function, custom, usage, notice or lack thereof, or other circumstances at the time would cause a reasonable person to believe no permission to enter or remain is required. People v. Bozeman, 624 P.2d 916 (Colo. App. 1980).

"Dwelling" includes attached garage. A garage attached to a residence is part of a "dwelling" within the meaning of this section. People v. Jiminez, 651 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1982).

"Dwelling" includes homes under renovation that are intended to be used for habitation in the future. The definition of "dwelling" in § 18-1-901 (3)(g) specifically includes buildings intended to be used for habitation. Because a home undergoing renovation cannot be presently used for habitation does not exclude it from the statute. People v. Morales, 2012 COA 2, __ P.3d __.

Burglary of fenced enclosure. A fenced enclosure surrounding a concrete building which serves as a dog pound is within the definition of "occupied structure" in § 18-4-101(2) so as to support a second degree burglary charge for the unlawful entry of the enclosure. People v. Moyer, 635 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1981).

A fenced enclosure surrounding a concrete building which serves as a dog pound is not within the statutory meaning of "building" in § 18-4-101(1) so as to support a second degree burglary charge for the unlawful entry of the enclosure, where the fenced enclosure's design is directed to containment of exclusion and affords little protection against inclement weather and extreme temperatures. People v. Moyer, 635 P.2d 553 (Colo. 1981).

Police officer may be guilty of burglary. A contention that a defendant, being a police officer, had a right to enter the building being burglarized by his confederates, and therefore could not be held guilty of burglary, is hostile to the status of implied licensee, since one entitled to such status must be performing a duty. Clews v. People, 151 Colo. 219, 377 P.2d 125 (1962).

Violation of a restraining order is a sufficient predicate offense for conviction under this section. People v. Rhorer, 967 P.2d 147 (Colo. 1998).

Even in the absence of a restraining order, an estranged spouse is not privileged or licensed to enter the separate residence of the other spouse so as to create a defense to a charge of second degree burglary. People v. Johnson, 906 P.2d 122 (Colo. 1995).

Crime of criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense in the crime of burglary; it requires an element not essential to the crime of burglary. Howard v. People, 173 Colo. 209, 477 P.2d 378 (1970).

The crime of criminal mischief is not a lesser included burglary offense because the elements are far different. While criminal mischief requires damage to property, burglary does not. People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 380, 566 P.2d 703 (1977).

Offenses of burglary and assault with intent to rob are separate and independent since burglary is a crime of entering a dwelling place with intent to commit a felony, while assault with intent to rob is a crime requiring unlawful attempt coupled with a present ability to commit a violent injury on a person, with the specific intent to commit robbery. Trujillo v. Patterson, 266 F. Supp. 901 (D. Colo. 1966), aff'd per curiam, 389 F.2d 1003 (10th Cir. 1967); Trujillo v. People, 178 Colo. 136, 496 P.2d 1026 (1972).

Second degree burglary is a lesser included offense of first degree burglary. Armintrout v. People, 864 P.2d 576 (Colo. 1993).

First degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of second degree burglary. People v. Garcia, 920 P.2d 878 (Colo.

App. 1996), rev'd on other grounds, 940 P.2d 357 (Colo. 1997).

Second degree criminal trespass (§ 18-4-503) is a lesser included offense of second degree burglary. Second degree criminal trespass requires the defendant to unlawfully enter or remain on the premises of another that are enclosed in a manner designed to exclude intruders. By definition, if a building or structure exists, entry of which is required for second degree burglary, the building or structure is designed to exclude intruders. Thus, all of the elements of second degree criminal trespass are included in the offense of second degree burglary. People v. MacBlane, 952 P.2d 824 (Colo. App. 1997).

Jail cell qualifies as a "dwelling" within the meaning of this section. People v. Nichols, 920 P.2d 901 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in Vigil v. People, 150 Colo. 582, 375 P.2d 103 (1962); People v. Mangum, 189 Colo. 246, 539 P.2d 120 (1975); People v. Strong, 190 Colo. 189, 544 P.2d 966 (1976); People v. Davis, 194 Colo. 138, 568 P.2d 1175 (1977); People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978); People v. Girard, 196 Colo. 68, 582 P.2d 666 (1978); People v. Bielecki, 41 Colo. App. 256, 588 P.2d 377 (1978); People v. Jacquez, 196 Colo. 569, 588 P.2d 871 (1979); People v. Hillyard, 197 Colo. 83, 589 P.2d 939 (1979); People v. Griffith, 197 Colo. 544, 595 P.2d 231 (1979); People v. Jacobs, 198 Colo. 75, 596 P.2d 1187 (1979); Germany v. People, 198 Colo. 337, 599 P.2d 904 (1979); People v. Weber, 199 Colo. 25, 604 P.2d 30 (1979); People v. Soper, 628 P.2d 604 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981); People v. Savage, 630 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1981); People v. Henry, 631 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1981); People v. Chavez, 632 P.2d 574 (Colo. 1981); People v. Hotopp, 632 P.2d 600 (Colo. 1981); People v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1022 (Colo. 1981); People v. Brown, 632 P.2d 1025 (Colo. 1981); People in Interest of M.R.J., 633 P.2d 474 (Colo. 1981); People v. Johnson, 634 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1981); People v. Quintana, 634 P.2d 413 (Colo. 1981); People v. Cohen, 640 P.2d 1138 (Colo. 1982); People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 643 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1982); People v. Leonard, 644 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Constant, 645 P.2d 843 (Colo. 1982); Chavez v. District Court, 648 P.2d 658 (Colo. 1982); People v. Holloway, 649 P.2d 318 (Colo. 1982); People v. Conwell, 649 P.2d 1099 (Colo. 1982); People v. Elmore, 652 P.2d 571 (Colo. 1982); People v. Johnson, 653 P.2d 737 (Colo. 1982); People v. Fisher, 657 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1983); People v. Quintero, 657 P.2d 948 (Colo. 1983); Flower v. People, 658 P.2d 266 (Colo. 1983); People v. District Court, 664 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1983); People v. Jones, 140 P.3d 325 (Colo. App. 2006).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

This section may be violated in either of the ways mentioned; however, the final result is burglary. People v. Holmes, 129 Colo. 180, 268 P.2d 406 (1954).

Former Colorado burglary statute contained different situations under which the crime of burglary might be committed: A direct trespass to the property, with or without force, but without the consent, express or implied, of the owner or person in possession, and an initial lawful entry into the property or premises with the express or implied invitation or consent of the owner, with a subsequent trespass by an unauthorized entry into any room, apartment, or compartment of the same building. Macias v. People, 161 Colo. 233, 421 P.2d 116 (1966).

The element of intent has remained unchanged in burglary cases. Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972).

In order to sustain a conviction for second degree burglary, there must be evidence that the accused entered the building with intent to commit a crime. People v. Barnhart, 638 P.2d 814 (Colo. App. 1981).

Specific intent at time of entry essential. An essential element in a charge of burglary is that the accused have the intent to commit a specific crime at the very time and place of breaking and entering. Gomez v. People, 162 Colo. 77, 424 P.2d 387 (1967); Martinez v. People, 163 Colo. 503, 431 P.2d 765 (1967); People v. Archuleta, 180 Colo. 156, 503 P.2d 346 (1972).

To be convicted under this section, the jury must find that the defendant had made up his mind to commit some other offense at the point at which he or she becomes a trespasser. A person cannot be convicted under this section if the jury finds that the defendant formed the necessary intent at any time while unlawfully remaining on the premises. Cooper v. People, 973 P.2d 1234 (Colo. 1999).

Jury must find that the defendant either (1) broke and entered or unlawfully entered with the intent to commit a crime therein or (2) entered lawfully but subsequently remained unlawfully with the intent to commit a crime therein. Cooper v. People, 973 P.2d 1234 (Colo. 1999).

But intent at the time of entry is not the sole element of burglary under the statute. People v. Carstensen, 161 Colo. 249, 420 P.2d 820 (1966).

A person can be found guilty of second degree burglary if the intent to commit a crime is formed after the unlawful entry. People v. Angell, 917 P.2d 312 (Colo. App. 1995), overruled in Cooper v. People, 973 P.2d 1234 (Colo. 1999).

When the general assembly amended second degree burglary to add the language, "after a lawful or unlawful entry", the general assembly removed the requirement that the intent to commit a crime exist at the time of entry. People v. Larkins, 109 P.3d 1003 (Colo. App. 2004).

Where defendant was given permission to enter the crawlspace and such permission to enter was not limited to any discrete portion of the crawlspace, the entry was not "unlawful" even though defendant entered the crawlspace with an intent to commit a sexual offense. People v. Waddell, 24 P.3d 3 (Colo. App. 2000).

Burglary includes an element of actual or constructive trespass on the property of another with intent to commit some other crime once the intruder has effected an entry into the building of another. Macias v. People, 161 Colo. 233, 421 P.2d 116 (1966).

If the owner had not unlocked the apartment, and if the defendant had not been given permission to enter, then the theft of which he was convicted would have been the result of an unlawful breaking or entering, which in turn would support a conviction of burglary. People v. Carstensen, 161 Colo. 249, 420 P.2d 820 (1966).

While not explicitly requiring an unauthorized entry, burglary statutes have always been interpreted as requiring an unauthorized entry as well as the intent to commit a felony or misdemeanor. People v. Peery, 180 Colo. 161, 503 P.2d 350 (1972).

One element of the crime of burglary under this statute is that the defendant be a trespasser. People v. Diaz, 182 Colo. 369, 513 P.2d 444 (1973).

Proof of no lawful right to be in building required. In addition to unlawful intent at the time of entry, this burglary statute requires the people to prove that the defendant had no lawful right to be in the building. People v. Diaz, 182 Colo. 369, 513 P.2d 444 (1973).

Unlawful entry of a railroad box car without force, under this section, constitutes the crime of burglary. Panion v. People, 138 Colo. 236, 331 P.2d 501 (1958).

Where evidence that the defendant was unlawfully in the victim's home was overwhelming, the court's failure to provide further clarification on the unlawful entry into the dwelling element of the crime did not constitute plain error. People v. Angell, 917 P.2d 312 (Colo. App. 1995).

Character of structure as a "dwelling" is a sentence enhancer, not an element of the offense. Therefore, first degree criminal trespass, which has as an essential element entry into a "dwelling," is not a lesser included offense of second degree burglary. People v. Garcia, 920 P.2d 878 (Colo. App. 1996).

Ownership means any rightful possession. The object is to describe the place where the offense was committed, not to determine the ownership of the property. Ownership as against the burglar means any possession which is rightful. Sloan v. People, 65 Colo. 456, 176 P. 481 (1918).

Such possession may be actual or constructive. Possession which is equivalent to ownership for the purpose of proving the offense in this class of cases need not be a possession coupled with actual occupancy, as a dwelling or otherwise, of the burglarized premises. Proof that one was in actual or constructive possession of the burglarized premises is sufficient to establish his alleged ownership. Sloan v. People, 65 Colo. 456, 176 P. 481 (1918).

Agent may be the owner. Under this section breaking into an unoccupied house is burglary. The ownership is properly laid in an agent having general charge and control of the premises. Sloan v. People, 65 Colo. 456, 176 P. 481 (1918).

Or corporation having possession of the building. A banking corporation having possession of the building burglariously entered, occupying it for the conduct of its business, is the owner for the purposes of a prosecution under this section. Howard v. People, 62 Colo. 131, 160 P. 1060 (1916).

Unlawful entry is an element of the offense of second degree burglary. People v. Esquibel, 794 P.2d 1065 (Colo. App. 1990).

A perpetrator is guilty of second degree burglary when, unarmed, he breaks into a building and removes items even though those items may, in other circumstances, be used as deadly weapons. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

Second degree burglary becomes first degree burglary when the perpetrator increases the risk of deadly or bodily harm to an occupant or other person present by possessing a deadly weapon such that he knowingly places or attempts to place such person in fear of serious bodily injury or intends to and does cause serious bodily injury to any person. People v. Moore, 841 P.2d 320 (Colo. App. 1992).

Actual taking of property, or the value of property taken, need not be proven. This section requires only that the defendant intended to take property. People v. Gillis, 883 P.2d 554 (Colo. App. 1994).

Violation of a no-contact order constitutes a predicate crime for purposes of second degree burglary. Violation of a municipal no-contact order constitutes a crime under § 18-6-803.5. Therefore, intent to violate a no-contact order by breaking into a home constitutes an "intent to commit therein a crime against person or property" and fulfills the element of the crime of second degree burglary. People v. Rhorer, 967 P.2d 147 (Colo. 1998).

Intrusion of any body part into the prohibited premises is sufficient to constitute entry as element of crime. Jury instruction clarifying term was a correct statement of the law in this case. People v. Gonyea, 195 P.3d 1171 (Colo. App. 2008).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. In General.

Proof of the breaking with intent to steal is all that is required under this section. In the trial of a burglary case under this section, when the people establish the breaking with intent to steal, nothing more is required. Windolph v. People, 96 Colo. 285, 42 P.2d 197 (1935).

Burglary is committed whenever a person willfully breaks and enters, either with or without force, any building with the intent to commit a larceny. No other act is necessary for the commission of the crime of burglary to be complete. Howard v. People, 173 Colo. 209, 477 P.2d 378 (1970).

Second degree burglary requires that the prosecution prove that defendant knowingly broke into and entered the liquor store with the intent to commit the crime of theft. People v. Gomez, 189 Colo. 91, 537 P.2d 297 (1975).

Crime intended does not have to be actually committed. It is not essential to a conviction under this section that the crime intended in the burglarious entry should have been actually committed. Howard v. People, 62 Colo. 131, 160 P. 1060 (1916).

Under this section one can commit the crime of burglary by entering a building with the unlawful intent prescribed, and where the intent is to commit larceny, the offense is complete regardless of whether the theft is consummated. Ex parte Hill, 101 Colo. 243, 72 P.2d 471 (1937).

The contemplated theft may be forcibly prevented by an inmate of the building, or the purpose to steal abandoned, and still the perpetrator would be guilty of the crime of burglary. If accomplished, evidence of the larceny would be admissible on the burglary count as the highest proof of the larcenous intent with which entry was made, yet not make the actual larceny one of the essential ingredients of the crime of burglary. Ex parte Hill, 101 Colo. 243, 72 P.2d 471 (1937).

To commit a burglary, the defendant need only have unlawfully entered the structure with the intent to commit the proscribed crime. There is no requirement that the crime intended to be committed be in fact completed. People v. Archuleta, 191 Colo. 482, 554 P.2d 307 (1976).

B. Indictment or Information.

Charge of breaking and entering the store building with the intent to commit larceny therein constitutes the charge of burglary and not of larceny. Gallegos v. People, 166 Colo. 409, 444 P.2d 267 (1968).

Information charging burglary must specify by name the ulterior crime which it is alleged the accused intended to commit upon entry into the building. Martinez v. People, 163 Colo. 503, 431 P.2d 765 (1967).

The element of intent to commit a specific crime is a matter of substance, not form, and must be set forth in the information; otherwise, the charge is fatally defective. Gomez v. People, 162 Colo. 77, 424 P.2d 387 (1967).

An information charging breaking and entering "with the intent then and there to commit a crime" clearly is insufficient, since a specific crime must be alleged. Henson v. People, 166 Colo. 428, 444 P.2d 275 (1968).

In a burglary charge, the allegation "with the intent then and there to commit the crime of theft" meets the requirements of sufficiency to adequately apprise a defendant of the offense charged. People v. Cordova, 172 Colo. 522, 474 P.2d 615 (1970).

It is necessary that the specific conduct which constitutes the ulterior crime be clearly defined in order to determine if the defendant's intent was that prescribed by the burglary statute. People v. Archuleta, 180 Colo. 156, 503 P.2d 346 (1972); People v. Barnhart, 638 P.2d 814 (Colo. App. 1981).

Information reciting elements of attempt, and referring to provision defining ulterior crime, adequate. Where the information recited the elements of the inchoate crime of attempt in the language § 18-2-101 and included a reference to the section defining the burglary allegedly attempted, and where the defendant claimed no surprise or prejudice resulting from the absence of an allegation specifying the ulterior crime to be relied upon by the prosecution in its proof of the elements of burglary, the information adequately described the offense of attempt. People v. Jiron, 44 Colo. App. 246, 616 P.2d 166 (1980).

Insufficient to charge mere larceny in separate count. The mere fact that larceny, as a part of the same transaction, was charged in another count is insufficient to fulfill the requirement that all the basic elements of a burglary charge, including the intent of the accused to commit the specific crime at the time and place of breaking and entering, must be alleged. Martinez v. People, 163 Colo. 503, 431 P.2d 765 (1967).

Allegations as to ownership in burglary cases under this section might be placed on the same footing as such averments in charges of larceny. In an information charging larceny the ownership of the goods stolen may be laid in the person in whose possession the property was at the time of the theft, although such person is merely an agent and not the real owner. Sloan v. People, 65 Colo. 456, 176 P. 481 (1918).

Objection that incorporation was not proven too late in supreme court. With respect to an information for the burglary of the banking house of a named state bank, a corporation, the suggestion that the incorporation of the bank was not proven will not be heard, if first presented in the supreme court. Howard v. People, 62 Colo. 131, 160 P. 1060 (1916).

Related acts charged in one count not duplicitous. This section by the use of the word "or" provides disjunctively the ways of its violation; however, acts may be so closely related that they may be charged conjunctively in a single count without being duplicitous. People v. Holmes, 129 Colo. 180, 268 P.2d 406 (1954).

Any error in the form of the information was harmless where the defendant had sufficient notice of the elements and the factual basis for the charges prior to trial. People v. Richardson, 58 P.3d 1039 (Colo. App. 2002).

Variance in description of building not prejudicial. Where ample evidence established that the lumber company structure involved was a building, and an "office, shop, and warehouse" describes a building, no prejudice arose from this discrepancy in wording of the information. Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961).

C. Evidence.

1. In General.

Crime may be proven by circumstantial or direct evidence. The essential elements of the crime of burglary may be established by circumstantial evidence as well as direct. A case of circumstantial evidence by its very nature implies the weaving of a fabric of known facts, which, often infinitesimal, immaterial, or even prejudicial when considered alone, become important only as they are tied to others, and when so tied lead to inevitable conclusions as to facts in issue. Pena v. People, 147 Colo. 253, 363 P.2d 672 (1961).

Circumstantial evidence, consisting of the possession of goods recently stolen in a burglary, is sufficient to sustain a conviction. Davis v. People, 137 Colo. 113, 321 P.2d 1103 (1958).

Frequently burglary must be established by circumstantial evidence, it seldom being provable by direct evidence of actual breaking and entry by the person charged. Wilcox v. People, 152 Colo. 173, 380 P.2d 912 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 931, 84 S. Ct. 702, 11 L. Ed.2d 652 (1964).

Want of consent by the owner to enter into his premises may be proved by circumstantial evidence. White v. People, 172 Colo. 271, 472 P.2d 674 (1970).

Circumstantial evidence may be, and frequently is, most convincing and satisfactory.

Southard v. People, 174 Colo. 324, 483 P.2d 962 (1971).

Quantum of proof is the same. The quantum of proof where guilt is based upon circumstantial evidence is the same as where it is based on direct evidence; that is, it must be sufficient to establish guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Southard v. People, 174 Colo. 324, 483 P.2d 962 (1971).

Intent inferred from actions. An accused is presumed to intend the necessary or the natural and probable consequences of his unlawful voluntary acts, knowingly performed. Keller v. People, 153 Colo. 590, 387 P.2d 421 (1963).

In the absence of a restraining order or an order granting one party exclusive possession of the marital residence, the question whether one spouse has the sole possessory interest in it depends on whether the evidence shows that both parties had decided to live separately. People v. Hollenbeck, 944 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1996).

Sufficient evidence was presented to establish that defendant had relinquished his possessory interests in the home where defendant and his wife separated two and one-half months before the burglary, defendant's wife told him she wanted a divorce, defendant left and took his belongings, and defendant's wife changed the locks on the home. People v. Hollenbeck, 944 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1996).

Specific intent may be inferred from commission of crime after entry. In the case of burglary, the fact that a felony was committed after breaking and entering is admissible as evidence from which the jury can infer that the intent to commit the felony existed at the time of the breaking and entering. Keller v. People, 153 Colo. 590, 387 P.2d 421 (1963).

Where one breaks and enters into the property of another in the night time, an inference may be drawn that he did so with the intent to commit larceny. Garcia v. People, 174 Colo. 372, 483 P.2d 1347 (1971).

Acts subsequent to entry are admissible to allow the jury to infer the requisite intent for the crime charged, and therefore testimony that certain items on a burglarized premises are moved from their previous locations to a centralized location on the day of the burglary is admissible. People v. Peery, 180 Colo. 161, 503 P.2d 350 (1972).

The specific intent to commit the crime of theft does not have to be proved by direct, substantive evidence, but can be inferred from the defendant's conduct and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. Germany, 643 P.2d 776 (Colo. App. 1980).

Evidence showing a forcible unauthorized entry and an attempt to conceal the entry imposes a duty on the court to draw an inference of an intent to commit theft. People ex rel. Russel v. Hall, 620 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1980).

Trespass alone is immaterial as to specific intent. The fact that the defendant may have committed a trespass at the time he entered the office where the alleged burglary took place is immaterial as to intent to commit theft. Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972).

Trespass to be proved beyond reasonable doubt. The people must prove the element of trespass in prosecution for crime of burglary, like other material elements of the crime charged, beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Diaz, 182 Colo. 369, 513 P.2d 444 (1973).

Evidence establishing motive admissible. Evidence which has a direct tendency to establish motive is admissible against the accused, even though it may show him guilty of crimes other than that for which he is on trial. Wilkinson v. People, 170 Colo. 336, 460 P.2d 774 (1969).

As are acts at time of arrest. The circumstance of the finding of part of the items stolen from the drugstore had already led to a suspicion that the accused was involved in the burglary. The acts surrounding his conduct when he was arrested, indicating drug use, could be found to support the inference that he had a motive for the burglary. This made evidence of defendant's acts at the time of the arrest material and relevant to the offense with which he was charged. Wilkinson v. People, 170 Colo. 336, 460 P.2d 774 (1969).

Where a defendant is arrested inside a store under circumstances which conclusively establish that his entry was unlawful, articles which are then found on the premises in the possession of defendant, or reasonably attributed to him, and which are foreign to the store, are admissible. Baca v. People, 139 Colo. 111, 336 P.2d 712 (1959).

Burglars tools admissible. Exhibits of a tire iron, jack hammer, and punch, although not intrinsically and exclusively burglary tools, but capable of use for that purpose, were admissible under the burglary charge and in support of the charge of possession. Smalley v. People, 116 Colo. 598, 183 P.2d 558 (1947).

Articles such as a stocking mask, hammer, and flashlight belonging to a defendant and found in his possession shortly after a burglary are admissible as part of the history of arrest, and when coupled with other pertinent evidence, tends to establish the charge. Davis v. People, 137 Colo. 113, 321 P.2d 1103 (1958).

A weapon or other instrument found in the possession of an accused when arrested is admissible as part of the history of the arrest. Davis v. People, 137 Colo. 113, 321 P.2d 1103 (1958).

The acquisition or possession of instruments, tools, or other means of committing burglary is admissible as a significant circumstance; the possession signifies a probable design to use and the instruments need not be such as are entirely appropriate, nor such as were actually put to use. Baca v. People, 139 Colo. 111, 336 P.2d 712 (1959).

In a prosecution for burglary, evidence of possession of burglary tools and of property allegedly taken from burglarized premises, is properly admitted. Wilcox v. People, 152 Colo. 173, 380 P.2d 912 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 931, 84 S. Ct. 702, 11 L. Ed.2d 652 (1964).

It is not error to admit into evidence in a burglary case pry bars not belonging to the store which are found near the back doors of the store in which the defendant is found hiding. People v. Marques, 180 Colo. 154, 503 P.2d 339 (1972).

But only after burglary shown to have been committed. The possession of burglary tools as evidence in connection with the charge of burglary can only be considered when a burglary is first shown to have been committed. Wilcox v. People, 152 Colo. 173, 380 P.2d 912 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 931, 84 S. Ct. 702, 11 L. Ed.2d 652 (1964).

2. Possession of Stolen Property.

Possession of stolen property admissible. Defendant was shown to have had possession of the stolen tools soon after the burglary, and this is sufficient to justify the reception of such evidence. Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961).

Evidence of theft and recent possession of goods stolen were important as establishing the identity, and the intent which accompanied the breaking and entering. Windolph v. People, 96 Colo. 285, 42 P.2d 197 (1935); Wilcox v. People, 152 Colo. 173, 380 P.2d 912 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 931, 84 S. Ct. 702, 11 L. Ed.2d 652 (1964).

It requires explanation from defendant. Although the burden of proof cannot be validly shifted to the defendant in a criminal case, the onus of explanation can be placed upon him. An inference from possession of stolen property recently after the theft is an aid in proof which calls for rebutting or explanatory evidence. Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961).

Jury may infer guilt from recent unexplained possession. In a prosecution for larceny or burglary, the jury may infer that the accused committed the theft from the circumstances of his recent, unexplained, exclusive possession of the stolen articles involved. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970); Diebold v. People, 175 Colo. 96, 485 P.2d 900 (1971).

Such possession and proof of burglary support conviction. Proof that a burglary was committed, and that goods were then and there stolen, and shortly thereafter found in the possession of the accused, will sustain a conviction.

tion. Davis v. People, 137 Colo. 113, 321 P.2d 1103 (1958); Wilcox v. People, 152 Colo. 173, 380 P.2d 912 (1963), cert. denied, 376 U.S. 931, 84 S. Ct. 702, 11 L. Ed.2d 652 (1964).

Defendant's explanation need only raise reasonable doubt. Possession of stolen goods after a burglary or theft is sufficient to warrant a conviction, unless the attending circumstances or other evidence is such as to overcome the presumption raised by such possession, sufficient to create a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. Rueda v. People, 141 Colo. 504, 348 P.2d 958, cert. denied, 362 U.S. 923, 80 S. Ct. 673, 4 L. Ed.2d 744 (1960).

If the possession of the property by defendant, unexplained, constitutes a criminating circumstance, he need not show, even by a preponderance of testimony, that he came by it honestly. It is not necessary that the explanation should be satisfactory to the jury; if it raises in their minds a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt, it is sufficient to require an acquittal. Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961).

Unexplained possession instruction may be given where there is evidence that defendant had exclusive possession of the recently stolen goods whether the time of that possession was at the time of defendant's arrest or at an earlier time. People v. Card, 42 Colo. App. 259, 596 P.2d 402 (1979).

Rationale of unexplained possession doctrine is that when property is in a defendant's possession recently after a burglary, there is a "high probability" that the defendant has committed the burglary. People v. Card, 42 Colo. App. 259, 596 P.2d 402 (1979).

Testimony showing possession of stolen property. Possession of the stolen property for purposes of the unexplained possession doctrine may be established by the testimony of the arresting officer or by the testimony of other witnesses. People v. Card, 42 Colo. App. 259, 596 P.2d 402 (1979).

3. Sufficiency.

Evidence insufficient to establish intent. Where the only evidence that defendant entered a room with intent to commit theft is the strong circumstantial evidence that he took a billfold, the evidence is insufficient to establish intent. Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972).

Circumstantial evidence sufficient to support conviction of burglary. Nunn v. People, 177 Colo. 87, 493 P.2d 6 (1972).

When no one testified to seeing the actual breaking and entering, but witnesses heard a noise which alerted them and caused them to go see what was happening, and they saw the defendant coming out of the liquor store carrying four bottles of vodka, and investigation disclosed that the door had been forcibly opened, and that the crowbar found in the defendant's car fit exactly the prymarks adjacent to the broken hasp, there is sufficient circumstantial evidence to rebut the defendant's testimony that he purchased the vodka from a youth and was carrying it from the side of the building to his car. People v. Florez, 179 Colo. 176, 498 P.2d 1162 (1972).

Evidence held sufficient to support conviction. Smalley v. People, 116 Colo. 598, 183 P.2d 558 (1947); People v. Marques, 180 Colo. 154, 503 P.2d 339 (1972); People v. Pleasant, 182 Colo. 144, 511 P.2d 488 (1973); People v. Bueno, 183 Colo. 304, 516 P.2d 434 (1973); People v. Maestas, 187 Colo. 107, 528 P.2d 916 (1974); People v. Gomez, 189 Colo. 91, 537 P.2d 297 (1975); People v. Quintana, 665 P.2d 605 (Colo. 1983).

Defendant's admissions of the break-in and larceny to several officers and direction of them to a locker in the bus station where he had placed the loot and where it was found was sufficient to establish his guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Hubbard v. People, 152 Colo. 529, 383 P.2d 317 (1963).

Evidence that a building was burglarized and certain property stolen therefrom, that a defendant was arrested shortly thereafter with the stolen property in his possession, and that heelprints left on papers strewn on the floor of the burglarized building matched the heelprint of a shoe worn by defendant when arrested is sufficient to sustain a conviction. Brown v. People, 138 Colo. 354, 332 P.2d 996 (1958).

Evidence, when viewed in the light most favorable to the prosecution, supports defendant's burglary conviction. Facts were sufficient to allow a reasonable fact finder to determine that victim had possessory interest in apartment, defendant entered victim's apartment without permission, and, for purposes of the burglary statutes, defendant entered a building or occupied structure unlawfully. Accordingly, defendant may properly be retried on burglary charges. People v. Mondragon, 217 P.3d 936 (Colo. App. 2009).

Where prosecution's chief witness identifies defendant as his accomplice in burglary, evidence is sufficient to support jury's verdict of guilty. People v. Lewis, 180 Colo. 423, 506 P.2d 125 (1973).

Verbal warning regarding restraining order given prior to entry was sufficient to establish defendant's knowledge that he was not licensed or privileged to enter. Absent circumstances not present in the case, the court perceives no basis for limiting the dweller's right to occupancy of the structure to those cases in which the intruder is informed in writing that his former possessory rights are no longer in effect. People v. Smith, 943 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1996).

Evidence sufficient to sustain conviction for conspiracy to commit burglary. People v. Coca, 185 Colo. 10, 521 P.2d 781 (1974).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction.

Where defendant offered to buy all stolen television sets the witness could provide, but the record did not disclose that defendant was informed that burglaries would be committed, it was conceivable that the sets could have been obtained by theft without burglary, and the evidence was insufficient to sustain a conviction of burglary. People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

Where the evidence establishes that the defendant touched the outer surface of the inside door of the milk chute at the residence burglarized, no innocent purpose was suggested which would be consistent with that activity, but there was no evidence as to the time that the fingerprint was left on the door, no evidence placed the defendant inside the plaintiff's residence on the day of the burglary or at any other time and the fingerprint was the only evidence tending to tie the defendant to the crime, this evidence, when viewed as a whole and in the light most favorable to the prosecution, was not substantial nor sufficient enough to support a conclusion by a reasonable mind that the defendant was guilty of the burglary beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Ray, 626 P.2d 167 (Colo. 1981).

Since it was not possible for defendant to have walked eight blocks to the gallery, broken in, picked out items to take, loaded plastic bags with the stolen objects, and then carried them back to his residence, evidence, even aided by the inference that arose from his possession of the stolen goods, was insufficient. People v. Weems, 676 P.2d 1222 (Colo. App. 1983).

Evidence insufficient to justify overturning sentence. Triggs v. People, 197 Colo. 229, 591 P.2d 1024 (1979).

D. Jury.

Questions for the jury. In a prosecution for burglary the identity of stolen property, the effect of proof of recent possession thereof by a defendant, and whether an explanation offered as to the manner in which it was acquired is satisfactory are questions for a jury to determine. Brown v. People, 138 Colo. 354, 332 P.2d 996 (1958).

Issue of specific intent to steal was clearly one for the jury to determine from all the evidence and reasonable inferences that could be drawn therefrom. People v. Romero, 182 Colo. 50, 511 P.2d 466 (1973); People v. Green, 38 Colo. App. 165, 553 P.2d 839 (1976).

"Recent" possession of stolen goods is determined by the facts in each particular case and it may vary from a few days to two years. In practically all cases whether the period of time is "recent" is a question for the jury, and a period of six weeks has been upheld. Rueda v. People, 141 Colo. 504, 348 P.2d 958, cert. denied, 362 U.S. 923, 80 S. Ct. 673, 4 L. Ed.2d 744 (1960).

Sufficient evidence to go to jury. People v. Gilkey, 181 Colo. 103, 507 P.2d 855 (1973).

The argument that a case should not be submitted to the jury when there is no evidence that defendant did breaking and entering is without merit in Colorado, for one may be convicted under the charge of being a principal by proof that he was an accessory thereto. People v. Archuleta, 180 Colo. 156, 503 P.2d 346 (1972).

Though the evidence relating to the defendant's participation in the burglary of a residence was circumstantial in part, and the credibility of one witness was placed in issue by the defendant who claimed that the testimony of the witness was inherently incredible, the trial court was not in error for submitting the case to the jury. McClendon v. People, 174 Colo. 7, 481 P.2d 715 (1971).

E. Instructions.

Specific ulterior crime must be clearly and accurately defined. An essential element of burglary is that at the time and place of entering the structure, the accused must have an intent to commit therein a crime. It is therefore necessary that the specific ulterior crime be clearly and accurately defined in order to determine if the defendant's intent was that proscribed by the burglary statute. People v. Archuleta, 191 Colo. 482, 554 P.2d 307 (1976).

Elements of theft explained to jury in attempted burglary case. The elements constituting the crime of theft must be explained to the jury when that is the ulterior crime referred to in a case alleging an attempted burglary offense. People v. Jiron, 44 Colo. App. 246, 616 P.2d 166 (1980).

The trial court's failure to include the term "unlawful entry" in the jury instruction on second degree burglary was not plain error where, even if the instructions could have been worded more clearly, the jury was instructed using the exact language of the applicable statutory sections. People v. Hollenbeck, 944 P.2d 537 (Colo. App. 1996).

Instruction on unexplained recent possession of stolen property, which indicated to the jury that the burden of proving rightful possession was on the defendant, shifted the burden to the defendant to prove his innocence and was prejudicial error. Martinez v. People, 163 Colo. 503, 431 P.2d 765 (1967).

It would be desirable for the trial court to instruct the jury that the exclusive possession of stolen property recently after a theft or burglary serves to create an inference or incriminating circumstance that the defendant stole such property or burglarized the premises of the owner of such property and that such evidence, if established beyond a reasonable doubt, is sufficient in and of itself to justify a verdict of guilty in the absence of an explanation derived from the evidence in the case or furnished by the defendant raising a reasonable doubt as to his guilt. Ciccarelli v. People, 147 Colo. 413, 364 P.2d 368 (1961).

Instruction specifying that permission to enter part of a building does not necessarily include permission to enter other parts of the building was properly applied to a dwelling. Defendant, who lived with his mother and stepfather, was charged with burglary arising from the defendant's alleged theft of money from his mother's bedroom. The instruction was appropriate because defendant was specifically forbidden to enter his mother's bedroom. People v. Lopez, 946 P.2d 478 (Colo. App. 1997).

Instruction on burglary with intent to rape. Where the information simply charged burglary with intent to rape, the giving of an instruction that rape could be accomplished by sexual intercourse with the woman's permission if that permission was secured by the perpetrator fraudulently inducing her to believe that he was her husband, was not error. Thistle v. People, 199 Colo. 1, 199 P.2d 642 (1948).

Instruction on crime not lesser offense properly refused. In a prosecution for burglary, the contention that the trial court erred in refusing to instruct the jury on the misdemeanor of criminal trespass, as a lesser included offense of the crime of burglary, is without merit. Howard v. People, 173 Colo. 209, 477 P.2d 378 (1970).

Instruction indicating that defendant was not otherwise privileged to enter if he knew about a restraining order at the time he entered the premises is a correct statement of the law. Entry into a dwelling in violation of a restraining order is necessarily an unlawful entry. People v. Smith, 943 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1996).

Attempted first degree criminal trespass may be a lesser included offense to attempted second degree burglary under this section. People v. Austin, 799 P.2d 408 (Colo. App. 1990).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

Double jeopardy. Defendant, who had been charged with second degree burglary and acquitted on the ground that he had authority to enter the building in question, could not be retried because of double jeopardy provision in state constitution. People v. Woods, 182 Colo. 3, 510 P.2d 435 (1973).

Verdict of guilty on charge of conspiracy to commit burglary and verdict of innocent on substantive charge of burglary held not inconsistent. People v. Coca, 185 Colo. 10, 521 P.2d 781 (1974).

Verdicts of guilt as to larceny, but not burglary, are consistent. Where there was no evidence to link the defendant with the burglary except his possession of the stolen items shortly after the burglary occurred, and defendant denied any implication in the burglary, the jury could have well believed that the evidence linking defendant with the burglary was too weak to convict, but that the evidence of theft was ample, and therefore, there was no inconsistency in verdicts of guilty of theft and not guilty of burglary. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971).

Consecutive sentences for burglary and for larceny are improper. Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

The burglary and larceny should be viewed as a single transaction, indivisible for purposes of punishment. Reason and justice dictate that for the purpose of punishment under these circumstances, these offenses should be merged by concurrent sentencing. Maynes v. People, 169 Colo. 186, 454 P.2d 797 (1969).

But consecutive sentences may be imposed for burglary and assault. Conviction and sentences for the two distinct offenses of burglary and assault with intent to rob did not put appellees twice in jeopardy. The offenses are separate and independent; two consecutive sentences were within the law and such imposition did not constitute a violation of any federally protected right. Trujillo v. Patterson, 266 F. Supp. 901 (D. Colo. 1966), aff'd per curiam, 389 F.2d 1003 (10th Cir. 1967).

Under circumstances of case, a minimum 20-year term for second degree burglary was excessive. People v. Cohen, 617 P.2d 1205 (Colo. 1980).

Sentence of eight years was not an abuse of discretion. Defendant had previous convictions for domestic violence and had not complied with a lenient probationary sentence. The defendant had demonstrated an escalating pattern of perpetrating violence on his family based upon his numerous arrests and repeat offenses after release from incarceration and had refused to take personal responsibility for his violent acts. People v. Smith, 943 P.2d 31 (Colo. App. 1996).

Sentence under habitual criminal act valid. Hackett v. Tinsley, 143 Colo. 203, 352 P.2d 799, cert. denied, 364 U.S. 874, 81 S. Ct. 118, 5 L. Ed.2d 96 (1960).

Mittimus valid. Entering with or without force with the intent to commit larceny constitutes the crime of burglary; hence a mittimus issued following conviction on a charge of breaking and entering without force which recites conviction of burglary is lawful and valid. McGrath v. Tinsley, 138 Colo. 18, 328 P.2d 579 (1958).

18-4-204. Third degree burglary. (1) A person commits third degree burglary if with intent to commit a crime he enters or breaks into any vault, safe, cash register, coin vending machine, product dispenser, money depository, safety deposit box, coin telephone, coin box, or other apparatus or equipment whether or not coin operated.

(2) Third degree burglary is a class 5 felony, but it is a class 4 felony if it is a burglary, the objective of which is the theft of a controlled substance, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), lawfully kept in or upon the property burglarized.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 427, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-204. L. 81: (2) amended, p. 974, § 10, effective July 1; (2) amended, p. 2031, § 45, effective July 14. L. 2012: (2) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1619, § 42, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-204 is similar to former § 40-3-5, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Degree of theft is not material to charge of attempted burglary under this section. People v. Flanders, 183 Colo. 268, 516 P.2d 418 (1973).

The crime of criminal mischief is not a lesser included burglary offense because the elements are far different. While criminal mischief requires damage to property, burglary does not. People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 380, 566 P.2d 703 (1977).

Entering a telephone booth with felonious intent constituted burglary. Sanchez v. People, 142 Colo. 58, 349 P.2d 561 (1960).

Information adequate. Information charging defendant with attempted burglary of a coin telephone was not defective even though it did not affirmatively aver that the defendant entered the phone booth. People v. Flanders, 183 Colo. 268, 516 P.2d 418 (1973).

"Other apparatus or equipment" must be interpreted to apply only to those things that share the characteristics of the items listed in the statute. Winter v. People, 126 P.3d 192 (Colo. 2006).

Parking lot money slot box held to fall within statute. People v. Garcia, 784 P.2d 823 (Colo. App. 1989).

A glass display case is covered by the "or other apparatus or equipment" language provided in this section and that language is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Geyer, 942 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1996).

An unsecured and unlocked locker that does not have the appearance of being employed for the safekeeping of valuables is not within the class of items contemplated by this section. The issue of whether a locker is sufficiently "vault-like" to fit within the purview of "other apparatus or equipment" must turn on the particulars of a given case. Winter v. People, 126 P.3d 192 (Colo. 2006).

Failure to instruct the jury on the elements of "knowingly" and "unlawful entry" in a third degree burglary case because those elements are present in first and second degree burglary was harmless error because those elements were not contested at trial. People v. Geyer, 942 P.2d 1297 (Colo. App. 1996).

Circumstantial evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction where police officers did not see defendant remove any money from slot box, but observed defendant in front of box and found eleven folded and torn dollar bills in defendant's pocket and a piece of wire suitable for pulling bills from slots in pathway of defendant as he walked away from box. People v. Garcia, 784 P.2d 823 (Colo. App. 1989).

The district attorney could not charge under this section for actions that violated the more specific provisions of § 12-47.1-825 under the Limited Gaming Act of 1991. Since the act invokes the full extent of the state's police powers, creates a comprehensive and thorough regulatory scheme to control limited gaming, and specifically defines criminal acts related to limited gaming, the general assembly must have intended that actions violating the specified criminal acts would be chargeable only under the Limited Gaming Act or under article 20 of this title, where the criminal provisions of the limited gaming act are repeated verbatim. People v. Warner, 930 P.2d 564 (Colo. 1996).

Applied in People v. Talarico, 192 Colo. 445, 560 P.2d 90 (1977); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981); People v. Tate, 657 P.2d 955 (Colo. 1983).

18-4-205. Possession of burglary tools. (1) A person commits possession of burglary tools if he possesses any explosive, tool, instrument, or other article adapted, designed, or commonly used for committing or facilitating the commission of an offense involving forcible entry into premises or theft by a physical taking, and intends to use the thing possessed, or knows that some person intends to use the thing possessed, in the commission of such an offense.

(2) Possession of burglary tools is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 427, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-205.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-205 is similar to former § 40-3-7, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The conduct proscribed by this section is sufficiently distinguishable from that prohibited by § 18-4-104 to withstand defendant's equal protection challenge. People v. Gurule, 924 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1996).

Statute is not constitutionally overbroad. "Innocent possession" of tools is not prohibited by the statute, and the statute cannot be read to criminalize such conduct. People v. Chastain, 733 P.2d 1206 (Colo. 1987).

"Burglary tools" held not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Chastain, 733 P.2d 1206 (Colo. 1987); People v. Gurule, 924 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1996).

A "pouch" made of a pair of bib overalls that defendant specifically designed and adapted for purposes of facilitating a theft by a physical taking is a burglary tool pursuant to this section. However, mere possession of an item does not implicate the statute. The possession of a designed, adapted, or commonly used tool or other article must be accompanied by an intent to commit a burglary or theft by a physical taking. People v. Gurule, 924 P.2d 1164 (Colo. App. 1996).

Language of this section is explicit. People v. Gnout, 183 Colo. 366, 517 P.2d 394 (1973).

Arrangement of this section in prior compilations is not controlling in construing the section, but rather, courts must look to the language of the statute itself. People v. Gnout, 183 Colo. 366, 517 P.2d 394 (1973).

Information charging defendant with possession of burglary tools held sufficient. People v. Gnout, 183 Colo. 366, 517 P.2d 394 (1973).

Statute does not omit the unlawful act element of the crime. People v. Chastain, 733 P.2d 1206 (Colo. 1987).

Statute does not permit conviction solely on the basis of another's intent but requires intent by the accused or knowledge that another intends to use the tool for a burglarious purpose. People v. Chastain, 733 P.2d 1206 (Colo. 1987).

Tools held admissible. Tools not intrinsically and exclusively burglary tools, but capable of use as such, were admissible in evidence in support of a charge of possession of burglary tools, where other evidence was ample to show actual breaking and entering and felonious intent. Smalley v. People, 116 Colo. 598, 183 P.2d 558 (1947).

State may appropriate burglar tools. Burglar tools are by definition contraband. The state in the exercise of its police power may appropriate, without compensation, property employed in the commission of a crime in order to prevent the continuance of unlawful activity. It is not reasonable to assume that the general assembly intended by this section to permit convicted burglars to retain the tools of their trade. People v. Angerstein, 194 Colo. 376, 572 P.2d 479 (1977).

There is no right to have them returned. If property is legally seized and it is designed or intended for use as a means of committing a criminal offense or the possession of which is illegal, there is no right to have it returned. People v. Angerstein, 194 Colo. 376, 572 P.2d 479 (1977).

The district attorney could not charge under this section for actions that violated the more specific provisions of § 12-47.1-825 under the Limited Gaming Act of 1991. Since the act invokes the full extent of the state's police powers, creates a comprehensive and thorough regulatory scheme to control limited gaming, and specifically defines criminal acts related to limited gaming, the general assembly must have intended that actions violating the specified criminal acts would be chargeable only under the Limited Gaming Act or under article 20 of this title, where the criminal provisions of the limited gaming act are repeated verbatim. People v. Warner, 930 P.2d 564 (Colo. 1996).

Applied in Wilcox v. People, 152 Colo. 173, 380 P.2d 912 (1963); People v. Tate, 657 P.2d 955 (Colo. 1983).

PART 3

ROBBERY

18-4-301. Robbery. (1) A person who knowingly takes anything of value from the person or presence of another by the use of force, threats, or intimidation commits robbery.

(2) Robbery is a class 4 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 427, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-301. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 963, § 22, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. Indictment and Information.
 - B. Defenses.
 - C. Evidence.
 - D. Instructions.
- IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "Recent Judicial Modification of Habitual Criminal Act", see 23 Dicta 84 (1946). For comment on People v. Gallegos (130 Colo. 232, 274 P.2d 608 (1954)), see 27 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 247 (1955). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 18-4-301 is similar to former § 40-5-1, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Annotations appearing below from cases prior to 1979 were decided under the version of this section in effect prior to the 1977 amendment, which inserted "knowingly" preceding "takes anything of value".

This section is not unconstitutional. It does not contain ambiguities that would trap or ensnare the unwary, and it also complies with the equal protection clause of the fourteenth amendment of the U.S. constitution inasmuch as the legislative classification of the crimes of robbery is neither arbitrary nor discriminatory and operates equally on all persons within the classification. People v. Small, 177 Colo. 118, 493 P.2d 15 (1972).

Felony murder based on robbery precludes conviction for robbery. The defendant's conviction of the greater offense of felony murder, predicated as it is upon his killing of the robbery victim, precludes his simultaneous conviction of the lesser included offense of robbery. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

Robbery conviction not precluded by conviction for murder of another after deliberation. Although a separate judgment of conviction for robbery may not simultaneously exist with a judgment of conviction for first degree murder predicated upon the killing of the robbery victim, there is no such impediment to the entry of both a judgment of conviction for first degree murder based upon the killing of another after deliberation and a separate judgment of conviction for the robbery of the same victim. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983).

"Robbery" in felony murder provision used in generic sense. The term "robbery", as used in the felony murder statute, is to be construed as meaning this type of felony in its generic sense, including all types of robbery as defined in the statutes. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Where defendant was convicted of reckless manslaughter, robbery, and felony murder, appellate court could choose to give effect to the jury's finding that the defendant acted knowingly in committing a robbery and that a death occurred in the course of the robbery. The court could appropriately vacate the jury's finding of reckless manslaughter conviction. People v. Jones, 990 P.2d 1098 (Colo. App. 1999).

Any resulting death from robbery supports felony murder conviction. Any death that results in the course of any type of robbery may serve as a basis for a felony murder conviction, and all such types of robbery are necessarily merged in a felony murder charge. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

"Aggravated" and "simple" robbery are but two degrees of the same offense. The former requires that the perpetrator have the intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound the victim. The latter offense does not require this intent. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971).

Simple robbery is a lesser included offense within the charge of aggravated robbery. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 101, 465 P.2d 112 (1970); People v. Bartsch, 37 Colo. App. 52, 543 P.2d 1273 (1975).

Aggravated robbery distinguished. The essential difference between simple robbery and that form of aggravated robbery requiring the culpability element of "knowingly" is that the latter offense requires the defendant to "knowingly" put the person robbed or any other person in reasonable fear of death or bodily injury by the use of force, threats or intimidation with a deadly weapon. People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982).

Simple robbery and aggravated robbery both require intent to rob. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

Merger doctrine inapplicable to convictions for kidnapping, assault, and robbery. The merger doctrine does not apply to a single transaction resulting in convictions under §§ 18-3-301 (1)(a) and 18-3-402 and this section. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Attempted robbery lesser included crime of aggravated robbery. Attempted robbery without the element of the specific intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery which requires the specific intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

Third degree assault not included offense. Third degree assault requires proof of bodily injury, an element not necessary to culpability under robbery, and therefore, the former offense is not included within the latter. People v. Flores, 39 Colo. App. 556, 575 P.2d 11 (1977).

Theft is not lesser included offense of robbery. People v. Moore, 184 Colo. 110, 518 P.2d 944 (1974).

Theft by threat is not lesser offense included in robbery. Schott v. People, 174 Colo. 15, 482 P.2d 101 (1971); Maes v. People, 178 Colo. 46, 494 P.2d 1290 (1972).

Attempted robbery is not a lesser included offense of use of a stun gun. People v. Bass, 155 P.3d 547 (Colo. App. 2006).

Applied in Martinez v. Tinsley, 142 Colo. 495, 351 P.2d 879 (1960); People v. Morgan, 189 Colo. 256, 539 P.2d 130 (1975), overruled in Villafranca v. People, 194 Colo. 472, 573 P.2d 540 (1978); People v. Lobato, 192 Colo. 357, 559 P.2d 224 (1977); People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 426, 607 P.2d 1028 (1979); People v. Brown, 622 P.2d 109 (Colo. App. 1980); Smith v. District Court, 629 P.2d 1055 (Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 634 P.2d 26 (Colo. 1981); People v. Johnson, 634 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1981); People v. Shaw, 646 P.2d 375 (Colo. 1982); People v. Thompson, 655 P.2d 416 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bridges, 662 P.2d 161 (Colo. 1983); People v. Derrera, 667 P.2d 1363 (Colo. 1983); People v. Ward, 673 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Marquez, 692 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1984).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

A threat is defined as a declaration of purpose or intention to work injury to the person, property, or rights of another by the commission of an unlawful act. Schott v. People, 174 Colo. 15, 482 P.2d 101 (1971).

The gravamen of the offense is the manner of the taking. In robbery, the kind and value of the property taken is not material, and the gravamen of the offense being the manner of the taking. Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933); Sterling v. People, 151 Colo. 127, 376 P.2d 676 (1962), cert. denied, 373 U.S. 944, 83 S. Ct. 1554, 10 L. Ed.2d 699 (1963).

The gravamen of robbery is the application of physical force or intimidation against the victim at any time during the course of a transaction culminating in the taking of property from the victim's person or presence. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Villalobos, 159 P.3d 624 (Colo. App. 2006).

Force or fear being the main elements of the offense. Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933); People v. Thomas, 181 Colo. 317, 509 P.2d 592 (1973).

The gist of the crime of simple robbery is the putting in fear and taking of property of another by force or intimidation. People v. Small, 177 Colo. 118, 493 P.2d 15 (1972); People v. Jenkins, 198 Colo. 347, 599 P.2d 912 (1979).

The robbery statutes endorse the basic public policy that even rightful owners should not be permitted to use force to regain their property, once it has been taken. People v. Searce, 87 P.3d 228 (Colo. App. 2003).

The intent to steal is a substantive element in the commission of the crime of robbery. People v. Gallegos, 130 Colo. 232, 274 P.2d 608 (1954) (overruled in People v. Moseley, 193 Colo. 256, 566 P.2d 331 (1977)).

And the taking of property under a fair claim of right of possession does not constitute robbery. People v. Gallegos, 130 Colo. 232, 274 P.2d 608 (1954).

As when a creditor takes money from his debtor in satisfaction of an obligation, even though in so doing he uses force or intimidation, it cannot be regarded as robbery. People v. Gallegos, 130 Colo. 232, 274 P.2d 608 (1954).

Property is taken from the "presence of another" when it is so within the victim's reach, inspection or observation that he or she would be able to retain control over the property but for the force, threats, or intimidation directed by the perpetrator against the victim. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Benton, 829 P.2d 451 (Colo. App. 1991); People v. Fox, 928 P.2d 820 (Colo. App. 1996); People v. Villalobos, 159 P.3d 624 (Colo. App. 2006).

It is immaterial that the victim was not in the motel lobby when defendant used force to take away the victim's control of the cash register. Defendant's conduct in luring the victim to said defendant's apartment and attacking the victim there in order to steal the money from the cash drawer in the lobby was sufficient evidence to prove that defendant took something of value from the presence of the victim by the use of force. People v. Clemons, 89 P.3d 479 (Colo. App. 2003).

A motor vehicle can be taken from the "presence" of the owner even if the owner is still in the vehicle, the key element being the forcible seizure, from the owner, of the present ability to control the motor vehicle. People v. James, 981 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1998).

A security guard, pursuant to his employment in a department store, was the custodian of property taken by the defendant, and had the right to exercise control over the property. People v. Foster, 971 P.2d 1082 (Colo. App. 1998).

Robbery includes the snatching of an object attached to the person of another if force is used to tear or break the attachment. People v. Davis, 935 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1996).

Force need not be contemporaneous with taking. There is no requirement that the application of force or intimidation must be virtually contemporaneous with the taking. People v. Bartowsheski, 661 P.2d 235 (Colo. 1983); People v. Villalobos, 159 P.3d 624 (Colo. App. 2006).

The required "taking" need not be accomplished personally by the robber. If the robber forces another to "take" the property, a robbery has occurred. People v. James, 981 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1998).

The amount of the property is not an essential element of the offense. There is no provision in this section which makes the amount of property taken an essential element of the offense. Nor is there anything in the nature of robbery as defined by the common law from which it appears that the value of the property has ever been deemed of the essence of the crime. Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933).

In robbery the kind or value of the property taken is immaterial. Sterling v. People, 151 Colo. 127, 376 P.2d 676 (1962), cert. denied, 373 U.S. 944, 83 S. Ct. 1554, 10 L. Ed.2d 699 (1963).

Since punishment does not depend on the value of the property. There is no occasion, as there is in theft, for alleging the value, as the punishment is not made to depend on the value of the property taken. Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933).

Robbery requires no specific intent to permanently deprive the owner of the use or benefit of his property. People v. Moseley, 193 Colo. 256, 566 P.2d 331 (1977) (overruling People v. Gallegos, 130 Colo. 232, 272 P.2d 608 (1954)).

People v. Gallegos, 130 Colo. 232, 272 P.2d 608 (1954)).

Robbery of an at-risk adult is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery; therefore, the conviction for robbery of an at-risk adult must be vacated because it merges with the aggravated robbery conviction. People v. Lovato, 179 P.3d 208 (Colo. App. 2007).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. Indictment and Information.

Information held sufficient. Falgout v. People, 170 Colo. 32, 459 P.2d 572 (1969).

An information which substantially follows the terms of this section, is expressed in plain language, and which is easily understood, is sufficient. Albert v. People, 90 Colo. 219, 7 P.2d 822 (1932).

Money referred to in information construed to mean money of the United States. Where the information under this section alleges that money was taken, money will be construed to mean money of the United States, and the court will take judicial notice of its value. Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933).

It is not necessary to allege that person from whom property was taken was the owner thereof, since it is sufficient if it appears from the allegations that accused was not the owner. Regardless of the legal title, ownership may properly be laid in the person from whose physical possession the property was taken. Hampton v. People, 146 Colo. 570, 362 P.2d 864 (1961); People v. Marquez, 692 P.2d 1089 (Colo. 1984).

B. Defenses.

Defendant has right to use his mental condition at time of robbery as a defense on the merits of whether or not he had the requisite intent to commit the crime. People v. Scheidt, 186 Colo. 142, 526 P.2d 300 (1974).

Self-defense is not affirmative defense. Self-defense cannot justify the taking of a thing of value from the person or presence of another, and the lawfulness of the force used to accomplish the taking is immaterial. Therefore, self-defense is not an affirmative defense to the crime of aggravated robbery. People v. Beebe, 38 Colo. App. 80, 557 P.2d 840 (1976).

To present an affirmative defense for abandonment to the jury, defendant must present "some credible evidence" on the issue of the claimed defense. It is not necessarily the case, however, that the defense of abandonment is not available once defendant has injured the victim. O'Shaughnessy v. People, 2012 CO 9, 269 P.3d 1233.

C. Evidence.

Evidence of other crimes committed or attempted by accused is admissible to prove scienter, or guilty or criminal knowledge, with respect to the crime charged, if similar and occurring at or about the same time, or at a time not too remote. For such evidence to be admissible, such knowledge must be in issue or be an element of the offense charged, and the other offenses must be so connected with that charged as to throw light on the question. Proper evidence tending to show guilty knowledge is not to be excluded because disclosing the commission of a different crime by accused. Hampton v. People, 146 Colo. 570, 362 P.2d 864 (1961).

Recent and unexplained possession of fruits of robbery is an incriminating circumstance, and such fact, coupled with the other related facts and circumstances in the instant case, is deemed sufficient to support the verdict. Martinez v. People, 156 Colo. 380, 399 P.2d 415, cert. denied, 382 U.S. 866, 86 S. Ct. 134, 15 L. Ed.2d 104 (1965).

When a proper foundation has been laid, evidence that the property taken in the robbery in question was found in the possession of the accused shortly thereafter is admissible against him, subject to the rules governing the admissibility of evidence of the possession of the fruits of crime generally. There was no error in instructing the jury on this matter, even though the charge was robbery and not larceny. Cruz v. People, 147 Colo. 528, 364 P.2d 561 (1961), cert. denied, 368 U.S. 978, 82 S. Ct. 483, 7 L. Ed.2d 440 (1962).

A prima facie case of robbery is made out where the victim's wrist watch was later located in defendant's coat pocket, and the victim's pants pocket and billfold were later found on the floor in the back seat of the squad car in close proximity to defendant. Sterling v. People, 151 Colo. 127, 376 P.2d 676 (1962), cert. denied, 373 U.S. 944, 83 S. Ct. 1554, 10 L. Ed.2d 699 (1963).

One may be convicted upon uncorroborated testimony of accomplices, but to support a conviction it must be clear and convincing, must be received with great caution, and show guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Bowland v. People, 136 Colo. 57, 314 P.2d 685 (1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 934, 78 S. Ct. 418, 2 L. Ed.2d 417 (1958).

Evidence that defendant closely resembles one of three men who held up a supermarket and forced an employee to open the safe, and whose codefendants testify that defendant was a participant, is sufficient to justify the jury in rejecting defendant's alibi and giving credence to the testimony of his codefendants. Bowland v. People, 136 Colo. 57, 314 P.2d 685 (1957), cert. denied, 355 U.S. 934, 78 S. Ct. 418, 2 L. Ed.2d 417 (1958).

Proof of robbery in felony murder case.

Specific intent is not a necessary element in the proof of the offense of robbery, the question of mental capacity to form intent is of no relevance in a felony murder case where in the commission of a robbery a death occurred. Jones v. People, 146 Colo. 40, 360 P.2d 686 (1961).

Where defendant was charged with committing murder while perpetrating a robbery, it was incumbent on the state to prove that a robbery occurred. The admission by the defendant that he committed the robbery does not prevent the state from presenting separate and independent proof of the fact admitted. Bizup v. People, 150 Colo. 214, 371 P.2d 786 (1962).

Evidence sufficient to sustain robbery conviction. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971); People v. Goff, 187 Colo. 103, 530 P.2d 514 (1974).

Where a defendant is properly charged with the crime of robbery, the robbery is shown to have occurred, and defendant's role as an accessory is proved, a prima facie case is made, and thus defendant may be properly convicted under this section, although he was an accessory. Fernandez v. People, 176 Colo. 346, 490 P.2d 690 (1971).

Where defendants' fingerprints were found on the inside of the entry door and on an envelope normally kept in a desk drawer in the victim's bedroom, and where defendants theorize that the prints could have been made at a time other than during the commission of the crime, but did not testify nor present other testimony to buttress the theory, the evidence was sufficient for conviction of robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery. People v. Hannaman, 181 Colo. 82, 507 P.2d 466 (1973).

D. Instructions.

Evidence in aggravated robbery case held insufficient to support instruction on simple robbery. People v. Reed, 180 Colo. 16, 502 P.2d 952 (1972).

Simple robbery instruction is mandatory when the evidence would justify acquitting a defendant of aggravated robbery while convicting him of simple robbery. Tacorante v. People, 624 P.2d 1324 (Colo. 1981).

Where no rational basis for simple robbery conviction, court may refuse to instruct. Where the evidence presented to the jury showed, at a minimum, that the defendant had participated as a complicitor in the commission of an aggravated robbery, as proscribed by § 18-4-302, there was no rational basis on which the jury could have acted to acquit the defendant of aggravated robbery while convicting him of simple robbery, and the trial court did not therefore err in refusing to instruct the jury on the latter offense. People v. Glenn, 200 Colo. 416, 615 P.2d 700 (1980).

Required instructions by court. Where the defendant is charged with aggravated robbery and declines the court's offer to instruct on simple robbery, the court is obligated to instruct on the lesser nonincluded offense of theft only if there is no evidence of the defendant's guilt of the lesser included offense of simple robbery. People v. Graham, 41 Colo. App. 390, 590 P.2d 511 (1978), aff'd, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

Instruction on theft refused. The trial court did not commit error in refusing to instruct the jury on the crime of larceny where the defendant's theory of the case and his defense were based upon mistaken identity and alibi, and the only evidence presented relating to the incident of the offense was that presented by the people, all of which supported robbery. It is not error for a court to have refused a tendered instruction concerning an issue regarding which no facts were presented. Leyba v. People, 174 Colo. 1, 481 P.2d 417 (1971).

An instruction that a charge of robbery carries with it the lesser included offense of petty and grand theft would have been improper, since the kind and value of the property taken in a robbery is immaterial. Maes v. People, 178 Colo. 46, 494 P.2d 1290 (1972).

Lesser offense instruction is properly refused when an element that distinguishes the greater offense from the lesser offense is uncontested. Thus, defendant charged with aggravated robbery and felony murder was not entitled to lesser theft offense instruction because there was no evidence disputing the use of force against, and the killing of, the victim. People v. Villalobos, 159 P.3d 624 (Colo. App. 2006).

Test applicable to defendant's request for an instruction on the crime of theft is whether there existed a rational basis to acquit him of simple robbery but still convict him of theft; the test is not whether there is a total absence of evidence showing the defendant to be guilty of simple robbery. Graham v. People, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

Where, at a minimum, defendant committed simple robbery, no theft instruction. Because the uncontested evidence before the jury established, at a minimum, that the defendant had committed simple robbery, he was not entitled to an instruction on the crime of theft. Graham v. People, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

Trial court properly included in jury instruction language from another case that concerned the definition of "presence". People v. Benton, 829 P.2d 451 (Colo. App. 1991).

Money was not taken in "presence" of movie theater ticket taker since money was not in the physical possession of ticket taker and since ticket taker did not have right to exercise control over the money. People v. Ridenour, 878 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1994).

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

Proof of intent sufficient to support conviction. Proof of an intent to force the giving up of a thing of value is sufficient to support a conviction for robbery. People v. Bridges, 199 Colo. 520, 612 P.2d 1110 (1980).

Verdicts on offense and conspiracy must be consistent. If counsel for the people insist upon submitting to the jury a count of conspiracy as well as a count of robbery where the evidence which would convict upon either charge is exactly the same, the jury should be instructed that it cannot convict on one count and acquit on the other. People v. Way, 165 Colo. 161, 437 P.2d 535 (1968).

General verdict treated as conviction of lesser offense. Where a proper instruction on simple robbery was given and the evidence was sufficient to sustain a verdict of guilty on the lesser included offense of simple robbery, the supreme court elected to treat the verdict of guilty "as charged" as a verdict of guilty of simple robbery. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 101, 465 P.2d 112 (1970).

Convictions for two counts of robbery arising out of the same criminal episode are not multiplicitous. The issue turns on whether two robberies can arise out of a single taking of property. The inquiry then focuses on whether the crime of robbery is intended to protect people or property. If robbery is intended to protect people, a single taking could support multiple convictions if the one item is taken from multiple people with control over the item. The plain language of the robbery statute is ambiguous as to whether it is intended to protect people or property. The common law history of robbery and case law indicates robbery statutes are intended to protect people. Therefore, a single taking can support multiple convictions for robbery if the taking is made in the presence of multiple victims. People v. Borghesi, 66 P.3d 93 (Colo. 2003).

Defendant's acts constitute separate offenses as to each victim and conviction is not multiplicitous where the common property taken from the first victim was taken in the second victim's presence. People v. Sweeney, 78 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

Defendant's sentence of eight to nine years for simple robbery was not excessive. People v. Nierle, 624 P.2d 1333 (Colo. 1981).

18-4-302. Aggravated robbery. (1) A person who commits robbery is guilty of aggravated robbery if during the act of robbery or immediate flight therefrom:

(a) He is armed with a deadly weapon with intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound the person robbed or any other person; or

(b) He knowingly wounds or strikes the person robbed or any other person with a deadly weapon or by the use of force, threats, or intimidation with a deadly weapon knowingly puts the person robbed or any other person in reasonable fear of death or bodily injury; or

(c) He has present a confederate, aiding or abetting the perpetration of the robbery, armed with a deadly weapon, with the intent, either on the part of the defendant or confederate, if resistance is offered, to kill, maim, or wound the person robbed or any other person, or by the use of force, threats, or intimidation puts the person robbed or any other person in reasonable fear of death or bodily injury; or

(d) He possesses any article used or fashioned in a manner to lead any person who is present reasonably to believe it to be a deadly weapon or represents verbally or otherwise that he is then and there so armed.

(2) Repealed.

(3) Aggravated robbery is a class 3 felony and is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified presumptive sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-401 (10).

(4) If a defendant is convicted of aggravated robbery pursuant to paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with the provisions of section 18-1.3-406.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 427, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-302. L. 77: (1)(b) amended, p. 963, § 23, effective July 1. L. 86: (4) added, p. 777, § 9, effective July 1. L. 89: (1)(d) added and (2) repealed, pp. 831, 861, §§ 43, 156, effective July 1. L. 90: (1)(c) amended, p. 925, § 9, effective March 27. L. 2002: (4) amended, p. 1515, § 197, effective October 1. L. 2004: (3) amended, p. 636, § 8, effective August 4.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
- III. Trial and Prosecution.
 - A. Indictment and Information.
 - B. Evidence.
 - C. Jury.
 - D. Instructions.
- IV. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For article, "The Definition of 'Deadly Weapon' Under the Colorado Criminal Code", see 15 Colo. Law. 1663 (1986).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-302 is similar to former § 40-5-1, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is not violative of equal protection. People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982).

The term "aggravated robbery" means a robbery committed with a dangerous weapon and with the intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound the victim or other person. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 75, 482 P.2d 105 (1971).

This section provides that the crime of aggravated robbery is established if in the perpetration of such robbery the accused is armed with a dangerous weapon with intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound the person robbed or any other person. Vigil v. People, 158 Colo. 268, 406 P.2d 100 (1965).

"Robbery" in felony murder provision used in generic sense. The term "robbery", as used in the felony murder statute, is to be construed as meaning this type of felony in its generic sense, including all types of robbery as defined in the statutes. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Any resulting death from robbery supports felony murder conviction. Any death that results in the course of any type of robbery may serve as a basis for a felony murder conviction, and all such types of robbery are necessarily merged in a felony murder charge. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Aggravated robbery was merged in the offense of felony murder and the constitutional protection against double jeopardy precludes conviction for both offenses. People v. Raymer, 626 P.2d 705 (Colo. App. 1980), aff'd, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Aggravated robbery is robbery committed under circumstances in which the actor's conduct creates an increased risk of injury to the victim or instills in the victim an enhanced fear of death or injury. People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Attempt to commit aggravated robbery requires same culpability plus substantial step. Criminal attempt to commit aggravated robbery requires that the offender act with the kind of culpability otherwise required for aggravated robbery and engage in a substantial step toward the commission of aggravated robbery. People v. Ledman, 622 P.2d 534 (Colo. 1981).

Explanation of terms before plea of guilty. Where a defendant attempts to plead guilty to a violation of this section, it is mandatory that the court explain to him the nature and elements of "aggravated" robbery, and determine that the accused understands the nature of the charge. People v. Riney, 176 Colo. 221, 489 P.2d 1304 (1971).

A dangerous weapon is an article of offense which in its intended or easily adaptable use is likely to produce death or serious bodily injury. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

"Aggravated" and "simple" robbery are but two degrees of the same offense. The former requires that the perpetrator have the intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound the victim. The latter offense does not require this intent. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971).

Aggravated robbery is distinguished from simple robbery by the fact that the accused or a confederate is armed with a dangerous weapon with the intent, if resisted, to maim, wound, or kill. People v. Small, 177 Colo. 118, 493 P.2d 15 (1972).

Simple robbery is a lesser included offense within the charge of aggravated robbery. People v. Bartsch, 37 Colo. App. 52, 543 P.2d 1273 (1975).

Simple robbery distinguished. The essential difference between simple robbery and that form of aggravated robbery requiring the culpability element of "knowingly" is that the latter offense requires the defendant to "knowingly" put the person robbed or any other person in reasonable fear of death or bodily injury by the use of force, threats or intimidation with a deadly weapon. People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982).

Felony menacing distinguished. The offense of aggravated robbery may be committed without also committing felony menacing; no merger occurs because the requirement in the felony menacing statute that the actor knowingly place a victim in fear of "serious bodily injury" is distinguishable from the requirement that the robber knowingly place a victim in fear of "bodily injury". People v. Sisneros, 44 Colo. App. 65, 606 P.2d 1317 (1980).

Criminal attempt to commit aggravated robbery requires that the offender act with the kind of culpability otherwise required for the commission of aggravated robbery and that he engage in conduct constituting a substantial step towards the commission of that offense. People v. Aragon, 653 P.2d 715 (Colo. 1982).

Conviction of attempted aggravated robbery does not require a showing of specific intent to commit the underlying crime. People v. Krovarz, 697 P.2d 378 (Colo. 1985).

Convictions of both aggravated robbery and conspiracy to commit robbery do not violate double jeopardy. People v. Rivera, 178 Colo. 373, 497 P.2d 990 (1972).

Conviction for aggravated robbery and commission of a crime of violence does not violate double jeopardy and equal protection. People v. Schruder, 735 P.2d 905 (Colo. App. 1986).

Stipulation by attorney that a guilty verdict to aggravated robbery also established that the defendant was guilty of a crime of violence did not violate defendant's rights since the jury returned a verdict which showed that it found that the defendant placed another in fear by the use of a deadly weapon and since defendant failed to show how a special interrogatory could have produced a different result. People v. McMullen, 738 P.2d 23 (Colo. App. 1986).

When the crime of violence statute is superimposed on convictions for both aggravated robbery and simple robbery, there are real differences between the two forms of robbery. These differences provide substantial support for the disparate penalty applicable to a crime of violence finding which is superimposed on a conviction for aggravated robbery, and such does not violate equal protection of the laws. People v. Young, 758 P.2d 667 (Colo. 1988).

It is possible to commit an aggravated robbery without contemporaneously perpetrating a second degree assault. People v. Grant, 40 Colo. App. 46, 571 P.2d 1111 (1977); People v. Toomer, 43 Colo. App. 182, 604 P.2d 1180 (1979).

Assault with intent to rob is lesser included offense of aggravated robbery. Therefore, since assault with intent to rob is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery, it was error for the court to permit both verdicts to stand. Thus, the conviction on the lesser included offense must be set aside. People v. Stephens, 188 Colo. 8, 532 P.2d 728 (1975).

As is attempted robbery. Attempted robbery without the element of the specific intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery which requires the specific intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

If a robbery or attempted robbery is established but without additional specific intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound, a person charged with aggravated robbery or attempted aggravated robbery can be found guilty of simple robbery or attempted simple robbery under the lesser included offense in a case where only the greater crime is charged. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

Aggravated robbery and assault with intent to murder separate offenses. The offense of assault with intent to murder requires proof of a specific intent to kill, a fact not necessary to sustain a charge of aggravated robbery. On the other hand, aggravated robbery requires proof of a robbery, a fact not necessary for assault. Therefore, punishment for both of these offenses committed during one course of conduct does not violate the constitutional prohibition against double jeopardy for the same offense. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 62, 507 P.2d 875 (1973).

An argument of the defendants, based on the assumption that to be guilty of aggravated robbery they had to be guilty of assault with intent to murder, is clearly unfounded. People v. Rivera, 178 Colo. 373, 497 P.2d 990 (1972).

Double jeopardy barred convictions for both aggravated robbery and assault with a deadly weapon. Under the former criminal code, it was impossible to commit aggravated robbery without contemporaneously perpetuating an assault with a deadly weapon. Since assault with a deadly weapon was the lesser included offense, double jeopardy barred a conviction for both crimes. People v. Hancock, 186 Colo. 30, 525 P.2d 435 (1974).

Lesser included offense. Attempt to commit robbery is a lesser included offense of attempt to commit aggravated robbery. People v. Johnson, 634 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1981).

When aggravated robbery is lesser included offense of felony murder. Where the defendant's conviction for felony murder is based upon the causation of the robbery victim's death during the course of the robbery, a charge of aggravated robbery of the same victim is a lesser included offense of the felony murder charge within the meaning of § 18-1-408(5)(c). People v. Raymer, 662 P.2d 1066 (Colo. 1983).

Where defendant was convicted of aggravated robbery and was adjudicated a habitual criminal, a subsequent reversal of the adjudication of habitual criminality negated its sentence enhancing effect and required resentencing for the underlying charge since it was not clear from the record that the robbery sentence was imposed independently from the habitual criminal adjudication. When resentencing the trial court could consider all relevant and material factors, including new evidence incorporated in a supplemental presentence report. People v. Watkins, 684 P.2d 234 (Colo. 1984).

Applied in Bernard v. Tinsley, 144 Colo. 244, 355 P.2d 1098 (1960), cert. denied, 365 U.S. 830, 81 S. Ct. 718, 5 L. Ed.2d 708 (1961); Bingham v. People, 157 Colo. 92, 401 P.2d 255 (1965); Cowman v. People, 157 Colo. 120, 401 P.2d 831 (1965); Bustos v. People, 158 Colo. 451, 408 P.2d 64 (1965); Neighbors v. People, 161 Colo. 587, 423 P.2d 838 (1967); Jaggers v. People, 174 Colo. 430, 484 P.2d 796 (1971); People v. Marchese, 37 Colo. App. 65, 541 P.2d 1264 (1975); People v. Brionez, 39 Colo. App. 396, 570 P.2d 1296 (1977); People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978); Wells v. People, 197 Colo. 350, 592 P.2d 1321 (1979); People v. Culbertson, 198 Colo. 153, 596 P.2d 1200 (1979); Watson v. District Court, 199 Colo. 76, 604 P.2d 1165 (1980); Graham v. People, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980); People v. Cabral, 629 P.2d 575 (Colo. 1981); People v. Moody, 630 P.2d 74 (Colo. 1981); People v. Bravo, 630 P.2d 612 (Colo. 1981); People v. Scott, 630 P.2d 615 (Colo. 1981); People v. Henry, 631 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1981); People v. Morgan, 637 P.2d 338 (Colo. 1981); People v. Anderson, 637 P.2d 354 (Colo. 1981); People v. Swanson, 638 P.2d 45 (Colo. 1981); People v. Lowery, 642 P.2d 515 (Colo. 1982); People v. Bueno, 646 P.2d 931 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hogan, 649 P.2d 326 (Colo. 1982); Watkins v. People, 655 P.2d 834 (Colo. 1982); People v. Cooper, 662 P.2d 478 (Colo. 1983); People v. Akins, 662 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1983).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

Culpable mental state implied. A statute will be presumed to conform to constitutional requirements, and a culpable mental state will be implied from a particular statute which does not contain an intent element on its face. People v. Smith, 620 P.2d 232 (Colo. 1980).

Intent is a necessary element in the proof of aggravated robbery, and this section, covering the offense, must be given its full force and effect. Funk v. People, 90 Colo. 167, 7 P.2d 823 (1932); Gonzales v. People, 166 Colo. 557, 445 P.2d 74 (1968).

It is not essential that a bandit must demonstrate an intent to kill, maim, or wound the victim of the holdup. Vigil v. People, 158 Colo. 268, 406 P.2d 100 (1965).

Fact that defendant was armed with intent to harm only goes to the grade and punishment of crime. In a prosecution for aggravated robbery under this section, the fact that defendant was armed with a dangerous weapon with intent to kill or wound his victim if resisted, is not the essence of the offense of robbery, and proof of these facts is not necessary for a conviction, but goes only to the grade of the crime and punishment to be inflicted. Funk v. People, 90 Colo. 167, 7 P.2d 823 (1932).

Being dangerously armed and having the intent described are not essential to the perpetration of a robbery, but proof thereof goes to the degree of the crime, and affects only the punishment to be suffered in event of conviction. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

A simulated pistol, not per se dangerous, may become so factually because of its substance, size, and weight as a bludgeon wielded within striking distance of the person to be robbed. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

Section 18-1-901 prescribes test to determine whether certain items constitute deadly weapons. Section 18-1-901 (3)(e) expressly prescribes a test to determine whether items other than firearms, knives, and bludgeons are deadly weapons, based not on the intrinsic nature of the items but upon their use or intended use. Bowers v. People, 617 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1980).

Armed with and in possession of a deadly weapon. This element of aggravated robbery may be proven by relying on presumption created by subsection (2). People v. Castenada, 765 P.2d 641 (Colo. App. 1988), cert. denied, 782 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1989).

Quart bottle of whiskey is not a bludgeon but it may satisfy the statutory test defining a deadly weapon as a "device, instrument, material, or substance, ... which in the manner it is used ... is capable of producing death or serious bodily injury". Bowers v. People, 617 P.2d 560 (Colo. 1980).

The state of mind or intent is usually manifested by circumstances and proof thereof necessarily is by circumstantial evidence, and, of course, such intent is ordinarily inferable from the facts. The state of mind of the defendant is concealed within the mind and is not usually, perhaps never, susceptible of direct proof. Ruark v. People, 157 Colo. 320, 402 P.2d 637 (1965).

Circumstantial evidence is sufficient to at least present a jury question as to whether the defendant possessed the requisite specific intent to maim, wound, or kill, if resisted. Elliott v. People, 176 Colo. 373, 490 P.2d 687 (1971).

Constitutionality and intent of subsection (2). Clearly, the intent of the general assembly in passing subsection (2) was to prevent armed robbers from escaping aggravated robbery charges by simply concealing deadly weapons in their pockets or under other wraps or devices. Recognizing this legislative intent, the constitutionality of the statute is upheld. People v. Lorio, 190 Colo. 373, 546 P.2d 1254 (1976).

Subsection (2) does not unconstitutionally deny defendant equal protection of the laws by removing the only real distinction between simple and aggravated robbery. People v. Murphy, 192 Colo. 411, 559 P.2d 708 (1977).

Or due process. Subsection (2) of this section, which makes a robber's representation that he is armed prima facie evidence that he is in fact armed, does not deny a defendant due process by shifting the prosecution's burden of proof. People v. Hawkins, 192 Colo. 535, 560 P.2d 833 (1977).

The presumption created by subsection (2) does not violate a defendant's constitutional right against self-incrimination. People v. Lorio, 190 Colo. 373, 546 P.2d 1254 (1976).

As it permits jury inference as to possession. The presumption created by subsection (2) meets the test described by the United States supreme court in that it permits the jury to infer that the defendant actually possessed a deadly weapon when he has made such a representation to another. People v. Lorio, 190 Colo. 373, 546 P.2d 1254 (1976).

Prosecution must still prove additional element. Subsection (2) merely permits the jury to infer that a defendant told the truth when he asserted that he was armed. The prosecution is still required to prove an additional element over and above what is required to prove simple robbery. People v. Murphy, 192 Colo. 411, 559 P.2d 708 (1977).

Shifts only part of burden to defendant. The statutory presumption created by subsection (2) does not shift the entire burden of proof to the defendant, but merely the burden of going forward with respect to certain evidence. People v. Lorio, 190 Colo. 373, 546 P.2d 1254 (1976).

Instruction regarding subsection (2) did not shift the burden of proof; rather, the instruction and statute merely shifted the burden of going forward with respect to certain evidence. People v. Jones, 191 Colo. 385, 553 P.2d 770 (1976).

This section and an instruction phrased in the language of this section, with the exception that it does not state that representations of being armed shall be considered "prima facie" evidence that the defendant was armed, do not operate to shift the burden of proof. People v. Hawkins, 192 Colo. 535, 560 P.2d 833 (1977).

Attempted robbery without aggravation does not include any element not included in attempted robbery with aggravation. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

Inference of possession by victim. In the light of common sense and experience, the victim of a robbery — possessed of reasonable belief — may infer that a defendant possesses a deadly weapon if the defendant makes such a representation. People v. Lorio, 190 Colo. 373, 546 P.2d 1254 (1976).

Simple robbery and aggravated robbery both require the intent to rob. People v. Trujillo, 184 Colo. 387, 524 P.2d 1379 (1974).

III. TRIAL AND PROSECUTION.

A. Indictment and Information.

Information held sufficient. Johnson v. Tinsley, 155 Colo. 346, 394 P.2d 842 (1964).

Indictment need not specify which method of committing offense charged. As in the case of principals and complicitors, an indictment under this section need not specify which of the two methods of committing the offense is being charged. People v. Martinez, 42 Colo. App. 307, 600 P.2d 82 (1979).

Variance between indictment and proof not fatal to prosecution. A variance between the indictment, which accused defendant of having an armed confederate present, and the proof, which showed defendant as the person armed, was not fatal to a prosecution under this section. People v. Martinez, 42 Colo. App. 307, 600 P.2d 82 (1979).

B. Evidence.

Evidence of conspiracy to commit aggravated robbery is not inadmissible and is not meaningless and to be ignored merely because plans to commit robbery were frustrated and ended with commission of second degree assault. People v. Shannon, 189 Colo. 287, 539 P.2d 480 (1975).

Admission of weapon proper. Where no weapon was seen by victim of aggravated robbery, and where tire iron found by cash register did not belong to service station and had not been seen in service station prior to robbery, and where wound on victim's head appeared to have been inflicted by tire tool or similar instrument, admission of tire tool was not error. People v. Bedwell, 181 Colo. 20, 506 P.2d 365 (1973).

Evidence of intent sufficient to go to jury. McGraw v. People, 154 Colo. 368, 390 P.2d 819 (1964).

Where it was contended that the evidence was insufficient to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the gunman had the requisite specific intent, if resisted, to kill, maim, or wound the person robbed or any other person, it was held that the record showed sufficient circumstances from which the jury could reasonably infer that the gunman had the state of mind necessary to sustain the conviction of aggravated robbery. Schott v. People, 174 Colo. 15, 482 P.2d 101 (1971).

The pointing of the gun in a threatening manner is sufficient to support the finding of specific intent. Schermerhorn v. People, 175 Colo. 256, 486 P.2d 428 (1971).

A threat by a defendant to shoot a victim is sufficient to require submission of an aggravated robbery charge to a jury. Candelaria v. People, 177 Colo. 136, 493 P.2d 355 (1972).

Evidence held sufficient to support conviction of aggravated robbery. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971); People v. Bedwell, 181 Colo. 20, 506 P.2d 365 (1973); People v. Renfro, 181 Colo. 159, 508 P.2d 396 (1973); People v. Hawkins, 192 Colo. 535, 560 P.2d 833 (1977); People v. Moseley, 193 Colo. 256, 566 P.2d 331 (1977); People v. Larson, 194 Colo. 338, 572 P.2d 815 (1977); People v. Williams, 40 Colo. App. 30, 569 P.2d 339 (1977); People v. Bowers, 42 Colo. App. 467, 600 P.2d 95 (1979); People v. Gregg, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

Where defendant is found hiding near scene of robbery with some of the masks and other items used to perfect the robbers' disguise, evidence against him is substantial and supports his conviction. Velarde v. People, 179 Colo. 207, 500 P.2d 125 (1972).

Evidence sufficient to sustain attempted aggravated robbery conviction. People v. Williams, 40 Colo. App. 30, 569 P.2d 339 (1977).

Evidence sustained defendant's conviction as accessory to aggravated robbery. People v. Jones, 184 Colo. 96, 518 P.2d 819 (1974).

C. Jury.

Questions for jury. Under an information charging aggravated robbery under this section, the jury must first determine from the evidence whether or not a robbery was committed, and if so, whether defendant was armed with dangerous weapons, and had the intent, if resisted, to kill or wound his victim. Funk v. People, 90 Colo. 167, 7 P.2d 823 (1932).

Character of weapon is jury question. Whether an article used as a weapon is dangerous may be, because of its very character or the circumstances of its use, a matter of doubt, and in such case the question should be left to the jury under an instruction as to what constitutes a dangerous weapon. Hutton v. People, 156 Colo. 334, 398 P.2d 973 (1965).

D. Instructions.

Instructions on culpable mental state. A culpable mental state is a requisite element of aggravated robbery. If jury instructions taken as a whole are confusing, or imply that no mental state is required to convict, these instructions are constitutionally deficient. People v. Ward, 673 P.2d 47 (Colo. App. 1983).

Instructions using term "aggravated". The use of the word "aggravated" in the information is a matter of form only. There was no objection to instructions which used the word "aggravated", and this did not constitute plain error affecting substantial rights. Moore v. People, 164 Colo. 222, 434 P.2d 132 (1967).

Simple robbery instruction is mandatory when the evidence would justify acquitting a defendant of aggravated robbery while convict-ing him of simple robbery. Tacorante v. People, 624 P.2d 1324 (Colo. 1981).

Where no rational basis for simple robbery conviction, court may refuse to instruct. Where the evidence presented to the jury showed, at a minimum, that the defendant had participated as a complicitor in the commission of an aggravated robbery, as proscribed by this section, there was no rational basis on which the jury could have acted to acquit the defendant of aggravated robbery while convicting him of simple robbery, and the trial court did not therefore err in refusing to instruct the jury on the latter offense. People v. Glenn, 200 Colo. 416, 615 P.2d 700 (1980).

Use of term "simple robbery". Where the trial court failed to instruct the jury as to what the court meant in referring to "simple robbery" as a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery, but where the instruction in question was worded substantially in the language of the statute, and the record shows that the instructions when read as a whole are not complicated nor difficult to understand, and the jury was fully capable of understanding the concept of "simple robbery" as a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery, there was no error. People v. Dago, 179 Colo. 1, 497 P.2d 1261 (1972).

Instruction on specific intent must be delivered to the jury in cases of aggravated robbery. Gonzales v. People, 166 Colo. 557, 445 P.2d 74 (1968).

A defendant charged with aggravated robbery is entitled to an instruction on the element of specific intent to kill, maim, or wound, if resisted, whether requested or not. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 101, 465 P.2d 112 (1970).

Failure to so instruct requires reversal. A verdict of guilty cannot stand where the element of specific intent is material as to one count of the information or indictment which is related to and joined with a count of conspiracy, when the court's instructions on intent covering either count are erroneous. Gonzales v. People, 166 Colo. 557, 445 P.2d 74 (1968).

Where the supreme court fails to properly instruct the jury on a necessary element of the crime charged, a verdict of guilty as to aggravated robbery cannot stand. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 101, 465 P.2d 112 (1970).

Where intent is uncertain, jury must be instructed as to simple robbery. In a prosecution for aggravated robbery under this section, there being evidence tending to negative the specific intent necessary to constitute the crime, it was reversible error for the trial court to refuse to instruct the jury on the question of simple robbery, and to refuse to submit to it a form of verdict covering that feature of the case. Funk v. People, 90 Colo. 167, 7 P.2d 823 (1932).

Where aggravated robbery has been charged, the trial judge must give an instruction on the lesser offense of simple robbery when such instruction is requested by the defendant and when it is supported by the evidence. Hollon v. People, 170 Colo. 432, 462 P.2d 490 (1969); Johnson v. People, 172 Colo. 72, 470 P.2d 37 (1970); People v. Reed, 180 Colo. 16, 502 P.2d 952 (1972).

Where the jury can convict defendants of aggravated robbery, it is not prejudicial error to submit instructions and verdicts to the jury on the offense of simple robbery. Atwood v. People, 176 Colo. 183, 489 P.2d 1305 (1971).

Refusal may be reversible error. There was testimony from the victim that there was no violence and no threats. The only evidence of intent was the presence of the loaded pistol. The evidence was such that the jury could find that the people had failed to prove the element of specific intent beyond a reasonable doubt, thus, it was reversible error for the trial judge to refuse to instruct, as requested, on simple robbery. Hollon v. People, 170 Colo. 432, 462 P.2d 490 (1969).

Required instructions by court. Where the defendant is charged with aggravated robbery and declines the court's offer to instruct on simple robbery, the court is obligated to instruct on the lesser nonincluded offense of theft only if there is no evidence of the defendant's guilt of the lesser included offense of simple robbery. People v. Graham, 41 Colo. App. 390, 590 P.2d 511 (1978), aff'd, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

Lesser theft offense instruction is properly refused when an element that distinguishes the greater offense of aggravated robbery from the lesser offense is uncontested. Defendant charged with aggravated robbery and felony murder was not entitled to lesser theft offense instruction because there was no evidence disputing the use of force against, and the killing of, the victim. People v. Villalobos, 159 P.3d 624 (Colo. App. 2006).

Evidence in aggravated robbery case held insufficient to support instruction on simple robbery. Sisneros v. People, 174 Colo. 543, 484 P.2d 1207 (1971); People v. Reed, 180 Colo. 16, 502 P.2d 952 (1972).

Where the suspect pursued by police fired a shot, the defendant charged with aggravated robbery was not entitled to an instruction on simple robbery; he had manifested the specific intent to maim, wound, or kill, if resisted, and placed himself outside of the ambit of the rule requiring an instruction on the lesser offense. Johnson v. People, 172 Colo. 72, 470 P.2d 37 (1970).

Refusal of accessory instruction proper. The court's refusal to instruct the jury that the crime of accessory during the fact is also a lesser included offense when robbery is charged, which was the defendant's principal theory of the case, was not error because accessory during the fact is a separate and distinct offense which was not charged and which could not properly have been the subject of an instruction. Maes v. People, 178 Colo. 46, 494 P.2d 1290 (1972).

The term “confederate” as used in subsection (1)(c) means more than a bystander. The confederate must be “aiding and abetting the perpetration of the robbery”. People v. Wilford, 111 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2004).

The term “confederate” is not a highly technical one and is well within the comprehension of the jury. The trial court did not err, therefore, in rejecting defendant’s jury instruction that incorporated a definition of “confederate” from a legal dictionary or in declining to define the term. People v. Wilford, 111 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2004).

Instruction based on subsection (2) properly refused. There being no question that a deadly weapon had been utilized during the robbery, no issue concerning subsection (2) of this section was raised. Hence, the trial court properly refused a tendered instruction based on that subsection. People v. Roberts, 37 Colo. App. 490, 553 P.2d 93 (1976).

Instruction adequate. Where the jury was instructed in plain understandable English that a conviction for aggravated robbery requires that the defendant have the specific intent to kill, maim, or wound, if resisted in his attempt to commit the robbery, that instruction, read together with the other instruction requiring the people to prove every element beyond a reasonable doubt, adequately apprised the jury of the law, and the jury was adequately instructed on the elements of aggravated robbery. People v. Crawford, 183 Colo. 166, 515 P.2d 631 (1973).

Because the jury indicated it was confused about the meaning of the phrase “use of force or threat or intimidation” and whether carrying a gun meant the same as using a gun, it was proper for the court to give a supplemental instruction. People v. Wilford, 111 P.3d 512 (Colo. App. 2004).

An instruction which permits the jury to draw inferences from the unexplained possession of recently stolen property is proper in cases where robbery is charged. People v. Grubbs, 39 Colo. App. 436, 570 P.2d 1299 (1977).

To present an affirmative defense for abandonment to the jury, defendant must present “some credible evidence” on the issue of the claimed defense. It is not necessarily the case, however, that the defense of abandonment is not available once defendant has injured the victim. O’Shaughnessy v. People, 2012 CO 9, 269 P.3d 1233.

IV. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

Verdicts held not inconsistent. Since the statutory elements of aggravated robbery and theft over $200 (now $300) are different, jury verdicts convicting a defendant of aggravated robbery of an employee but acquitting the defendant of theft from the employer are not inconsistent and repugnant. People v. Williams, 40 Colo. App. 30, 569 P.2d 339 (1977).

Assault with a deadly weapon is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery, and since the jury convicted the defendant of aggravated robbery, his conviction for the included offense of assault with a deadly weapon must be set aside. People v. Bugarin, 181 Colo. 62, 507 P.2d 875 (1973).

Acquittal of conspiracy charge required. Where the very same evidence which the jury did not believe was sufficient to prove that the defendant participated in the robbery was the only evidence which could prove him guilty of conspiracy, the conspiracy verdict could not stand. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971).

Verdict of aggravated robbery sufficient. A verdict in a prosecution under this section which finds the defendant guilty of “robbery with a deadly weapon, to-wit, a gun”, is not insufficient because it does not include the words, “as charged in the information”, or does not more definitely specify the crime as defined by statute. Van Diest v. People, 71 Colo. 121, 204 P. 606 (1922).

Where the charge in count one of the information alleged that defendant committed the robbery with the intent to maim, wound, or kill, if resisted, the trial court instructed specifically in the elements necessary to sustain the charge of “aggravated” robbery, and the jury found defendant guilty of “aggravated” robbery “as charged in the first count of the information”, this was sufficient to warrant the imposition of the more severe penalty authorized by this section when a robbery is committed with intent to maim, wound, or kill, if resisted. Lucero v. People, 173 Colo. 94, 476 P.2d 257 (1970).

Where the verdict states that defendant is found guilty of “aggravated robbery as charged in the information herein”, and the information describes in detail the more serious robbery involving the increased punishment, there remains no basis for the argument that the verdict found the defendant guilty of only simple robbery. Johnson v. People, 174 Colo. 75, 482 P.2d 105 (1971).

Verdict treated as conviction of simple robbery. Where the defendant is charged with aggravated robbery, but the case is submitted to the jury upon an instruction for simple robbery, and the jury returns a verdict of “guilty as charged”, the court should treat the verdict as a finding of guilty as to simple robbery. Hampton v. People, 171 Colo. 101, 465 P.2d 112 (1970).

A charge of aggravated robbery and commission of a violent crime require consistent verdicts when based upon the same facts. People v. Castenada, 765 P.2d 641 (Colo. App.

1988), cert. denied, 782 P.2d 1197 (Colo. 1989).

Conviction for conspiracy to commit aggravated robbery, as defined in subsection (1)(b), necessarily requires crime of violence sentencing. People v. Terry, 961 P.2d 500 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 977 P.2d 145 (Colo. 1999).

Consecutive sentences for aggravated robbery convictions not mandatory where defendant was not separately charged with a "crime of violence" and was convicted under this section generally, but not subsection (1)(b) specifically. People v. McCoy, 944 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1996).

Use of a sealed verdict in prosecution for aggravated robbery was not improper. People v. Herrera, 182 Colo. 302, 512 P.2d 1160 (1973).

Fifteen to 20-year sentence for aggravated robbery was not excessive. People v. Colasanti, 626 P.2d 1136 (Colo. 1981).

It was not improper for trial court to consider during sentencing that violent crimes have a greater public impact in small rural communities than in larger urban ones since a sentencing court should always consider the interests of the public involved and this factor was not decisive of the court's decision. People v. Palmer, 888 P.2d 348 (Colo. App. 1994).

18-4-303. Aggravated robbery of controlled substances. (1) A person who takes any controlled substance, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5), from any pharmacy or other place having lawful possession thereof or from any pharmacist or other person having lawful possession thereof under the aggravating circumstances defined in section 18-4-302 is guilty of Aggravated robbery of controlled substances.

(2) Aggravated robbery of controlled substances is a class 2 felony.

Source: L. 73: p. 572, § 11. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-303. L. 81: (1) and (2) amended, pp. 737, 974, §§ 21, 11, effective July 1. L. 2012: (1) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1619, § 43, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Culpable mental state is element of crime. Because aggravated robbery of drugs is merely a variant of the common-law crime of aggravated robbery, the culpable mental state of "knowingly" is a requisite element of the crime. People v. Mascarenas, 666 P.2d 101 (Colo. 1983).

Necessity of chemical testing. While the better practice is to subject narcotics evidence to chemical analysis, chemical testing is not nec-

Convictions for two counts of aggravated robbery arising out of the same criminal episode are not multiplicitous. The issue turns on whether two robberies can arise out of a single taking of property. The inquiry then focuses on whether the crime of robbery is intended to protect people or property. If robbery is intended to protect people, a single taking could support multiple convictions if the one item is taken from multiple people with control over the item. The plain language of the robbery statute is ambiguous as to whether it is intended to protect people or property. The common law history of robbery and case law indicates robbery statutes are intended to protect people. Therefore, a single taking can support multiple convictions for robbery if the taking is made in the presence of multiple victims. People v. Borghesi, 66 P.3d 93 (Colo. 2003); People v. Clifton, 74 P.3d 519 (Colo. App. 2003).

Defendant's acts constitute separate offenses as to each victim and conviction is not multiplicitous where the common property taken from the first victim was taken in the second victim's presence. People v. Sweeney, 78 P.3d 1133 (Colo. App. 2003).

essary in all cases to prove that the items taken in a robbery were in fact "narcotic drugs". People v. Lake, 195 Colo. 454, 580 P.2d 788 (1978).

Aggravated robbery of drugs from a pharmacy is a separate offense and not merely a punishment enhancement statute for aggravated robbery. Ramirez v. People, 682 P.2d 1181 (Colo. 1984).

18-4-304. Robbery of the elderly or disabled - legislative declaration. (Repealed)

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 734, § 2, effective July 1. L. 80: (4) amended, p. 794, § 48, May 1. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 1742, § 42, effective July 1.

18-4-305. Use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property. Pursuant to section 13-25-130, C.R.S., photographs, video tapes, or films of property over which a person is alleged to have exerted unauthorized control or otherwise to have obtained unlawfully are competent evidence if the photographs, video tapes, or films are admissible into evidence under the rules of law governing the admissibility of photographs, video tapes, or films into evidence.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 577, § 2, effective July 1.

Cross references: For similar provisions concerning the use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property with respect to the crimes of theft and trespass, tampering, and criminal mischief, see §§ 18-4-415 and 18-4-514.

PART 4

THEFT

Cross references: For civil damages for loss caused by theft of a mercantile establishment, see § 13-21-107.5.

18-4-401. Theft. (1) A person commits theft when he knowingly obtains or exercises control over anything of value of another without authorization, or by threat or deception, and:

- (a) Intends to deprive the other person permanently of the use or benefit of the thing of value; or
- (b) Knowingly uses, conceals, or abandons the thing of value in such manner as to deprive the other person permanently of its use or benefit; or
- (c) Uses, conceals, or abandons the thing of value intending that such use, concealment, or abandonment will deprive the other person permanently of its use and benefit; or
- (d) Demands any consideration to which he is not legally entitled as a condition of restoring the thing of value to the other person.

(1.5) For the purposes of this section, a thing of value is that of "another" if anyone other than the defendant has a possessory or proprietary interest therein.

(2) Theft is:

- (a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1690, § 3, effective July 1, 2007.)
- (b) A class 2 misdemeanor if the value of the thing involved is less than five hundred dollars;
- (b.5) A class 1 misdemeanor if the value of the thing involved is five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars;
- (c) A class 4 felony if the value of the thing involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars;
- (d) A class 3 felony if the value of the thing involved is twenty thousand dollars or more.

(3) and (3.1) Repealed.

(4) (a) When a person commits theft twice or more within a period of six months, two or more of the thefts may be aggregated and charged in a single count, in which event the thefts so aggregated and charged shall constitute a single offense, and, if the aggregate value of the things involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, it is a class 4 felony; however, if the aggregate value of the things involved is twenty thousand dollars or more, it is a class 3 felony.

(b) When a person commits theft twice or more against the same person pursuant to one scheme or course of conduct, the thefts may be aggregated and charged in a single count, in which event they shall constitute a single offense, and, if the aggregate value of the things involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, it is a class 4 felony; however, if the aggregate value of the things involved is twenty thousand dollars or more, it is a class 3 felony.

(5) Theft from the person of another by means other than the use of force, threat, or intimidation is a class 5 felony without regard to the value of the thing taken.

(6) In every indictment or information charging a violation of this section, it shall be sufficient to allege that, on or about a day certain, the defendant committed the crime of theft by unlawfully taking a thing or things of value of a person or persons named in the indictment or information. The prosecuting attorney shall at the request of the defendant provide a bill of particulars.

(7) Repealed.

(8) A municipality shall have concurrent power to prohibit theft, by ordinance, where the value of the thing involved is less than one thousand dollars.

(9) (a) If a person is convicted of or pleads guilty or nolo contendere to theft by deception and the underlying factual basis of the case involves the mortgage lending process, a minimum fine of the amount of pecuniary harm resulting from the theft shall be mandatory, in addition to any other penalty the court may impose.

(b) A court shall not accept a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to another offense from a person charged with a violation of this section that involves the mortgage lending process unless the plea agreement contains an order of restitution in accordance with part 6 of article 1.3 of this title that compensates the victim for any costs to the victim caused by the offense.

(c) The district attorneys and the attorney general have concurrent jurisdiction to investigate and prosecute a violation of this section that involves making false statements or filing or facilitating the use of a document known to contain a false statement or material omission relied upon by another person in the mortgage lending process.

(d) Documents involved in the mortgage lending process include, but are not limited to, uniform residential loan applications or other loan applications; appraisal reports; HUD-1 settlement statements; supporting personal documentation for loan applications such as W-2 forms, verifications of income and employment, bank statements, tax returns, and payroll stubs; and any required disclosures.

(e) For the purposes of this subsection (9):

(I) "Mortgage lending process" means the process through which a person seeks or obtains a residential mortgage loan, including, without limitation, solicitation, application, or origination; negotiation of terms; third-party provider services; underwriting; signing and closing; funding of the loan; and perfecting and releasing the mortgage.

(II) "Residential mortgage loan" means a loan or agreement to extend credit, made to a person and secured by a mortgage or lien on residential real property, including, but not limited to, the refinancing or renewal of a loan secured by residential real property.

(III) "Residential real property" means real property used as a residence and containing no more than four families housed separately.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 428, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-401. L. 75: IP(1), (2), and (3) amended and (3.1) added, pp. 618, 619, §§ 9, 10, effective July 1. L. 77: (4) amended, p. 972, § 1, effective May 27; (2) R&RE, (3) and (3.1) repealed, and (4) amended, pp. 973, 976, §§ 1, 2, 9, effective July 1. L. 81: (7) added, p. 987, § 1, effective July 1. L. 83: (8) added, p. 665, § 7, effective July 1. L. 84: (7)(a) and (7)(b) amended, p. 541, § 1, effective April 12; (2)(b), (2)(c), (4), (7)(a), and (8) amended, p. 536, §§5, 6, effective July 1, 1985. L. 85: (7)(a) amended, p. 1360, § 13, effective June 28. L. 87: (2)(b), (2)(c), and (4) amended, p. 352, § 3, effective March 16; (1.5) added and (7)(a) amended, pp. 615, 606, §§5, 13, effective July 1. L. 92: (2), (4), and (7)(a) amended, p. 433, § 1, effective April 10; (8) amended, p. 439, § 1, effective June 1. L. 93: (7) repealed, p. 1742, § 42, effective July 1. L. 97: (2)(b) and (2)(c) amended, p. 1548, § 23, effective July 1. L. 98: (4) and (8) amended, p. 1437, § 10, effective July 1; (4) amended, p. 793, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2006: (9) added, p. 1327, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2), (4), and (8) amended, p. 1690, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2009: (4) amended, (HB 09-1334), ch. 244, p. 1099, § 2, effective May 11.

Cross references: (1) For theft of sound recordings, see §§ 18-4-601 to 18-4-605; for charges for bad checks received as a restitution payment ordered as a condition of a plea agreement, see § 16-7-304; for charges for bad checks received as a restitution payment ordered as a condition of a deferred prosecution, see § 16-7-404.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act enacting subsection (9), see section 1 of chapter 290, Session Laws of Colorado 2006. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsections (2), (4), and (8), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2009 act amending subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 244, Session Laws of Colorado 2009.

ANNOTATION

- I. General Consideration.
- II. Elements of Offense.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Threat or Deception.
- III. Indictment or Information.
- IV. Evidence.
 - A. In General.
 - B. Proof of Value.
 - C. Possession of Stolen Property.
 - D. Sufficiency.
- V. Jury and Instructions.
- VI. Verdict and Sentence.

I. GENERAL CONSIDERATION.

Law reviews. For note, "Larceny, Embezzlement and False Pretenses in Colorado — A Need for Consolidation", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 446 (1951). For article, "The Meaning of 'Theft' in Automobile Insurance", see 29 Dicta 119 (1952). For article, "Commitment of Misdemeanants to the Colorado State Reformatory", see 29 Dicta 294 (1952). For note, "False Pretenses, Confidence Game, and Short Check in Colorado", see 25 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 325 (1953). For article, "Highlights of the 1955 Legislative Session - Criminal Law and Procedure", see 28 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 69 (1955). For article, "Criminal Law", see 32 Dicta 409 (1955). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 36 Dicta 34 (1959). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For article, "One Year Review of Constitutional Law", see 40 Den. L. Ctr. J. 134 (1963). For article, "Mens Rea and the Colorado Criminal Code", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 167 (1981). For article, "Lending to a Debtor-in-Possession", see 11 Colo. Law. 2382 (1982).

Annotator's note. (1) Since § 18-4-401 is similar to former § 40-5-2, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

(2) Annotations appearing below from cases decided prior to 1978 were decided under the version of this section in effect prior to the 1975 amendment to this section.

Common-law offenses. Embezzlement is common-law larceny extended by statute to cover cases where the stolen property comes originally into the possession of the defendant without a trespass. The word implies a fraudulent or unlawful intent. Phenneger v. People, 85 Colo. 442, 276 P. 983 (1929); Lewis v. People, 109 Colo. 89, 123 P.2d 398 (1942).

Larceny by bailee was not a common-law offense. Helser v. People, 100 Colo. 371, 68 P.2d 543 (1937).

Embezzlement was not recognized at common law and the corollary offense, larceny, embraced only those thefts which were accompanied by trespass in the original acquisition and possession. It was first recognized in England when parliament enacted the statute so as to embrace nontrespass thefts. It was enacted in Colorado with the same object. Gill v. People, 139 Colo. 401, 339 P.2d 1000 (1959).

Former theft statute held not unconstitutionally vague. Peters v. People, 151 Colo. 35, 376 P.2d 170 (1962); People v. Lewis, 180 Colo. 423, 506 P.2d 125 (1973).

This section is constitutional. People v. Edmonds, 195 Colo. 358, 578 P.2d 655 (1978).

This section is not unconstitutional despite the fact that it does not require a specific allegation of intent in an information or indictment for its violation. Edwards v. People, 176 Colo. 478, 491 P.2d 566 (1971).

This section clearly delineates four acts which, if done with the intent specified, constitute the crime of theft, so that any person of common intelligence can readily comprehend the meaning and application of the unambiguous words used by the general assembly in drafting this section. Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Statute gives a fair description of the proscribed conduct, and persons of common intelligence can readily appreciate the statute's meaning and application. People v. Hucal, 182 Colo. 334, 513 P.2d 454 (1973).

Control in theft statute does not have vague and ambiguous meaning so as to be unconstitutional. People v. Hucal, 182 Colo. 334, 513 P.2d 454 (1973).

Intent is not inconsistent with different methods of deprivation. Where what varies in different crimes is the method used to achieve the deprivation, there is no inconsistency between the words used to describe the methods of deprivation with the intent to permanently deprive a person of a thing of value and the words "unlawfully taking". Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

In enacting § 18-4-410, general assembly intended to reach distinct group of wrongdoers. The class includes those persons who receive, retain, or dispose of property received from another person with the knowledge or reasonable belief that the property has been stolen. People v. Jackson, 627 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1981).

The purpose of this section is to remove distinctions and technicalities which previously existed in the pleading and proof of acquisition crimes. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

In enacting the theft statute, the general assembly intended to define one crime of theft which would incorporate all crimes involving the taking or obtaining of personal property without physical force and to eliminate distinctions and technicalities which previously existed in the pleading and proof of such crimes. Maes v. People, 178 Colo. 46, 494 P.2d 1290 (1972); People v. Terranova, 38 Colo. App. 476, 563 P.2d 363 (1976); People v. Hopkins, 40 Colo. App. 568, 584 P.2d 84 (1978).

It is consolidation of former separate crimes. Prior to 1967 the various felonies of larceny, embezzlement and the like were separately defined throughout the criminal statutes. The 1967 general assembly consolidated these formerly separately defined crimes under one broad, enumerated crime designated as theft. White v. People, 172 Colo. 271, 472 P.2d 674 (1970).

It was the purpose of our general assembly to cover every conceivable unlawful conversion by an agent or servant. Gill v. People, 139 Colo. 401, 339 P.2d 1000 (1959).

The intent of this section is to bring together in one statute most of the crimes formerly known by several different names, for each of these former crimes has as a material element the unlawful depriving of a person of his property. Howe v. People, 178 Colo. 248, 496 P.2d 1040 (1972).

Theft is not a lesser included offense of robbery. People v. Moore, 184 Colo. 110, 518 P.2d 944 (1974).

The enactment of § 12-44-102 does not preclude prosecution for theft pursuant to this section because § 12-44-102 does not present a comprehensive regulatory scheme intended to limit prosecution under the general theft statute. People v. Sharp, 104 P.3d 252 (Colo. App. 2004).

This section includes as the objects of theft those means or muniments by which the right and title to property, real and personal, might be ascertained. Beasley v. People, 168 Colo. 286, 450 P.2d 658 (1969).

Promissory note, being subject to ownership, is personal property even in the hands of the maker, and so is within the purview of this section. Knepper v. People, 63 Colo. 396, 167 P. 779 (1917).

This section includes choses in action, chattels, effects, or any other valuable thing. Miller v. People, 72 Colo. 375, 211 P. 380 (1922).

Dogs are by statute the subject of larceny. Thiele v. City & County of Denver, 135 Colo. 442, 312 P.2d 786 (1957).

A "thing of value", as used in the former short check felony statute, is a phrase of sufficient generic import to encompass clearly within its meaning an executed lien waiver. Beasley v. People, 168 Colo. 286, 450 P.2d 658 (1969).

Mechanics' and materialmen's liens are security for the costs of materials and labor furnished. As security, the lien is clearly a "thing of value" to a materialman and by giving it up in exchange for a worthless check, there is a loss of a thing of value. Beasley v. People, 168 Colo. 286, 450 P.2d 658 (1969).

Stolen checks are a "thing of value" within the meaning of the statutes. People v. Marques, 184 Colo. 262, 520 P.2d 113 (1974).

"Thing of value" is defined to include "real property". People v. Parga, 188 Colo. 413, 535 P.2d 1127 (1975).

Real property may be the subject of theft. People v. Parga, 188 Colo. 413, 535 P.2d 1127 (1975).

Although funds from a "Ponzi scheme" were obtained by theft, the subsequent transfer of these funds by the debtor represented the transfer of an "interest of the debtor in property" for purposes of a chapter 7 bankruptcy action. In Re M & L Business Mach. Co., Inc., 160 Bankr. 851 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1994), aff'd, 167 Bankr. 219 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1994).

Where the information charged defendant with theft of money, rather than theft of a check, negotiation of the check was the necessary "last act" to begin the running of the statute of limitations under §16-5-401. The date the check was issued was immaterial for purposes of determining the statute of limitations. People v. Chavez, 952 P.2d 828 (Colo. App. 1997).

Colorado courts have jurisdiction over the offense of theft which originated in the state of New Mexico. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Where defendant exercised control over stolen goods in this state. Where there was evidence presented that defendant exercised control over stolen chain saws in Colorado without authorization, the offense of theft was "committed partly within this state" as contemplated by § 18-1-201 (2), and, therefore, in accordance with § 18-1-201 (1)(a), defendant "is subject to prosecution in this state" for that offense. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

Court retains jurisdiction of defendant extradited under former section. Although defendant was arrested out of state on a warrant charging larceny and returned to Colorado, and the crime of larceny was subsequently redesignated as theft, defendant's contention that the warrant charged a nonexistent crime and therefore the trial court had no jurisdiction, was without merit. Habbord v. People, 175 Colo. 417, 488 P.2d 554 (1971).

Scope of municipal jurisdiction over theft offenses. Larceny, the subject of statute and of statewide concern, is distinguished from a local and municipal matter in which municipalities may exercise jurisdiction, and a municipal ordinance purporting to cover such field is invalid. Gazotti v. City & County of Denver, 143 Colo. 311, 352 P.2d 963 (1960).

Municipal courts are particularly adaptable to the handling of the crime of shoplifting of articles of relatively small value and this type of theft should be combated not only by state authorities in state courts but by police departments in municipal courts. Quintana v. Edgewater Municipal Court, 179 Colo. 90, 498 P.2d 931 (1972).

When a municipal shoplifting ordinance does not limit shoplifting to goods not exceeding $100 in value, and thereby goes beyond a municipal or local matter, and contains no severable operative provisions, and when plaintiff allegedly takes articles valued over $100, the ordinance cannot be constitutionally applied to petty theft. Quintana v. Edgewater Municipal Court, 179 Colo. 90, 498 P.2d 931 (1972).

This section is the counterpart to the Longmont municipal code theft ordinance which is comprised of identical elements except for the value of the property. Bradford v. Longmont Municipal Court, 830 P.2d 1135 (Colo. App. 1992).

Corporation, rather than stockholder, is victim of theft of value of stock. It is well settled that a shareholder in a corporation, once having obtained his stock, is only entitled to the profits in the corporation, not the divisible assets of the corporation. From this proposition it necessarily follows that a stockholder's loss of the value of his stock, however attributable to defendant, is not a theft of value from the stockholder. If there be a crime committed under these facts, it was a theft from the corporation, not from the shareholder. The money which defendant allegedly stole was the property of the corporation. People v. Westfall, 185 Colo. 110, 522 P.2d 100 (1974).

Theft and theft by receiving are two separate and distinct crimes. The penalty for each is the same, but conviction of one would not support a conviction of the other. People v. Griffie, 44 Colo. App. 46, 610 P.2d 1079 (1980).

Participant in theft cannot be convicted of both crimes. A person who has actively participated in a theft cannot be convicted of both theft and theft by receiving of the stolen property. People v. Jackson, 627 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1981).

A partner cannot be charged with theft of partnership property under this section because partnership property is not a thing of value of another. People v. Clayton, 728 P.2d 723 (Colo. 1986) (decided prior to 1987 enactment of subsection (1.5)).

Conduct constituting receiving stolen property is the same conduct punishable by this section where defendant stole property in Colorado and took it to another jurisdiction, and prosecution under this section is therefore barred as double jeopardy where defendant was previously tried for receiving the stolen property in the other jurisdiction. People v. Morgan, 785 P.2d 1294 (Colo. 1990).

Section 18-4-402 distinguished. Section 18-4-402 clearly applies to an unlawful temporary deprivation of rental property as distinguished from a permanent deprivation of property generally as required by this section. People v. Trigg, 184 Colo. 78, 518 P.2d 841 (1974).

Distinguished from § 26-4-114. There are reasonable distinctions which can be drawn between this section and the penal provisions of the medical assistance act, § 26-4-114, as the latter deals only with property unlawfully received in a special way from a specific source, as distinguished from the deprivation of property generally. People v. Donahue, 41 Colo. App. 70, 578 P.2d 671 (1978).

Criminal mischief distinguished. The gravamen of criminal mischief is the knowing causation of damage to another's property with resulting economic loss to the owner or possessor of the property. The crime of theft, in contrast, is a crime of misappropriation or wrongful taking with no added element of damage or destruction to the property taken. People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983).

Because the conduct prohibited by this section is distinct from the conduct prohibited by § 8-81-101 (1)(a), prosecution under one such statute as opposed to the other does not violate a defendant's constitutional rights. People v. Chesnick, 709 P.2d 66 (Colo. App. 1985).

Aider/abettor tried as principal. Where appellant knew items were stolen and on this basis agreed to cash checks as an integral part of an overall scheme to acquire and sell stolen goods, he could be properly tried and convicted as an aider and abettor to theft-receiving and thus, as a principal. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L. Ed.2d 167 (1976).

The stealing of several articles of property at the same time and place, as one continuous act or transaction, may be prosecuted as a single offense, although the several articles belong to several different owners. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 355, 559 P.2d 1106 (1977).

Ongoing, continuous scheme of embezzlement pursuant to a single criminal impulse with the same victim throughout does not have to be severed into separate counts or dismissed. People v. Stratton, 677 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1983).

The general assembly did not proscribe the same conduct in § 42-5-104 and this section. Section 42-5-104 requires that the thing stolen be a part of, or contained in, an automobile, and there is no such requirement under this section. People v. Czajkowski, 193 Colo. 352, 568 P.2d 23 (1977).

Theft statute held not to violate guaranty of equal protection. People v. Cowden, 735 P.2d 199 (Colo. 1987).

Prosecutor's election to prosecute under general intent theft statute did not violate due process even though defendant was precluded from using affirmative defense of impaired mental condition. People v. Quick, 713 P.2d 1282 (Colo. 1986).

Theft statute which imposes penalties according to the value of the thing taken and which contains alternative culpable mental state elements of "knowingly" and "with intent" represents a legitimate legislative decision regarding the nature of the crime and does not raise an equal protection issue of punishing the same conduct with two different sanctions. People v. Quick, 713 P.2d 1282 (Colo. 1986).

Elements of two crimes of theft and motor vehicle theft are clearly different, and therefore it does not violate equal protection to prosecute under the latter rather than the former. People v. Wastrum, 624 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1981).

Second degree aggravated motor vehicle theft is not a lesser included offense of theft. Therefore conviction of the former should not merge into a conviction of the latter. People v. Meads, 58 P.3d 1137 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd, 78 P.3d 290 (Colo. 2003).

Attorney's theft requires disbarment. An attorney's misuse of his professional status to accomplish the felonious theft of his clients' funds requires disbarment. People v. Buckles, 673 P.2d 1008 (Colo. 1984).

Applied in In re Pratte, 19 Colo. 138, 34 P. 680 (1893); Murray v. People, 49 Colo. 109, 111 P. 711 (1910); Wheeler v. People, 49 Colo. 402, 113 P. 312 (1911); James v. Phoenix Assurance Co., 75 Colo. 209, 225 P. 213 (1924); Critchfield v. People, 91 Colo. 127, 13 P.2d 270 (1932); Sanders v. People, 109 Colo. 243, 125 P.2d 154 (1942); Conyers v. People, 113 Colo. 230, 155 P.2d 988 (1945); Casados v. People, 119 Colo. 444, 204 P.2d 557 (1949); Thurman v. People, 120 Colo. 77, 208 P.2d 927 (1949); People v. Austin, 162 Colo. 10, 424 P.2d 113 (1967); People v. Mangum, 189 Colo. 246, 539 P.2d 120 (1975); People v. Pittam, 194 Colo. 104, 572 P.2d 135 (1977); People v. Warren, 196 Colo. 75, 582 P.2d 663 (1978); People v. Girard, 196 Colo. 68, 582 P.2d 666 (1978); People in Interest of R.A.D., 196 Colo. 430, 586 P.2d 46 (1978); People v. Bielecki, 41 Colo. App. 256, 588 P.2d 377 (1978); People v. Hallman, 41 Colo. App. 427, 591 P.2d 101 (1978); Eftekhari-Zadeh v. Lusero, 42 Colo. App. 56, 592 P.2d 1347 (1978); People v. Jacquez, 196 Colo. 569, 588 P.2d 871 (1979); People v. Armijo, 197 Colo. 91, 589 P.2d 935 (1979); People v. Hillyard, 197 Colo. 183, 589 P.2d 939 (1979); People v. Burns, 197 Colo. 284, 593 P.2d 351 (1979); Hughes v. District Court, 197 Colo. 396, 593 P.2d 702 (1979); People v. Washburn, 197 Colo. 419, 593 P.2d 962 (1979); People v. Williams, 197 Colo. 559, 596 P.2d 745 (1979); People v. Ortega, 198 Colo. 179, 597 P.2d 1034 (1979); People ex rel. Leidner v. District Court, 198 Colo. 204, 597 P.2d 1040 (1979); People v. Miller, 199 Colo. 32, 604 P.2d 36 (1979); People v. Brand, 43 Colo. App. 347, 608 P.2d 817

(1979); People ex rel. Losavio v. Gentry, 199 Colo. 153, 606 P.2d 57 (1980); P.V. v. District Court, 199 Colo. 357, 609 P.2d 110 (1980); People v. McMichael, 199 Colo. 433, 609 P.2d 633 (1980); Godbold v. Wilson, 518 F. Supp. 1265 (D. Colo. 1981); People v. Martinez, 628 P.2d 608 (Colo. 1981); People v. Savage, 630 P.2d 1070 (Colo. 1981); People v. Tucker, 631 P.2d 162 (Colo. 1981); People v. Henry, 631 P.2d 1122 (Colo. 1981); People v. Boykin, 631 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Elkhatib, 632 P.2d 275 (Colo. 1981); People v. Walters, 632 P.2d 566 (Colo. 1981); People v. Stinson, 632 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1981); People ex rel. Gallagher v. District Court, 632 P.2d 1009 (Colo. 1981); People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People in Interest of M.R.J., 633 P.2d 474 (Colo. 1981); People v. R.V., 635 P.2d 892 (Colo. 1981); People v. Smith, 638 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1981); People v. Franklin, 640 P.2d 226 (Colo. 1982); People v. Boyd, 642 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1982); People v. Petrie, 642 P.2d 519 (Colo. 1982); People ex rel. VanMeveren v. District Court, 643 P.2d 37 (Colo. 1982); People v. Hearty, 644 P.2d 302 (Colo. 1982); People v. Turner, 644 P.2d 951 (Colo. 1982); People v. Leonard, 644 P.2d 85 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Conwell, 649 P.2d 1099 (Colo. 1982); People v. Cushon, 650 P.2d 527 (Colo. 1982); People v. Jimenez, 651 P.2d 395 (Colo. 1982); J.T. v. O'Rourke ex rel. Tenth Judicial Dist., 651 P.2d 407 (Colo. 1982); People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982); People in Interest of B.R.M., 653 P.2d 77 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Williams, 654 P.2d 319 (Colo. App. 1982); Hunter v. People, 655 P.2d 374 (Colo. 1982); People v. Fisher, 657 P.2d 922 (Colo. 1983); People v. District Court, 664 P.2d 247 (Colo. 1983); People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983); Landis v. Farish, 674 P.2d 957 (Colo. 1984); People v. Stratton, 677 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Lancaster, 683 P.2d 1202 (Colo. 1984); People v. Jeffers, 690 P.2d 194 (Colo. 1984); People v. Eastepp, 884 P.2d 305 (Colo. 1994); People v. Collie, 995 P.2d 765 (Colo. App. 1999).

II. ELEMENTS OF OFFENSE.

A. In General.

For elements of former crime of larceny by bailee, see McGuire v. People, 83 Colo. 154, 262 P. 1015 (1928); Poe v. People, 163 Colo. 20, 428 P.2d 77 (1967).

For essential elements of former crime of embezzlement, see Phenneger v. People, 85 Colo. 442, 276 P. 983 (1929); Blackett v. People, 98 Colo. 7, 52 P.2d 389 (1935); Sparr v. People, 122 Colo. 35, 219 P.2d 317 (1950); Gill v. People, 139 Colo. 401, 339 P.2d 1000 (1959).

The corpus delicti in theft consists of two elements: (1) That the property is lost by the owner; and (2) that it is lost by a felonious taking. Lee v. People, 138 Colo. 321, 332 P.2d 992 (1958).

Theft occurs when any person obtains control of the property of another and knowingly intends to permanently deprive that person of the use or benefit of a thing of value. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

In order to show a prima facie case of theft, the prosecution must establish the elements of the corpus delicti of theft: That the property was lost by the owner and that it was lost by a felonious taking. People v. Contreras, 195 Colo. 80, 575 P.2d 433 (1978).

In 1975 this section was amended to eliminate the receiving element and a new theft by receiving statute was enacted in § 18-4-410. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

For a specific intent to deprive as element prior to 1975 amendment, see People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

Intent is a material element of theft. People in Interest of J. S. C. v. J. S. C., 30 Colo. App. 381, 493 P.2d 671 (1972).

The intent to steal is an essential element of proof of the crime of larceny. Montoya v. People, 169 Colo. 428, 457 P.2d 397 (1969).

An essential element of the crime of theft is the formation of an intent to permanently deprive the owner of his property. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971); People v. Piskula, 197 Colo. 148, 595 P.2d 219 (1979).

The intent to deprive another permanently of the use or benefit of his property and knowingly obtaining or exerting control over anything of value are both essential elements of the crime of theft and both elements must be proven to exist beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Archuleta, 180 Colo. 156, 503 P.2d 346 (1972).

To support a conviction of felony theft, the evidence must show beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant knowingly or intentionally used the property in such a manner as to deprive the victim permanently of its use. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

Burglary intent need not be shown. In making out the case of larceny the prosecutor need not show any burglary intent or entry, it only being necessary to prove the usual elements of theft as defined by the statute. Ex parte Hill, 101 Colo. 243, 72 P.2d 471 (1937); White v. People, 172 Colo. 271, 472 P.2d 674 (1970).

Defendant charged with felony theft as a result of violating § 38-22-127 of the general mechanic's lien statute can be held criminally liable as set forth in this section, but only where prosecutor proves each of the elements of the crime of theft, including requisite intent. People v. Mendro, 731 P.2d 704 (Colo. 1987).

Defendant did not exercise control over the property "without authorization" where another person who was a rightful possessor of the property authorized the defendant to take the property. People v. McCormick, 784 P.2d 808 (Colo. App. 1989).

In the context of theft of construction project trust funds, the "knowingly using" element of mental culpability in subsection (1) (b) does not require a conscious objective to deprive another person of the use or benefit of the construction trust funds, but instead requires the offender to be aware that his manner of using the trust funds is practically certain to result in depriving another person of the use or benefit of the funds. People v. Anderson, 773 P.2d 542 (Colo. 1989); In re Helmke, 398 B.R. 38 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2008).

Theft requires proof that the accused knowingly obtained possession of or exercised control over the property either without authorization or by threat or deception. People v. Griffie, 44 Colo. App. 46, 610 P.2d 1079 (1980).

In the context of theft of real property, actual physical control is not required. The element "to obtain or exercise control" for theft of real property does not require actual physical control of the real property. To obtain or exercise control can mean to retain an interest in the real property without authorization and with intent to permanently deprive another person of the use or benefit of such real property. People v. Jensen, 172 P.3d 946 (Colo. App. 2007).

Control need not be unauthorized from the outset. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

Subsection (1) makes it clear that theft can occur even though initial control of the property has been authorized; the intent to deprive, or knowing use inconsistent with the owner's benefit, may arise at a later time when control is no longer authorized. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

"Without authorization" defined. Exercising control over property "without authorization", pursuant to subsection (1), means that the owner of the property, or a person in possession of the property with the owner's consent, has not given the actor permission to exercise control over the property. People v. Edmonds, 195 Colo. 358, 578 P.2d 655 (1978); People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

Unauthorized taking is not necessary element of offense: Exercising control without authorization, combined with the requisite intent, is sufficient. People v. Am. Health Care, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 209, 591 P.2d 1343 (1979).

Where initial control of property is authorized, the intent to deprive may arise at a later time when control is no longer authorized. People v. Am. Health Care, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 209, 591 P.2d 1343 (1979); People v. Carr, 841 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1992).

It is not necessary that a person maintain absolute control over the thing of value to commit theft; it is sufficient that the intended use of such thing be inconsistent with the owner's use or benefit. Becker & Tenenbaum v. Eagle Restaurant, 946 P.2d 600 (Colo. App. 1997).

When the defendant is a substantial distance from the item stolen the defendant's actions do not constitute theft from the person of another. People v. Smith, 121 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2005).

It is sufficient that the intended use of the money be inconsistent with the owner's use or benefit. In other words, it is only required that the defendant knowingly exercise unauthorized control over the property, with requisite intent; it is not necessary that he maintain absolute control for his own personal use. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

Property must have belonged to another. An essential element of the crime of embezzlement is that the property alleged to have been converted belongs to another. Kelley v. People, 157 Colo. 417, 402 P.2d 934 (1965).

Money may be taken from living or dead body. It makes no difference in determining guilt whether the money in a theft was taken from a living person or a dead body. People v. Walker, 44 Colo. App. 249, 615 P.2d 57 (1980).

Taking property under control and possession of victim violates section. The taking of a purse from the cart which the victim was pushing, and which was under her control and in her present possession, constituted taking "from the person of another" in violation of subsection (5). People v. Evans, 44 Colo. App. 288, 612 P.2d 1153 (1980).

Restaurant had sufficient proprietary interest in the cash and checks taken (even though not in its possession when taken) to prove that the defendant stole a thing of value from another. A person need not have obtained actual physical custody or delivery of the thing of value in order to have a proprietary interest in it if he has parted with consideration entitling him to receive the thing of value. People v. Ferguson, 701 P.2d 72 (Colo. App. 1984).

The element of theft requiring ownership by "another" does not require proof of the titled ownership by "another". People v. Schlicht, 709 P.2d 94 (Colo. App. 1985).

Ownership may be laid either in the real owner or in the person in possession at the time of the theft. Romero v. People, 134 Colo. 342, 304 P.2d 639 (1956); Griffin v. People, 157 Colo. 72, 400 P.2d 928 (1965).

The actual condition of the legal title is immaterial to the thief and so far as he is concerned, one may be taken as the owner who was in peaceable possession of it, and whose possession was unlawfully disturbed by the taking. Kelley v. People, 166 Colo. 322, 443 P.2d 734 (1968).

There can be no theft without wrongful appropriation of another's property. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

Critical elements are the defendant's intent to deprive and the location at which his control over the property was no longer authorized. People v. Carr, 841 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1992).

The elements of the crime of theft need not be proven by direct, substantive evidence, but can be inferred from the defendant's conduct and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

Where evidence showed that defendant holding a power of attorney made 32 separate withdrawals from the victim's account, did not issue promissory notes to the victim contemporaneously with each withdrawal, did not attempt to repay the victim in regular installments or to pay interest on the "loans", and concealed the "loans" from the victim's sons, it was for the jury to determine whether the defendant withdrew the money from the victim's account without her authorization and with the intent to permanently deprive her of the use of the money. People v. Gracey, 940 P.2d 1050 (Colo. App. 1996).

The place where the defendant comes into possession of thing of value not element of offense. People v. Tinkle, 714 P.2d 919 (Colo. App. 1985).

Police decoy operation is not consent to being deprived of possession. A police decoy operation set up so that a person otherwise inclined would have the opportunity to take money, is not consent by the police officer to being permanently deprived of possession of the money. People v. Gresham, 647 P.2d 243 (Colo. App. 1981).

It is the intent at the time of taking to permanently deprive that is the essential element of theft. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

The deprivation need not be permanent; once the wrongful appropriation occurs, this section requires coexistent intent to permanently deprive of use and benefit. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

Although a conspiracy to commit theft may continue beyond the commission of the immediate crime, permanent deprivation is not an element of theft. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

The return of the property is not a defense. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

The fact that a thief may recant and elect to return to the owner the fruits of his larcenous conduct does not purge him of guilt or serve as a defense to prosecution. Kelley v. People, 166 Colo. 322, 443 P.2d 734 (1968).

The fact that the defendant eventually returned the proceeds of a check that had been diverted without authorization is not a defense to a theft charge. People v. Pedrie, 727 P.2d 859 (Colo. 1986).

The contention that the crime of larceny was not completed because the TV set, though moved out of the house, was left standing at the owner's back property line has no merit. The defendants did have complete control of the TV set, even if only for a few minutes, and did have it in their possession on and off the premises of the owner without his consent. Scott v. People, 166 Colo. 432, 444 P.2d 388 (1968).

If a permanent deprivation of property were necessary before a conviction could be sustained, every time stolen property was recovered and returned to its true owner the thief would have to be acquitted; such a rule would be insane. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

Return of allegedly stolen property does not necessarily negate the existence of a wrongful intent. People v. Am. Health Care, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 209, 591 P.2d 1343 (1979).

Attempt to return property does not negate theft element of intent. People v. Collie, 682 P.2d 1208 (Colo. App. 1983).

There is no taking where property is delivered to defendant for his use and convenience by the person in charge. Lee v. People, 138 Colo. 321, 332 P.2d 992 (1958).

Agent may form intent to appropriate. Where money has been voluntarily delivered to accused as agent, the fact that he formed the intent to appropriate it at or before the time he received it does not prevent a prosecution for embezzlement or larceny. Lewis v. People, 109 Colo. 89, 123 P.2d 398 (1942).

Larceny by bailee can occur at any time after items are stolen. Peters v. People, 151 Colo. 35, 376 P.2d 170 (1962).

The failure of a debtor to pay his creditor does not constitute embezzlement. Kelley v. People, 157 Colo. 417, 402 P.2d 934 (1965).

To sustain a conviction of the crime of embezzlement, it must appear that the accused received the money or property of another as a fiduciary. Merely refusing to pay money lent cannot be converted into embezzlement. Simpson v. People, 47 Colo. 612, 108 P. 169 (1910).

Failure to report moneys owed pursuant to debtor-creditor relationship is not felony theft. Failure of lessee who sold beverages in park pursuant to lease with county to report money owed to the county based on percentage of gross income as rent does not constitute felony theft. People v. Rotello, 754 P.2d 765 (Colo. 1988).

Larceny is considered a continuing crime and every asportation considered a new taking; thus larceny could be prosecuted not only at the place where the goods were stolen, but also wherever the goods were subsequently brought. People v. Martinez, 37 Colo. App. 71, 543 P.2d 1290 (1975).

A conspiracy to commit theft does not continue, per se, until the proceeds are returned. People v. Burke, 37 Colo. App. 289, 549 P.2d 419 (1976).

Statute does not create a separate and continuing crime of theft by deception. Doctrine of continuing crimes can apply only when legislature has unmistakably communicated intent to create such an offense and nothing in statute suggests the intent to create a separate and distinct crime of theft by deception that continues until deception ends. Roberts v. People, 203 P.3d 513 (Colo. 2009) (decided prior to 2009 amendment).

Statute requires all thefts committed by the same person within six-month period be joined and prosecuted as a single felony, the classification of which is determined by the aggregate value of all things involved. Roberts v. People, 203 P.3d 513 (Colo. 2009) (decided prior to 2009 amendment).

A defendant may not rely on the defense of legal impossibility in a prosecution for attempted theft. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Defendant may raise the defense of general mistake of fact by alleging that he never believed the goods were stolen. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

The fact that the items were not in fact stolen does not provide a defense to attempted theft where the defendant believed they were stolen. People v. Darr, 37 Colo. App. 143, 551 P.2d 735 (1975), aff'd, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Lack of consent of both equitable and legal owners of property need not be proven to support a conviction for theft. People v. Diaz, 182 Colo. 369, 513 P.2d 444 (1973).

Whether or not stolen checks were subsequently recovered and returned to owner is irrelevant to the criminal liability for taking the instruments in the first instance. People v. Marques, 184 Colo. 262, 520 P.2d 113 (1974).

Crime of joyriding is not a lesser included offense of crime of theft, nor is attempted joyriding a lesser included offense of attempted theft. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

Theft is not a lesser included offense of robbery. People v. Moore, 184 Colo. 110, 518 P.2d 944 (1974).

Theft and theft by receiving are separate crimes. Where convictions for theft and theft by receiving arise out of the same transaction, the defendant could not properly be found guilty of both. People v. Taylor, 647 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1982).

First degree criminal trespass is distinct from misdemeanor theft. People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981).

Where defendant had contracted with a church to promote an arts festival to raise money for the church and she had an interest in the festival funds similar to that of the church and was the party designated to receive the funds, she could not be guilty of theft under the statute. People v. McCain, 191 Colo. 229, 552 P.2d 20 (1976).

Where there is ample evidence in the record that the defendant was the "moving force" behind a corporate operation, it is not cause for dismissal of any theft charges that the defendant may not have participated directly in every act constituting the thefts. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

Subsection (5) does not apply where a defendant, through the use of a series of short-change transactions, deceptively obtained money from a store clerk. The enhanced punishment provided by this subsection is for situations where the theft raises a danger of confrontation and involves an invasion of the victim's person and privacy. People v. Warner, 790 P.2d 866 (Colo. App. 1989).

Theft from the person of another involves circumstances, such as pickpocketing, where something of value is taken from one who is unconscious or unaware of the theft. The invasion of the victim's person presents an element of danger absent in other theft offenses, which justifies the greater penalty accorded those who violate subsection (5). People v. Warner, 801 P.2d 1187 (Colo. 1990).

Theft from the person of another is intended to cover those thefts involving an invasion of the victim's person of which the victim is unaware, but which are not accomplished through the use of force, threats, or intimidation. People v. Warner, 801 P.2d 1187 (Colo. 1990), aff'd, 801 P.2d 1187 (Colo. 1990).

B. Threat or Deception.

Law reviews. For note, "False Pretenses, Confidence Game, and Short Check in Colorado", see 25 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 325 (1953).

This section annexed former false pretenses and confidence games provisions. Norman v. People, 178 Colo. 190, 496 P.2d 1029 (1972).

For essential elements of former crime of false pretenses, see People v. Orris, 52 Colo. 244, 121 P. 163 (1911); Stumpff v. People, 51 Colo. 202, 117 P. 134 (1911); Stoltz v. People, 59 Colo. 342, 148 P. 865 (1915); Tracy v. People, 65 Colo. 226, 176 P. 280 (1918); Clarke v. People, 64 Colo. 164, 171 P. 69 (1918); People v. Martin, 78 Colo. 200, 240 P. 695 (1925); Updike v. People, 92 Colo. 125, 18 P.2d 472 (1933); Chilton v. People, 95 Colo. 268, 35 P.2d 870 (1934); Montez v. People, 110 Colo. 208, 132 P.2d 970 (1942); Johnson v. People, 110 Colo. 283, 133 P.2d 789 (1943); Rogers v. Peo- ple, 161 Colo. 317, 422 P.2d 377 (1966); Woodman v. People, 168 Colo. 80, 450 P.2d 330 (1969); Small v. People, 173 Colo. 304, 479 P.2d 386 (1970).

For essential elements of former crime of confidence game, see Lace v. People, 43 Colo. 199, 95 P. 302 (1908); Wheeler v. People, 49 Colo. 402, 113 P. 312 (1911); Powers v. People, 53 Colo. 43, 123 P. 642 (1912); Elliott v. People, 56 Colo. 236, 138 P. 39 (1914); Davis v. People, 96 Colo. 212, 40 P.2d 968 (1935); Bomareto v. People, 111 Colo. 99, 137 P.2d 402 (1943); Olde v. People, 112 Colo. 15, 145 P.2d 100 (1944); People v. Lindsay, 119 Colo. 248, 202 P.2d 951 (1949); Kelly v. People, 121 Colo. 243, 215 P.2d 336 (1950); McBride v. People, 126 Colo. 277, 248 P.2d 725 (1952); Roll v. People, 132 Colo. 1, 284 P.2d 665 (1955); Bevins v. People, 138 Colo. 123, 330 P.2d 709 (1958); Fischer v. People, 138 Colo. 559, 335 P.2d 871 (1959); Gonzales v. People, 149 Colo. 548, 369 P.2d 786 (1962); Woodard v. People, 154 Colo. 162, 389 P.2d 411 (1964); Dodge v. People, 168 Colo. 531, 452 P.2d 759 (1969); Small v. People, 173 Colo. 304, 479 P.2d 386 (1970); Digiallonardo v. People, 175 Colo. 560, 488 P.2d 1109 (1971).

Elements of theft by deception. Where the defendant obtained cash owned by the bank with full knowledge that under no circumstances was he entitled to it, and where the knowledge that the initial check used to open an account was false, shows knowledge that the two subsequent checks drawn on that account were equally false, the necessary elements of the charge of theft by deception are established. Lewis v. People, 174 Colo. 334, 483 P.2d 949 (1971).

Statute does not create a separate and continuing crime of theft by deception. Doctrine of continuing crimes can apply only when legislature has unmistakably communicated intent to create such an offense and nothing in statute suggests the intent to create a separate and distinct crime of theft by deception that continues until deception ends. Roberts v. People, 203 P.3d 513 (Colo. 2009) (decided prior to 2009 amendment).

Statute requires all thefts committed by the same person within six-month period be joined and prosecuted as a single felony, the classification of which is determined by the aggregate value of all things involved. Roberts v. People, 203 P.3d 513 (Colo. 2009) (decided prior to 2009 amendment).

Intent to defraud necessary for deception. When deception is used to perpetrate a theft, the requisite mental state is necessarily an intent to defraud. People v. Piskula, 197 Colo. 148, 595 P.2d 219 (1979); People v. Freda, 817 P.2d 588 (Colo. App. 1991).

Theft by deception statute does not require proof of culpable mental state of specific intent. People v. Quick, 713 P.2d 1282 (Colo. 1986).

Intent to defraud deemed part of § 38-22-137. Because an intent to defraud, necessary to this section, must be proven in order to convict a defendant under § 38-22-137, a prosecution for violation of § 38-22-137 does not conflict with the constitutional prohibition of imprisonment for civil debt in § 12 of art. II, Colo. Const. People v. Piskula, 197 Colo. 148, 595 P.2d 219 (1979).

Reliance of victim necessary for theft by deception. The offense of theft by deception requires proof that misrepresentations made to the victim caused the victim to part with something of value in reliance upon those misrepresentations. People v. Norman, 703 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1985); People v. Carlson, 72 P.3d 411 (Colo. App. 2003).

There is no requirement in the theft statute that the accused personally make the threat toward the victim of the crime. People v. Truesdale, 190 Colo. 286, 546 P.2d 494 (1976).

Rather, it is sufficient if defendant obtained property as consequence. It is sufficient under this section if a threat was made and the accused knowingly obtained anything of value from the victim of the threat, with specific intent to deprive the victim permanently of the use or benefit of the property. People v. Truesdale, 190 Colo. 286, 546 P.2d 494 (1976).

Thus, a threat by a confederate would suffice to establish this element of the offense. People v. Truesdale, 190 Colo. 286, 546 P.2d 494 (1976).

A threat is defined as a declaration of purpose or intention to work injury to the person, property, or rights of another by the commission of an unlawful act. Schott v. People, 174 Colo. 15, 482 P.2d 101 (1971).

Theft by deception established. Prosecution established that the defendants obtained control of money belonging to the department store by deceptive practice with the intent to deprive the store of the money. People v. Todd, 189 Colo. 117, 538 P.2d 433 (1975).

Deception made upon a victim's agent in an effort to commit theft from a victim's estate satisfies the requirements of subsection (1). People v. Devine, 74 P.3d 440 (Colo. App. 2003).

Where evidence showed debtor obtained control over creditor's products by misrepresentation and debtor had no intention of reimbursing creditor for products supplied, such evidence is sufficient to support charge of theft by deception. People v. Stewart, 739 P.2d 854 (Colo. 1987).

Issuance of check on known closed account deemed deception. The mere issuance of a check on an account the defendant knew had been closed is a means of deception proscribed by this section. People v. Attebury, 196 Colo. 509, 587 P.2d 281 (1978).

Theft by threat is not lesser included offense of robbery. Schott v. People, 174 Colo. 15, 482 P.2d 101 (1971); Maes v. People, 178 Colo. 46, 494 P.2d 1290 (1972).

There is no indication that the general assembly enacted the theft by receiving statute in § 18-4-410 to preclude prosecution under the theft statute. Therefore, prosecutor can determine statute under which to prosecute the alleged crime. People v. Smith, 938 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1997).

III. INDICTMENT OR INFORMATION.

The general assembly authorized the use of the term "theft" in an information and that "theft" is to be substituted for "larceny" wherever it appears in a law of this state. White v. People, 172 Colo. 271, 472 P.2d 674 (1970).

Offense of theft when charged as provided in statute sufficiently advises jury of nature of offense for which defendant is on trial. People v. Ingersoll, 181 Colo. 1, 506 P.2d 364 (1973).

There is no requirement, either constitutional or statutory, that every element of theft be alleged in the information. People v. Ingersoll, 181 Colo. 1, 506 P.2d 364 (1973).

There is no requirement, either constitutional or statutory, that every element of the offense be alleged in the information, and a charging document is sufficient if it advises a defendant of the charges he is facing so that he can adequately defend himself. People v. MacFarland, 189 Colo. 363, 540 P.2d 1073 (1975).

The phrase "on or about a date certain" in subsection (6) is but a minimum requirement, and language in the information approximating the notice it intends to provide a defendant is sufficient. People v. Wolfe, 662 P.2d 502 (Colo. App. 1983); People v. Stratton, 677 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1983).

Information charging felony theft, complying with the requirements of subsection (1)(b), was sufficient where an identically worded subsection of a prior theft statute withstood constitutional attack. People v. MacFarland, 189 Colo. 363, 540 P.2d 1073 (1975).

When bill of particulars required. Where the crime of theft is charged in the words of the statute, an order for a bill of particulars is mandatory upon the defendant's request. People v. District Court, 198 Colo. 501, 603 P.2d 127 (1979); People v. Stratton, 677 P.2d 373 (Colo. App. 1983).

Purpose of bill of particulars. The requirement in subsection (6) that, upon request, a bill of particulars must be supplied to a defendant constitutes a safeguard to insure that the information by which a defendant is charged will be sufficiently definite in its terms. People v. Wolfe, 662 P.2d 502 (Colo. App. 1983).

Specific intent need not be alleged in charging document although proof of specific intent is essential element of felony theft. People v. Ingersoll, 181 Colo. 1, 506 P.2d 364 (1973).

An indictment charging officers of insurance company with unlawful conspiracy to convert to their own use moneys of the company, held to sufficiently charge larceny by bailee, although there was no express allegation that the property involved was converted to their use "with an intent to steal the same". Helser v. People, 100 Colo. 371, 68 P.2d 543 (1937).

Property must be described with reasonable certainty. In an information under this section, where the thing embezzled is a writing, it must be described with reasonable certainty, or a sufficient reason must appear for the omission of particularity. "One bank check of the value of", etc., "the property of", etc., held fatally insufficient. Moody v. People, 65 Colo. 339, 176 P. 476 (1918); People v. Allen, 167 Colo. 158, 446 P.2d 223 (1968).

Check. The contention that a criminal charge of the conversion of money was not sustained by proof of conversion of a bank check, is overruled, since the negotiation of a check is equivalent to the receipt of money upon it. McGuire v. People, 83 Colo. 154, 262 P. 1015 (1928).

The information charged the defendant with embezzlement of money, whereas the proof showed embezzlement of a check. Where the check was merely the means by which the money alleged to have been embezzled was procured, there was no variance. People v. Allen, 167 Colo. 158, 446 P.2d 223 (1968).

Where the information charged defendant with theft of money, rather than theft of a check, negotiation of the check was the necessary "last act" to begin the running of the statute of limitations under §16-5-401. The date the check was issued was immaterial for purposes of determining the statute of limitations. People v. Chavez, 952 P.2d 828 (Colo. App. 1997).

Description of money. Under this section an indictment for conspiracy to defraud a bank by unlawfully converting to defendants' own use a specified sum in money, the property of the bank, of the value of the same sum, contains a sufficient description of the property. Imboden v. People, 40 Colo. 142, 90 P. 608 (1907).

In a prosecution for embezzlement where sums of money were alleged to have been converted at different times, it was proper to charge the conversions in a lump sum. Price v. People, 78 Colo. 223, 240 P. 688 (1925).

Where conduct violates two provisions, prosecutor determines under which provision crime prosecuted. Where the alleged conduct of a defendant violates both the general theft statute and the more specific motor vehicle theft statute, it is the function of the prosecuting attorney and not the trial court to determine under which statute the alleged crime shall be prosecuted. People v. Westrum, 624 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1981).

Joinder of two subjects in one count is not duplicitous. It is the common case of an indictment for larceny where various goods and chattels, the subject of a single larceny, are joined in one count, and where proof of the larceny of any one of them sustains the indictment. Such a count is not bad for duplicity. Kollenberger v. People, 9 Colo. 233, 11 P. 101 (1886).

Where the information alleges, in a charge of robbery, that money was taken, "money" will be construed to mean money of the United States, and the court will take judicial notice of its value. Rowan v. People, 93 Colo. 473, 26 P.2d 1066 (1933).

Allegation of ownership sufficient. Allegation of qualified ownership in a criminal information is sufficient to support the charge of embezzlement so far as the element of ownership is concerned. Price v. People, 78 Colo. 223, 240 P. 688 (1925).

The purposes of the allegation of ownership in an indictment include showing that the property alleged to have been stolen is not the property of the accused and advising the accused whose property is alleged to have been stolen so that he can be prepared to meet and refute the charges at trial. People v. Singer, 663 P.2d 626 (Colo. App. 1983).

Variance in ownership not fatal. It is not a fatal variance to allege property to be that of bailee, and prove, inter alia, real ownership in bailor. Romero v. People, 134 Colo. 342, 304 P.2d 639 (1956).

While the true name of the alleged owner of the stolen property should be correctly set forth in the information, the ownership may be laid in one by the name by which he is usually known although it is not his proper name. Pownall v. People, 135 Colo. 325, 311 P.2d 714 (1957).

One purpose of allegations of ownership in larceny cases is to show that the property alleged to have been stolen is not the property of the accused or that the accused may know whose property he is alleged to have stolen so that he may be prepared to meet or refute the charge at the trial. Defendant was not deceived by the allegations in the information and proof that actual title to the car was registered in a name by which the complaining witness was also known was not prejudicial to the defendant where his defense was that he had the consent of the identical person whom he knew under two names. Pownall v. People, 135 Colo. 325, 311 P.2d 714 (1957).

Failure to prove corporate status of victim of theft was an immaterial variance. Straub v. People, 145 Colo. 275, 358 P.2d 615 (1961).

Variance between information alleging that defendant stole from named corporation and exhibits introduced to prove theft and showing names of other corporations or organizations was not fatal where various business names were used by enterprise and defendant, as general manager, could not have been misled or deceived. Martinez v. People, 177 Colo. 272, 493 P.2d 1350 (1972).

Statutory language in subsection (4) permits consolidating theft losses suffered by separate victims into one count of theft over $10,000. People v. Collie, 682 P.2d 1208 (Colo. App. 1983).

IV. EVIDENCE.

A. In General.

The corpus delicti must be established, since it is clearly not permissible that anyone be adjudged guilty until it is shown that a larceny has been committed; and unless the state has shown, prima facie, that a larceny has been committed, a defendant is not put on proof. Lee v. People, 138 Colo. 321, 332 P.2d 992 (1958).

Intent inferred. Intent to permanently deprive another of use or benefit of a thing of value does not have to be proven by direct, substantive evidence but can be inferred from the defendant's conduct and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. Becker, 187 Colo. 344, 531 P.2d 386 (1975); People v. Am. Health Care, Inc., 42 Colo. App. 209, 591 P.2d 1343 (1979); People v. Piskula, 197 Colo. 148, 595 P.2d 219 (1979).

Intent to permanently deprive may be inferred from the defendant's conduct and the circumstances of the case. People v. Johnson, 618 P.2d 262 (Colo. 1980).

Intent to commit felony theft may be inferred from the defendant's conduct in the circumstances of the case. Miller v. District Court, 641 P.2d 966 (Colo. 1982).

Intent to commit embezzlement of public property, official misconduct, and theft may be inferred from the defendants' conduct and the circumstances of the case. People v. Luttrell, 636 P.2d 712 (Colo. 1981).

Crime may be established by circumstantial evidence. The crime denounced by this section may be established by circumstantial evidence alone. Montez v. People, 110 Colo. 208, 132 P.2d 970 (1942).

Circumstantial evidence, when tied together, can support and provide a foundation for instructions on each of the crimes of first degree murder, first degree burglary, and theft arising out of the same transaction. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

The name of the owner of property stolen is material only to the extent it serves a descriptive purpose, or to show that it is not the property of the accused, and that the accused may know whose property he is alleged to have stolen so that he may be prepared to meet or refute the charge at the trial. Where the identity of the alleged owner is sufficiently established and the defendant is not deceived or misled to his prejudice, no error results. Straub v. People, 145 Colo. 275, 358 P.2d 615 (1961).

Possession without legal ownership is sufficient proof. In a larceny case, it is sufficient to show that the named victim had possession, control, and custody of the chattel which was the alleged object of the larceny, without determining the legal ownership. Kelley v. People, 166 Colo. 322, 443 P.2d 734 (1968).

Proof of a defacto corporate existence is sufficient where corporate ownership is an element of the crime. Straub v. People, 145 Colo. 275, 358 P.2d 615 (1961).

Possession, control, and custody of the named victim is sufficient in a larceny case, without determining the de jure corporate entity. Kelley v. People, 166 Colo. 322, 443 P.2d 734 (1968).

Intent need not be proven by direct, substantive evidence, but may be inferred from the defendant's conduct and the reasonable inferences which may be drawn from the circumstances of the case. People v. Carr, 841 P.2d 361 (Colo. App. 1992).

Proof that misrepresentations cause victim to part with something of value. The very nature of the crime of theft by deception requires proof that misrepresentations cause the victim to part with something of value and that the victim relied upon the swindler's misrepresentation. People v. Terranova, 38 Colo. App. 476, 563 P.2d 363 (1976); People v. Warner, 801 P.2d 1187 (Colo. 1990).

Where there was no proof that the misrepresentation caused the undercover agent to purchase stock from the defendant, prosecution for the completed substantive crime of theft by deception was not possible. People v. Terranova, 38 Colo. App. 476, 563 P.2d 363 (1976).

Admissibility of evidence to show intent. Any evidence going to the intent of a defendant charged with embezzlement is proper. Hopkins v. People, 89 Colo. 296, 1 P.2d 937 (1931).

In an action against officers of an insurance company for conspiracy to convert moneys of the company to their own use, evidence of the insolvency of the officers and subsidiary corporations controlled by said officers, held admissible, as having a definite bearing upon their intent, purpose, and design. Helser v. People, 100 Colo. 371, 68 P.2d 543 (1937).

That defendant intended to convert bailor's property to his own use by pledging it as security for a loan and using the proceeds of the loan for the payment of another obligation could be inferred from his executing a chattel mortgage representing himself as the owner of the car and from his furnishing the title and power of attorney to the bank. Poe v. People, 163 Colo. 20, 428 P.2d 77 (1967).

Where intent is an element of the crime, it is defendant's acts and conduct, not the victim's stated reaction, which is relevant. Johnson v. People, 172 Colo. 72, 470 P.2d 37 (1970).

Where intent is a material element of the offense charged, theft, a defendant has the right to testify specifically as to his intention in the commission of the acts which it is claimed constitute the offense. People in Interest of J. S. C. v. J. S. C., 30 Colo. App. 381, 493 P.2d 671 (1972).

Evidence of other similar crimes in which a defendant has participated is competent and admissible for the purpose of showing plan or design of defendant in his alleged unlawful activities. Clark v. People, 105 Colo. 335, 97 P.2d 440 (1939); Peiffer v. People, 106 Colo. 533, 107 P.2d 799 (1940).

Evidence of similar offenses offered for the stated purpose of showing intent, motive, design, and system, followed by proper instructions of limitation, is admissible. Montez v. People, 110 Colo. 208, 132 P.2d 970 (1942).

Evidence of transaction similar to that charged in information held admissible. Moore v. People, 125 Colo. 306, 243 P.2d 425 (1952).

Where the evidence in a prosecution for embezzlement discloses that the victim and mode of operation were identical in each of several transactions, and the defendant seemingly acted pursuant to the same criminal impulse, felonious purpose and intent, such evidence is not subject to challenge for duplicity. Gill v. People, 139 Colo. 401, 339 P.2d 1000 (1959).

Where defendant denies knowledge that property was stolen or that he had an intent to withhold it from its true owner, it is proper for the prosecution to present evidence that loot from other burglaries found in defendant's possession to prove scienter, or guilty knowledge with respect to the crime of larceny by bailee. Peters v. People, 151 Colo. 35, 376 P.2d 170 (1962).

Evidence of thefts committed subsequent to the theft for which defendant was being tried was admissible for the purpose of showing plan, scheme, design, intent, or guilty knowledge where the proper procedures were followed. People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

Testimony of thief against one charged with receiving stolen goods is not subject to infirmities attached to accomplice testimony. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

Scope of discovery. Where the prosecution informs the defendant of the specific section of the theft statute upon which it is relying, of the things of value allegedly taken, of the witnesses who would be called, and of the overt acts it intends to prove in connection with a conspiracy count, the trial court may deny further requests regarding areas more properly the subject of discovery proceedings. People v. Lewis, 671 P.2d 985 (Colo. App. 1983).

B. Proof of Value.

Where the larceny is from the person of another the crime shall be a felony, and no proof of value is required. People v. McIntosh, 149 Colo. 555, 369 P.2d 987 (1962).

Evidence of value necessary to fix grade of offense. The necessity of the proof of the real value exists where it is provided that the punishment shall be greater or different when the thing stolen is of or above a certain value, for in such cases the value of the property taken must be established by the evidence in order to ascertain the grade of the offense, and a conviction of the higher grade of offense must be based on sufficient evidence that the property taken was of or above the value fixed by statute for such purpose. In such cases, without proof of the value of stolen property there can be no conviction. Henson v. People, 166 Colo. 428, 444 P.2d 275 (1968).

When a conviction for a higher grade offense turns on the value of the property taken, it is incumbent on the prosecution to prove the value of stolen property. People v. Marques, 184 Colo. 262, 520 P.2d 113 (1974).

Test of value is reasonable market value of the stolen article at the time of the commission of the alleged offense. People v. Austin, 185 Colo. 229, 523 P.2d 989 (1974).

The value of a stolen item is measured by its fair market value. People v. Elkhatib, 198 Colo. 287, 599 P.2d 897 (1979).

The measure of value to be attached to items that are stolen is their reasonable market value at the time of the taking. People v. Evans, 44 Colo. App. 288, 612 P.2d 1153 (1980); People v. Rosa, 928 P.2d 1365 (Colo. App. 1996).

For purposes of the theft statute, "value" is generally proven by evidence of market value at the time and place of the theft. Beaudoin v. People, 627 P.2d 739 (Colo. 1981).

Market value defined. Value in a theft case is market value, where market value is what a willing buyer will pay in cash to the true owner for the stolen item. People v. Marques, 184 Colo. 262, 520 P.2d 113 (1974).

It is the obligation of the people to prove the reasonable market value of the goods at the time involved. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970).

To make a prima facie case for violations under these sections it was incumbent upon the people to present competent evidence of the reasonable market value of the goods in question at the time of the commission of the alleged offense. People v. Paris, 182 Colo. 148, 511 P.2d 893 (1973).

There must be some basis other than pure speculation for a determination of the real value where the value of the money or goods stolen determines the grade of the offense. Henson v. People, 166 Colo. 428, 444 P.2d 275 (1968); People v. In Interest of A.G., 43 Colo. App. 514, 605 P.2d 487 (1979); People v. Leonard, 43 Colo. App. 471, 608 P.2d 832 (1979).

Where no evidence is presented as to any value amount for items, there is insufficient evidence of the value of those items. People v. Jamison, 220 P.3d 992 (Colo. App. 2009).

Value at time of commission of crime. While an owner of goods is always competent to testify as to the value of his property in prosecution for theft and receiving stolen goods, it must relate to its value at the time of the commission of the crime, and where the owner testifies only as to the purchase price of the goods, such testimony is competent evidence of fair market value only where the goods are so new, and thus, have depreciated in value so insubstantially, as to allow a reasonable inference that the purchase price is comparable to current fair market value. People v. Paris, 182 Colo. 148, 511 P.2d 893 (1973); People v. In Interest of A.G., 43 Colo. App. 514, 605 P.2d 487 (1979).

It is not error to aggregate the value of the goods. People v. Zallar, 191 Colo. 492, 553 P.2d 756 (1976).

Taking where value not expressible as market price also proscribed. This section proscribes the unlawful taking, obtaining, or exercising of control over anything of value, not just those things whose value may be expressed in terms of a market price. People v. Miller, 37 Colo. App. 294, 549 P.2d 1092 (1976), aff'd, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

Prima facie value of check is its face value. People v. Marques, 184 Colo. 262, 520 P.2d 113 (1974); People v. Myers, 43 Colo. App. 256, 609 P.2d 1104 (1979).

For purposes of valuing stolen checks, restrictive indorsements are irrelevant. People v. Marques, 184 Colo. 262, 520 P.2d 113 (1974).

Value of credit card. The peculiar value of a credit card is not normally a price which the holder may command for the transfer of his card. It is instead the worth of the privilege to purchase goods or services on credit. People v. Miller, 37 Colo. App. 294, 549 P.2d 1092 (1976), aff'd, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

One objective measure of the value of a credit card is its price on the "street", i.e., in the course of unlawful or illegal trade with a view to its criminal abuse. People v. Miller, 37 Colo. App. 294, 549 P.2d 1092 (1976), aff'd, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

"Street" value is a reflection of the purchasing power of a particular credit card. Accordingly, the authorized line of credit on the card or its "floor limit", i.e., the value of a purchase that could be completed without the necessity of obtaining express authorization from the credit card company, is also an objective measure of a card's value. People v. Miller, 37 Colo. App. 294, 549 P.2d 1092 (1976), aff'd, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

Rewards offered by the issuer of credit cards for the return of lost or stolen cards may also constitute an objective measure of the value of the card. People v. Miller, 37 Colo. App. 294, 549 P.2d 1092 (1976), aff'd, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

Where a stolen item, such as a credit card, has no market value in lawful channels, other objective evidence of value may be admitted including evidence of the "illegitimate" market value. Miller v. People, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

Evidence of the dollar amount which may be purchased by using the credit card without card company approval provides an objective means of evaluating the illegitimate market value of credit cards. Miller v. People, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977).

Jury is not required to place a precise value upon property involved. People v. Austin, 185 Colo. 229, 523 P.2d 989 (1974).

Without competent evidence of fair market value in prosecution for theft and receiving stolen goods, the jury would have to base its determination of the value of the goods in question at the time of commission of the crime on pure speculation, and thus the judge properly removed the case from the jury's consideration. People v. Paris, 182 Colo. 148, 511 P.2d 893 (1973).

An owner is always competent to testify as to the value of his property. An owner not in the business of selling such items but putting them to use does not have them appraised. The evidence of value is competent regardless of the lack of current used market value. Rodriguez v. People, 168 Colo. 190, 450 P.2d 645 (1969).

Testimony of victim of theft as to value of items taken was competent and could properly be admitted for purposes of valuation. People v. Evans, 44 Colo. App. 288, 612 P.2d 1153 (1980).

Evidence of retail price is evidence of market value, especially where the items were being sold over the counter on a more-or-less daily basis, and there is nothing to indicate that the retail price is higher than the true market value. Maisel v. People, 166 Colo. 161, 442 P.2d 399 (1968); People v. Velarde, 790 P.2d 903 (Colo. App. 1989).

Evidence of retail price is not only admissible but is perhaps the best evidence of market value. Maisel v. People, 166 Colo. 161, 442 P.2d 399 (1968).

Evidence of fair market value and retail price was competent evidence to sustain the jury's finding on the question of value. Lee v. People, 137 Colo. 465, 326 P.2d 660 (1958).

The retail price of stolen goods is the best evidence of their value, not the wholesale price. People v. Lindsay, 636 P.2d 1318 (Colo. App. 1981); People v. Binkley, 687 P.2d 480 (Colo. App. 1984), aff'd on other grounds, 716 P.2d 1111 (Colo. 1986); People v. Rosa, 928 P.2d 1365 (Colo. App. 1996).

Purchase price, junk price, replacement cost, the use of the article, and common knowledge all may be considered in the absence of evidence of market value of a particular item. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

Amounts paid to obtain cooperation of one believed to be coconspirator should not be deducted in determining the value of stolen goods when the payments were returned to the owner of the goods. People v. Elkhatib, 198 Colo. 287, 599 P.2d 897 (1979).

A condemnation proceeding is not authority for establishing the value of personal property. There is just too much difference between the depreciation of land and office machines. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970).

Evidence of owner based on original cost sufficient. Testimony of witness as to the value of several stolen articles aggregating more the $800, which jury found as the value of the stolen property, was sufficient to establish value even though based on original cost of items, and owner being competent to testify to the value of his property. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

In a prosecution for felony theft of a used car from the dealer, counsel for both sides stipulated that the value of the car was over $100, but then the car lot owner was called and testified that he had invested $4800 in the car, but that it was worth much more on the retail market, and he also stated, over defense objection, that it cost $1800 to repair the automobile from damage caused by the defendant's driving. The evidence may have been prejudicial, but was not inadmissible because the defendant caused the damage while driving the stolen vehicle, and the testimony was all part of the circumstances surrounding the theft and defendant's efforts to escape with the car. People v. Hanson, 189 Colo. 101, 537 P.2d 739 (1975).

Evidence of felony insufficient. The only testimony on the value of the money taken was that it was "in the vicinity of one hundred dollars". Such evidence is insufficient to support a conviction of the crime of grand larceny. Henson v. People, 166 Colo. 428, 444 P.2d 275 (1968); People v. Coddington, 191 Colo. 168, 551 P.2d 192 (1976).

Sufficient evidence to sustain petty theft. People v. Coddington, 191 Colo. 168, 551 P.2d 192 (1976).

Evidence held sufficient to support felony conviction. People v. Vigil, 180 Colo. 104, 502 P.2d 418 (1972).

C. Possession of Stolen Property.

When possession supports inference of guilt. Where defendants were found in possession of ore under circumstances clearly indicating that they did not come by it honestly, and they offered no explanation of how they came by it, and the ore was identified as coming from the mine in which defendants were employed, the jury was justified in finding them guilty of larceny. Bergdahl v. People, 27 Colo. 302, 61 P. 228 (1900).

Possession of stolen goods after a burglary or theft is sufficient to warrant a conviction, unless the attending circumstances, or other evidence is such as to overcome the presumption raised by such possession, sufficient to create a reasonable doubt of the defendant's guilt. Rueda v. People, 141 Colo. 504, 348 P.2d 958, cert. denied, 362 U.S. 923, 80 S. Ct. 673, 4 L. Ed.2d 744 (1960).

In a prosecution for larceny or burglary, the jury may infer that the accused committed the theft from the circumstances of his recent, unexplained, exclusive possession of the stolen articles involved. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970); Diebold v. People, 175 Colo. 96, 485 P.2d 900 (1971); People v. Austin, 185 Colo. 229, 523 P.2d 989 (1974).

Where there is no direct evidence of entry of vehicle from which articles were stolen, court could infer from unexplained possession of stolen articles by defendants shortly thereafter that they were persons who entered vehicle and stole articles. People v. Romero, 179 Colo. 159, 499 P.2d 604 (1972).

What is meant by "recent" possession of stolen goods is to be determined by the facts in each particular case and it may vary from a few days to two years. Generally, whether the period of time is "recent" is a question for the jury, and a period of six weeks has been upheld. Rueda v. People, 141 Colo. 504, 348 P.2d 958, cert. denied, 362 U.S. 923, 80 S. Ct. 673, 4 L. Ed.2d 744 (1960).

If one agrees in advance to buy stolen property, knowing that the property is to be stolen, he thereby encourages the perpetration of the theft and, if the crime is committed, he is deemed a principal and punished accordingly. Miller v. People, 92 Colo. 481, 22 P.2d 626 (1933).

Mailing of stolen check to defendant inferred control. In prosecution for theft by deception, control over the money can be inferred from evidence that the check which was the basis of the prosecution was mailed to the defendants' home address in the usual course of business. People v. Todd, 189 Colo. 117, 538 P.2d 433 (1975).

Control need not be unauthorized from the outset. People v. Treat, 193 Colo. 570, 568 P.2d 473 (1977).

Defendant exercised absolute possession. Where defendant removed shirts from the store rack and concealed them in a sack he was carrying, he exercised complete, independent, and absolute control and possession over the goods and it was not necessary for the goods to be removed from the owner's premises to prove the element of loss to the owners. People v. Contreras, 195 Colo. 80, 575 P.2d 433 (1978).

Possession need not be sole to constitute the requisite control over stolen goods under this section; where the defendant was merely a passenger in an automobile owned by another, exercising no actual control over the stolen weapons in the automobile, he could nevertheless be found guilty of theft if a jury could reasonably conclude that he was cognizant of the stolen weapons. People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 365, 607 P.2d 1028 (1979).

D. Sufficiency.

Each of the essential elements of theft as set forth in this section must be proven beyond a reasonable doubt to support a conviction even where theft is sought to be proven by showing a violation of § 38-22-127. People v. Erickson, 695 P.2d 804 (Colo. App. 1984).

Trial court erred in applying only subsection (1)(a) without also considering the application of subsection (1)(b). In the context of theft of construction project funds, fact finder must consider both the "intends to deprive" element of subsection (1)(a) and the "knowingly uses" element in subsection (1)(b) in determining liability for civil theft. Failure to consider evidence under "knowingly uses" element in subsection (1)(b) constitutes reversible error. AC Excavating, Inc. v. Yale, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2010).

Sufficiency of proof of ownership. In an action under this section, evidence was held sufficient to prove the ownership and possession by the alleged owner of the cattle at the time of the alleged theft. Cahill v. People, 111 Colo. 173, 138 P.2d 936 (1943).

Evidence did not establish intent to steal. Bare v. People, 164 Colo. 93, 432 P.2d 630 (1967).

No intent to steal where property retained on police order. Where defendant was found guilty of larceny as bailee of stolen copper wire which he purchased as a junk dealer and held on hold order of police, it was held that the retention of the property in reliance upon the police order did not constitute an intent to steal, which is one of the essential elements of the crime under this section. Schiff v. People, 111 Colo. 333, 141 P.2d 892 (1943).

Inference of intent proper. From a defendant's action of wrongfully appropriating a check, converting it into a cashier's check, and giving it to third party, a jury could properly infer intent. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

Unexplained exclusive possession of recently stolen property creates no more than inference of participation in the offense. People v. Beamer, 668 P.2d 990 (Colo. App. 1983).

Circumstantial evidence insufficient. In a prosecution for larceny and conspiracy to commit larceny the supreme court held the guilty verdicts to be forced verdicts based upon circumstantial evidence insufficient in quantity and quality to support a verdict of guilty. Even had the jury been initially properly instructed on circumstantial evidence, every reasonable hypothesis of innocence was not eliminated by the people's evidence. Drahn v. People, 174 Colo. 157, 483 P.2d 209 (1971).

Evidence held insufficient to convict defendant of theft of car. Union Ins. Soc'y v. Robertson, 88 Colo. 590, 298 P. 1064 (1931); People v. Rogers, 177 Colo. 155, 493 P.2d 21 (1972); People v. Cheney, 180 Colo. 138, 503 P.2d 338 (1972).

In a prosecution for larceny of an automobile where the evidence discloses that a defendant is permitted to take a car by the person in charge thereof, and is furnished license plates for his convenience and protection in driving the same, no felonious taking under this section is shown. Lee v. People, 138 Colo. 321, 332 P.2d 992 (1958).

Sufficient evidence to sustain conviction of theft. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971); Hutton v. People, 177 Colo. 448, 494 P.2d 822 (1972); People v. Drumright, 181 Colo. 137, 507 P.2d 1097 (1973); Lamb v. People, 181 Colo. 446, 509 P.2d 1267 (1973); People v. Diaz, 182 Colo. 369, 513 P.2d 444 (1973); People v. Miller, 37 Colo. App. 294, 549 P.2d 1092 (1976), aff'd, 193 Colo. 415, 566 P.2d 1059 (1977); People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 365, 607 P.2d 1028 (1979); People v. Mandez, 997 P.2d 1254 (Colo. App. 1999).

Sufficiency of conversion to constitute larceny. Quinn v. People, 32 Colo. 135, 75 P. 396 (1904); Compton v. People, 89 Colo. 407, 3 P.2d 418 (1931); Moore v. People, 125 Colo. 306, 243 P.2d 425 (1952).

Evidence from which the jury might conclude that defendant had come into possession of stolen property lawfully, that he thereafter learned that such property had been stolen in a burglary, and with full knowledge thereof converted such property to his own use withholding it from its lawful owner, is sufficient to support a conviction of larceny by bailee. Peters v. People, 151 Colo. 35, 376 P.2d 170 (1962).

Negotiation of a check is equivalent to receipt of money, and failure to pay over the money collected for another is a conversion of it. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

Administrator of estate guilty of embezzlement. Hopkins v. People, 89 Colo. 296, 1 P.2d 937 (1931).

Conviction for embezzlement by a warehouseman reversed when there is no evidence to show that the defendant actually took part in the crime and the prosecution failed to establish that the defendant had some knowledge that the manager had perpetrated the crime. Dressel v. People, 178 Colo. 115, 495 P.2d 544 (1972).

Evidence insufficient to support conviction of false pretenses. Rogers v. People, 161 Colo. 317, 422 P.2d 377 (1966).

Evidence sufficient to support conviction of obtaining property by false pretenses. Shemwell v. People, 62 Colo. 146, 161 P. 157 (1916); Montez v. People, 110 Colo. 208, 132 P.2d 970 (1942).

Evidence sufficient to support conviction of confidence game. Munsell v. People, 122 Colo. 420, 222 P.2d 615 (1950); McBride v. People, 126 Colo. 277, 248 P.2d 725 (1952); Krantz v. People, 150 Colo. 469, 374 P.2d 199 (1962), cert. denied, 372 U.S. 921, 83 S. Ct. 735, 9 L. Ed.2d 725 (1963); Dodge v. People, 168 Colo. 531, 452 P.2d 759 (1969).

Evidence insufficient to sustain conviction of confidence game. Bomareto v. People, 111 Colo. 99, 137 P.2d 402 (1943); Graham v. People, 126 Colo. 351, 248 P.2d 730 (1952); White v. People, 126 Colo. 365, 249 P.2d 823 (1952); Bevins v. People, 138 Colo. 123, 330 P.2d 709 (1958); Bledsoe v. People, 138 Colo. 490, 335 P.2d 284 (1959).

Evidence insufficient to show specific intent to deprive customers of their money. People v. McClure, 186 Colo. 274, 526 P.2d 1323 (1974).

Evidence insufficient for conviction. People v. Ferrell, 197 Colo. 253, 591 P.2d 1038 (1979).

V. JURY AND INSTRUCTIONS.

Sufficient evidence to go to jury. People v. Gilkey, 181 Colo. 103, 507 P.2d 855 (1973).

Jury determines grade of crime. It is for the jury under proper instructions, and not the trial judge, to weigh and consider the evidence and determine therefrom what grade of crime, if any, was committed. People v. Chapman, 174 Colo. 545, 484 P.2d 1234 (1971).

Where evidence supports misdemeanor offense, to instruct only to felony theft error. Where there was evidence to support the defendant's request for an instruction on a lesser included class 2 misdemeanor offense of theft of goods, it was error for the trial court to instruct the jury only as to felony theft. Beaudoin v. People, 627 P.2d 739 (Colo. 1981).

Defendant is entitled to an instruction on the grade of the offense when there is evidence which tends to reduce the grade. People v. Chapman, 174 Colo. 545, 484 P.2d 1234 (1971).

Instruction on specific intent. Where the trial court adequately instructs the jury on the issue of specific intent required as an element of attempted theft, no error can be assigned. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

Where instruction permits jury to convict of crime of theft without proof of essential element of that crime, intent to permanently deprive another of use and benefit of property, there is plain error and reversal is required. People v. Butcher, 180 Colo. 429, 506 P.2d 362 (1973).

The instruction "the laws of the State of Colorado provide that any person commits theft when he knowingly obtains or exerts unauthorized control over anything of value of another person with intent to deprive such other person permanently of the use or benefit of the thing of value" clearly spells out the intent required to commit the crime of theft. People v. Gilmer, 182 Colo. 96, 511 P.2d 494 (1973).

Erroneously instructing the jury that the defendant must have acted "intentionally" rather than "knowingly" in taking a thing of value from another person was harmless error as to the defendant because it worked to the defendant's benefit in that "intentionally" requires a more serious form of mental culpability. Blehm v. People, 817 P.2d 988 (Colo. 1991).

No plain error where jury not instructed that defendant must know he or she is deceiving the victims. Deception involves the element of intentional misrepresentation with the purpose of misleading and thus such an instruction is redundant and unnecessary. People v. Collie, 995 P.2d 765 (Colo. App. 1999).

Instruction that failed to require a finding that a defendant must know that any exercise of control is without authorization is erroneous. People v. Bornman, 953 P.2d 952 (Colo. App. 1997); Auman v. People, 109 P.3d 647 (Colo. 2005).

While the standard of proof for the crime of theft by deception requires proof that, in reliance upon misrepresentations by the defendant, the victim parted with something of value, the court is not required to separately instruct the jury on the standard if the jury otherwise is instructed in accordance with the theft statute. People v. Pollard, 3 P.3d 473 (Colo. App. 2000).

Instruction could have been interpreted to permit a conviction when the defendant mistakenly believed that she was authorized to take the money and thus was an incorrect statement of the law, but no objection was raised to the jury instruction, the error was not a structural defect, and a review of the evidence found no plain error. People v. Price, 969 P.2d 766 (Colo. App. 1998).

Where issue before jury, affirmative defense instructions must be given. Where an issue of renunciation and abandonment is before a jury, proper instructions on this affirmative defense must be given to the jury. People v. Traubert, 625 P.2d 991 (Colo. 1981).

Relationship of intent and intoxication. Where court's instruction correctly informed the jury that the "intent to permanently deprive" was an element of theft, and further instructed the jury that the defense of intoxication could be considered in determining whether defendant was incapable of forming "the intent to commit the crime charged", when the two instructions are read together it is apparent that the jury was adequately advised of the relationship between the requisite specific intent and the defense of intoxication. People v. Gilmer, 182 Colo. 96, 511 P.2d 494 (1973).

Test applicable to defendant's request for an instruction on the crime of theft is whether there existed a rational basis to acquit him of simple robbery but still convict him of theft; the test is not whether there is a total absence of evidence showing the defendant to be guilty of simple robbery. Graham v. People, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

Instructions for crimes of theft and burglary which were phrased in the language of the statutes were sufficient. People v. Bowen, 182 Colo. 294, 512 P.2d 1157 (1973).

Where, at a minimum, defendant committed simple robbery, no theft instruction. Because the uncontroverted evidence before the jury established, at a minimum, that the defendant had committed simple robbery, he was not entitled to an instruction on the crime of theft. Graham v. People, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

Required instructions by court. Where the defendant is charged with aggravated robbery and declines the court's offer to instruct on simple robbery, the court is obligated to instruct on the lesser nonincluded offense of theft only if there is no evidence of the defendant's guilt of the lesser included offense of simple robbery. People v. Graham, 41 Colo. App. 390, 590 P.2d 511 (1978), aff'd, 199 Colo. 439, 610 P.2d 494 (1980).

There is no reason for including irrelevant portions of theft statute in instruction, but there is no prejudice to the defendant by their inclusion. People v. Becker, 187 Colo. 344, 531 P.2d 386 (1975).

Instruction on all sections of a theft statute is not prejudicial although not all sections apply to defendant. People v. Pack, 797 P.2d 774 (Colo. App. 1990).

Instruction to jury regarding unexplained, recent possession of stolen property, which indicated to the jury that the burden of proving rightful possession was on the defendant shifted the burden to the defendant to prove his innocence and was prejudicial error. Martinez v. People, 163 Colo. 503, 431 P.2d 765 (1967).

The instruction to the jury that the possession of stolen property recently after the commission of a theft or larceny may be a criminal circumstance tending to show that the person in whose possession it was found is guilty of the crime of larceny unless he has satisfied you from the evidence that he came into possession of the property honestly is prejudicial error. Attwood v. People, 165 Colo. 345, 439 P.2d 40 (1968).

An instruction which permits the jury to infer guilt of either theft or burglary if recent, exclusive and unexplained possession of stolen property was established beyond a reasonable doubt was not defective. People v. Maes, 43 Colo. App. 365, 607 P.2d 1028 (1979).

Instruction on circumstantial evidence should include the essential limiting language that in order to convict on circumstantial evidence alone, circumstances must be such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis of defendants' innocence. Drahn v. People, 174 Colo. 157, 483 P.2d 209 (1971).

Special instruction on "knowingly" as applied to "without authorization" is not required. People v. Gresham, 647 P.2d 243 (Colo. App. 1981).

Failure to instruct on mens rea of theft. Definitional instruction on whether a person acts "knowingly" failed to instruct properly on mens rea of theft, the ulterior crime of burglary, and was plainly erroneous with regard to burglary in that it did not require jury to be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the taking had to be practically certain in order to obtain from the defendant's conduct the determination that the defendant had the requisite culpability for commission of theft. People v. Reed, 692 P.2d 1122 (Colo. App. 1984).

Accessory instruction proper. Where there was evidence presented at trial to the effect that the defendant had stated, prior to the theft, that he would take all the television sets which could be provided, and there was evidence from which a jury could properly infer that the defendant knew that they would be stolen, the evidence was sufficient to permit submission of the theft by taking count to the jury, it being properly instructed as to an accessory becoming liable as a principal. People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

Accomplice instruction improper. Where witness admitted burglarizing an establishment and delivering articles stolen to defendant who was charged with receiving stolen goods, such witness was not an accomplice and an instruction concerning the testimony of an accomplice was not appropriate. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

Instruction on lesser included offense held sufficient. People v. Mingo, 191 Colo. 155, 551 P.2d 196 (1976).

VI. VERDICT AND SENTENCE.

No equal protection violation where person convicted of class 4 felony theft is punished more severely than a class 4 felony sex offender. People v. Friesen, 45 P.3d 784 (Colo. App. 2001).

General verdict of guilty held sufficient. Where the indictment sets out the value of the property unlawfully obtained, a general verdict of "guilty in manner and form as charged in the indictment", is sufficient to support a conviction without a finding of the value of the property taken. Montez v. People, 110 Colo. 208, 132 P.2d 970 (1942); Archer v. People, 129 Colo. 313, 269 P.2d 700 (1954).

Trial court is without authority to amend or alter jury finding of value where the jury by its verdict fixes the value of the property taken in the amount of $325. People v. Chapman, 174 Colo. 545, 484 P.2d 1234 (1971).

Larceny from person is felony regardless of value. Where crime charged was larceny from the person, a statement by victim of the amount of money taken from him was immaterial, and it was error to impose sentence as for misdemeanor because amount taken from person was less than $50. People v. McIntosh, 149 Colo. 555, 369 P.2d 987 (1962).

Verdicts of guilt as to theft, but not as to burglary, are consistent. Where evidence linking the defendant with burglary was conflicting or was rebutted, but the evidence clearly established that the defendant was in possession of property recently taken in a burglary, there was evidence to sustain a conviction of larceny and the verdicts of not guilty of burglary but guilty of larceny were not inconsistent as being irreconcilable with the evidence of each case. Renfrow v. People, 176 Colo. 160, 489 P.2d 582 (1971).

Verdict of innocent as to theft but not as to conspiracy to commit theft consistent. Where the evidence under which the jury acquitted the defendant of the charge of theft was separate and independent from evidence before the jury on the charge of conspiracy to commit theft, which jury convicted defendant of, conspiracy conviction was not an inconsistent verdict. People v. Forbes, 185 Colo. 410, 524 P.2d 1377 (1974).

Verdicts held not inconsistent. Since the statutory elements of aggravated robbery and theft over $200 are different, jury verdicts convicting a defendant of aggravated robbery of an employee but acquitting the defendant of theft from the employer are not inconsistent and repugnant. People v. Williams, 40 Colo. App. 30, 569 P.2d 339 (1977).

Sentence concurrent with life sentence proper. Where the defendant was sentenced for life imprisonment for first degree murder and lesser sentences for first degree burglary and theft which the jury found he had committed, and all sentences were imposed concurrently with the life sentence which the jury ordered, there was no error. People v. Salas, 189 Colo. 111, 538 P.2d 437 (1975).

Consecutive sentences for burglary and for larceny are improper. Maes v. People, 169 Colo. 200, 454 P.2d 792 (1969).

When the burglary and the larceny involve one transaction, typical of many burglary-larceny situations, double, consecutive sentencing for the same transaction is inherently wrong and basically unjust, and evades the legislative intent. Maynes v. People, 169 Colo. 186, 454 P.2d 797 (1969).

All separately prosecutable thefts committed within a six-month period are a unit of prosecution for double jeopardy purposes. Two convictions for theft within the same six-month period must be merged into one conviction. People v. Gardner, 250 P.3d 1262 (Colo. App. 2010).

Defendant who pled guilty to a single count of theft in return for a dismissal of other counts may not be ordered to pay restitution to the victims in the counts that were dismissed. When an offense requires proof of the identity of a particular victim, the court may not order restitution to another. People v. Armijo, 989 P.2d 224 (Colo. App. 1999).

When defendant's actions do not constitute theft from the person of another, the defendant may be convicted of theft, but the court must enter the lowest level of a theft charge if the jury does not find the value of the items stolen. People v. Smith, 121 P.3d 243 (Colo. App. 2005).

18-4-402. Theft of rental property. (1) A person commits theft of rental property if he:

(a) Obtains the temporary use of personal property of another, which is available only for hire, by means of threat or deception, or knowing that such use is without the consent of the person providing the personal property; or

(b) Having lawfully obtained possession for temporary use of the personal property of another which is available only for hire, knowingly fails to reveal the whereabouts of or to return said property to the owner thereof or his representative or to the person from whom he has received it within seventy-two hours after the time at which he agreed to return it.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1691, § 4, effective July 1, 2007.)

(3) Theft of rental property is a class 2 misdemeanor where the value of the property involved is less than five hundred dollars.

(3.5) Theft of rental property is a class 1 misdemeanor where the value of the property involved is five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars.

(4) Theft of rental property is a class 5 felony where the value of the property involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars.

(5) Theft of rental property is a class 3 felony where the value of the property involved is twenty thousand dollars or more.

(6) When a person commits theft of rental property twice or more within a period of six months, two or more of the thefts of rental property may be aggregated and charged in a single count, in which event the thefts so aggregated and charged shall constitute a single offense, and, if the aggregate value of the property involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, it is a class 5 felony; however, if the aggregate value of the property involved is twenty thousand dollars or more, it is a class 3 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 429, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-402. L. 75: (2) and (3) amended and (4) added, p. 619, § 11, effective July 21. L. 77: (1)(b) amended, p. 963, § 24, effective July 1; (2) and (4) amended and (5) added, p. 973, § 3, effective July 1. L. 84: (3) and (4) amended, p. 537, § 7, effective July 1. L. 87: (6) added, p. 615, § 6, effective July 1. L. 89: (4) and (6) amended, p. 833, § 45, effective July 1. L. 92: (2) to (6) amended, p. 434, § 2, effective April 10. L. 98: (3), (4), and (6) amended, p. 1437, § 12, effective July 1; (3), (4), and (6) amended, p. 795, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2) to (6) amended and (3.5) added, p. 1691, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2009: (6) amended, (HB 09-1334), ch. 244, p. 1100, § 3, effective May 11.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsections (2) to (6) and enacting subsection (3.5), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2009 act amending subsection (6), see section 1 of chapter 244, Session Laws of Colorado 2009.

ANNOTATION

This section is constitutional. People v. Cardinal, 197 Colo. 425, 593 P.2d 966 (1979).

Culpable mental state required. The use of the term “knowingly” in subsection (1)(b) indicates the requirement of a culpable mental state. People v. Washburn, 197 Colo. 419, 593 P.2d 962 (1979).

Not specific intent. The culpable mental state required in a statute dealing with theft must be more than mere negligence, but it need not be specific intent. People v. Washburn, 197 Colo. 419, 593 P.2d 962 (1979).

But conscious culpability. In order to be convicted under this section, the defendant must have the knowledge that his acts constituted a wrongful retention of rental property. Implicit in this statutory provision is the element of conscious culpability. People v. Washburn, 197 Colo. 419, 593 P.2d 962 (1979); People v. Cardinal, 197 Colo. 425, 593 P.2d 966 (1979).

Allegations of time are substantive. Subsection (1)(b) proscribes only conduct which occurs after the expiration of the rental period specified in a rental agreement. In prosecutions commenced under this subsection, allegations of time are, therefore, substantive allegations — not mere matters of form which may be altered by amendment at any time prior to the rendering of a verdict in the absence of prejudice to the defendant. People v. Moody, 674 P.2d 366 (Colo. 1984).

Detention of defendant and search of defendant's car are unwarranted where there is no reasonable basis for law enforcement officer to suspect that defendant has violated subsection (1)(b), no valid investigatory stop, and no reason for law enforcement officer to believe that defendant is armed or dangerous. People v. Litchfield, 902 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1995), aff'd on other grounds, 918 P.2d 1099 (Colo. 1996).

Section distinguished from § 18-4-401. This section clearly applies to an unlawful temporary deprivation of rental property as distinguished from a permanent deprivation of property generally as required by § 18-4-401. People v. Trigg, 184 Colo. 78, 518 P.2d 841 (1974).

Applied in People v. Donelson, 194 Colo. 175, 570 P.2d 542 (1977).

18-4-403. Statutory intent. If any law of this state refers to or mentions larceny, stealing, embezzlement (except embezzlement of public moneys), false pretenses, confidence games, or shoplifting, that law shall be interpreted as if the word "theft" were substituted therefor; and in the enactment of sections 18-4-401 to 18-4-403 it is the intent of the general assembly to define one crime of theft and to incorporate therein such crimes, thereby removing distinctions and technicalities which previously existed in the pleading and proof of such crimes.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 429, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-403.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Larceny, Embezzlement, and False Pretenses in Colorado — A Need for Consolidation", see 23 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 446 (1951). For article, "Joinder of Criminal Charges, Election, Duplicity", see 30 Dicta 117 (1953).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-403 is similar to former § 40-5-2, C.R.S. 1963, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

The theft statute is clearly meant to encompass generally acquisition type crimes. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

This section is a short-cut method of substituting the word "theft" in every statute in which the words larceny, stealing, embezzlement (except embezzlement of public moneys), false pretenses, confidence game, or shoplifting are used, without having to list all the statutes affected; this technique avoids rendering inoperative, by inadvertence, any statute containing one of the enumerated words. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

Exception for embezzlement of public money is not limitation. Just because the word "theft" should not be substituted for "embezzlement of public moneys" is no indication of a limitation on the general theft statute. Clearly, the crime of embezzlement is included, for unless the general assembly intent is clearly shown to be otherwise, enactment of a specific criminal statute does not preclude prosecution under a general criminal statute, but rather allows the single criminal transaction to be prosecuted under either statute. Hucal v. People, 176 Colo. 529, 493 P.2d 23 (1971).

18-4-404. Obtaining control over any stolen thing of value - conviction. Every person who obtains control over any stolen thing of value, knowing the thing of value to have been stolen by another, may be tried, convicted, and punished whether or not the principal is charged, tried, or convicted.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 429, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-404.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-404 is similar to former § 40-5-11, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section makes the buying or receiving of stolen goods a crime. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

For distinctions between larceny and receipt of stolen goods under former statute, see People v. Lamirato, 180 Colo. 250, 504 P.2d 661 (1972).

Receiving stolen goods is a distinct crime from the original larceny of the property, and the party committing the larceny is not the accomplice of one who purchased the goods from him knowing them to have been stolen. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

An ingredient of the crime of receiving stolen property is knowledge that it has been stolen. Stull v. People, 140 Colo. 278, 344 P.2d 455 (1959); Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478

P.2d 662 (1970); People v. Goldsberry, 181 Colo. 406, 509 P.2d 801 (1973).

It is fundamental that knowledge of the fact that the property received is stolen is an essential element of the crime, and lack of such proof requires a dismissal. People v. Schamber, 182 Colo. 355, 513 P.2d 205 (1973).

Guilty knowledge must be both alleged and proved, and the burden of establishing knowledge on the part of the defendant is upon the prosecution. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970).

Mere proof of recent, unexplained possession insufficient to support conviction. In order to support a conviction of knowingly receiving stolen goods there must be proof of some circumstances showing knowledge of the theft beyond mere proof of recent, unexplained, exclusive possession of the property. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970); People v. Manning, 180 Colo. 14, 501 P.2d 1046 (1972).

And juries should be so instructed. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970).

Although jury may consider such evidence. Recent, unexplained, exclusive possession is a fact which the jury may well consider along with other evidence, either direct or circumstantial, of knowledge of the theft. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970).

Instruction on inference created by possession of stolen property. It is never proper, in a case for receiving stolen goods knowing them to have been stolen, for the jury to be instructed that the unexplained possession alone of such recently stolen property is either a circumstance from which guilt may be inferred or that such possession is a circumstance strongly indicative of guilt which would justify, support, or warrant a verdict for the state, where such possession is unaided by other proof tending to show that the accused received such property knowing it to have been stolen. Noble v. People, 173 Colo. 333, 478 P.2d 662 (1970).

Where the defendant contended that since the court instructed the jury that the exclusive possession of stolen property recently after the commission of a theft may be an incriminating circumstance, the court should have further given an instruction defining "recently" after the commission of a theft, it was held that the court did not err as such instruction could only have stated that whether or not defendant's possession was recent was a matter for the determination of the jury. Tatum v. People, 174 Colo. 301, 483 P.2d 964 (1971).

Manner of describing property. As in larceny, so in receiving, the property is identified by description of the stolen things and their ownership, namely, the thing stolen must be described in the same manner as in larceny. Miller v. People, 13 Colo. 166, 21 P. 1025 (1889).

Testimony of thief against one charged with receiving the stolen goods is not subject to infirmities attached to accomplice testimony. Where witness admitted burglarizing an establishment and delivering articles stolen to defendant who was charged with receiving stolen goods, such witness was not an accomplice and an instruction concerning the testimony of an accomplice was not appropriate. Burns v. People, 148 Colo. 245, 365 P.2d 698 (1961).

Evidence of market value required. To make a prima facie case for violations under this section, it was incumbent upon the people to present competent evidence of the reasonable market value of the goods in question at the time of the commission of the alleged offense. People v. Paris, 182 Colo. 148, 511 P.2d 893 (1973).

Evidence of price of goods insufficient to prove guilty knowledge. Where sole evidence of receipt of stolen goods was that defendant purchased the goods at a price which was not much lower than the fair market price of the goods, it was insufficient to establish guilty knowledge. People v. Manning, 180 Colo. 14, 501 P.2d 1046 (1972).

And case lacking proof of knowledge is not for jury. Negation of the essential element of guilt, a defendant's knowledge that property received was stolen at the time he received it, makes an incomplete case, one which should not be submitted to a jury for deliberation and verdict. Stull v. People, 140 Colo. 278, 344 P.2d 455 (1959).

Evidence sufficient to go to jury. Where the evidence shows that a defendant has in his possession goods of the same kind as those stolen, and there is additional evidence and other circumstances from which an inference can reasonably be made that the goods are the same as those previously stolen, or that the accused had knowledge of their stolen character, the case is properly submitted to the jury. Tatum v. People, 174 Colo. 301, 483 P.2d 964 (1971).

Sufficient evidence to support conviction. People v. Bailey, 191 Colo. 366, 552 P.2d 1014 (1976).

Evidence insufficient for conviction. People v. Maestas, 181 Colo. 180, 508 P.2d 782 (1973).

Applied in People v. Montoya, 667 P.2d 1377 (Colo. 1983).

18-4-405. Rights in stolen property. All property obtained by theft, robbery, or burglary shall be restored to the owner, and no sale, whether in good faith on the part of the purchaser or not, shall divest the owner of his right to such property. The owner may maintain an action not only against the taker thereof but also against any person in whose possession he finds the property. In any such action, the owner may recover two hundred dollars or three times the amount of the actual damages sustained by him, whichever is greater, and may also recover costs of the action and reasonable attorney fees; but monetary damages and attorney fees shall not be recoverable from a good-faith purchaser or good-faith holder of the property.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 429, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-405. L. 73: p. 536, § 1. L. 87: Entire section amended, p. 668, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Law of Trade Secrecy and Covenants Not to Compete in Colorado-Part I", see 30 Colo. Law. 7 (April 2001). For article, "Treble Damages for Civil Theft in Colorado After Itin v. Ungar", see 31 Colo. Law. 49 (March 2002). For article, "Bona Fide Purchasers of Real Property: Fraud is Not Civil Theft", see 32 Colo. Law. 101 (December 2003).

Section conflicts with Uniform Commercial Code, § 4-2-403, which holds that a good faith purchaser takes valid title from a person who obtained voluntary delivery from a seller in exchange for a check that is later dishonored. UCC section prevails because it was later in time and because original owner was in a better position to protect his or her interests than the subsequent good faith purchaser. West v. Roberts, 143 P.3d 1037 (Colo. 2006).

Section should not be read as a codification of the remedy of replevin or as a delineation of the grounds for creating a constructive trust. In re Allen, 724 P.2d 651 (Colo. 1986).

Return of property does not necessarily preclude a finding of wrongful intent nor purge the defendant of guilt. Ziegler v. Inabata of Am., Inc., 316 F. Supp. 2d 908 (D. Colo. 2004).

Although funds from a "Ponzi scheme" were obtained by theft, the subsequent transfer of these funds by the debtor represented the transfer of an "interest of the debtor in property" for purposes of a chapter 7 bankruptcy action. In re M & L Business Mach. Co., Inc., 160 B.R. 851 (B.R. D. Colo. 1994), aff'd, 167 B.R. 219 (Bankr. D. Colo. 1994).

This section was intended to be a punitive measure depriving thieves and persons who buy and sell stolen goods of the immediate fruits of their criminal activities. In re Allen, 724 P.2d 651 (Colo. 1986); Montoya v. Grease Monkey Holding Corp., 883 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1994).

Employer of "taker" of property, never having had possession of the property and not being involved in criminal activity, was not subject to this section. Montoya v. Grease Monkey Holding Corp., 883 P.2d 486 (Colo. App. 1994).

The requisite burden of proof for awarding treble damages under this section is the preponderance of evidence standard rather than the higher burden used in criminal matters of beyond a reasonable doubt. In re Dorland, 374 B.R. 765 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2007).

"Actual damages" include noneconomic damages as well as economic damages. Gorsich v. Double B Trading Co., Inc., 893 P.2d 1357 (Colo. App. 1994).

Trial court did not err in concluding that under this section a rightful owner could not recover from a vendor funds belonging to a company that had been embezzled and used to purchase and improve property the vendor reacquired after embezzler's default on a land contract, as vendor no longer had possession of company funds. Cedar Lane Inv. v. Am. Roofing, 919 P.2d 879 (Colo. App. 1996).

Damages may be obtained under this section without proof that the taker of stolen property was convicted of theft, burglary, or robbery. Chryar v. Wolf, 21 P.3d 428 (Colo. App. 2000); Itin v. Bertrand T. Ungar, P.C., 17 P.3d 129 (Colo. 2000).

This statute provides an owner with a private remedy against the taker that requires proof of a specified criminal act but not proof of a prior criminal conviction to recover treble damages, fees, and costs. Itin v. Bertrand T. Ungar, P.C., 17 P.3d 129 (Colo. 2000).

If all of the conditions leading to the award of treble damages have already occurred, then the award of those damages is not contingent, and, if the damages are readily ascertainable, they are liquidated. It is appropriate, therefore, to consider the inclusion of treble damages in calculating debtor's eligibility for chapter 13 bankruptcy relief under 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). In re Krupka, 317 B.R. 432 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2004).

The award of treble damages is not discretionary. Because the language of this section speaks in terms of what the owner may recover as opposed to what the court may award, the statutory language does not support the argument that discretion lies with the trial court to either award treble damages or not as it may deem appropriate. It is appropriate, therefore, to consider the inclusion of treble damages in calculating debtor's eligibility for chapter 13 bankruptcy relief under 11 U.S.C. § 109(e). In re Krupka, 317 B.R. 432 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2004).

There was no justification for assessing the criminal penalty of treble damages, attorney fees, and costs where plaintiff did not prove all the components of "theft" by a preponderance of the evidence. Although there was a violation of § 38-26-109, resulting in an award of actual damages, there was no proof, evidence, or finding of conduct necessary to show criminal conduct or criminal liability under applicable Colorado case law. In re Dorland, 374 B.R. 765 (Bankr. D. Colo. 2007).

Attempt to collect damages unavailing where there was no showing of a criminal act. In re Duran, 483 F.3d 653 (10th Cir. 2007).

Restaurant owners who intentionally intercepted satellite signal to broadcast fight program without paying sub-licensing fee violated this section. Kingvision Pay-Per-View, Ltd. v. Gutierrez, 544 F. Supp. 2d 1179 (D. Colo. 2008).

Plaintiff not entitled to damages under this section, however, because court awarded it statutory damages under the Federal Communications Act, 47 U.S.C. § 605. Any award under this section would therefore constitute impermissible double recovery for the same injury. Kingvision Pay-Per-View, Ltd. v. Gutierrez, 544 F. Supp. 2d 1179 (D. Colo. 2008).

This section does not authorize recovery against a good faith purchaser who holds record title to real property earlier conveyed under fraudulent circumstances. Strekal v. Espe, 114 P.3d 67 (Colo. App. 2004).

The statute of limitations in § 13-80-102, and not that in § 16-5-401 (1)(a), applies to a theft claim brought under this section. Michaelson v. Michaelson, 923 P.2d 237 (Colo. App. 1995).

This section imposes a statutory penalty within the meaning of C.R.C.P. 98, requiring that the action be tried in the county where the claim arose. Ehrlich Feedlot, Inc. v. Oldenburg, 140 P.3d 265 (Colo. App. 2006).

Award of reasonable attorney fees to a prevailing plaintiff on a civil theft claim is mandatory. Steward Software Co. v. Kopcho, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2010).

Applied in In re Allen, 691 P.2d 749 (Colo. App. 1984).

18-4-406. Concealment of goods. If any person willfully conceals unpurchased goods, wares, or merchandise owned or held by and offered or displayed for sale by any store or other mercantile establishment, whether the concealment be on his own person or otherwise and whether on or off the premises of said store or mercantile establishment, such concealment constitutes prima facie evidence that the person intended to commit the crime of theft.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 429, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-406.

ANNOTATION

Section held to be constitutional. A statute susceptible to different interpretations should be construed in a manner consistent with constitutional principles when reasonable to do so; therefore, the reference to prima facie evidence contained in this section establishes a permissive inference permitting but not requiring the finder of fact to find from evidence of willful concealment that the defendant intended to steal merchandise concealed. People in Interest of R.M.D., 829 P.2d 852 (Colo. 1992).

Willful concealment of goods that results in prima facie evidence of intent to commit theft does not violate due process standards. This section does not eliminate the prosecution's burden of proving intent to commit crime beyond a reasonable doubt. "Prima facie" does not require the fact finder to conclude that the prosecution has met such burden, but establishes a permissible inference. People In The Matter of R.M.D., 829 P.2d 852 (Colo. 1992).

18-4-407. Questioning of person suspected of theft without liability. If any person triggers an alarm or a theft detection device as defined in section 18-4-417 (2) or conceals upon his person or otherwise carries away any unpurchased goods, wares, or merchandise held or owned by any store or mercantile establishment, the merchant or any employee thereof or any peace officer, acting in good faith and upon probable cause based upon reasonable grounds therefor, may detain and question such person, in a reasonable manner for the purpose of ascertaining whether the person is guilty of theft. Such questioning of a person by a merchant, merchant's employee, or peace or police officer does not render the merchant, merchant's employee, or peace officer civilly or criminally liable for slander, false arrest, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, or unlawful detention.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 429, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-407. L. 2001: Entire section amended, p. 512, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-407 is similar to former § 40-5-31, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Section protects inquiry as to shoplifting. This section affords a degree of protection to one who, acting in good faith and upon probable cause based upon reasonable grounds, questions another for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not the person thus questioned is guilty of shoplifting. J. S. Dillon & Sons Stores Co. v. Carrington, 169 Colo. 242, 455 P.2d 201 (1969).

Such protection is not restricted to situations where person stopped has actually committed the offense of shoplifting. J. S. Dillon & Sons Stores Co. v. Carrington, 169 Colo. 242, 455 P.2d 201 (1969).

Actions of store are not actions of state. The statute permitting the detention of suspected shoplifters by the store management merely grants a license under state law to detain a suspect; it does not invest the individual with the authority of state law. The statute is intended merely to license a shopkeeper to undertake self-help to protect his property; it does not vest him with the authority of the state. The actions of the storekeepers in pursuit of their own personal interests cannot be considered to have been taken under color of state law under the civil rights act. Warren v. Cummings, 303 F. Supp. 803 (D. Colo. 1969).

The phrase "Such questioning of a person" can only mean the questioning of a person for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not he is guilty of shoplifting. J. S. Dillon & Sons Stores Co. v. Carrington, 169 Colo. 242, 455 P.2d 201 (1969).

18-4-408. Theft of trade secrets - penalty. (1) Any person who, with intent to deprive or withhold from the owner thereof the control of a trade secret, or with an intent to appropriate a trade secret to his own use or to the use of another, steals or discloses to an unauthorized person a trade secret, or, without authority, makes or causes to be made a copy of an article representing a trade secret, commits theft of a trade secret.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Article" means any object, material, device, or substance, or copy thereof, including any writing, record, recording, drawing, sample, specimen, prototype, model, photograph, microorganism, blueprint, or map.

(b) "Copy" means any facsimile, replica, photograph, or other reproduction of an article, and any note, drawing, or sketch made of or from an article.

(c) "Representing" means describing, depicting, containing, constituting, reflecting, or recording.

(d) "Trade secret" means the whole or any portion or phase of any scientific or technical information, design, process, procedure, formula, improvement, confidential business or financial information, listing of names, addresses, or telephone numbers, or other information relating to any business or profession which is secret and of value. To be a trade secret the owner thereof must have taken measures to prevent the secret from becoming available to persons other than those selected by the owner to have access thereto for limited purposes.

(3) (a) Theft of a trade secret is a class 1 misdemeanor. A second or subsequent offense under this section committed within five years after the date of a prior conviction is a class 5 felony.

(b) Notwithstanding section 16-5-401 (1) (a), C.R.S., any prosecution for violation of this section shall be commenced within three years after discovery of the offense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 430, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-408. L. 89: (3) amended, p. 833, § 46, effective July 1. L. 98: (3) amended, p. 156, § 1, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the "Uniform Trade Secrets Act", see article 74 of title 7.

Reasonable grounds to stop and question is issue of law. The issue as to whether the defendant's agents in stopping the plaintiff and questioning him acted in good faith and upon probable cause based upon reasonable grounds posed an issue of law which should have been resolved by the trial court under an appropriate instruction to the jury. J. S. Dillon & Sons Stores Co. v. Carrington, 169 Colo. 242, 455 P.2d 201 (1969).

Reasonableness of actions thereafter is issue of fact. The issue as to whether its agents, even though they had the right to stop and question the plaintiff, thereafter acted in a reasonable manner, which they must also do if they are to be given protection afforded by this section, was a genuinely controverted issue of fact which was properly one to be resolved by the jury. J. S. Dillon & Sons Stores Co. v. Carrington, 169 Colo. 242, 455 P.2d 201 (1969).

In action by shopper, who had been detained as a suspected shoplifter, for false imprisonment and slander, whether, under the statutory privilege relied on by the defendants, the manner and extent of the investigation and detention of the shopper were reasonable and whether there was probable cause to detain him were questions of fact. Gonzales v. Harris, 189 Colo. 518, 542 P.2d 842 (1975).

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Trade Secret Litigation: Injunctions and Other Equitable Remedies", see 48 U. Colo. L. Rev. 189 (1977). For article, "Protecting Technical Information: The Role of the General Practitioner", see 12 Colo. Law. 1215 (1983). For article, "Help for Colorado Trade Secret Owners", see 15 Colo. Law.

1993 (1986). For article, "The Law of Trade Secrecy and Covenants Not to Compete in Colorado-Part I", see 30 Colo. Law. 7 (April 2001). For article, "Computer Security and Privacy: The Third Wave of Property Law", see 33 Colo. Law. 57 (February 2004).

18-4-409. Aggravated motor vehicle theft. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Motor vehicle" means all vehicles of whatever description propelled by any power other than muscular, except vehicles running on rails.

(b) "Vehicle identification number" means the serial number placed upon the motor vehicle by the manufacturer thereof or assigned to the motor vehicle by the department of revenue.

(2) A person commits aggravated motor vehicle theft in the first degree if he or she knowingly obtains or exercises control over the motor vehicle of another without authorization or by threat or deception and:

(a) Retains possession or control of the motor vehicle for more than twenty-four hours; or

(b) Attempts to alter or disguise or alters or disguises the appearance of the motor vehicle; or

(c) Attempts to alter or remove or alters or removes the vehicle identification number; or

(d) Uses the motor vehicle in the commission of a crime other than a traffic offense; or

(e) Causes five hundred dollars or more property damage, including but not limited to property damage to the motor vehicle involved, in the course of obtaining control over or in the exercise of control of the motor vehicle; or

(f) Causes bodily injury to another person while he or she is in the exercise of control of the motor vehicle; or

(g) Removes the motor vehicle from this state for a period of time in excess of twelve hours; or

(h) Unlawfully attaches or otherwise displays in or upon the motor vehicle license plates other than those officially issued for the motor vehicle.

(3) Aggravated motor vehicle theft in the first degree is a:

(a) Class 4 felony if the value of the motor vehicle or motor vehicles involved is twenty thousand dollars or less;

(b) Class 3 felony if the value of the motor vehicle or motor vehicles involved is more than twenty thousand dollars or if the defendant has twice previously been convicted or adjudicated of charges separately brought and tried either in this state or elsewhere of an offense involving theft of a motor vehicle under the laws of this state, any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

(4) A person commits aggravated motor vehicle theft in the second degree if he or she knowingly obtains or exercises control over the motor vehicle of another without authorization or by threat or deception and if none of the aggravating factors in subsection (2) of this section are present. Aggravated motor vehicle theft in the second degree is a:

(a) Class 5 felony if the value of the motor vehicle or motor vehicles involved is twenty thousand dollars or more;

(b) Class 6 felony if the value of the motor vehicle or motor vehicles involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars;

(c) Class 1 misdemeanor if the value of the motor vehicle or motor vehicles involved is less than one thousand dollars.

(4.5) Whenever a person is convicted of, pleads guilty or nolo contendere to, receives a deferred judgment or sentence for, or is adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for, a violation of this section, the offender's driver's license shall be revoked as provided in section 42-2-125, C.R.S.

(5) Consistent with section 18-1-202, if the theft of a motor vehicle occurs in one jurisdiction and the motor vehicle is recovered in another jurisdiction, the offender may be tried in the jurisdiction where the theft occurred, in any jurisdiction through which the motor vehicle was operated or transported, or in the jurisdiction in which the motor vehicle was recovered.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 430, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-409. L. 77: Entire section R&RE, p. 974, § 4, effective July 1. L. 79: (2)(e) amended and (2)(f) added, p. 736, § 1, effective April 25; (2)(e) and (4) amended and (2)(g) and (2)(h) added, p. 727, §§ 4, 5, effective July 1. L. 80: IP(2), IP(3), and (4) amended, p. 532, § 1, effective January 29. L. 87: (2)(a) and (2)(g) amended, p. 668, § 2, effective July 1. L. 92: (3) amended, p. 434, § 3, effective April 10. L. 95: (3)(b) and (4) amended, p. 1253, § 12, effective July 1. L. 99: Entire section amended, p. 1164, § 1, effective July 1, 2000. L. 2001: (2)(e) amended, p. 59, § 1, effective August 8. L. 2003: (4.5) added, p. 1845, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2007: (3) and (4) amended, p. 1692, § 5, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsections (3) and (4), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-409 is similar to former § 40-5-2, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Elements of the crimes of theft and motor vehicle theft are clearly different, and therefore it does not violate equal protection to prosecute under the latter rather than the former. People v. Westrum, 624 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1981).

Where conduct violates both provisions, prosecutor determines under which provision crime prosecuted. Where the alleged conduct of a defendant violates both the general theft statute and the more specific motor vehicle theft statute, it is the function of the prosecuting attorney and not the trial court to determine under which statute the alleged crime shall be prosecuted. People v. Westrum, 624 P.2d 1302 (Colo. 1981).

Crime defined by offender's conduct and mental state. This section defined the crime of aggravated motor vehicle theft in terms of the offender's conduct and his culpable mental state and does not condition criminal responsibility on the action of a third party after the prohibited conduct already has occurred. People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981).

Inference based on possession of recently stolen automobile. If there is independent evidence which proves beyond a reasonable doubt that a theft occurred, defendant's possession of a recently stolen automobile permits the jury to infer that defendant was the person who exercised control from the time of the theft to the time of apprehension. People v. Clay, 644 P.2d 81 (Colo. App. 1982).

Jury could reasonably conclude that defendant exercised dominion and control over a car where the evidence supported a reasonable inference that the defendant (1) had possession of the car keys, (2) was in the car long enough to gather items of value, (3) poured accelerant on the car and set it on fire, and (4) walked away as it burned, still carrying the keys. People v. Harper, 205 P.3d 452 (Colo. App. 2008).

Elements of culpable mental state. Subsection (2)(a) contemplates a culpable mental state involving an awareness by the offender that he is obtaining or exercising control over the vehicle of another and that his control is indeed without authorization. People v. Andrews, 632 P.2d 1012 (Colo. 1981); People v. Marquez, 107 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

Liability for first degree aggravated motor vehicle theft is to be imposed whenever a person who has knowingly stolen a motor vehicle uses that motor vehicle in the commission of a crime other than a traffic offense, regardless of the mens rea associated with the particular crime committed. People v. Marquez, 107 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

Not every alteration is a subsection (2)(b) aggravating factor. Not every act that alters the appearance of a vehicle is an aggravating factor falling within the purview of subsection (2)(b). People v. Hale, 654 P.2d 849 (Colo. 1982).

Such as changing license plates. Prior to adoption of subsection (2)(h), placing unrelated license plates on a car did not constitute altering or disguising the appearance of the vehicle within the meaning of subsection (2)(b). People v. Hale, 654 P.2d 849 (Colo. 1982).

Trial court erred in its answer to a jury question regarding whether defendant had to know license plates on stolen truck did not belong to the truck. Trial court's response telling the jury that defendant did not have to know that the plates did not belong to the truck was incorrect, and its subsequent reminder that all elements of the relevant jury instruction had to be proved beyond a reasonable doubt was inadequate to rectify the error. People v. Manier, 197 P.3d 254 (Colo. App. 2008).

Such error was not harmless. While there was ample evidence connecting defendant with the stolen truck, there was little if any evidence that could be inferred that defendant had any involvement in attaching or displaying fictitious license plates on it. People v. Manier, 197 P.3d 254 (Colo. App. 2008).

The evidence was sufficient, however, to establish defendant's liability for second degree aggravated motor vehicle theft. People v. Manier, 197 P.3d 254 (Colo. App. 2008).

Under previous version of statute, aggravator that yields a felony only if "committed by a person who has been twice previously convicted" requires that both prior convictions have entered before the commission of the instant offense. People v. Houcks, 75 P.3d 1155 (Colo. App. 2003).

Defendant convicted of aggravated motor vehicle theft even though vehicle was taken after crime of first-degree assault had been committed because the vehicle was used to flee the scene of the crime of first degree assault. People v. McCoy, 944 P.2d 577 (Colo. App. 1996).

Defendant was not entitled to instructions on intoxication defense and defining "voluntary act" as provided in § 18-1-501 (9) where he was charged with aggravated motor vehicle theft under this section. People v. Huskey, 624 P.2d 899 (Colo. App. 1980).

Joyriding is less severe offense than larceny of motor vehicle. People v. Rivera, 185 Colo. 337, 524 P.2d 1082 (1974).

The crime of joyriding is not a lesser included offense of the crime of theft, nor is attempted joyriding a lesser included offense of attempted theft. Sandoval v. People, 176 Colo. 414, 490 P.2d 1298 (1971).

Crime of joyriding is not a lesser included offense of the crime of theft. People v. Gilmer, 182 Colo. 96, 511 P.2d 494 (1973).

Vehicular homicide is not a lesser included offense of aggravated motor vehicle theft under the strict elements test even if its proof might satisfy an element of aggravated motor vehicle theft under the facts of a particular case. People v. Marquez, 107 P.3d 993 (Colo. App. 2004).

Second degree aggravated motor vehicle theft is not a lesser included offense of theft. Therefore conviction of the former should not merge into a conviction of the latter. People v. Meads, 58 P.3d 1137 (Colo. App. 2002), aff'd, 78 P.3d 290 (Colo. 2003).

Convictions for aggravated motor vehicle theft and attempted aggravated robbery are factually and legally inconsistent. People v. James, 981 P.2d 637 (Colo. App. 1998).

No private cause of action under this section. In re Duran, 483 F.3d 653 (10th Cir. 2007).

Applied in People v. R.V., 43 Colo. App. 349, 606 P.2d 1311 (1979); Chavez v. District Court, 648 P.2d 658 (Colo. 1982); People v. Simien, 656 P.2d 698 (Colo. 1983); People v. Martinez, 656 P.2d 1317 (Colo. 1983); People v. Eastepp, 884 P.2d 305 (Colo. 1994).

18-4-410. Theft by receiving. (1) Except as provided in subsection (6) of this section, a person commits theft by receiving when he receives, retains, loans money by pawn or pledge on, or disposes of anything of value of another, knowing or believing that said thing of value has been stolen, and when he intends to deprive the lawful owner permanently of the use or benefit of the thing of value.

(2) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1692, § 6, effective July 1, 2007.)

(3) Where the value of the thing involved is less than five hundred dollars, theft by receiving is a class 2 misdemeanor.

(3.5) Where the value of the thing involved is five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars, theft by receiving is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(4) Where the value of the thing involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, theft by receiving is a class 4 felony.

(5) Where the value of the thing involved is twenty thousand dollars or more, theft by receiving is a class 3 felony.

(6) When the aggregate value of the thing or things involved is one thousand dollars or more and the person committing theft by receiving is engaged in the business of buying, selling, or otherwise disposing of stolen goods for a profit, theft by receiving is a class 3 felony.

(7) When a person commits theft by receiving twice or more within a period of six months, two or more of the thefts by receiving may be aggregated and charged in a single count, in which event the thefts so aggregated and charged shall constitute a single offense, and, if the aggregate value of the things involved is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, it is a class 4 felony; however, if the aggregate value of the things involved is twenty thousand dollars or more, it is a class 3 felony.

Source: L. 75: Entire section added, p. 619, § 12, effective July 21. L. 77: Entire section R&RE, p. 975, § 5, effective July 1. L. 84: (3), (4), and (6) amended, p. 537, § 8, effective July 1, 1985. L. 87: (6) amended, p. 607, § 14, effective July 1. L. 92: (2) to (6) amended, p. 435, § 4, effective April 10. L. 98: (3), (4), and (6) amended, p. 795, § 4, effective July 1; (3), (4), and (6) amended and (7) added, p. 1438, § 13, effective July 1. L. 99: (7) amended, p. 797, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2) to (7) amended and (3.5) added, p. 1692, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2009: (7) amended, (HB 09-1334), ch. 244, p. 1100, § 4, effective May 11.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsections (2) to (7) and enacting subsection (3.5), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2009 act amending subsection (7), see section 1 of chapter 244, Session Laws of Colorado 2009.

ANNOTATION

Subject is appropriate one for legislation. Trafficking in stolen property directly affects public safety and welfare and is an appropriate and constitutional subject for legislation in the exercise of the police power. People v. Myrick, 638 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1981).

Since there is a legitimate governmental interest in seeking to interrupt the flow of stolen property, it is not irrational for the general assembly to attempt to accomplish this by making the receipt of nonstolen property, which is believed to be stolen, a crime. People v. Myrick, 638 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1981).

Where governor's signature is necessary for bill to become law, the date of passage for the 1992 amendment to subsection (3) was the date the governor signed the bill. People v. Wu, 894 P.2d 40 (Colo. App. 1995).

In enacting this section, general assembly intended to reach distinct group of wrongdoers. The class includes those persons who receive, retain, or dispose of property received from another person with the knowledge or reasonable belief that the property has been stolen. People v. Jackson, 627 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1981).

This section is not unconstitutional for being overbroad. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

While belief is entirely subjective and therefore difficult to detect or prove, this merely compounds the people's burden of proof and does not render the "believing" standard of subsection (1) of this section unconstitutionally vague. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

This section does not infringe any right to freedom of commerce as there is no constitutional right to deal in property known or believed to be stolen. People v. Adler, 629 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1981); People v. Myrick, 638 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1981).

Former provisions of subsection (1) held unconstitutional. People v. Johnson, 193 Colo. 99, 564 P.2d 116 (1977).

Conviction not violating constitution. If a defendant receives a thing of value believing it to have been stolen and with the specific intent on the part of the defendant to deprive the owner of the article permanently, his conviction of theft does not violate the constitution. People v. Johnson, 193 Colo. 99, 564 P.2d 116 (1977).

Where appellant knew items were stolen and on this basis agreed to cash checks as an integral part of an overall scheme to acquire and sell stolen goods, he could be properly tried and convicted as an aider and abettor to theft-receiving and thus as a principal. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L. Ed.2d 167 (1976).

The stealing of several articles of property at the same time and place, as one continuous act or transaction, may be prosecuted as a single offense, although the several articles belong to several different owners. People v. District Court, 192 Colo. 355, 559 P.2d 1106 (1977).

The phrase, "where the value of the thing involved", as used in subsections (2) through (5), may include the aggregate value of things stolen in a single criminal impulse. Defendant properly charged with class 4 felony under the statute in effect at time of arrest for theft of multiple items whose valued totaled $500 or more. People v. Crawford, 230 P.3d 1232 (Colo. App. 2009) (decided under law in effect prior to 2007 amendment).

The nature of the offense of theft by receiving is such that the general assembly must have intended it to be a continuing course of conduct when the charge is based on the defendant's retention of stolen property. People v. Zuniga, 80 P.3d 965 (Colo. App. 2003).

Completely conclusory statement by a witness/coconspirator is insufficient when standing alone to prove theft or theft-receiving. People v. Silvola, 190 Colo. 363, 547 P.2d 1283, cert. denied, 429 U.S. 886, 97 S. Ct. 238, 50 L. Ed.2d 167 (1976).

By using the word "retain" in the theft by receiving statute, the general assembly defined the crime to include the offense of possession of stolen property. People v. Zuniga, 80 P. 3d 965 (Colo. App. 2003).

Theft and theft by receiving are two separate and distinct crimes. The penalty for each is the same, but conviction of one would not support a conviction of the other. People v. Griffie, 44 Colo. App. 46, 610 P.2d 1079 (1980).

A defendant cannot be convicted of both theft and theft by receiving when the charges arise out of the same transaction and involve the same property. However, theft and theft by receiving are separate and distinct crimes, and the prosecution may charge the person who stole property with theft by receiving the property instead of theft. People v. Zuniga, 80 P.3d 965 (Colo. App. 2003).

Participant in theft cannot be convicted of both crimes. A person who has actively participated in a theft cannot be convicted of both the theft and theft by receiving of the stolen property. People v. Jackson, 627 P.2d 741 (Colo. 1981).

Theft by receiving and theft are separate crimes. Where convictions for theft and theft by receiving arise out of the same transaction, the defendant could not properly be found guilty of both. People v. Taylor, 647 P.2d 682 (Colo. 1982).

There is no indication that the general assembly enacted the theft by receiving statute to preclude prosecution under the theft statute. Therefore, prosecutor can determine statute under which to prosecute the alleged crime. People v. Smith, 938 P.2d 111 (Colo. 1997).

Defendant charged under "fencing" provision may not thereafter be charged for underlying offenses. Where the prosecution elected to initially charge the defendant with the enhanced "fencing" component of theft by receiving, it may not prosecute the defendant again for offenses that constituted the factual basis of the prior charge, which was litigated to a conclusion under a "unit of prosecution" selected by the prosecution in the first instance. People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982).

Subsection (6) offense is "hybrid" crime. The offense set forth in subsection (6) is a hybrid crime involving two principal components: It requires a primary act of theft by receiving and what might be characterized as the "fencing" element. People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982).

The "fencing" element of the offense connotes an ongoing course of conduct involving the knowing purchase or sale or other disposition of stolen goods for a profit, with the specific intent to deprive the lawful owner permanently of the use or benefit of such goods. People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982).

Legislative intent to broaden crime. Unlike its predecessor, § 18-4-401 (1), which required knowledge that the property was stolen, this section requires knowledge or belief that the property was stolen. The clear import of this change is that the general assembly intended to broaden the crime of theft by receiving to include the purchase of property, whether stolen or not, which the purchaser believes is stolen. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

Theft by receiving under this section includes property not actually stolen and the section is neither vague nor overbroad. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977); People v. Adler, 629 P.2d 569 (Colo. 1981).

Uncontroverted testimony of investigator in theft by receipt case that boxes depicted in photographs contained video cassette recorders, that the value of the recorders was $1200, and that the amount paid for the recorders was $300 provided sufficient evidence for jury finding regarding items in such boxes and the value of such items. People v. McCoy, 764 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1988).

For conviction under § 18-2-101 (1) or former subsection (1), it is irrelevant whether the goods are recovered stolen goods or have never been stolen. The intent and acts of the defendant, not the surrounding circumstances, are the crucial elements of the attempt offense. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

The portion of § 18-2-101(1) which provides that impossibility "is not a defense if the offense could have been committed had the attendant circumstances been as the actor believed them to be" in effect substitutes "believing" the goods to be stolen, the element of culpability required in attempted theft by receiving, for "knowing" the goods to be stolen, the element of culpability for a completed theft by receiving. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Section requires proof that accused knew or believed goods stolen. Theft by receiving says nothing as to who initially acquired the property, nor is there even a requirement of proof that the goods were ever actually stolen, but it does require proof that at the time the accused received, retained, loaned money on, or disposed of the goods, he knew or believed that they had been stolen, basic elements not required for a theft conviction. People v. Griffie, 44 Colo. App. 46, 610 P.2d 1079 (1980).

His state of mind inferred from conduct or circumstances. The defendant's state of mind as to whether the goods were stolen may be inferred from his conduct or from the circumstances of the case. People v. Tumbarello, 623 P.2d 46 (Colo. 1981).

There is no inconsistency between the element of belief that the goods are stolen and the element of intent to permanently deprive the lawful owner of the use or benefit of the thing of value. Although mistaken as to his identity, an accused can still intend to deprive the lawful owner, whoever he is, of his property. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

Mistaken belief of fact is not defense to theft by receiving. It is no defense to prosecution for theft by receiving under this section that the defendant mistakenly believed the goods were stolen. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

Although originally proposed, this section does not expressly establish mistaken belief of fact as a defense and such legislative intent cannot be inferred in this section. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

Under this section, appellee's mistaken belief that the pistol was stolen would not negate a necessary mental element of the charge; on the contrary, such belief is itself an element of theft by receiving. People v. Holloway, 193 Colo. 450, 568 P.2d 29 (1977).

A mistake of fact is not a defense to attempted theft by receiving. Darr v. People, 193 Colo. 445, 568 P.2d 32 (1977).

Subsection (6) is a greater offense and encompasses the lesser included offense set forth in subsection (4). People v. Tumbarello, 623 P.2d 46 (Colo. 1981).

"Victim" construed for purposes of restitution. Crime of theft by receiving includes the element of disposition of the stolen property. The transfer of stolen property to a bona fide purchaser necessarily victimizes the purchaser since his interests must yield to the title of the rightful owner. Therefore, the bona fide purchaser of stolen property was a victim for purposes of ordering restitution and the trial court properly included in the amount of restitution an amount to reimburse the purchaser, an antique dealer, for expenses for restoration of the property. People v. Schmidt, 700 P.2d 925 (Colo. App. 1985).

Evidence was insufficient to establish an inference of state of mind necessary to violate this statute where the evidence established that the defendant purchased partially dismantled car from person found stripping car in field and title was not immediately transferred. People v. Ayala, 770 P.2d 1265 (Colo. 1989).

Evidence sufficient to convict for theft by receiving. People v. Hepler, 665 P.2d 627 (Colo. App. 1982); People v. Albright, 722 P.2d 430 (Colo. App. 1986).

The court erred by instructing jury on class three felony theft by receiving when defendant was originally charged with a class four felony. Although evidence may have shown defendant committed class three felony theft by receiving, there was no authority to instruct jury on such charge since defendant was not charged with a class three felony. People v. Al-Yousif, 206 P.3d 824 (Colo. App. 2006).

Former version of this section applied to defendant's crime which was committed before July 1, 1985, applicability date of amended section that increased the value of items involved in a theft for the commission of a class 4 felony. People v. McCoy, 764 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1988).

Regardless of whether former or amended version of this section applied, special jury finding made it necessary to impose a sentence for a class 4 felony. Jury finding that items involved in crime were valued at $1200 meets requirement for a class 4 felony conviction under former and amended version of this section. People v. McCoy, 764 P.2d 1171 (Colo. 1988).

No private cause of action under this section. In re Duran, 483 F.3d 653 (10th Cir. 2007).

Applied in People v. Jamerson, 196 Colo. 63, 580 P.2d 805 (1978); People v. Jamerson, 198 Colo. 92, 596 P.2d 764 (1979); People v. Wolf, 635 P.2d 213 (Colo. 1981); People v. Bowen, 658 P.2d 269 (Colo. 1983).

18-4-411. Transactions for profit in stolen goods. If any person commits theft by receiving as defined in section 18-4-410 (1), when such offense involves two or more separate stolen things of value each of which is the property of a separate owner, such commission of theft by receiving constitutes prima facie evidence that the person is engaged in the business of buying, selling, or otherwise disposing of stolen goods for a profit.

Source: L. 77: Entire section added, p. 890, § 3, effective July 1. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 989, § 1, effective April 23. L. 87: Entire section amended, p. 669, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Purpose of section. The apparent purpose of this section is to assist the prosecution in proving the "fencing" element of § 18-4-410 (6).

People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982); People v. Salazar, 715 P.2d 1265 (Colo. App. 1985), cert. denied, 744 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1987).

Presumption of former section violative of due process. The value of a stolen article has no significant relationship to the business of buying, selling, or otherwise disposing of stolen goods for a profit, as merely proving the fact of value does not create a probability that one is engaged in such business. Thus, the criminal statutory presumption found in this section prior to the 1981 amendment did not satisfy due process standards. Brown v. District Court, 197 Colo. 219, 591 P.2d 99 (1979).

Instruction to jury correct. Where the evidence supported the inference that the defendant possessed three or more separate items belonging to separate owners, the trial court correctly instructed the jury in accordance with this section even though no single count of information charged possession of "three or more separate things of value". People v. Salazar, 715 P.2d 1265 (Colo. App. 1985), cert. denied, 744 P.2d 80 (Colo. 1987).

Applied in People v. Williams, 651 P.2d 899 (Colo. 1982).

18-4-411.5. Interagency task force on organized retail theft - legislative declaration - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2006: Entire section added, p. 1278, § 2, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (6) provided for the repeal of this section, effective February 1, 2007. (See L. 2006, p. 1278.)

18-4-412. Theft of medical records or medical information - penalty. (1) Any person who, without proper authorization, knowingly obtains a medical record or medical information with the intent to appropriate the medical record or medical information to his own use or to the use of another, who steals or discloses to an unauthorized person a medical record or medical information, or who, without authority, makes or causes to be made a copy of a medical record or medical information commits theft of a medical record or medical information.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Medical record" means the written or graphic documentation, sound recording, or computer record pertaining to medical, mental health, and health care services, including medical marijuana services, performed at the direction of a physician or other licensed health care provider on behalf of a patient by physicians, dentists, nurses, service providers, emergency medical service providers, mental health professionals, prehospital providers, or other health care personnel. "Medical record" includes such diagnostic documentation as X rays, electrocardiograms, electroencephalograms, and other test results. "Medical record" includes data entered into the prescription drug monitoring program under section 12-42.5-403, C.R.S.

(b) "Medical information" means any information contained in the medical record or any information pertaining to the medical, mental health, and health care services performed at the direction of a physician or other licensed health care provider which is protected by the physician-patient privilege established by section 13-90-107 (1) (d), C.R.S.

(c) "Proper authorization" means:

(I) A written authorization signed by the patient or his or her duly designated representative; or

(II) An appropriate order of court; or

(III) Authorized possession pursuant to law or regulation for claims processing, possession for medical audit or quality assurance purposes, possession by a consulting physician to the patient, or possession by hospital personnel for record-keeping and billing purposes; or

(IV) Authorized possession pursuant to section 18-3-415.5, 18-7-201.5, 18-7-205.5, 25-1-122, or 30-10-606 (6), C.R.S.; or

(V) Authorized possession by a law enforcement officer or agency, acting in official capacity and pursuant to an official investigation.

(d) "Copy" means any facsimile, replica, photograph, sound recording, magnetic or electronic recording, or other reproduction of a medical record and any note, drawing, or sketch made of or from a medical record.

(3) Theft of a medical record or medical information is a class 6 felony.

(4) The obtaining, accessing, use, or disclosure of relevant medical records or medical information pursuant to 18 U.S.C. sec. 922 (t) and sections 24-33.5-424, 13-5-142, and 13-9-123, C.R.S., by the Colorado bureau of investigation, the clerk of the court of any judicial district in the state, the clerk of the probate court of the city and county of Denver, or by any of their employees and accessing such records and information through the NICS system shall not constitute theft of a medical record or medical information under this section.

(5) This section shall not apply to covered entities, their business associates, or health oversight agencies as each is defined in the federal "Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996" as amended by the federal "Health Information Technology for Economic and Clinical Health Act" and the respective implementing regulations.

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 727, § 6, effective July 1. L. 89: (3) amended, p. 834, § 47, effective July 1. L. 99: (2)(c) amended, p. 1003, § 11, effective May 29. L. 2000: (4) added, p. 12, § 4, effective March 7; (2)(a) amended, p. 545, § 22, effective July 1. L. 2001: (2)(c)(IV) amended, p. 736, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4) amended, p. 756, § 3, effective January 1, 2003. L. 2003: (2)(c)(IV) amended, p. 1021, § 2, effective April 17; (5) added, p. 1785, § 20, effective July 1. L. 2007: (2)(a) and (2)(b) amended, p. 1689, § 9, effective July 1. L. 2010: (2)(c)(V) added and (5) amended, (SB 10-167), ch. 296, p. 1399, §§ 15, 16, effective May 26. L. 2011: (2)(a) amended, (SB 11-192), ch. 230, p. 987, § 12, effective July 1; (2)(a) amended, (HB 11-1043), ch. 266, p. 1214, § 27, effective July 1. L. 2012: (2)(a) amended, (HB 12-1059), ch. 271, p. 1436, § 15, effective July 1; (2)(a) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1619, § 44, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Amendments to subsection (2)(a) by House Bill 11-1043 and Senate Bill 11-192 were harmonized. Amendments to subsection (2)(a) by House Bill 12-1059 and House Bill 12-1311 were harmonized.

(2) Section 26 of chapter 271, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (2)(a) applies to acts committed on or after July 1, 2012.

Cross references: (1) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2000 act enacting subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 5, Session Laws of Colorado 2000. For the legislative declaration in the 2010 act adding subsection (2)(c)(V) and amending subsection (5), see section 1 of chapter 296, Session Laws of Colorado 2010.

(2) For the "Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996", see Pub.L. 104-191, codified at 42 U.S.C. sec. 201 et seq.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "The Authorization to Release Medical Information Form: Its Genesis and Usage", see 11 Colo. Law. 1179 (1982). For article, "The Legal Risks of AIDS: Moving Beyond Discrimination", see 18 Colo. Law. 606 (1989).

Employment-required drug tests and physical ability tests do not fall under the definition of either medical record or medical information as defined in subsection (2), thus, the defense failed to establish a prima facie case of theft of the defendant's medical records. People v. Palomo, 31 P.3d 879 (Colo. 2001).

18-4-413. Mandatory sentencing for repeated felony theft from a store - store defined. (1) For purposes of this section and section 18-4-414, "store" means any establishment primarily engaged in the sale of goods at retail.

(2) Any person convicted of felony theft, which felony theft was from a store, who within the immediately preceding four years was twice convicted of felony theft, which felony theft was each time from a store, shall be sentenced to at least the minimum term provided for such offense. A person convicted under this section shall not be eligible for probation or suspension of sentence.

(3) The mandatory sentencing requirements specified in subsection (2) of this section shall not apply when the person is being sentenced pursuant to section 18-4-401 (4).

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 668, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 1427, § 8, effective April 29.

18-4-414. Evidence of value. (1) For purposes of this part 4, when theft occurs from a store, evidence of the retail value of the thing involved shall be prima facie evidence of the value of the thing involved. Evidence offered to prove retail value may include, but shall not be limited to, affixed labels and tags, signs, shelf tags, and notices.

(2) For the purposes of this part 4, in all cases where theft occurs, evidence of the value of the thing involved may be established through the sale price of other similar property and may include, but shall not be limited to, testimony regarding affixed labels and tags, signs, shelf tags, and notices tending to indicate the price of the thing involved. Hearsay evidence shall not be excluded in determining the value of the thing involved.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 668, § 1, effective July 1. L. 88: Entire section amended, p. 713, § 20, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Section does not violate the defendant's sixth amendment constitutional right to confront his accuser. People v. Schmidt, 928 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1996).

By enacting this section, the general assembly has determined that a price tag affixed to an item for sale ordinarily is sufficiently trustworthy so as to speak for itself regarding that item's value and that the utility of confrontation is very remote. The statute allows an accused to rebut the presumption of value by calling a store manager or another witness to establish a value other than that specified on the price tag. People v. Schmidt, 928 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1996).

Kelley blue book may be admitted as proof of value under this section without the need for expert testimony to substantiate the blue book's valuation. The blue book indicates the sale price of other similar property, and thus the officer's valuation based thereon was not subject to exclusion as hearsay, even if such an objection had been raised. People v. Thornton, 251 P.3d 1147 (Colo. App. 2010).

Statute creates a specific hearsay exception. People v. Schmidt, 928 P.2d 805 (Colo. App. 1996).

Applied in People v. Pearman, 209 P.3d 1144 (Colo. App. 2008).

18-4-415. Use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property. Pursuant to section 13-25-130, C.R.S., photographs, video tapes, or films of property over which a person is alleged to have exerted unauthorized control or otherwise to have obtained unlawfully are competent evidence if the photographs, video tapes, or films are admissible into evidence under the rules of law governing the admissibility of photographs, video tapes, or films into evidence.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 577, § 3, effective July 1.

Cross references: For similar provisions concerning the use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property with respect to the crimes of robbery and trespass, tampering, and criminal mischief, see §§ 18-4-305 and 18-4-514.

18-4-416. Theft by resale of a lift ticket or coupon. Any unauthorized person who, with the intent to profit therefrom, resells or offers to resell any ticket, pass, badge, pin, coupon, or other device which then entitles the bearer to the use, benefit, or enjoyment of any skiing service or skiing facility commits a class 2 petty offense. The penalty of a violation of this section shall be a fine in an amount not to exceed three hundred dollars. Under no circumstances shall a person being charged with this class 2 petty offense be arrested by any peace officer, and a summons to the appropriate court of jurisdiction shall be issued to the accused person.

Source: L. 90: Entire section added, p. 986, § 10, effective April 24.

18-4-417. Unlawful acts - theft detection devices. (1) (a) It is unlawful for any person to knowingly manufacture, distribute, or sell a theft detection shielding device or a theft detection deactivating device with the knowledge that some person intends to use the device in the commission of an offense involving theft.

(b) It is unlawful for any person to possess a theft detection shielding device or a theft detection deactivating device with the intent to use the device possessed, or with the knowledge that some person intends to use the device possessed, in the commission of an offense involving theft.

(c) It is unlawful for any person to knowingly deactivate or remove a theft detection device or any component thereof in any store or mercantile establishment without authorization prior to purchase.

(2) As used in this section:

(a) "Theft detection deactivating device" means any tool, instrument, mechanism, or other article adapted, designed, engineered, used, or operated to inactivate, incapacitate, or remove a theft detection device without authorization. "Theft detection deactivating device" includes, but is not limited to, jumper wires, wire cutters, and electronic article surveillance removal devices.

(b) "Theft detection device" means an electronic or magnetic mechanism, machine, apparatus, tag, or article designed and operated for the purpose of detecting the unauthorized removal of merchandise from a store or mercantile establishment.

(c) "Theft detection shielding device" means any tool, instrument, mechanism, or article adapted, designed, engineered, used, or operated to avoid detection by a theft detection device during the commission of an offense involving theft. "Theft detection shielding device" includes, but is not limited to, foil-lined or otherwise modified clothing, bags, purses, or containers capable of and for the sole purpose of avoiding detection devices.

(3) Any person who violates any of the provisions of subsection (1) of this section commits a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 512, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2012: (2)(a) and (2)(c) amended, (HB 12-1304), ch. 237, p. 1050, § 3, effective May 29.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration in the 2012 act amending subsections (2)(a) and (2)(c), see section 1 of chapter 237, Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

18-4-418. Fuel piracy. (1) A person commits fuel piracy when such person knowingly leaves the premises of an establishment that offers fuel for sale after dispensing fuel and knowingly fails to pay for such fuel.

(2) Fuel piracy is:

(a) A class 3 misdemeanor if the value of such fuel is less than one hundred dollars;

(b) A class 2 misdemeanor if the value of such fuel is one hundred dollars or more but less than five hundred dollars.

(3) In addition to any other penalty authorized by law, after a defendant has been convicted of or has entered a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to fuel piracy, the mandatory minimum fine shall be two hundred fifty dollars.

Source: L. 2002: Entire section added, p. 1131, § 1, effective July 1.

18-4-419. Newspaper theft. (1) A person commits the offense of newspaper theft when that person obtains or exerts unauthorized control over more than five copies of an edition of a newspaper from a newspaper distribution container owned or leased by the newspaper publisher with the intent to prevent other individuals from reading that edition of the newspaper. Control is unauthorized if there is a notice on the newspaper or on the newspaper distribution container that possession of more than five copies with intent to prevent other individuals from reading that edition of the newspaper is illegal.

(2) Newspaper theft is a misdemeanor and shall be punished by a fine of:

(a) Up to one thousand dollars if the number of newspapers involved was one hundred or fewer or the number of newspapers involved was not determined;

(b) Up to two thousand five hundred dollars if the number of newspapers involved was more than one hundred and fewer than five hundred;

(c) Up to five thousand dollars if the number of newspapers involved was five hundred or more.

(3) As used in this section:

(a) "Edition of a newspaper" means a single press run of a newspaper.

(b) "Newspaper" means a periodical that includes news, editorials, opinion, features, or other matters of public interest that is distributed on a complimentary basis. Newspaper includes any student periodical distributed at any institution of higher education.

(c) "Periodical" means a publication produced on a regular interval.

(4) Notwithstanding any other remedies provided under this section, a newspaper publisher who is the victim of newspaper theft, an advertiser who placed an advertisement in a newspaper that was subject to newspaper theft, or a newspaper reader who regularly reads the newspaper subject to newspaper theft shall have a private civil right of action as provided in section 13-21-123, C.R.S., against the person or persons who acted in violation of subsection (1) of this section.

(5) This section shall not apply to a person who, with the authority or permission of the person who possesses real or personal property, removes or disposes of newspapers that have been deposited in or left on that property without the authority or permission of the person who possesses the real or personal property.

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 445, § 2, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative intent contained in the 2004 act enacting this section, see section 1 of chapter 147, Session Laws of Colorado 2004.

PART 5

TRESPASS, TAMPERING, AND CRIMINAL MISCHIEF

18-4-501. Criminal mischief. (1) A person who knowingly damages the real or personal property of one or more other persons, including property owned by the person jointly with another person or property owned by the person in which another person has a possessory or proprietary interest, in the course of a single criminal episode commits a class 2 misdemeanor where the aggregate damage to the real or personal property is less than five hundred dollars. Where the aggregate damage to the real or personal property is five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars, the person commits a class 1 misdemeanor. Where the aggregate damage to the real or personal property is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, the person commits a class 4 felony. Where the aggregate damage to the real or personal property is twenty thousand dollars or more, the person commits a class 3 felony.

(2) and (3) Repealed.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-501. L. 77: entire section amended, p. 963, § 25, effective July 1. L. 81: entire section amended, p. 975, § 12, effective July 1. L. 84: entire section amended, p. 537, § 9, effective July 1, 1985. L. 92: entire section amended, p. 435, § 5, effective April 10. L. 98: entire section amended, p. 1438, § 14, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 795, § 5, effective July 1. L. 99: entire section amended, p. 391, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1581, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 1904, § 3, effective July 1; (3) added, p. 1845, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1) amended, p. 1693, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2009: (2) and (3) repealed, (HB 09-1266), ch. 347, p. 1814, § 1, effective August 5.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsection (1), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Highlights of the 1955 Legislative Session — Criminal Law and Procedure", see 28 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 69 (1955). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-501 is similar to former §§ 49-18-1 and 40-18-5, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section is criminal, and it is not its province to make simply the intentional doing of an unlawful act, which injures another's property, a crime, independent of any evil purpose or intention. Mayn v. People, 56 Colo. 170, 136 P. 1016 (1913); Koch v. People, 71 Colo. 119, 204 P. 332 (1922); Schtul v. People, 96 Colo. 217, 40 P.2d 970 (1935).

Civil prosecution for same acts prohibited by this section has no part in a prosecution under this section. Mayn v. People, 56 Colo. 170, 136 P. 1016 (1913).

There must exist criminal intention. In a prosecution under this section for injury occasioned to a bridge, there can be no conviction, unless a criminal intention on the part of the accused appears. Mayn v. People, 56 Colo. 170, 136 P. 1016 (1913); Schtul v. People, 96 Colo. 217, 40 P.2d 970 (1935).

Criminal intent need not be expressly proved in criminal mischief cases, but may be implied or inferred from the surrounding facts and circumstances or from the relation existing between the defendant and the owner of the property injured or destroyed. Schtul v. People, 96 Colo. 217, 40 P.2d 970 (1935).

It must be the direct and not incidental object of an act. Neither the mere concealment of the crime, the omitting of the performance of a statutory duty, nor the mere intentional doing of an act prohibited by statute, constitutes criminal mischief, although it may damage the property of another. A conspiracy with a fraudulent or malicious intent wrongfully to injure the property of another is punishable. The mischief must be the direct object of the act, and not incidental to some other lawful or unlawful act, or must be the natural consequence of the act. Schtul v. People, 96 Colo. 217, 40 P.2d 970 (1935).

Abandonment is no defense to completed crime of criminal mischief. People v. Johnson, 41 Colo. App. 220, 585 P.2d 306 (1978).

The damage element in criminal mischief relates to economic loss caused by the knowing infliction of damage to the real or personal property of another. People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983).

Value is an essential element of felony criminal mischief. People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 380, 566 P.2d 703 (1977).

Theft distinguished. The gravamen of criminal mischief is the knowing causation of damage to another's property with resulting economic loss to the owner or possessor of the property. The crime of theft, in contrast, is a crime of misappropriation or wrongful taking with no added element of damage or destruction to the property taken. People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983).

Value is relevant to the damage element because an offender cannot cause an economic loss that surpasses the actual value of the property damaged. People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983).

Actual value will generally be determined by market value, that is, the price a willing buyer would pay for the object in the open market. People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983); People v. Dobson, 847 P.2d 176 (Colo. App. 1992).

Unless there is no market for the item. Where, however, there is no market for the particular item, then such factors as the original purchase price, replacement cost, the general use and purpose of the article, and salvage value may be considered as some evidence of actual value. People v. Dunoyair, 660 P.2d 890 (Colo. 1983); People v. Dobson, 847 P.2d 176 (Colo. App. 1992).

The crime of criminal mischief is not a lesser included burglary offense because the elements are far different. While criminal mischief requires damage to property, burglary does not. People v. Cisneros, 193 Colo. 380, 566 P.2d 703 (1977).

The pulling up of one or more posts of a fence in process of erection warrants a conviction under this section. Olson v. People, 56 Colo. 199, 138 P. 21 (1914).

This section does not apply to the pulling down of a fence by defendant, erected across land claimed by him and in his possession without his consent. Koch v. People, 71 Colo. 119, 204 P. 332 (1922).

Police officer's undisputed testimony of estimated damage is admissible at a preliminary hearing. People ex rel. Russel v. Hall, 620 P.2d 34 (Colo. 1980).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain a conviction. People v. O'Donnell, 184 Colo. 434, 521 P.2d 771 (1974).

Evidence held insufficient to sustain a conviction. Schtul v. People, 96 Colo. 217, 40 P.2d 970 (1935).

For instructions on previously required element of malice, see People v. Woods, 179 Colo. 441, 501 P.2d 117 (1972).

Instruction on intentional conduct not plain error. An instruction that the culpable mental state for criminal mischief is intentional conduct does not constitute plain error as intentional conduct is a higher degree of culpability than the knowing conduct required by this section, and, therefore, the erroneous instruction actually benefits the defendant. People v. Founds, 631 P.2d 1166 (Colo. App. 1981).

Self-defense instruction inappropriate for charge of criminal mischief where case involved unreasonable or excessive force by police during an arrest. Although self-defense instruction is required when evidence has been presented that officers displayed weapons and were commanded to discharge them in course of effecting arrest and that their conduct was unreasonable or excessive under the circumstances, such instruction was not appropriate as to charge of criminal mischief arising from events after defendant was taken into custody. People v. Fuller, 781 P.2d 647 (Colo. 1989).

Applied in Corder v. People ex rel. Smiley, 87 Colo. 251, 287 P. 85 (1930); Schindelar v. Michaud, 411 F.2d 80 (10th Cir.), cert. denied, 396 U.S. 956, 90 S. Ct. 426, 24 L. Ed.2d 420 (1969); People v. Griffith, 197 Colo. 544, 595 P.2d 231 (1979); People v. Trujillo, 631 P.2d 146 (Colo. 1981); People ex rel. Hunter v. District Court, 634 P.2d 44 (Colo. 1981); People v. Stoppel, 637 P.2d 384 (Colo. 1981); People v. Holloway, 649 P.2d 318 (Colo. 1982); People v. Thompson, 655 P.2d 416 (Colo. 1982).

18-4-502. First degree criminal trespass. A person commits the crime of first degree criminal trespass if such person knowingly and unlawfully enters or remains in a dwelling of another or if such person enters any motor vehicle with intent to commit a crime therein. First degree criminal trespass is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-502. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 963, § 26, effective July 1. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 404, § 16, effective June 3. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1732, § 17, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 1443, § 31, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-502 is similar to former § 40-3-8 C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

For the treatment of breaking and entering under previous statute, see Howard v. People, 173 Colo. 209, 477 P.2d 378 (1970); Garcia v. People, 174 Colo. 372, 483 P.2d 1347 (1971); People v. Major, 179 Colo. 204, 499 P.2d 1200 (1972).

Under previous statute, entering motor vehicle included box part of pickup. People v. Romero, 179 Colo. 159, 499 P.2d 604 (1972).

Proof of dwelling crucial for first degree trespass. The crucial distinction between first degree criminal trespass and second and third degree is that the prosecution must prove the additional element that the property which was unlawfully entered is a dwelling for first degree trespass. People v. Marshall, 196 Colo. 381, 586 P.2d 41 (1978).

"Dwelling" encompasses the entire residential structure, including an attached garage. People v. Hanna, 981 P.2d 627 (Colo. App. 1998).

That the dwelling is "of another" is an essential element of first degree criminal trespass. Pattern jury instruction was incorrect because it omitted that element. People v. Peoples, 8 P.3d 577 (Colo. App. 2000).

"With intent to commit a crime therein" is only an element to first degree criminal trespass of a motor vehicle. It does not apply to first degree criminal trespass of a dwelling. People v. Rodriguez, 43 P.3d 641 (Colo. App. 2001).

Criminal trespass charge is defective if the count failed to identify an ulterior crime. People v. Williams, 961 P.2d 533 (Colo. App. 1997), aff'd, 984 P.2d 56 (Colo. 1999).

Criminal trespass charge is defective in form but not in substance if the count fails to identify an ulterior crime. People v. Williams, 984 P.2d 56 (Colo. 1999).

Even the absence of a restraining order, an estranged spouse is not privileged or licensed to enter the separate residence of the other spouse so as to create a defense to a charge of first degree criminal trespass. People v. Johnson, 906 P.2d 122 (Colo. 1995).

First degree trespass of motor vehicle. First degree criminal trespass embraces situations where a person knowingly and unlawfully enters a motor vehicle with the intent to steal something of value. Barreras v. People, 636 P.2d 686 (Colo. 1981).

Unlawful entry into semitrailer included in offense. The general assembly intended to make the crime of first degree criminal trespass encompass unlawful entry into a semitrailer for the purpose of theft. People v. Walters, 39 Colo. App. 119, 568 P.2d 61 (1977).

The general assembly intended to include tractor-trailer units as "motor vehicles" for the purpose of criminal trespass. People v. Walters, 39 Colo. App. 119, 568 P.2d 61 (1977).

By entering the open portion of a pickup truck, one "enters [a] motor vehicle" as that phrase is used in this section. People v. Banuelos, 40 Colo. App. 267, 577 P.2d 305 (1977).

It was reversible error for the prosecution to tell the jury that in order to be guilty of first degree criminal trespass of a motor vehicle, the defendant could form unlawful intent at any time, because the prosecutor's argument improperly permitted the jury to adopt a version of the law pursuant to which it could find defendant guilty, regardless of when he formed the intent to steal property from the van. People v. Anderson, 991 P.2d 319 (Colo. App. 1999).

Entry into motor vehicle not required to be "knowing and unlawful", so no error in trial court's refusal to instruct the jury that defendant's entry into a van must have been "unlawful". People v. Anderson, 991 P.2d 319 (Colo. App. 1999).

Conviction of being accessory to first degree criminal trespass requires a showing that the accused knew that the principal had committed an unlawful trespass in acquiring the stolen property. Barreras v. People, 636 P.2d 686 (Colo. 1981).

First degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of second degree burglary. People v. Garcia, 920 P.2d 878 (Colo. App. 1996), rev'd on other grounds, 940 P.2d 357 (Colo. 1997).

First degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of first degree burglary.

However, it is a lesser non-included offense, and the trial court may instruct a jury on such offense over the objection of the defendant if the charging document provides notice that defendant might have to defend against that charge. People v. Satre, 950 P.2d 667 (Colo. App. 1997).

Attempted first degree criminal trespass may be a lesser included offense to attempted second degree burglary. People v. Austin, 799 P.2d 408 (Colo. App. 1990).

Third degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree criminal trespass. While unlawful entry upon the premises is a necessary element of the completed offense of third degree criminal trespass, it is not a necessary element of attempted first degree criminal trespass. People v. Griffith, 58 P.3d 1111 (Colo. App. 2002).

First degree criminal trespass is distinct from misdemeanor theft. People v. Martinez, 640 P.2d 255 (Colo. App. 1981).

Evidence sufficient for a finding of intent under this section. People v. Sorber, 179 Colo. 434, 501 P.2d 121 (1972).

Conviction for residential criminal trespass is a crime of violence and thus an aggravated felony qualifying defendant for an increased sentence under the United States sentencing guidelines. United States v. Venegas-Ornelas, 348 F.3d 1273 (10th Cir. 2003).

Applied in People in Interest of D.G.P., 194 Colo. 238, 570 P.2d 1293 (1977); People v. Newman, 195 Colo. 367, 578 P.2d 1051 (1978); People v. Huston, 197 Colo. 125, 589 P.2d 1367 (1979); People v. Ortega, 198 Colo. 179, 597 P.2d 1034 (1979); People v. Horne, 619 P.2d 53 (Colo. 1980); Bollier v. People, 635 P.2d 543 (Colo. 1981); People v. Schreyer, 640 P.2d 1147 (Colo. 1982); People v. Norman, 703 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1985).

18-4-503. Second degree criminal trespass. (1) A person commits the crime of second degree criminal trespass if such person:

(a) Unlawfully enters or remains in or upon the premises of another which are enclosed in a manner designed to exclude intruders or are fenced; or

(b) Knowingly and unlawfully enters or remains in or upon the common areas of a hotel, motel, condominium, or apartment building; or

(c) Knowingly and unlawfully enters or remains in a motor vehicle of another.

(2) Second degree criminal trespass is a class 3 misdemeanor, but:

(a) It is a class 2 misdemeanor if the premises have been classified by the county assessor for the county in which the land is situated as agricultural land pursuant to section 39-1-102 (1.6), C.R.S.; and

(b) It is a class 4 felony if the person trespasses on premises so classified as agricultural land with the intent to commit a felony thereon.

(3) Whenever a person is convicted of, pleads guilty or nolo contendere to, receives a deferred judgment or sentence for, or is adjudicated a juvenile delinquent for, a violation of paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of this section, the offender's driver's license shall be revoked as provided in section 42-2-125, C.R.S.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-503. L. 81: Entire section amended, p. 990, § 1, effective June 4. L. 83: Entire section amended, p. 666, § 8, effective July 1. L. 84: (2)(a) amended, p. 1119, § 14, effective June 7. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1732, § 18, effective July 1. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 1718, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2002: (1) amended, p. 1582, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2003: (3) added, p. 1846, § 4, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Proof of dwelling crucial for first degree trespass. The crucial distinction between first degree criminal trespass and second and third degree is that the prosecution must prove the additional element that the property which was unlawfully entered is a dwelling for first degree trespass. People v. Marshall, 196 Colo. 381, 586 P.2d 41 (1978).

Second degree criminal trespass is a lesser included offense of second degree burglary (§18-4-203). Second degree criminal trespass requires the defendant to unlawfully enter or remain on the premises of another that are enclosed in a manner designed to exclude intruders. By definition, if a building or structure exists, entry of which is required for second degree burglary, the building or structure is designed to exclude intruders. Thus, all of the elements of second degree criminal trespass are included in the offense of second degree burglary. People v. MacBlane, 952 P.2d 824 (Colo. App. 1997).

Applied in People in Interest of D.G.P., 194 Colo. 238, 570 P.2d 1293 (1977); People v. Smith, 638 P.2d 1 (Colo. 1981).

18-4-504. Third degree criminal trespass. (1) A person commits the crime of third degree criminal trespass if such person unlawfully enters or remains in or upon premises of another.

(2) Third degree criminal trespass is a class 1 petty offense, but:

(a) It is a class 3 misdemeanor if the premises have been classified by the county assessor for the county in which the land is situated as agricultural land pursuant to section 39-1-102 (1.6), C.R.S.; and

(b) It is a class 5 felony if the person trespasses on premises so classified as agricultural land with the intent to commit a felony thereon.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-504. L. 83: Entire section amended, p. 666, § 9, effective July 1. L. 84: (2)(a) amended, p. 1119, § 15, effective June 7. L. 89: (2)(b) amended, p. 834, § 48, effective July 1. L. 93: (1) amended, p. 1732, § 19, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment, "People v. Emmert: A Step Backward for Recreational Water Use in Colorado", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 247 (1981).

Public has no right to use of water overlying private lands for recreational purposes without the consent of the owner. People v. Emmert, 198 Colo. 137, 597 P.2d 1025 (1979).

"Breaking the close" is trespass. Whoever "breaks the close" — intrudes upon the space above the surface of the land — without the permission of the owner, whether it be for fishing or for other recreational purposes, such as floating, commits a trespass. People v. Emmert, 198 Colo. 137, 597 P.2d 1025 (1979).

Proof of dwelling crucial for first degree trespass. The crucial distinction between first degree criminal trespass and second and third degree is that the prosecution must prove the additional element that the property which was unlawfully entered is a dwelling for first degree trespass. People v. Marshall, 196 Colo. 381, 586 P.2d 41 (1978).

But third degree criminal trespass is not a lesser included offense of attempted first degree criminal trespass. People v. Griffith, 58 P.3d 1111 (Colo. App. 2002).

Officers who enter under a warrant and rightfully seize certain property but wrongfully seize other property are liable as trespassers ab initio as to the property wrongfully seized. Walker v. City of Denver, 720 P.2d 619 (Colo. App. 1986).

Applied in People v. Huston, 197 Colo. 125, 589 P.2d 1367 (1979); People v. Hight, 198 Colo. 299, 599 P.2d 885 (1979).

18-4-504.5. Definition of premises. As used in sections 18-4-503 and 18-4-504, "premises" means real property, buildings, and other improvements thereon, and the stream banks and beds of any nonnavigable fresh water streams flowing through such real property.

Source: L. 77: Entire section added, p. 977, § 1, effective June 10.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment, "People v. Emmert: A Step Backward for Recreational Water Use in Colorado", see 52 U. Colo. L. Rev. 247 (1981).

Applied in People v. Emmert, 198 Colo. 137, 597 P.2d 1025 (1979); Bollier v. People, 635 P.2d 543 (Colo. 1981).

18-4-505. First degree criminal tampering. Except as provided in sections 18-4-506.3 and 18-4-506.5, a person commits the crime of first degree criminal tampering if, with intent to cause interruption or impairment of a service rendered to the public by a utility or by an institution providing health or safety protection, he tampers with property of a utility or institution. First degree criminal tampering is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-505. L. 80: Entire section amended, p. 534, § 2, effective July 1. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 905, § 2, effective July 1.

18-4-506. Second degree criminal tampering. Except as provided in sections 18-4-506.3 and 18-4-506.5, a person commits the crime of second degree criminal tampering if he tampers with property of another with intent to cause injury, inconvenience, or annoyance to that person or to another or if he knowingly makes an unauthorized connection with property of a utility. Second degree criminal tampering is a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-506. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 963, § 27, effective July 1. L. 80: Entire section amended, p. 533, § 1, effective January 29; entire section amended, p. 535, § 3, effective July 1. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 905, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

This section fairly describes prohibited conduct in terms sufficiently understandable so that persons who wish to comply with it may do so; therefore, it is not constitutionally void for vagueness. People v. Edmonds, 195 Colo. 358, 578 P.2d 655 (1978).

Words "unauthorized connections" are intended to reach the situation in which a person connects to the property of a utility an apparatus which procures the services of the utility without cost. People v. Edmonds, 195 Colo. 358, 578 P.2d 655 (1978).

Applied in People v. Shearer, 650 P.2d 1293 (Colo. App. 1982); Nowakowski v. District Court, 664 P.2d 709 (Colo. 1983).

18-4-506.3. Tampering with equipment associated with oil or gas gathering operations - penalty. (1) Any person who in any manner knowingly destroys, breaks, removes, or otherwise tampers with or attempts to destroy, break, remove, or otherwise tamper with any equipment associated with oil or gas gathering operations commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

(2) Any person who in any manner, without the consent of the owner or operator, knowingly alters, obstructs, interrupts, or interferes with or attempts to alter, obstruct, interrupt, or interfere with the action of any equipment used or associated with oil or gas gathering operations commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 905, § 1, effective July 1.

18-4-506.5. Tampering with a utility meter - penalty. (1) Any person who connects any pipe, tube, stopcock, wire, cord, socket, motor, or other instrument or contrivance with any main, service pipe, or other medium conducting or supplying gas, water, or electricity to any building without the knowledge and consent of the person supplying such gas, water, or electricity commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

(2) Any person who in any manner alters, obstructs, or interferes with the action of any meter provided for measuring or registering the quantity of gas, water, or electricity passing through said meter without the knowledge and consent of the person owning said meter commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to any licensed electrical or plumbing contractor while performing usual and ordinary services in accordance with recognized customs and standards.

Source: L. 80: Entire section added, p. 534, § 1, effective July 1.

18-4-507. Defacing or destruction of written instruments. Every person who defaces or destroys any written instrument evidencing a property right, whether vested or contingent, with the intent to defraud commits a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-507.

18-4-508. Defacing, destroying, or removing landmarks, monuments, or accessories. (1) Any person who knowingly cuts, fells, alters, or removes any certain boundary tree knowing such is a boundary tree, monument, or other allowed landmark, to the damage of any person, or any person who intentionally defaces, removes, pulls down, injures, or destroys any location stake, side post, corner post, landmark, or monument, or any other legal land boundary monument in this state, designating or intending to designate the location, boundary, or name of any mining claim, lode, or vein of mineral, or the name of the discoverer or date of discovery thereof, commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

(2) Any person who knowingly removes or knowingly causes to be removed any public land survey monument, as defined by section 38-53-103 (18), C.R.S., or control corner, as defined in section 38-53-103 (6), C.R.S., or a restoration of any such monument or who knowingly removes or knowingly causes to be removed any bearing tree knowing such is a bearing tree or other accessory, as defined by section 38-53-103 (1), C.R.S., even if said person has title to the land on which said monument or accessory is located, commits a class 2 misdemeanor unless, prior to such removal, said person has caused a Colorado professional land surveyor to establish at least two witness corners or reference marks for each such monument or accessory removed and has filed or caused to be filed a monument record pursuant to article 53 of title 38, C.R.S.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-508. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 963, § 28, effective July 1. L. 79: Entire section amended, p. 478, § 4, effective July 1. L. 84: (2) amended, p. 1119, § 16, effective June 7. L. 94: (2) amended, p. 1507, § 37, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the definition of professional land surveyor, see § 12-25-202 (7).

18-4-509. Defacing property - definitions. (1) (a) Any person who destroys, defaces, removes, or damages any historical monument commits the crime of defacing property.

(b) Any person who defaces or causes, aids in, or permits the defacing of public or private property without the consent of the owner by any method of defacement, including but not limited to painting, drawing, writing, or otherwise marring the surface of the property by use of paint, spray paint, ink, or any other substance or object, commits the crime of defacing property.

(c) (I) Any person who, with regard to a cave that is public property or the property of another, knowingly performs any of the following acts without the consent of the owner commits the crime of defacing property:

(A) Breaking or damaging any lock, fastening, door, or structure designed to enclose or protect any such cave;

(B) Defacing, damaging, or breaking from any part of such cave any cave resource; or

(C) Removing from such cave any cave resource.

(II) For purposes of this section:

(A) "Cave" means any naturally occurring void, cavity, recess, lava tube, or system of interconnected passages that occurs beneath the surface of the earth or within a cliff or ledge, including any cave resource therein, but not including any mine, tunnel, aqueduct, or other artificial excavation, and that is large enough to permit an individual to enter, regardless of whether the entrance is naturally formed or has been artificially created or enlarged. "Cave" includes any natural pit, sinkhole, or other feature that is an extension of the entrance.

(B) "Cave resource" includes any material or substance occurring naturally in caves, such as animal life, plant life, paleontological deposits, sediments, minerals, speleogens, and speleothems.

(B.5) "Juvenile" shall have the same meaning as set forth in section 19-1-103 (68), C.R.S.

(C) "Speleogen" means relief features on the walls, ceiling, or floor of any cave that are part of the surrounding rock, including, but not limited to, anastomoses, scallops, meander niches, petromorphs, and rock pendants in solution caves and similar features unique to volcanic caves.

(D) "Speleothem" means any natural mineral formation or deposit occurring in a cave, including, but not limited to, any stalactite, stalagmite, helictite, cave flower, flowstone, concretion, drapery, rimstone, or formation of clay or mud.

(2) (a) (I) Defacing property is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that:

(A) A second or subsequent conviction for the offense of defacing property is a class 1 misdemeanor and the court shall impose a mandatory minimum fine of seven hundred fifty dollars upon conviction; and

(B) If a person violates paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section twice or more within a period of six months, the damages caused by two or more of the violations may be aggregated and charged in a single count, in which event the violations so aggregated and charged shall constitute a single offense, and, if the aggregate damages are five hundred dollars or more, it is a class 1 misdemeanor and the court shall impose a mandatory minimum fine of seven hundred fifty dollars upon conviction.

(II) In sentencing a person who violates this section, the court has discretion to impose alternatives in sentencing as described in part 1 of article 1.3 of this title, including but not limited to restorative justice practices, as defined in section 18-1-901 (3) (o.5), or in the case of a juvenile offender, to impose restorative justice, as defined in section 19-1-103 (94.1), C.R.S.

(III) The court may suspend all or part of the mandatory minimum fine associated with a conviction under this section upon the offender's successful completion of any sentence alternative imposed by the court pursuant to subparagraph (II) of this paragraph (a).

(IV) Fifty percent of the fines collected pursuant to this paragraph (a) shall be credited to the highway users tax fund, created in section 43-4-201, C.R.S., and allocated and expended as specified in section 43-4-205 (5.5) (a), C.R.S., and fifty percent of the fines collected pursuant to this paragraph (a) shall be credited to the juvenile diversion cash fund created in section 19-2-303.5, C.R.S.; except that the fines collected pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of this section shall be credited to the Colorado travel and tourism promotion fund created in section 24-49.7-106, C.R.S.

(b) Any person convicted of defacing property pursuant to paragraph (b) or (c) of subsection (1) of this section shall be ordered by the court to personally make repairs to any property damaged, or properties similarly damaged, if possible. If the property cannot be repaired, the court shall order a person convicted of defacing property to replace or compensate the owner for the damaged property but may, in the case of a violation of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section, limit such compensation to two thousand five hundred dollars.

(c) Repealed.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 431, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-509. L. 89: (2) R&RE, p. 875, § 10, effective June 5. L. 93: (2) amended, p. 1732, § 20, effective July 1. L. 94: (2) amended, p. 1463, § 2, effective July 1. L. 97: (2) amended, p. 1536, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1903, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1)(c) added and (2) amended, pp. 69, 70, §§ 1, 2, effective August 4. L. 2005: (2)(a) amended, p. 140, § 3, effective April 5. L. 2009: (2)(c) repealed, (HB 09-1266), ch. 347, p. 1814, § 2, effective August 5. L. 2011: (1)(c)(II)(B.5) added and (2)(a) amended, (SB 11-256), ch. 254, pp. 1101, 1099, §§ 3, 1, effective August 10.

ANNOTATION

Evidence held insufficient for conspiracy to destroy property. Bates v. People, 179 Colo. 81, 498 P.2d 1136 (1972) (decided under former § 40-18-1, C.R.S. 1963).

Applied in People v. Shearer, 650 P.2d 1293 (Colo. App. 1982).

18-4-510. Defacing posted notice. Any person who knowingly mars, destroys, or removes any posted notice authorized by law commits a class 1 petty offense.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 432, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-510. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 964, § 29, effective July 1.

Cross references: For penalty for willfully defacing or destroying notices, see § 30-15-202.

18-4-511. Littering of public or private property. (1) Any person who deposits, throws, or leaves any litter on any public or private property or in any waters commits littering.

(2) It shall be an affirmative defense that:

(a) Such property is an area designated by law for the disposal of such material and the person is authorized by the proper public authority to so use the property; or

(b) The litter is placed in a receptacle or container installed on such property for that purpose; or

(c) Such person is the owner or tenant in lawful possession of such property, or he has first obtained written consent of the owner or tenant in lawful possession, or the act is done under the personal direction of said owner or tenant.

(3) (a) The term "litter" as used in this section means all rubbish, waste material, refuse, garbage, trash, debris, or other foreign substances, solid or liquid, of every form, size, kind, and description.

(b) The phrase "public or private property" as used in this section includes, but is not limited to, the right-of-way of any road or highway, any body of water or watercourse, including frozen areas or the shores or beaches thereof, any park, playground, or building, any refuge, conservation, or recreation area, and any residential, farm, or ranch properties or timberlands.

(4) Except as otherwise provided in sections 33-15-108 (2) and 42-4-1406, C.R.S., littering is a class 2 petty offense punishable, upon conviction, by a mandatory fine of not less than twenty dollars nor more than five hundred dollars upon a first conviction, by a mandatory fine of not less than fifty dollars nor more than one thousand dollars upon a second conviction, and by a mandatory fine of not less than one hundred dollars nor more than one thousand dollars upon a third or subsequent conviction.

(5) It is in the discretion of the court, upon the conviction of any person and the imposition of a fine under this section, to suspend any or all of the fine in excess of the mandatory minimum fine upon the condition that the convicted person gather and remove from specified public property or specified private property, with prior permission of the owner or tenant in lawful possession thereof, any litter found thereon, or upon the condition that the convicted person pick up litter at a time prescribed by and a place within the jurisdiction of the court for not less than eight hours upon a first conviction or for not less than sixteen hours upon a second or subsequent conviction.

(6) Whenever litter is thrown, deposited, dropped, or dumped from any motor vehicle in violation of this section, the operator of said motor vehicle is presumed to have caused or permitted the litter to be so thrown, deposited, dropped, or dumped therefrom.

(7) In addition to those law enforcement officers and agencies of this state and the political subdivisions thereof authorized to enforce this section, the officers of the Colorado state patrol and the district wildlife managers and other commissioned officers of the division of parks and wildlife are expressly authorized, empowered, and directed to enforce the provisions of this section.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 432, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-511. L. 73: p. 537, § 1. L. 77: (4) amended, p. 1195, § 2, effective July 1. L. 79: (7) amended, p. 1212, § 2, effective June 21. L. 81: (4) amended, p. 2025, § 18, effective July 14. L. 85: (4) R&RE and (5) amended, p. 670, §§1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2002, 3rd Ex. Sess.: (4) amended, p. 53, § 3, effective July 18.

Cross references: For the power and duty of the executive director of the department of natural resources to establish programs to control litter in Colorado, see § 24-33-102 (5); for prohibitions against putting foreign matters on highways, see § 42-4-1406; for littering lands or waters under the control of the division of wildlife in the department of natural resources, see §§ 33-10-102 (10) and 33-15-108; for affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Water Pollution Control in Colorado", see 36 U. Colo. L. Rev. 413 (1964).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-4-511 is similar to former § R.S. 08, § 1817, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Purpose of section. This section plainly shows a design to protect from pollution the waters of creeks used as the feeders for reservoirs for public use, without any reference to whether such pollution in fact appreciably affects the waters when arrived at the reservoir. Nor does such construction render this act objectionable. The design of the act is not to take property for public use, nor does it do so within the meaning of the constitution. It is intended to restrain and regulate the use of private property so as to protect the common right of all the citizens of the state. People v. Hupp, 53 Colo. 80, 123 P. 651 (1912).

Scope of police power. Former section prohibiting pollution of streams held within the police power of the state, and it is the duty of the courts to enforce it. People v. Hupp, 53 Colo. 80, 123 P. 651 (1912).

Health being the sine qua non of all personal enjoyment, it is not only the right but the duty of a state or of a municipality possessing the police power to pass such laws or ordinances as may be necessary for the preservation of the health of the people. People v. Hupp, 53 Colo. 80, 123 P. 651 (1912).

Section applies to municipalities. On the question as to whether municipalities have a right to pollute state public streams this section controls. There is nothing inherent in a municipality which gives it any greater right to do than that which a natural person has. Mack v. Craig, 68 Colo. 337, 191 P. 101 (1920).

And it applies to hotel discharging waste in running stream. The manager of a hotel or eating house who discharges into a running stream the waste from his premises, or other offensive matter, is within this section, and liable to the penalty thereby imposed. People v. Hupp, 53 Colo. 80, 123 P. 651 (1912).

18-4-512. Abandonment of a motor vehicle. (1) Any person who abandons any motor vehicle upon a street, highway, right-of-way, or any other public property, or upon any private property without the express consent of the owner or person in lawful charge of that private property commits abandonment of a motor vehicle.

(2) To "abandon" means to leave a thing with the intention not to retain possession of or assert ownership over it. The intent need not coincide with the act of leaving.

- (3) It is prima facie evidence of the necessary intent that:
 - (a) The motor vehicle has been left for more than seven days unattended and unmoved; or
 - (b) License plates or other identifying marks have been removed from the motor vehicle; or
 - (c) The motor vehicle has been damaged or is deteriorated so extensively that it has value only for junk or salvage; or
 - (d) The owner has been notified by a law enforcement agency to remove the motor vehicle, and it has not been removed within three days after notification.
- (4) Abandonment of a motor vehicle is a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 432, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-512.

Cross references: For the towing and storage of abandoned and illegally parked motor vehicles, see part 18 of article 4 of title 42.

18-4-513. Criminal use of a noxious substance. (1) Any person who deposits on the land or in the building or vehicle of another, without his consent, any stink bomb or device, irritant, or offensive-smelling substance with the intent to interfere with another's use or enjoyment of the land, building, or vehicle commits a class 3 misdemeanor.

(2) It shall be an affirmative defense that a peace officer in the performance of his duties reasonably used a noxious substance.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 433, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-4-513. L. 73: p. 538, § 2.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

18-4-514. Use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property. Pursuant to section 13-25-130, C.R.S., photographs, video tapes, or films of property over which a person is alleged to have exerted unauthorized control or otherwise to have obtained unlawfully are competent evidence if the photographs, video tapes, or films are admissible into evidence under the rules of law governing the admissibility of photographs, video tapes, or films into evidence.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 577, § 4, effective July 1.

Cross references: For similar provisions concerning the use of photographs, video tapes, or films of property with respect to the crimes of robbery and theft, see §§ 18-4-305 and 18-4-415.

18-4-515. Entry to survey property - exception to criminal trespass. (1) Effective July 1, 1992, no person shall be in violation of the trespass laws of this part 5 if the requirements of this section are met. The provisions of this section provide an exception to the trespass laws only and do not affect or supersede the provisions and requirements of articles 1 to 7 of title 38, C.R.S., concerning condemnation proceedings, notwithstanding any laws to the contrary.

(2) Any person who is licensed as a professional land surveyor pursuant to section 12-25-214, C.R.S., or who is under the direct supervision of such a person as an employee, agent, or representative, may enter public or private land to investigate and utilize boundary evidence and to perform boundary surveys if the notice requirement in this subsection (2) is met. The notice of the pending survey shall contain the identity of the party for whom the survey is being performed and the purpose for which the survey will be performed, the employer of the surveyor, the identity of the surveyor, the dates the land will be entered, the time, location, and timetable for such entry, the estimated completion date, the estimated number of entries that will be required, and a statement requesting the landowner to provide the surveyor with the name of each person who occupies the land as a tenant or lessee, whether on a permanent or a temporary basis. Nothing in this subsection (2) shall be deemed to confer liability upon a landowner who fails or refuses to provide such requested statement. At least fourteen days before the desired date of entry the professional land surveyor shall cause such notice to be given to the landowner by certified mail, return receipt requested, and by regular mail. Any landowner may waive the requirement that notice be given by certified mail, return receipt requested, and by regular mail. The waivers described in this subsection (2) may be given orally or in writing.

(3) If a landowner does not acknowledge receipt of the notice within fourteen days of such receipt, the professional land surveyor or other persons described in subsection (2) of this section shall have the right to enter the land pursuant to the specifications given in the notice. If a landowner acknowledges receipt of the notice within fourteen days of receipt, such landowner has the right to modify the time and other provisions of the surveyor's access, as long as such modifications do not unreasonably restrict completion of the survey.

(4) All persons described in subsection (2) of this section who enter land pursuant to and for a purpose described in this section shall carry upon their person at all times during entry and stay upon the land sufficient identification to identify themselves and their employer or principal, and shall present such identification upon request.

(5) Persons described in subsection (2) of this section shall be liable for actual damages caused during entry and stay upon a landowner's land. No professional land surveyor or person under such surveyor's direct supervision shall have a civil cause of action against a landowner or lessee for personal injury or property damage incurred while on the land for purposes consistent with those described in subsection (2) of this section, except when such damages and injury were willfully or deliberately caused by the landowner.

Source: L. 92: Entire section added, p. 429, § 1, effective April 29. L. 2004: (2) amended, p. 1310, § 53, effective May 28.

ANNOTATION

Giving the word "affect" its plain and ordinary meaning, this section does not change, alter, or lessen the requirements of articles 1 through 7 of title 38 in condemnation actions. San Miguel County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Roberts, 159 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2006).

Giving the word "supersede" its plain and ordinary meaning, this section does not void, replace, supplant, or make unnecessary any provisions or requirements of articles 1 through 7 of title 38 in condemnation actions. San Miguel County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Roberts, 159 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2006).

This section may not be used in place of applicable condemnation procedures. There is no basis to conclude, however, that it does not apply or may not be used in support of or in conjunction with a contemplated condemnation proceeding. San Miguel County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Roberts, 159 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2006).

A government entity's entry onto private property for survey purposes prior to initiating ing eminent domain proceedings does not constitute a compensable taking. San Miguel County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Roberts, 159 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2006).

This section provides that a licensed surveyor may lawfully enter land to investigate boundary evidence, to utilize such evidence, and to perform boundary surveys. It does not state or imply that a surveyor must conduct the survey for the benefit of an existing legal interest in neighboring land or that the lawfulness of the entry is conditioned on the manner in which the surveyor will utilize the evidence obtained by the survey or on the purposes motivating the survey. It does not state or imply that the boundary evidence may only be utilized to describe the boundaries themselves and may not be utilized to create a derivative legal description related to the land. San Miguel County Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Roberts, 159 P.3d 800 (Colo. App. 2006).

18-4-516. Criminal operation of a device in motion picture theater. (1) A person who, while within a motion picture theater, knowingly operates an audiovisual recording function of a device for the purpose of recording a motion picture, while a motion picture is being exhibited, without the consent of the owner or lessee of the motion picture theater, commits the offense of criminal operation of a device in a motion picture theater.

(2) Criminal operation of a device in a motion picture theater is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(3) If a person operates or appears to operate an audiovisual recording function for the purpose of recording a motion picture in a motion picture theater, the owner or lessee of a facility in which a motion picture is being exhibited, or the authorized agent or employee of the owner or lessee, or any peace or police officer, acting in good faith and upon probable cause based upon reasonable grounds therefor, may detain and question such person, in a reasonable manner for the purpose of ascertaining whether the person is guilty of criminal operation of a device in motion picture theater. Such questioning of a person by the owner or lessee of a motion picture theater, or the authorized agent or employee of the owner or lessee, or peace or police officer does not render the owner or lessee of a motion picture theater, or the authorized agent or employee of the owner or lessee, or peace or police officer civilly or criminally liable for slander, false arrest, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, or unlawful detention.

(4) This section does not prevent a lawfully authorized investigative, law enforcement, or intelligence-gathering employee or agent of the state or federal government, while operating within the scope of lawfully authorized investigative, protective, law enforcement, or intelligence-gathering activities, from operating an audiovisual recording function of a device in a motion picture theater.

(5) Nothing in this section prevents prosecution under any other provision of law providing for greater penalty.

(6) As used in this section:

(a) "Audiovisual recording function" means the capability of a device to record or transmit a motion picture or any part thereof by means of any technology now known or hereafter developed.

(b) "Motion picture theater" means a movie theater, screening room, or other venue when used primarily for the exhibition of motion pictures.

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 922, § 1, effective July 1.

PART 6

THEFT OF SOUND RECORDINGS

18-4-601. Definitions. As used in this part 6, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Aggregate wholesale value" means the average wholesale value of lawfully manufactured and authorized sound or audio-visual recordings corresponding to the number of nonconforming recorded articles involved in the offense. Proof of the specific wholesale value of each nonconforming device shall not be required.

(1.3) "Article" means a tangible medium on which sounds, images, or both are recorded or otherwise stored, including an original phonograph record, disc, tape, audio or video cassette, wire, film, memory card, flash drive, hard drive, data storage device, or other medium now existing or developed later on which sounds, images, or both are or can be recorded or otherwise stored, or a copy or reproduction that duplicates, in whole or in part, the original.

(1.5) "Copyright" means the ownership rights that accrue to an owner and relate solely to the common law copyright accruing to such owner. The term "copyright" does not include a federal copyright, which inures to the benefit of owners pursuant to Public Law 92-140, as amended by Public Law 93-573, which became effective February 15, 1972. For the purposes of this part 6, no common law copyright shall exist for a period longer than fifty-six years after an original copyright accrues to an owner.

(1.7) "Manufacturer" means the person who actually makes a recording or causes a recording to be made. "Manufacturer" does not include a person who manufactures a medium upon which sounds or images can be recorded or stored, or who manufactures the cartridge or casing itself, unless such person actually makes the recording or causes the recording to be made.

(2) "Owner" means the person who owns the copyright on the original fixation of sounds embodied in the master phonograph record, master disc, master tape, master film, or other device used for reproducing sounds on phonograph records, discs, tapes, films, or other articles upon which sound is recorded and from which the transferred recorded sounds are directly derived.

(3) "Person" means any individual, firm, partnership, corporation, or association.

Source: L. 76: Entire part added, p. 553, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2009: (1) amended and (1.3), (1.5), and (1.7) added, (SB 09-036), ch. 185, p. 809, § 1, effective August 5.

18-4-602. Unlawful transfer for sale. (1) A person who knowingly and without the consent of the owner transfers any copyrighted sounds recorded on a phonograph record, video disc, wire, tape, film, or other article on which sounds are recorded with the intent to sell such article on which such sounds are so transferred or to cause the same to be sold for profit or to be used to promote the sale of any product commits unlawful transfer for sale.

(2) Unlawful transfer for sale is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 76: Entire part added, p. 554, § 1, effective July 1. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 978, § 1, effective May 26. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 834, § 49, effective July 1.

18-4-603. Unlawful trafficking in unlawfully transferred articles. (1) A person who knowingly, or who reasonably should have such knowledge, advertises, offers for sale or resale, sells or resells, distributes, or possesses for any of the purposes provided in this subsection (1) any article that has been transferred without consent of the owner as provided in section 18-4-602 commits unlawful trafficking in unlawfully transferred articles.

(2) Each act of unlawful trafficking in unlawfully transferred articles is a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 76: Entire part added, p. 554, § 1, effective July 1.

18-4-604. Dealing in unlawfully packaged recorded articles. (1) A person who knowingly and for commercial advantage or private financial gain advertises, offers for sale or resale, sells or resells, transports, or possesses for any of the purposes provided in this subsection (1) any article on which sounds are recorded, the cover, box, jacket, or label of which does not clearly and conspicuously disclose the actual name and address of the manufacturer, commits dealing in unlawfully packaged recorded articles.

(2) Dealing in unlawfully packaged recorded articles is a class 1 misdemeanor. If the offense involves more than one hundred unlawfully packaged recorded articles or the offense is a second or subsequent offense, the court shall assess a fine of at least one thousand dollars.

Source: L. 76: Entire part added, p. 554, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2005: Entire section amended, p. 202, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2009: Entire section amended, (SB 09-036), ch. 185, p. 810, § 2, effective August 5.

18-4-604.3. Unlawful recording of a live performance. (1) A person who, without the consent of the owner of the right to record a live performance, records or causes to be recorded the live performance on a phonograph record, compact disc, video disc, wire, tape, film, or other article on which a live performance is recorded with the intent to sell the article on which the live performance is recorded or to cause the same to be sold for profit or to be used to promote the sale of any product commits unlawful recording of a live performance.

(2) In the absence of a written agreement or law to the contrary, the performer or performers of a live performance are presumed to own the rights to record the live performance.

(3) For purposes of this section, a person who is authorized to maintain custody and control of business records that reflect whether the owner of the live performance consented to having the live performance recorded is a competent witness in a proceeding regarding the issue of consent.

(4) Unlawful recording of a live performance is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(5) As used in this section, "live performance" means a recitation, rendering, or playing of a series of images, musical, spoken, or other sounds, or a combination of images and sounds, in an audible sequence.

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 202, § 2, effective July 1.

18-4-604.7. Trafficking in unlawfully recorded live performance. (1) A person who knows or reasonably should know that an article has been recorded in violation of section 18-4-604.3 and advertises, offers for sale or resale, sells or resells, or distributes the article, or possesses the article for any of the said purposes, commits trafficking in an unlawfully recorded live performance.

(2) Each act of trafficking in an unlawfully recorded live performance is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 202, § 2, effective July 1.

18-4-605. Applicability. (1) This part 6 shall not apply to:

(a) Any broadcaster who, in connection with or as part of a radio, television, or cable broadcast transmission or for the purpose of archival preservation, transfers any copyrighted sounds recorded on a sound recording;

(b) Any person who transfers copyrighted sounds in the home for personal use and without compensation for such transfer.

(2) This part 6 shall neither enlarge nor diminish the rights of the respective parties in a civil litigation concerning the subject matter of this part 6.

Source: L. 76: Entire part added, p. 554, § 1, effective July 1.

18-4-606. Confiscation and disposition of items. (1) A law enforcement officer shall, upon discovery, confiscate all unlawfully labeled, transferred, or recorded articles possessed for the purposes of selling or distributing in violation of this part 6 and all equipment and components used or intended to be used to knowingly and unlawfully transfer, manufacture, or record articles for the purposes of selling or distributing in violation of this part 6.

(2) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, recorded articles and equipment and components that are confiscated pursuant to subsection (1) of this section are contraband and shall be delivered to the district attorney in the county in which the confiscation was made. Upon conviction of the person, the district attorney may request a court order for destruction of the recorded articles and a court order for distribution of the equipment and components. Upon conviction of the person and motion of the district attorney, the court shall order the recorded articles to be destroyed or otherwise disposed of if the court finds that the person claiming title to the recorded articles possessed the recorded articles for the purposes of selling or distributing in violation of this part 6. The court shall order the equipment and components distributed to a charitable or educational organization if the court finds that the person claiming title to the equipment possessed the equipment to record nonconforming articles for the purposes of selling or distributing in violation of this part 6.

Source: L. 2009: Entire section added, (SB 09-036), ch. 185, p. 810, § 3, effective August 5.

18-4-607. Restitution. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, upon conviction of a violation of this part 6, the convicted person shall be ordered to make restitution to the owner or lawful producer of the master sound or audio-visual recording, or to the trade association representing the owner or lawful producer who suffered injury resulting from the crime. The order of restitution shall be based on the aggregate wholesale value of lawfully manufactured and authorized recordings corresponding to the number of nonconforming recorded articles involved in the offense unless a greater value can be proven. The order of restitution shall also include investigative costs relating to the offense.

Source: L. 2009: Entire section added, (SB 09-036), ch. 185, p. 811, § 3, effective August 5.

PART 7

THEFT OF CABLE TELEVISION SERVICE

18-4-701. Theft of cable service - definitions. (1) As used in this part 7, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Cable operator" means any person who:

(I) Provides cable service over a cable system in which such person directly or through one or more affiliates owns a significant interest; or

(II) Controls or is responsible for the management and operation of such cable system through any arrangement.

(b) "Cable service" means:

(I) The one-way transmission to subscribers of a video programming service;

(II) Two-way interactive services delivered over a cable system;

(III) Subscriber interaction, if any, that is required for the selection or use of such video programming or interactive service.

(c) "Cable system" means a facility consisting of a set of closed transmission paths and associated signal operation, reception, and control equipment that is designed to provide cable service.

(2) A person commits theft of cable service if such person knowingly:

(a) Obtains cable service from a cable operator by trick, artifice, deception, use of an unauthorized device or decoder, or other means without authorization or with the intent to deprive such cable operator of lawful compensation for the services rendered;

(b) (I) Makes or maintains, without authority from or payment to a cable operator, a connection or connections, whether physical, electrical, mechanical, acoustical, or otherwise with any cable, wire, component, or other device used for the distribution of cable services.

(II) Notwithstanding subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b), this paragraph (b) shall not include circumstances where a person has attached a wire or cable to extend service that the person has paid for or that has been authorized to an additional outlet, or where the cable operator has failed to disconnect a previously authorized cable service.

(c) Modifies, alters, or maintains a modification or alteration to a device installed or capable of being installed with the authorization of a cable operator, which modification or alteration is for the purpose of intercepting or receiving cable service carried by such cable operator without authority from or payment to such cable operator;

(d) Possesses without authority, with the intent to receive cable operator services without authorization from or payment to a cable operator, a device or printed circuit board designed in whole or in part to facilitate the following acts:

(I) To receive cable services offered for sale over a cable system; or

(II) To perform or facilitate the performance of any act set forth in paragraphs (a) to (c) of this subsection (2).

(e) Manufactures, imports into this state, distributes, sells, leases, or offers or advertises for sale or lease, with the intent to receive cable services or with the intent to promote the reception of cable services without payment or authorization from a cable operator, any device, printed circuit board, or plan or kit for a device or printed circuit board designed in whole or in part to facilitate the following acts:

(I) To receive any cable services offered for sale over a cable system; or

(II) To perform or facilitate the performance of any act set forth in paragraphs (a) to (c) of this subsection (2).

- (f) Fails to return or surrender equipment used to receive cable service and provided by a cable operator, after such service has been terminated for any reason.
- (3) This section does not apply to satellite dishes.
- (4) Any person who violates this section commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 544, § 1, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 411, § 1, effective August 5.

18-4-702. Civil action - damages. (1) (a) A licensed or duly permitted cable operator may bring a civil action for damages against any person who commits civil theft of cable service.

(b) Civil theft of cable service is the willful or intentional commission of any act described in section 18-4-701 (2).

(c) No plaintiff that files an action pursuant to this section for theft of cable services shall be required to plead damages with particularity as a condition precedent for maintaining such an action.

(d) There is a rebuttable presumption that a violation of section 18-4-701 (2) (a) has occurred if there exists in the actual possession of the person a device that permits the reception of unauthorized cable services for which no payment has been made to a cable operator and no legitimate purpose exists.

(e) There is a rebuttable presumption that a violation of section 18-4-701 (2) (b) has occurred if cable service to the person's business or residential property was disconnected by a cable operator, notification of such action by certified mail was provided to such person, and a connection of such service exists at such person's business or residential property after the date of the disconnection.

(f) There is a rebuttable presumption that a violation of section 18-4-701 (2) (c) has occurred if the cable operator, as a matter of standard procedure:

(I) Places written warning labels on its converters or decoders explaining that tampering with such devices is a violation of law and a converter or decoder is found to have been tampered with, altered, or modified so as to allow the reception or interception of cable services without authority from or payment to a cable operator; or

(II) Seals its converters or decoders with a label or mechanical device and the label or device has been removed or broken.

(g) There is a rebuttable presumption that a violation of section 18-4-701 (2) (d) has occurred if a person possesses ten or more devices or printed circuit boards. If such rebuttable presumption is not overcome, the court shall find that such person committed civil theft of cable service willfully and for purposes of commercial advantage and shall increase the damages award in accordance with paragraph (a) of subsection (3) of this section.

(h) There is a rebuttable presumption that a violation of section 18-4-701 (2) (e) has occurred if the person, while engaging in any of the prohibited acts, made apparent to the buyer that the product would enable the buyer to obtain cable service without payment to a cable operator. If such rebuttable presumption is not overcome, the court shall find that such person committed civil theft of cable service willfully and for purposes of commercial advantage and shall increase the damages award in accordance with paragraph (a) of subsection (3) of this section.

(i) There is a rebuttable presumption that a violation of section 18-4-701 (2) (f) has occurred if a cable operator mailed by certified mail to the person, at the provided address, a written demand requesting the return of an operator-owned converter, decoder, or other device and the person failed to return said device or to make reasonable arrangements to do so within fifteen days after the date of such notice. Such reasonable arrangements may include requesting that the cable operator collect the equipment, subject to the cable operator's policies.

(2) In any civil action brought pursuant to this section, a cable operator shall be entitled, upon proof of civil theft of cable service, to recover the greater of the following amounts as damages:

- (a) Four thousand dollars; or

- (b) Three times the amount of any actual damages sustained.
- (3) (a) Notwithstanding any provision of subsection (2) of this section to the contrary, a court may increase the award of damages in any civil action brought pursuant to this section by an amount of not more than fifty thousand dollars if such court finds that civil theft of cable service was committed willfully and for the purpose of commercial advantage.
- (b) In any civil action described in paragraph (a) of this subsection (3), a cable operator need not prove that the final purchaser actually used the device, plan, kit, or printed circuit board without authorization from or payment to a cable operator.
- (c) No attempt by a person to limit or shift legal liability in an action described in this subsection (3) by requiring purchasers to sign a disclaimer acknowledging their responsibility to report use of a device, plan, kit, or printed circuit board to a cable operator shall be effective, and any such disclaimer shall be void.
- (d) (Deleted by amendment, L. 98, p. 830, § 57, effective August 5, 1998.)
- (4) In any action for civil theft of cable service, the prevailing party shall be awarded reasonable attorney fees and direct costs incurred as a result of such theft, including, but not limited to, the costs of any investigation, disconnection or reconnection, service calls, employees, equipment, and expert witnesses and costs of the civil action.
- (5) A cable operator may seek an injunction to enjoin or restrain a violation of this section and damages arising from such violation in the same action.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 545, § 1, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 413, § 2, effective August 5; (1)(g), (1)(h), and (3)(d) amended, p. 830, § 57, effective August 5.

18-4-703. Severability. If any provision of this part 7 or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect the other provisions or applications of this part 7 which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this part 7 are declared to be severable.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 545, § 1, effective July 1.

PART 8

THEFT OF PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SERVICES

18-4-801 and 18-4-802. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2012: Entire part repealed, (SB 12-044), ch. 274, p. 1448, § 4, effective June 8.

Editor's note: This part 8 was added in 1998. For amendments to this part 8 prior to its repeal in 2012, consult the 2011 Colorado Revised Statutes and the Colorado statutory research explanatory note beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

ARTICLE 5

Offenses Involving Fraud

Editor's note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment, see the editor's note following the title heading.

PART 1	18-5-102.	Forgery.
FORGERY, SIMULATION,	18-5-103.	Second degree forgery. (Repealed)
IMPERSONATION,	18-5-104.	Second degree forgery.
AND RELATED OFFENSES	18-5-104.5.	Use of forged academic record.
	18-5-105.	Criminal possession of a forged instrument.
18-5-101.	Definitions.

- 18-5-106. Criminal possession of second degree forged instrument. (Repealed)
- 18-5-107. Criminal possession of second degree forged instrument.
- 18-5-108. Merger of offenses.
- 18-5-109. Criminal possession of forgery devices.
- 18-5-110. Criminal simulation.
- 18-5-110.5. Trademark counterfeiting.
- 18-5-111. Unlawfully using slugs.
- 18-5-112. Obtaining signature by deception.
- 18-5-113. Criminal impersonation.
- 18-5-114. Offering a false instrument for recording.
- 18-5-115. Charitable fraud. (Repealed)
- 18-5-116. Controlled substances - inducing consumption by fraudulent means.
- 18-5-117. Unlawful possession of personal identifying information. (Repealed)
- 18-5-118. Offenses involving forgery of a penalty assessment notice issued to a minor under the age of eighteen years - suspension of driving privilege. (Repealed)
- 18-5-119. Theft of personal identifying information. (Repealed)
- 18-5-120. Gathering personal information by deception. (Repealed)

PART 2

FRAUD IN OBTAINING
PROPERTY OR SERVICES

- 18-5-201. Definitions. (Repealed)
- 18-5-201.1. Definitions relating to guaranteed check cards. (Repealed)
- 18-5-202. Fraudulent use of a credit device. (Repealed)
- 18-5-202.1. Fraudulent use of guaranteed check card. (Repealed)
- 18-5-203. Theft of credit device or guaranteed check card. (Repealed)
- 18-5-204. Criminal possession of credit device or guaranteed check card. (Repealed)
- 18-5-205. Fraud by check - definitions - penalties.
- 18-5-206. Defrauding a secured creditor or debtor.
- 18-5-207. Purchase on credit to defraud.
- 18-5-208. Dual contracts to induce loan.
- 18-5-209. Issuing a false financial statement - obtaining a financial transaction device by false statements.

- 18-5-210. Receiving deposits in a failing financial institution.

PART 3

FRAUDULENT AND DECEPTIVE
SALES AND BUSINESS PRACTICES

- 18-5-301. Fraud in effecting sales.
- 18-5-302. Unlawful activity concerning the selling of land.
- 18-5-303. Bait advertising.
- 18-5-304. False statements as to circulation.
- 18-5-305. Identification number - altering - possession.
- 18-5-306. Counterfeit or imitation controlled substances. (Repealed)
- 18-5-307. Fee paid to private employment agencies.
- 18-5-308. Electronic mail fraud.
- 18-5-309. Money laundering - illegal investments - penalty - definitions.

PART 4

BRIBERY AND RIGGING OF CONTESTS

- 18-5-401. Commercial bribery and breach of duty to act disinterestedly.
- 18-5-402. Rigging publicly exhibited contests.
- 18-5-403. Bribery in sports.

PART 5

OFFENSES RELATING TO THE UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

- 18-5-501. Definitions.
- 18-5-502. Failure to pay over assigned accounts.
- 18-5-503. Criminal liability of transferor of a bulk transfer. (Repealed)
- 18-5-504. Concealment or removal of secured property.
- 18-5-505. Failure to pay over proceeds unlawful.
- 18-5-506. Fraudulent receipt - penalty.
- 18-5-507. False statement in receipt - penalty.
- 18-5-508. Duplicate receipt not marked - penalty.
- 18-5-509. Warehouse's goods mingled - receipts - penalty.
- 18-5-510. Delivery of goods without receipt - penalty.
- 18-5-511. Mortgaged goods receipt - penalty.
- 18-5-512. Issuance of bad check.

PART 6

18-5-707.

Unlawful manufacture of a financial transaction device.

IMITATION CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT

PART 8

18-5-601 to 18-5-606.

(Repealed)

EQUITY SKIMMING
AND RELATED OFFENSES

PART 7

18-5-801.

Definitions.

18-5-802.

Equity skimming of real property.

FINANCIAL TRANSACTION DEVICE CRIME ACT

18-5-803.

Equity skimming of a vehicle.

18-5-804.

Civil action.

18-5-701.

Definitions.

18-5-702.

Unauthorized use of a financial transaction device.

18-5-703.

Criminal possession of a financial transaction device. (Repealed)

18-5-704.

Sale or possession for sale of a financial transaction device. (Repealed)

18-5-705.

Criminal possession or sale of a blank financial transaction device.

18-5-706.

Criminal possession of forgery devices.

PART 9

IDENTITY THEFT AND RELATED OFFENSES

18-5-901.

Definitions.

18-5-902.

Identity theft.

18-5-903.

Criminal possession of a financial device.

18-5-903.5.

Criminal possession of an identification document.

18-5-904.

Gathering identity information by deception.

18-5-905.

Possession of identity theft tools.

PART 1

FORGERY, SIMULATION, IMPERSONATION,
AND RELATED OFFENSES

18-5-101. Definitions. As used in sections 18-5-101 to 18-5-110, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Complete written instrument" means one which purports to be a genuine written instrument fully drawn with respect to every essential feature thereof.

(1.5) "Document-making implement" means any implement or impression, including, but not limited to, a template or a computerized template or form, specially designed or primarily used for making identification documents, false identification documents, or another document-making implement.

(2) To "falsely alter" a written instrument means to change a written instrument without the authority of anyone entitled to grant such authority, whether it be in complete or incomplete form, by means of erasure, obliteration, deletion, insertion of new matter, transposition of matter, or any other means, so that such instrument in its thus altered form falsely appears or purports to be in all respects an authentic creation of or fully authorized by its ostensible maker.

(3) To "falsely complete" a written instrument means:

(a) To transform an incomplete written instrument into a complete one by adding, inserting, or changing matter without the authority of anyone entitled to grant that authority, so that the complete written instrument falsely appears or purports to be in all respects an authentic creation of or fully authorized by its ostensible maker; or

(b) To transform an incomplete written instrument into a complete one by adding or inserting materially false information or adding or inserting a materially false statement. A materially false statement is a false assertion that affects the action, conduct, or decision of the person who receives or is intended to receive the asserted information in a manner that directly or indirectly benefits the person making the assertion.

(4) To "falsely make" a written instrument means to make or draw a written instrument, whether complete or incomplete, which purports to be an authentic creation of its ostensible maker, but which is not, either because the ostensible maker is fictitious or because, if real, he did not authorize the making or the drawing thereof.

(5) "Forged instrument" means a written instrument which has been falsely made, completed, or altered.

(6) "Government" means the United States, any state, county, municipality, or other political unit, any department, agency, or subdivision of any of the foregoing, or any corporation or other entity established by law to carry out governmental functions.

(6.5) "Identification document" means a document made or issued by or under the authority of the United States government, a state, political subdivision of a state, a foreign government, political subdivision of a foreign government, an international governmental, or an international quasi-governmental organization which, when completed with information concerning a particular individual, is of a type intended or commonly accepted for the purpose of identification of individuals.

(7) "Incomplete written instrument" means one which contains some matter by way of content or authentication but which requires additional matter in order to render it a complete written instrument.

(7.5) "Produce" includes alter, authenticate, or assemble.

(8) "Utter" means to transfer, pass, or deliver, or attempt or cause to be transferred, passed, or delivered, to another person any written instrument, article, or thing.

(9) "Written instrument" means any paper, document, or other instrument containing written or printed matter or the equivalent thereof, used for purposes of reciting, embodying, conveying, or recording information, and any money, credit card, token, stamp, seal, badge, or trademark or any evidence or symbol of value, right, privilege, or identification, which is capable of being used to the advantage or disadvantage of some person.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 433, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-101. L. 94: (3) amended, p. 1718, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1.5), (6.5), and (7.5) added, p. 646, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2005: (3)(b) amended, p. 1499, § 3, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "2006 Immigration Legislation in Colorado", see 35 Colo. Law. 79 (October 2006).

Authentic, in legal parlance, means vested with all due formalities and legally attested. Downing v. Brown, 3 Colo. 571 (1877) (decided under former R.S. 08, § 69).

Where deletion of computer records was basis for forgery, computer disk was a "written instrument" and the deletion of records on the disk constituted a "false alteration". People v. Avila, 770 P.2d 1330 (Colo. App. 1988).

Applied in People v. Gray, 710 P.2d 1149 (Colo. App. 1985).

18-5-102. Forgery. (1) A person commits forgery, if, with intent to defraud, such person falsely makes, completes, alters, or utters a written instrument which is or purports to be, or which is calculated to become or to represent if completed:

(a) Part of an issue of money, stamps, securities, or other valuable instruments issued by a government or government agency; or

(b) Part of an issue of stock, bonds, or other instruments representing interests in or claims against a corporate or other organization or its property; or

(c) A deed, will, codicil, contract, assignment, commercial instrument, promissory note, check, or other instrument which does or may evidence, create, transfer, terminate, or otherwise affect a legal right, interest, obligation, or status; or

(d) A public record or an instrument filed or required by law to be filed or legally fileable in or with a public office or public servant; or

(e) A written instrument officially issued or created by a public office, public servant, or government agency; or

(f) Part of an issue of tokens, transfers, certificates, or other articles manufactured and designed for use in transportation fees upon public conveyances, or as symbols of value usable in place of money for the purchase of property or services available to the public for compensation; or

(g) Part of an issue of lottery tickets or shares designed for use in the lottery held pursuant to part 2 of article 35 of title 24, C.R.S.; or

(h) A document-making implement that may be used or is used in the production of a false identification document or in the production of another document-making implement to produce false identification documents.

(2) Forgery is a class 5 felony.

(3) Uttering a forged document to a peace officer shall create a presumption that the person intended to defraud such peace officer.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 434, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-102. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 834, § 50, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section R&RE, p. 1988, § 16, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1)(h) added, p. 647, § 3, effective July 1. L. 2003: (3) added, p. 1888, § 2, effective May 22.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-5-102 is similar to former § 40-6-1, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Reasonable distinctions can be drawn between crimes prohibited by credit card and forgery statutes, and the existence of the specific statute regarding the misuse of credit cards does not preclude prosecution or conviction of appellant under the state's general forgery statute. People v. James, 178 Colo. 401, 497 P.2d 1256 (1972).

Circumstances sufficient to establish prima facie case of forgery. Duncan v. People, 178 Colo. 314, 497 P.2d 1029 (1972).

To satisfy subsection (1)(c), a document must purport to have legal efficacy that affects some right or status, and fraudulent letter to the prosecutor's office recanting the initial statement of events and purporting to contain the victim's signature meets statutory requirements, since the prosecutor would likely rely on the letter in determining whether probable cause exists to move forward with the prosecution, which would affect defendant's legal status in the pending criminal matter. People v. Cunefare, 102 P.3d 302 (Colo. 2004).

Evidence of giving a forged resident alien card to a police officer was insufficient to support a charge of forgery with the intent to defraud the immigration and naturalization service. People v. Miralda, 981 P.2d 676 (Colo. App. 1999).

Requisite intent to commit forgery can exist in case where defendant used a false written instrument prepared by another. Prosecution is not obligated to prove defendant either mailed the false instrument or explicitly directed another to do so on defendant's behalf. People v. Taylor, 159 P.3d 730 (Colo. App. 2006).

Section 42-3-133 does not preclude prosecution under this section for altering and displaying a temporary license plate; therefore, this section is an appropriate statute to prosecute persons who alter temporary license plates. People v. Stansberry, 83 P.3d 1188 (Colo. App. 2003).

Applied in People v. Smith, 195 Colo. 404, 579 P.2d 1129 (1978).

18-5-103. Second degree forgery. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 434, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-103. L. 82: (1)(d) amended and (1)(e) added, p. 385, § 3, effective April 30. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 834, § 51, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 1988, § 17, effective July 1.

18-5-104. Second degree forgery. (1) A person commits second degree forgery if, with intent to defraud, such person falsely makes, completes, alters, or utters a written instrument of a kind not described in section 18-5-102 or 18-5-104.5.

(2) Second degree forgery is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-104. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1989, § 18, effective July 1. L. 96: (1) amended, p. 841, § 2, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Vesely, 41 Colo. App. 325, 587 P.2d 802 (1978).

18-5-104.5. Use of forged academic record. (1) A person commits use of a forged academic record if, with intent to seek employment or with intent to seek admission to a public or private institution of higher education in this state or for the purpose of securing a scholarship or other form of financial assistance from the institution itself or from other public or private sources of financial assistance, such person falsely makes, completes, alters, or utters a written instrument which is or purports to be, or is calculated to become or to represent if completed, a bona fide academic record of an institution of secondary or higher education.

(2) For purposes of this section:

(a) "Academic record" means a transcript, diploma, grade report, or similar document of an institution of secondary or higher education.

(b) "Financial assistance" means financial assistance for educational purposes, including, but not limited to, loans, scholarships, grants, fellowships, assistantships, work-study programs, or other forms of financial aid.

(3) Use of a forged academic record is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 96: Entire section added, p. 840, § 1, effective July 1.

18-5-105. Criminal possession of a forged instrument. A person commits a class 6 felony when, with knowledge that it is forged and with intent to use to defraud, such person possesses any forged instrument of a kind described in section 18-5-102.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-105. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 834, § 52, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1989, § 19, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Section requires guilty knowledge and intent to defraud. This crime requires not only possession of the forged or counterfeit instruments with knowledge that they were counterfeit, but also the intent to utter and pass the same with intent to defraud. People v. Colosacco, 177 Colo. 219, 493 P.2d 650 (1972) (decided under former § 40-6-4, C.R.S. 1963).

Mere possession of a forged instrument is insufficient to support a conviction under this section. Merely handing a forged resident alien card to a police officer upon demand was insufficient to establish an intent to defraud. People v. Miralda, 981 P.2d 676 (Colo. App. 1999).

18-5-106. Criminal possession of second degree forged instrument. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-106. L. 93: Entire section repealed, p. 1989, § 20, effective July 1.

18-5-107. Criminal possession of second degree forged instrument. A person commits a class 2 misdemeanor, when, with knowledge that it is forged, and with intent to defraud, such person possesses any forged instrument of a kind covered by section 18-5-104.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-107. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1989, § 21, effective July 1.

18-5-108. Merger of offenses. A person may not be convicted of both forgery and criminal possession of a forged instrument with respect to the same written instrument.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-108.

18-5-109. Criminal possession of forgery devices. (1) A person commits criminal possession of forgery devices when:

(a) Such person makes or possesses with knowledge of its character any plate, die, or other device, apparatus, equipment, or article specifically designed for use in counterfeiting, unlawfully simulating, or otherwise forging written instruments or counterfeit marks; or

(b) Such person makes or possesses any device, apparatus, equipment, or article capable of or adaptable to a use specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1), with intent to use it, or to aid or permit another to use it, for purposes of forgery or the production of counterfeit marks; or

(c) Such person illegally possesses a genuine plate, die, or other device used in the production of written instruments or counterfeit marks, with intent to fraudulently use the same; or

(d) Such person unlawfully makes, produces, possesses, or utters a document-making implement knowing that such document-making implement may be used or is used in the production of a false identification document or counterfeit mark or another implement for the production of false identification documents or counterfeit marks.

(2) Criminal possession of forgery devices is a class 6 felony.

(3) As used in this section, "counterfeit mark" has the meaning set forth in section 18-5-110.5 (3) (a).

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-109. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 834, § 53, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1)(d) added, p. 647, § 4, effective July 1. L. 2001: Entire section amended, p. 768, § 3, effective August 8.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2001 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 224, Session Laws of Colorado 2001.

18-5-110. Criminal simulation. (1) A person commits a criminal simulation, when:

(a) With intent to defraud, he makes, alters, or represents any object in such fashion that it appears to have an antiquity, rarity, source or authorship, ingredient, or composition which it does not in fact have; or

(b) With knowledge of its true character and with intent to use to defraud, he utters, misrepresents, or possesses any object made or altered as specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(2) Criminal simulation is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-110. L. 87: (1)(b) amended, p. 1578, § 23, effective July 10.

ANNOTATION

Applied in People v. Vesely, 41 Colo. App. 325, 587 P.2d 802 (1978).

18-5-110.5. Trademark counterfeiting. (1) A person commits trademark counterfeiting if such person intentionally manufactures, displays, advertises, distributes, offers for sale, sells, or possesses with intent to sell or distribute marks, goods, or services that the person knows are, bear, or are identified by one or more counterfeit marks and has possession, custody, or control of more than twenty-five items bearing a counterfeit mark.

(2) (a) Trademark counterfeiting is:

(i) A class 2 misdemeanor if a person has not previously been convicted under this section and the violation involves fewer than one hundred items that are, bear, or are identified by a counterfeit mark or the total retail value of all goods or services that are, bear, or are identified by a counterfeit mark is less than one thousand dollars;

(II) A class 1 misdemeanor if:

(A) A person has one or more previous convictions under this section; or

(B) The violation involves one hundred or more items that are, bear, or are identified by a counterfeit mark or the total retail value of all goods or services that are, bear, or are identified by a counterfeit mark is one thousand dollars or more.

(b) In addition to the penalties specified in paragraph (a) of this subsection (2), any person convicted under this section shall be liable for a fine in an amount equal to three times the total retail value of all goods or services that bear or are identified by a counterfeit mark unless extenuating circumstances are shown by such person.

(c) The remedies provided in this section are in addition to, and not in lieu of, any other civil or criminal penalties or remedies provided by law.

(3) For purposes of this section:

(a) "Counterfeit mark" means a mark identical to or substantially indistinguishable from a trademark that, without the permission of the owner of the trademark, is:

(I) Affixed or designed to be affixed to, or displayed or otherwise associated with, goods; or

(II) Displayed in advertising for, or otherwise associated with, services.

(b) (I) "Retail value" means the counterfeiter's regular selling price for the goods or services that bear or are identified by a counterfeit mark.

(II) In the case of items bearing a counterfeit mark that are components of a finished product, "retail value" means the counterfeiter's regular selling price for the finished product.

(III) For purposes of subsection (2) of this section, the quantity or retail value of goods or services shall include the aggregate quantity or retail value of all marks, goods, and services that are, bear, or are identified by counterfeit marks.

(c) "Trademark" means any trademark registered under the laws of this state or of the United States.

(4) In a trial under this section, any state or federal certificate of registration of a trademark shall be prima facie evidence of the facts stated therein.

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 767, § 2, effective August 8.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2001 act enacting this section, see section 1 of chapter 224, Session Laws of Colorado 2001.

18-5-111. Unlawfully using slugs. (1) A person commits unlawfully using slugs, if:

(a) With intent to defraud the vendor of property or a service sold by means of a coin machine, he knowingly inserts, deposits, or uses a slug in such machine or causes the machine to be operated by any other unauthorized means; or

(b) He makes, possesses, or disposes of a slug or slugs with intent to enable a person to use it or them fraudulently in a coin machine.

(2) "Coin machine" means a coin box, turnstile, vending machine, or other mechanical or electronic device or receptacle designed to receive a coin or bill of a certain denomination or token made for the purpose and, in return for the insertion or deposit thereof, to offer, to provide, to assist in providing, or to permit the acquisition of some property or some public or private service.

(3) "Slug" means any object or article which, by virtue of its size, shape, or any other quality, is capable of being inserted, deposited, or otherwise used in a coin machine as an improper but effective substitute for a genuine coin, bill, or token, and of thereby enabling a person to obtain without valid consideration the property or service sold through the machine.

(4) Unlawfully using slugs is a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 435, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-111.

18-5-112. Obtaining signature by deception. (1) A person commits obtaining signature by deception if, by deception and with intent to defraud or to acquire a benefit for himself or another, he causes another to sign or execute a written instrument.

(2) As used in this section, "by deception" means by knowingly:

(a) Creating or confirming another's impression which is false and which the deceiver does not believe to be true; or

(b) Failing to correct a false impression held by another which the deceiver previously has created or confirmed; or

(c) Preventing another from acquiring information pertinent to any matter material to a proper understanding of any transaction in which the signature of such person is procured.

(3) Obtaining signatures by deception is a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 436, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-112.

ANNOTATION

Falsely inducing another to indorse check is within section. One who by false representations induces another to indorse a check for the payment of money, which the indorser thereafter is compelled to pay to a holder for value, is guilty of obtaining a thing of value by false pretenses. Miller v. People, 72 Colo. 375, 211 P. 380 (1922) (decided under former R.S. 08, § 1849).

Applied in People v. Vesely, 41 Colo. App. 325, 587 P.2d 802 (1978).

18-5-113. Criminal impersonation. (1) A person commits criminal impersonation if he or she knowingly:

(a) Assumes a false or fictitious identity or legal capacity, and in such identity or capacity he or she:

(I) Marries, or pretends to marry, or to sustain the marriage relation toward another without the connivance of the latter;

(II) Becomes bail or surety for a party in an action or proceeding, civil or criminal, before a court or officer authorized to take the bail or surety; or

(III) Confesses a judgment, or subscribes, verifies, publishes, acknowledges, or proves a written instrument which by law may be recorded, with the intent that the same may be delivered as true; or

(b) Assumes a false or fictitious identity or capacity, legal or other, and in such identity or capacity he or she:

(I) Performs an act that, if done by the person falsely impersonated, might subject such person to an action or special proceeding, civil or criminal, or to liability, charge, forfeiture, or penalty; or

(II) Performs any other act with intent to unlawfully gain a benefit for himself, herself, or another or to injure or defraud another.

(2) Criminal impersonation is a class 6 felony.

(3) For the purposes of subsection (1) of this section, using false or fictitious personal identifying information, as defined in section 18-5-901 (13), shall constitute the assumption of a false or fictitious identity or capacity.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 436, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-113. L. 77: IP(1) amended, p. 964, § 30, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 834, § 54, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1) amended and (3) added, (SB 11-201), ch. 217, p. 947, § 1, effective May 27.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-5-113 is similar to former CSA, C. 48, § 338, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Subsection (1)(e) is not unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. People v. Lambert, 194 Colo. 421, 572 P.2d 839 (1978).

Criminal impersonation defined. This section defines criminal impersonation as (now knowingly) assuming a false or fictitious identity or capacity, and in that identity or capacity, doing any act with intent to unlawfully gain a benefit or injure or defraud another. People v. Brown, 193 Colo. 120, 562 P.2d 754 (1977); People v. Borrego, 738 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1987).

To falsely impersonate means to pretend to be a particular person without lawful authority. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824 (1942).

And to perform act in assumed character for benefit. It is an offense under this section to falsely impersonate another, and in such assumed character to do any act whereby any benefit might accrue to the offender or to another person. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824 (1942).

Even though such person is dead. The offense of impersonation may be committed although the person who is impersonated is dead. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824 (1942).

Continuing offense. The offense of criminal impersonation can be continuing or can occur at a specific time. People v. Perez, 129 P.3d 1090 (Colo. App. 2005).

Venue is not an element of the crime of criminal impersonation. People v. Perez, 129 P.3d 1090 (Colo. App. 2005).

Section does not require two overt acts to be committed. Section requires assuming a false identity and doing an act with the intent to gain a benefit. Giving a fictitious name to police because the defendant was on parole from another state satisfies both requirements. People v. Johnson, 30 P.3d 718 (Colo. App. 2000).

Paragraphs (d) and (e) of subsection (1) may be construed independently of the first three paragraphs, and any construction need not relate back to them. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824 (1942).

Subsection (1)(e) criminalizes knowingly using a false or fictitious identity or capacity with the intent to unlawfully gain a benefit for himself or another person or to injure or defraud another person. Subsection (1)(e) requires the prosecution to prove one act and two culpable mental states. In this case, the defendant used a fictitious name to avoid arrest on an outstanding warrant to commit criminal impersonation. Alvarado v. People, 132 P.3d 1205 (Colo. 2006).

The requisite intent to gain a benefit may be inferred from the accused's knowing use of a false identity and the acknowledged intent to secure some advantage from the impersonation.

People v. Borrego, 738 P.2d 59 (Colo. App. 1987).

The common meaning of "assumes a false or fictitious identity" is not to hold oneself out as someone that he or she is not; it requires the assumption of the identity of another person, whether that other person is real or fictitious. People v. Jones, 841 P.2d 372 (Colo. App. 1992).

Attorney with suspended license guilty of criminal impersonation for practicing law. The court held that "continuing to represent himself as an attorney and performing legal work when he was aware that he had no valid license to do so amounts to the assumption of a false or fictitious capacity for purposes of the criminal impersonation statute." People v. Bauer, 80 P.3d 896 (Colo. App. 2003).

Failure to provide an accurate social security number was not equivalent to the assumption of another persona where such information was not the sole, identifying fact. People v. Jones, 841 P.2d 312 (Colo. App. 1992); Montes-Rodriguez v. People, 241 P.3d 924 (Colo. 2010).

Use of a false social security number did not constitute the assumption of a false capacity. A lender's requirements to obtain a loan are different from the legal requirements to obtain a loan. Montes-Rodriguez v. People, 241 P.3d 924 (Colo. 2010).

Even though he supplied a false social security number, defendant did not assume a false identity since he provided his correct name, address, birth date, and place of employment. Montes-Rodriguez v. People, 241 P.3d 924 (Colo. 2010).

Defendant's giving of a false birth date did not satisfy the "any other act" element of criminal impersonation under subsection (1)(e). People v. Peay, 5 P.3d 398 (Colo. App. 2000).

Passing falsified gift certificates. The second element of criminal impersonation, i.e., an act with intent unlawfully to gain a benefit or to defraud another, was met by the defendant's passing in exchange for property gift certificates falsified when a false name was written to facilitate the passing. The defendant knew the certificates, as signed, were false, and from this, intent to defraud could be inferred. Further, writing the false name demonstrated that the defendant knew he was not entitled to exchange the certificates for merchandise. People v. Brown, 193 Colo. 120, 562 P.2d 754 (1977).

Indictment under this section should allege that the injury or benefit mentioned in the section would accrue. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824 (1942).

Indictment sufficient. An indictment alleging that accused at a certain time and place did then and there wilfully, unlawfully, feloniously, and falsely impersonate another, and in such assumed character did agree to take, and did take a civil service examination given on a certain day, and by reason thereof did receive a certain sum of money from the person falsely impersonated, is sufficient and states a complete offense under this section. People v. Horkans, 109 Colo. 177, 123 P.2d 824 (1942).

Where no evidence that false name resulted in benefit, no guilty verdict. Where the prosecution failed to present evidence to the jury that the use of a false name would result in a benefit to the defendant, the evidence was insufficient to sustain a guilty verdict of criminal impersonation. People v. Shaw, 44 Colo. App. 533, 616 P.2d 185 (1980).

Trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding character witness testimony because defendant admitted to using a false social security number he knew was not his own, and any evidence pertaining to his character for truthfulness was irrelevant in that respect. People v. Montes-Rodriguez, 219 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 241 P.3d 924 (Colo. 2010).

Similarly, trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding evidence regarding whether or not defendant knew whose social security number he used. Because defendant admitted to using a social security number that was not his own, the evidence was irrelevant. People v. Montes-Rodriguez, 219 P.3d 340 (Colo. App. 2009), rev'd on other grounds, 241 P.3d 924 (Colo. 2010).

Defendant was not entitled to jury instruction that offense of false reporting to authorities was a lesser included offense of criminal impersonation because false reporting has the additional element of making or transmission of a report to law enforcement authorities. People v. Vasallo-Hernandez, 939 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1995).

Nor did evidence support jury instruction on offense of false reporting to authorities as a lesser non-included offense of criminal impersonation absent the initiation of affirmative action intended to communicate information. People v. Vasallo-Hernandez, 939 P.2d 440 (Colo. App. 1995).

Applied in People v. Stinson, 632 P.2d 631 (Colo. App. 1981).

18-5-114. Offering a false instrument for recording. (1) A person commits offering a false instrument for recording in the first degree if, knowing that a written instrument relating to or affecting real or personal property or directly affecting contractual relationships contains a material false statement or material false information, and with intent to defraud, he presents or offers it to a public office or a public employee, with the knowledge or belief that it will be registered, filed, or recorded or become a part of the records of that public office or public employee.

(2) Offering a false instrument for recording in the first degree is a class 5 felony.

(3) A person commits offering a false instrument for recording in the second degree if, knowing that a written instrument relating to or affecting real or personal property or directly affecting contractual relationships contains a material false statement or material false information, he presents or offers it to a public office or a public employee, with the knowledge or belief that it will be registered, filed, or recorded or become a part of the records of that public office or public employee.

(4) Offering a false instrument for recording in the second degree is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 437, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-114. L. 80: Entire section amended, p. 536, § 1, effective April 13.

ANNOTATION

Comparison with section 18-8-114. Abuse of public records under § 18-8-114 was not meant to cover the offense of offering a false instrument for recording under this section. People v. Trujillo, 189 Colo. 23, 536 P.2d 46 (1975).

Information charging this offense must set forth alleged false statements, either verbatim or in substance. People v. Fueston, 717 P.2d 978 (Colo. App. 1985), aff'd in part and rev'd in part on other grounds, 749 P.2d 952 (Colo. 1988).

Offering a false instrument for recording in the second degree is a lesser included offense of offering a false instrument for recording in the first degree. People v. Freda, 817 P.2d 588 (Colo. App. 1991).

The use of an intermediary to file a false statement with a public office will not insulate a person from liability. Because there was evidence that defendant directed that medicaid billings be prepared with false information and that the defendant had knowledge that these forms would be submitted to the medicaid office, the trial court did not err in finding that there was sufficient evidence that the defendant "offered or presented" the billings. People v. Freda, 817 P.2d 588 (Colo. App. 1991).

Applied in People v. Swearingen, 649 P.2d 1102 (Colo. 1982), People v. Norman, 703 P.2d 1261 (Colo. 1985).

18-5-115. Charitable fraud. (Repealed)

Source: L. 75: Entire section added, p. 636, § 1, effective July 14. L. 77: (1)(b) and (1)(c) amended, p. 964, § 31, effective July 1. L. 84: (1)(a) amended and (1)(d) added, p. 546, § 1, effective April 12. L. 87: (1)(e) to (1)(g) added, p. 611, § 24, effective July 1. L. 88: Entire section repealed, p. 359, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-116. Controlled substances - inducing consumption by fraudulent means.

(1) It is unlawful for any person, surreptitiously or by means of fraud, misrepresentation, suppression of truth, deception, or subterfuge, to cause any other person to unknowingly consume or receive the direct administration of any controlled substance, as defined in section 18-18-102 (5); except that nothing in this section shall diminish the scope of health care authorized by law.

(2) Any person who violates the provisions of this section commits a class 4 felony.

Source: L. 80: Entire section added, p. 538, § 1, effective February 14. L. 81: (1) amended, p. 738, § 22, effective July 1. L. 2012: (1) amended, (HB 12-1311), ch. 281, p. 1619, § 45, effective July 1.

18-5-117. Unlawful possession of personal identifying information. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 1960, § 5, effective August 4. L. 2005: (3) amended, p. 766, § 28, effective June 1. L. 2006: Entire section repealed, p. 1318, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-118. Offenses involving forgery of a penalty assessment notice issued to a minor under the age of eighteen years - suspension of driving privilege. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2004: Entire section added, p. 1336, § 10, effective July 1, 2005. L. 2009: Entire section repealed, (HB 09-1266), ch. 347, p. 1815, § 3, effective August 5.

18-5-119. Theft of personal identifying information. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 847, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section repealed, p. 1318, § 4, effective July 1.

18-5-120. Gathering personal information by deception. (Repealed)

Source: L. 2005: Entire section added, p. 796, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section repealed, p. 1318, § 5, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section was originally numbered as § 18-5-119 in House Bill 05-1347 but was renumbered on revision for ease of location.

Cross references: For current provisions relating to gathering identity information by deception, see § 18-5-904.

PART 2

FRAUD IN OBTAINING PROPERTY OR SERVICES

18-5-201. Definitions. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 437, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-201. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 552, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-201.1. Definitions relating to guaranteed check cards. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire section added, p. 991, § 1, effective April 30. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 552, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-202. Fraudulent use of a credit device. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 437, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-202. L. 72: p. 593, § 68. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 552, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-202.1. Fraudulent use of guaranteed check card. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire section added, p. 991, § 1, effective April 30. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 552, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-203. Theft of credit device or guaranteed check card. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 438, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-203. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 552, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-204. Criminal possession of credit device or guaranteed check card. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 438, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-204. L. 84: Entire section repealed, p. 552, § 3, effective July 1.

18-5-205. Fraud by check - definitions - penalties. (1) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Check" means a written, unconditional order to pay a sum certain in money, drawn on a bank, payable on demand, and signed by the drawer. "Check", for the purposes of this section only, also includes a negotiable order of withdrawal and a share draft.

(b) "Drawee" means the bank upon which a check is drawn or a bank, savings and loan association, industrial bank, or credit union on which a negotiable order of withdrawal or a share draft is drawn.

(c) "Drawer" means a person, either real or fictitious, whose name appears on a check as the primary obligor, whether the actual signature be that of himself or of a person authorized to draw the check on himself.

(d) "Insufficient funds" means a drawer has insufficient funds with the drawee to pay a check when the drawer has no checking account, negotiable order of withdrawal account, or share draft account with the drawee or has funds in such an account with the drawee in an amount less than the amount of the check plus the amount of all other checks outstanding at the time of issuance; and a check dishonored for "no account" shall also be deemed to be dishonored for "insufficient funds".

(e) "Issue". A person issues a check when he makes, draws, delivers, or passes it or causes it to be made, drawn, delivered, or passed.

(f) "Negotiable order of withdrawal" and "share draft" mean negotiable or transferable instruments drawn on a negotiable order of withdrawal account or a share draft account, as the case may be, for the purpose of making payments to third persons or otherwise.

(g) "Negotiable order of withdrawal account" means an account in a bank, savings and loan association, or industrial bank, and "share draft account" means an account in a credit union, on which payment of interest or dividends may be made on a deposit with respect to which the bank, savings and loan association, or industrial bank or the credit union, as the case may be, may require the depositor to give notice of an intended withdrawal not less than thirty days before the withdrawal is made, even though in practice such notice is not required and the depositor is allowed to make withdrawal by negotiable order of withdrawal or share draft.

(2) Any person, knowing he has insufficient funds with the drawee, who, with intent to defraud, issues a check for the payment of services, wages, salary, commissions, labor, rent, money, property, or other thing of value, commits fraud by check.

(3) Fraud by check is:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1693, § 8, effective July 1, 2007.)

(b) A class 2 misdemeanor if the fraudulent check was for the sum of less than five hundred dollars or if the offender is convicted of fraud by check involving the issuance of two or more checks within a sixty-day period in the state of Colorado totaling less than five hundred dollars in the aggregate;

(b.5) A class 1 misdemeanor if the fraudulent check was for the sum of five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars or if the offender is convicted of fraud by check involving the issuance of two or more checks within a sixty-day period in the state of Colorado totaling five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars in the aggregate;

(c) A class 6 felony if the fraudulent check was for the sum of one thousand dollars or more, or if the offender is convicted of fraud by check involving the issuance of two or more checks within a sixty-day period in the state of Colorado totaling one thousand dollars or more in the aggregate, or if the offender has been twice previously convicted under this section or a former statute of this state of similar content and purport;

(d) A class 6 felony if the fraudulent check was drawn on an account which did not exist or which has been closed for a period of thirty days or more prior to the issuance of said check.

(4) Any person having acquired rights with respect to a check which is not paid because the drawer has insufficient funds shall have standing to file a complaint under this section, whether or not he is the payee, holder, or bearer of the check.

(5) Any person who opens a checking account, negotiable order of withdrawal account, or share draft account using false identification or an assumed name for the purpose of issuing fraudulent checks commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

(6) If deferred prosecution is ordered, the court as a condition of supervision shall require the defendant to make restitution on all checks issued by the defendant that are unpaid as of the date of commencement of the supervision in addition to other terms and conditions appropriate for the treatment or rehabilitation of the defendant.

(7) A bank, a savings and loan association, an industrial bank, or a credit union shall not be civilly or criminally liable for releasing information relating to the drawer's account to a sheriff, deputy sheriff, undersheriff, police officer, agent of the Colorado bureau of investigation, division of gaming investigator, division of lottery investigator, parks and outdoor recreation officer, Colorado wildlife officer, district attorney, assistant district attorney, deputy district attorney, or authorized investigator for a district attorney or the attorney general investigating or prosecuting a charge under this section.

(8) This section does not relieve the prosecution from the necessity of establishing the required culpable mental state. However, for purposes of this section, the issuer's knowledge of insufficient funds is presumed, except in the case of a postdated check or order, if:

(a) He has no account upon which the check or order is drawn with the bank or other drawee at the time he issues the check or order; or

(b) He has insufficient funds upon deposit with the bank or other drawee to pay the check or order, on presentation within thirty days after issue.

(9) Restitution for offenses described in this section may be collected as a condition of pretrial diversion by a district attorney, an employee of a district attorney's office, or a person under contract with a district attorney's office. Such collection is governed by the provisions of article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S., and is not the collection of a debt.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 438, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-205. L. 72: p. 281, § 2. L. 75: (3) amended, p. 619, § 13, effective July 21. L. 77: (1), (2), (3)(b), (3)(c), and (5) R&RE and (3)(d) added, pp. 979, 980, §§ 1, 2, effective June 2. L. 80: (1)(a), (1)(b), (1)(d), (5), and (7) amended and (1)(f) and (1)(g) added, p. 539, § 1, effective April 13. L. 81: (3)(a), (3)(b), and (3)(c) amended and (8) added, p. 993, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 84: (3)(b) and (3)(c) amended, p. 538, § 12, effective July 1, 1985. L. 89: (3)(c) and (3)(d) amended, p. 834, § 55, effective July 1. L. 92: (3) amended, p. 435, § 6, effective April 10. L. 93: (3) amended, p. 971, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (7) amended, p. 1719, § 13, effective July 1. L. 98: (3)(b) and (3)(c) amended, p. 1438, § 15, effective July 1; (3)(b) and (3)(c) amended, p. 796, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2000: (6) amended, p. 1050, § 17, effective September 1. L. 2002: (9) added, p. 760, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2003: (7) amended, p. 1632, § 77, effective August 6. L. 2007: (3)(a), (3)(b), and (3)(c) amended and (3)(b.5) added, p. 1693, § 8, effective July 1.

Cross references: (1) For issuance of a bad check, see § 18-5-512.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsections (3)(a), (3)(b), and (3)(c) and enacting subsection (3)(b.5), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For comment on Moore v. People (124 Colo. 197, 235 P.2d 798 (1951)), see 24 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 123 (1951). For note, "False Pretenses, Confidence Game, and Short Check in Colorado", see 25 Rocky Mt. L. Rev. 325 (1953). For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 36 Dicta 34 (1959). For article, "Criminal Law", which discusses Tenth Circuit decisions dealing with bank crime, see 61 Den. L.J. 255 (1984).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-5-205 is similar to former § 40-14-20, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

For history of section, see Moore v. People, 124 Colo. 197, 235 P.2d 798 (1951); People v. Gutierrez, 1 P.3d 241 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section gives fair warning of forbidden conduct so that men of common intelligence can understand the statute's meaning and application. People v. Quinn, 190 Colo. 534, 549 P.2d 1332 (1976).

For the unconstitutionality of subsection (2) before the 1977 amendment, see People v. Quinn, 190 Colo. 534, 549 P.2d 1332 (1976).

For the unconstitutionality of former version of section, see People v. Vinnola, 177 Colo. 405, 494 P.2d 826 (1972).

For the former definition of "insufficient funds" which was invalid, see People v. Vinnola, 177 Colo. 405, 494 P.2d 826 (1972).

Liability is imposed by the writing of the check, and not by a bank's subsequent failure to honor it. The language of the current statute satisfies the standard set out in People v. Vinnola (177 Colo. 405, 494 P.2d 826 (1972)), which would construe as constitutional a statute which "creates a crime when the drawer knows at the time of issuance that the check will not be paid". People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

"Thing of value" construed. The right to possession and ownership of goods is a "thing of value" within the meaning of this section. People v. Kunzelman, 649 P.2d 340 (Colo. App. 1982).

Check must be written as payment for something of value. The requirement of subsection (2) that a check be for payment of "services, wages, salary, commissions, labor, rent, money, property, or other thing of value", means only that the check may be written as payment for anything of value, including the above-named items. People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

District court erred in reasoning that defendant could not be convicted because she had not obtained "thing of value" in exchange for check when prosecution presented sufficient evidence for a jury to determine that the short check was issued for "wages". People v. Steerman, 735 P.2d 876 (Colo. 1987).

The issuance of an insufficient funds check in payment, or partial payment, of a pre-existing debt can constitute fraud by check. The plain meaning of "for the payment of" is not limited to a contemporaneous exchange. The check need not induce the giving of things of value because a causal relationship between the issuance of the check and the act of obtaining the thing of value is no longer necessary. People v. Gutierrez, 1 P.3d 241 (Colo. App. 1999).

"Money" includes loan proceeds. Therefore, the payment of an outstanding loan is payment for "money". People v. Gutierrez, 1 P.3d 241 (Colo. App. 1999).

General rule that criminal intent will be presumed from commission of the unlawful act does not apply under this section, because the crime consists of the act combined with a specific intent, and proof of the commission of the act does not warrant any presumption that defendant had specific intent to defraud. Before the defendant can be convicted, it must be shown that he intended to defraud, and did defraud, the complaining witness. Moore v. People, 124 Colo. 197, 235 P.2d 798 (1951); Shreeves v. People, 126 Colo. 413, 249 P.2d 1020 (1952).

The law does not allow an intent to defraud to be presumed whenever a bank refuses to honor a check. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

Prosecution will not be permitted to utilize presumption of guilt as basis for obtaining conviction. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

Specific intent to defraud payee is necessary element of proof in the commission of this offense. People v. Meller, 185 Colo. 389, 524 P.2d 1366 (1974).

Specific intent to deceive must be demonstrated. This section requires the prosecution to demonstrate that the defendant formed a specific intent to deceive in order to sustain a verdict of guilty. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

Prosecution must prove drawer of check knew there were insufficient funds in his account to pay the check. People v. Kanan, 186 Colo. 255, 526 P.2d 1339 (1974).

Intent to defraud negated. The intent to defraud the payee would be conclusively negated if a defendant disclosed, at the time of the issuance of a check, that he did not have sufficient funds on deposit to cover the check. People v. Meller, 185 Colo. 389, 524 P.2d 1366 (1974).

Specific intent not negated by subsequent restitution. Neither the defendant's belated, partial payment of the check nor his promise to pay off the balance in the near future serves to negate, as a matter of law, probable cause to believe that the defendant had the specific intent to defraud when the check was issued. People v. Taylor, 655 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1982).

The fact that defendant at some time after the check was cashed attempted to make restitution, or tried to undo the wrong, is not a defense; nor does such conduct negate, as a matter of law, a finding of the specific intent to defraud. People v. Nicholas, 700 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1984).

It is the defendant's state of mind at the time of the issuance of the check which is determinative of his criminal liability for fraud by check, not his state of mind at some time subsequent to the completion of the transaction. The making of restitution in order to compensate a victim for a loss caused by the accused's past conduct is not a legal defense to a criminal charge based upon that conduct. People v. Taylor, 655 P.2d 382 (Colo. 1982).

Postdated check implies notice of insufficient funds. A postdated check, in the absence of a present representation that the check is good, carries on its face implied notice that the maker does not presently have sufficient funds on deposit to pay the check, but before this notice will be implied, the payee must be made aware that the check is, in fact, postdated. People v. Meller, 185 Colo. 389, 524 P.2d 1366 (1974); People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

Function of jury to consider question of intent. In a prosecution for obtaining property by means of a worthless check, where defendant contended that he did not intend to defraud or deceive anyone by issuing a check on a bank in which he had no account, it was the function of the jury to pass on the question of intent from a consideration of all the testimony, and its verdict if amply supported by the evidence will not be disturbed. Parrott v. People, 144 Colo. 587, 357 P.2d 634 (1960).

Intent evidenced by absence of funds in bank. Where defendant passed a short check without resorting to any fraudulent scheme by which he sought to obtain the confidence of the complaining witness, and no special confidence was reposed in defendant, such case comes squarely within the terms of this section, if there was intent to defraud, which is clearly evidenced by the fact that defendant had no funds whatever in the bank at the time he gave the check. People v. Lindsay, 119 Colo. 248, 202 P.2d 951 (1949).

Convictions for fraud by check vacated where jury instruction had the effect of removing the "knowing" element by creating a mandatory presumption that defendant knew he had insufficient funds to pay the check. Such an instruction violates due process by shifting the burden of producing evidence or the burden of persuasion on an essential element of the crime. People v. Felgar, 58 P.3d 1122 (Colo. App. 2002).

Probable cause to support crime. At a preliminary hearing, evidence that the defendant issued a check knowing that he had insufficient funds to pay the check, that he failed to deliver a trade-in vehicle as part payment for his purchase, and that he failed to take actions which would have placed funds into his account establishes probable cause to believe that the defendant had the intent to defraud at the time he issued the check. People v. Spurrier, 712 P.2d 486 (Colo. 1986).

Evidence of financial resources is relevant.

Evidence that defendant's stepbrother had the financial ability to make an expected deposit into defendant's account, which would tend to corroborate in part defendant's testimony, is relevant in dealing with whether defendant had the specific intent to defraud. Nora v. People, 176 Colo. 454, 491 P.2d 62 (1971).

Evidence of plan, design, and scheme was material to show intent to defraud. People v. Lindsay, 119 Colo. 248, 202 P.2d 951 (1949).

The argument of a defendant convicted of issuing a check on a bank in which he did not have sufficient funds that the admission of evidence of other checks did not tend to prove intent, design, or motive in the commission of the charge being tried because of the remoteness of time of the other checks involved, is without merit where the checks were all passed within one month prior to the issuance of the check on which defendant was convicted. Van Pelt v. People, 173 Colo. 201, 476 P.2d 999 (1970).

Subsection (4) not limitation on filing felony actions. Subsection (4), giving specific authority for certain individuals to file a complaint, refers only to those persons who may file a complaint for petty offense or misdemeanor fraud by check and not to felony fraud by check, which is commenced by filing of a felony complaint. Thus, this provision does not operate to limit filing of complaints in felony actions to persons having acquired rights with respect to a check. People v. Abbott, 638 P.2d 781 (Colo. 1981).

Instruction on lesser included offense refused. The contention of defendant who was convicted of issuing a check for $100 on a bank in which he did not have sufficient funds, that he was entitled to an instruction on the lesser included offense of issuing a short check under $100, is without merit where in evidence was the check which on its face was for the sum of $100; a check cannot be for a sum and under that sum at the same time. Van Pelt v. People, 173 Colo. 201, 476 P.2d 999 (1970).

Even though there was no proof as to the date the check was presented for collection and therefore the prosecution could not use the statutory presumption of knowledge, the prosecution's evidence was nonetheless sufficient to support a guilty verdict on a charge of fraud by check. People v. Nicholas, 700 P.2d 921 (Colo. App. 1984).

No expectation of privacy. In bad check cases, the drawer loses any expectation of privacy in the bank accounts being investigated and the banks were entitled to reveal the existence and status of such accounts to the government. People v. Lopez, 776 P.2d 390 (Colo. 1989); People v. Selph, 786 P.2d 1078 (Colo. 1989).

Applied in People ex rel. Metzger v. District Court, 119 Colo. 451, 208 P.2d 79 (1949); Best v. People ex rel. Florum, 121 Colo. 100, 212 P.2d 1007 (1949); People ex rel. Metzger v. District Court, 121 Colo. 141, 215 P.2d 327 (1949); People v. Jones, 176 Colo. 61, 489 P.2d 596 (1971); White v. District Court, 180 Colo. 152, 503 P.2d 342 (1972); People v. Emig, 191 Colo. 223, 552 P.2d 312 (1976); Brennan v. Zapien, 470 F. Supp. 1300 (D. Colo. 1979); People v. Mason, 643 P.2d 745 (Colo. 1982).

18-5-206. Defrauding a secured creditor or debtor. (1) If a person, with intent to defraud a creditor by defeating, impairing, or rendering worthless or unenforceable any security interest, sells, assigns, transfers, conveys, pledges, encumbers, conceals, destroys, or disposes of any collateral subject to a security interest:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1694, § 9, effective July 1, 2007.)

(b) The person commits a class 2 misdemeanor if the value of the collateral is less than five hundred dollars;

(b.5) The person commits a class 1 misdemeanor if the value of the collateral is five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars;

(c) The person commits a class 5 felony if the value of the collateral is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars; and

(d) The person commits a class 3 felony if the value of the collateral is twenty thousand dollars or more.

(2) If a creditor, with intent to defraud a debtor, sells, assigns, transfers, conveys, pledges, buys, or encumbers a promissory note or contract signed by the debtor:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1694, § 9, effective July 1, 2007.)

(b) The creditor commits a class 2 misdemeanor if the amount owing on the note or contract is less than five hundred dollars;

(b.5) The creditor commits a class 1 misdemeanor if the amount owing on the note or contract is five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars;

(c) The creditor commits a class 5 felony if the amount owing on the note or contract is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars; and

(d) The creditor commits a class 3 felony if the amount owing on the note or contract is twenty thousand dollars or more.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 440, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-206. L. 75: Entire section amended, p. 620, § 14, effective July 21. L. 77: Entire section R&RE, p. 975, § 6, effective July 1. L. 84: (1)(b), (1)(c), (2)(b), and (2)(c) amended, p. 538, § 13, effective July 1, 1985. L. 89: (1)(c) and (2)(c) amended, p. 835, § 56, effective July 1. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 436, § 7, effective April 10. L. 98: (1)(b), (1)(c), (2)(b), and (2)(c) amended, p. 1439, § 16, effective July 1; (1)(b), (1)(c), (2)(b), and (2)(c) amended, p. 796, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2007: Entire section amended, p. 1694, § 9, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 36 Dicta 34 (1959).

Applied in People v. Brigner, 978 P.2d 163 (Colo. App. 1999).

This section applies to any valid security interest, perfected or not. People v. Armijo, 197 Colo. 91, 589 P.2d 935 (1979).

18-5-207. Purchase on credit to defraud. A person who purchases any personal property on credit and thereafter, before paying for it, sells, hypothecates, pledges, or disposes of it with intent to defraud the seller or vendor commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 440, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-207.

ANNOTATION

Purpose of section. This section was not intended to have any effect whatever in the determination of the validity or invalidity of any contracts of sale made by the vendor. In this respect, it extended no greater protection to the creditor than the law gave him before this section was enacted. It is simply a penal statute, intended to punish the man guilty under its provisions. Nicholls v. McShane, 16 Colo. App. 165, 64 P. 375 (1901) (decided under former section).

18-5-208. Dual contracts to induce loan. It is a class 3 misdemeanor for any person to knowingly make, issue, deliver, or receive dual contracts for the purchase or sale of real property. The term "dual contracts", either written or oral, means two separate contracts concerning the same parcel of real property, one of which states the true and actual purchase price and one of which states a purchase price in excess of the true and actual purchase price, and is used, or intended to be used, to induce persons to make a loan or a loan commitment on such real property in reliance upon the stated inflated value.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 440, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-208.

18-5-209. Issuing a false financial statement - obtaining a financial transaction device by false statements. (1) A person commits issuing a false financial statement if, with intent to defraud, he:

(a) Knowingly makes or utters a written instrument which purports to describe the financial condition or ability to pay of himself or another person and which is false in some material respect and reasonably relied upon; or

(b) Represents in writing that a written instrument purporting to describe another person's financial condition or ability to pay as of a prior date is accurate with respect to that person's current financial condition or ability to pay, knowing the instrument to be materially false in that respect and reasonably relied upon.

(2) Issuing a false financial statement is a class 2 misdemeanor.

(3) A person commits issuing a false financial statement for purposes of obtaining a financial transaction device, as defined in section 18-5-701 (3), if, with intent to defraud, upon filing an application for a financial transaction device with an issuer, he knowingly makes or causes to be made a false statement or report, which is false in some material respect and reasonably relied upon, relative to his name, occupation, financial condition, assets, or liabilities or willfully and substantially overvalues any assets or willfully omits or substantially undervalues any indebtedness for the purpose of influencing the issuer to issue a financial transaction device.

(4) Issuing a false financial statement for purposes of obtaining a financial transaction device when such device is used to obtain property or services or money is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(5) Issuing two or more false financial statements for purposes of obtaining two or more financial transaction devices when such devices are used to obtain property or services or money is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 441, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-209. L. 84: (3) to (5) added, p. 548, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (5) amended, p. 835, § 57, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-5-209 is similar to former G.S. § 884, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

The ingredients of the offense are the obtainment of money by false pretenses with intent to defraud. Morris v. People, 4 Colo. App. 136, 35 P. 188 (1893).

Defendant's false representation must be shown. To sustain a conviction under this section, it is necessary to show that the representation of the defendant of his responsibility or wealth was false when made. Morris v. People, 4 Colo. App. 136, 35 P. 188 (1893).

And also proof that someone suffered harm. The offense can only be committed by the obtainment of credit on false representations coupled with proof that as a result of it some person has suffered harm. Morris v. People, 4 Colo. App. 136, 35 P. 188 (1893).

But it is not necessary that an intention to defraud any particular person should exist. If the false report which has been procured results in defrauding any person of his property, the offense is complete whether the offender had such person in mind or not. An indictment setting forth that the person charged caused others to report falsely of his honesty, wealth, or mercantile character, and that by means of the report some person or persons, naming them, were imposed upon so that they extended credit to the offender, and that he thereby obtained possession of their property, would contain substantially all the facts necessary to constitute an offense. Schayer v. People, 5 Colo. App. 75, 37 P. 43 (1894).

18-5-210. Receiving deposits in a failing financial institution. A person commits a class 6 felony if, as an officer, manager, or other person participating in the direction of a financial institution, he knowingly receives or permits the receipt of a deposit or investment, knowing that the institution is insolvent. A financial institution is insolvent within the meaning of this section when from any cause it is unable to pay its obligations in the ordinary or usual course of business or its liabilities exceed its assets.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 441, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-210. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 835, § 58, effective July 1.

PART 3

FRAUDULENT AND DECEPTIVE SALES AND BUSINESS PRACTICES

18-5-301. Fraud in effecting sales. (1) A person commits a class 2 misdemeanor if, in the course of business, he knowingly:

- (a) Uses or possesses for use a false weight or measure, or any other device for falsely determining or recording any quality or quantity; or
- (b) Sells, offers, or exposes for sale or delivers less than the represented quantity of any commodity or service; or
- (c) Takes or attempts to take more than the represented quantity of any commodity or service when as buyer he furnishes the weight or measure; or
- (d) Sells, offers, or exposes for sale an adulterated or mislabeled commodity. "Adulterated" means varying from the standard of composition or quality prescribed by or pursuant to any statute of the state of Colorado or the United States providing criminal penalties for such variance, or set by established commercial usage. "Mislabeled" means varying from the standard of truth or disclosure in labeling prescribed or pursuant to any statute of the state of Colorado or the United States providing criminal penalties for such variance, or set by established commercial usage; or
- (e) Makes a false or misleading statement in any advertisement addressed to the public or to a substantial segment thereof for the purpose of promoting the purchase or sale of property or services.
- (f) Repealed.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 441, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-301. L. 79: (1)(f) repealed, p. 730, § 11, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Criminal Prosecutions under the Colorado Securities Act", see 47 U. Colo. L. Rev. 233 (1976).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-5-301 is similar to former CSA, C. 48, § 317, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

The state of Colorado has exercised its police power by proscribing false and misleading statements in advertising with a criminal sanction. Ve-ri-tas, Inc. v. Advertising Review Council of Metro. Denver, Inc., 411 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1976), aff'd, 567 F.2d 963 (10th Cir. 1977).

And has not violated first amendment freedoms. The state of Colorado can sanction false and misleading advertising through the criminal process without violating first amendment freedoms. Ve-ri-tas, Inc. v. Advertising Review Council of Metro. Denver, Inc., 411 F. Supp. 1012 (D. Colo. 1976), aff'd, 567 F.2d 963 (10th Cir. 1977).

This section is sufficiently broad to cover practically every known method of public announcement which can be made or circulated by means of printed matter. People v. Byrnes, 117 Colo. 528, 190 P.2d 584 (1948).

Publication need not be in newspaper. To hold that in order to violate the provisions of this section the publication must be made in a newspaper is to unduly restrict the meaning of the act and wholly disregard its plain and unambiguous provisions. People v. Byrnes, 117 Colo. 528, 190 P.2d 584 (1948).

Conspiracy to effect sales. If a defendant's agents and solicitors, in cooperation and agreement with him, make false and misleading statements in order to effectuate sales of defendant's publications, the latter is guilty of a conspiracy to effect sales under the provisions of this section. People v. Byrnes, 117 Colo. 528, 190 P.2d 584 (1948).

Truth of statements is a jury question. Whether written statements and representations concerning a book to be published were untrue and misleading was for the jury. People v. Byrnes, 117 Colo. 528, 190 P.2d 584 (1948).

18-5-302. Unlawful activity concerning the selling of land. (1) Any person who, after once selling, bartering, or disposing of any land, or executing any bond or agreement for sale of any land, again sells, barters, or disposes of the same tract of land or any part thereof, or executes any bond or agreement to sell or barter or dispose of the same land or any part thereof, to any other person, with intent to defraud, commits selling land twice. Selling land twice is a class 5 felony.

(2) Any person who knowingly makes a false representation as to the existence of an ownership interest in land which he has as a seller or which his principal has, and which is relied upon, commits a class 6 felony.

(3) A person who signs a lien waiver for a construction loan under section 38-22-119,

C.R.S., and knowingly fails to timely pay any debts resulting from a construction agreement covered by the waiver commits a class 1 misdemeanor, unless there is a bona fide dispute as to the existence or amount of the debt.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 442, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-302. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 835, § 59, effective July 1. L. 2009: (3) added, (SB 09-137), ch. 145, p. 610, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

The second sale must be for a consideration to make out a case under this section. Clement v. Major, 1 Colo. App. 297, 29 P. 19 (1892); Clement v. Major, 8 Colo. App. 86, 44 P. 776 (1896)(both cases decided under former G.S. § 888).

Term "ownership interest in land" not vague. The term "ownership interest in land", in the context of a false representation made to another, is not so vague or uncertain that persons of ordinary intelligence must guess as to its meaning or necessarily differ as to its application. People v. Alexander, 663 P.2d 1024 (Colo. 1983).

Subsection (2) requires actual reliance by the victim, without regard to how a reasonable person might have understood and reacted to the misrepresentation, and this requirement of actual reliance satisfies due process standards. People v. Alexander, 663 P.2d 1024 (Colo. 1983).

True representation not basis for conviction. This section does not permit a conviction for the making of a true representation as to an ownership interest in land, notwithstanding the fact that the true representation may create a false or mistaken belief in the victim with respect to the nature of the seller's interest in the land. People v. Alexander, 663 P.2d 1024 (Colo. 1983).

18-5-303. Bait advertising. (1) A person commits bait advertising if, in any manner, including advertising or any other means of communication, he offers property or services as part of a scheme or plan, with the intent, plan, or purpose not to sell or provide the advertised property or services at all, or not at the price at which he offered them, or not in a quantity sufficient to meet the reasonable expected public demand, unless the quantity is specifically stated in the advertisement.

(2) It shall be an affirmative defense that a television or radio broadcasting station or a publisher or printer of a newspaper, magazine, or other form of printed advertising which broadcasted, published, or printed a false advertisement prohibited by section 18-5-301 (1) (e) or a bait advertisement prohibited by subsection (1) of this section or a telephone company which furnished service to a subscriber did so without knowledge of the advertiser's or subscriber's intent, plan, or purpose.

(3) Bait advertising is a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 442, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-303. L. 73: p. 538, § 3.

Cross references: For affirmative defenses generally, see §§ 18-1-407, 18-1-710, and 18-1-805.

ANNOTATION

This section and § 42-5-102 (2) prescribe different, albeit related, criminal conduct. People v. Bossert, 722 P.2d 998 (Colo. 1986).

18-5-304. False statements as to circulation. It is a class 1 petty offense for any person engaged in the publication of any newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other advertising medium published in the state of Colorado or for any employee of any such publisher knowingly to make any statement concerning the circulation of the newspaper, magazine, periodical, or other advertising medium which is untrue or misleading where such publisher fixes his charges for advertising space in the publication on the amount of its circulation.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 442, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-304.

18-5-305. Identification number - altering - possession. (1) A person commits the crime of altering identification number if, with intent that identification of an article be hindered or prevented, he obscures an identification number or in the course of business he sells, offers for sale, leases, or otherwise disposes of an article knowing that an identification number thereon is obscured.

(2) "Identification number" means a serial or motor number placed by the manufacturer upon an article as a permanent individual identifying mark.

(3) "Obscure" means to destroy, remove, alter, conceal, or deface so as to render illegible by ordinary means of inspection.

(4) Possession of an article on which an identification number is obscured is prima facie evidence that the person possessing it obscured the number with intent to hinder or prevent identification of the article, and that he knows that the identification number is obscured, unless, prior to his arrest or the issuance of a warrant for a search of the premises where the article is kept, whichever is earlier, he reports possession of the article to the police or other appropriate law enforcement agency.

(5) Altering identification number is a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 442, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-305.

ANNOTATION

Obliteration of number is probable cause for arrest and seizure. Upon discovery that the serial number on a piece of equipment had been obliterated, this is evidence that a crime has been committed and there is probable cause to arrest and seize the property incident to the arrest. People v. Mangum, 189 Colo. 246, 539 P.2d 120 (1975).

18-5-306. Counterfeit or imitation controlled substances. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire section added, p. 995, § 1, effective July 1; (1)(a) amended, p. 2031, § 46, effective January 1, 1982. L. 83: Entire section repealed, p. 704, § 4, effective July 1.

18-5-307. Fee paid to private employment agencies. (1) As used in this section:

(a) "Applicant" means any person applying to a private employment agency in order to secure employment with any person, firm, association, or corporation other than the private employment agency.

(b) "Employment" means every character of service rendered or to be rendered for wages, salary, commission, or other form of remuneration.

(b.5) "Fee-paid position" means a position of employment which is available to an applicant where no fee or cost accrues to the applicant as a condition of obtaining such position.

(c) (I) "Private employment agency" means any nongovernmental person, firm, association, or corporation which secures or attempts to secure employment, arranges an interview between an applicant and a specific employer other than itself, or, by any form of advertising or representation, holds itself out to a prospective applicant as able to secure employment for the applicant with any person, firm, association, or corporation other than itself, or engages in employment counseling and in connection therewith supplies or represents that it is able to supply employers or available jobs, where an applicant may become liable for the payment of a fee, either directly or indirectly.

(II) "Private employment agency" also means any nongovernmental person, firm, association, or corporation which provides a list of potential employers or available jobs in a publication, if the primary purpose of the publication, as represented by the provider, is to enable applicants to find employment or to list available jobs and if the applicant is charged more than twenty dollars within any period of time of thirty days or less for access to the publication or revisions or updates thereof, unless the listings of all jobs in the publication are initiated by employers rather than the provider.

(2) Any fee paid by an applicant to a private employment agency shall be by written contractual agreement which includes specific provisions for refunds and extended payment options. The exclusion of said options from the contractual agreement shall be explicitly stated in said agreement.

(3) No fee shall be charged by a private employment agency until an applicant is placed in employment.

(4) In the event employment terminates for any reason within one hundred calendar days, an applicant shall not be required to pay a fee to a private employment agency in excess of one percent of the total fee for each calendar day elapsed between the beginning and termination of employment. For purposes of this subsection (4), the amount of the total fee shall be based on the actual gross income earned, annualized in accordance with the contractual fee schedule.

(5) In the event employment terminates for any reason within one hundred calendar days, a private employment agency shall refund any portion of a fee paid by an applicant in excess of the limits specified in subsection (4) of this section. Such a refund shall be made in full within seven calendar days of said agency's receipt of written notification of the termination of employment; except that, if it has not been determined within that period of time that the instrument used to pay the fee is backed by sufficient funds, the refund is due upon such determination. If a refund is not made when due, the private employment agency is liable to the applicant for the refund due plus an additional sum equal to the amount of the refund.

(5.5) It shall be unlawful for any private employment agency knowingly to do or cause to be done any of the following:

(a) Send an applicant to any fictitious job or position or make any false representation concerning the availability of employment;

(b) Send an applicant to any place where a strike or lockout exists or is impending without notifying the applicant of the circumstances;

(c) Conspire or arrange with any employer to secure the discharge of an employee or give or receive any gratuity or divide or share with an employer any fee, charge, or remuneration received from any applicant for employment;

(d) Circulate or publish, by advertisement or otherwise, any false statements or representations to persons seeking employment or to employers seeking employees;

(e) Fail to refund fees to an applicant where such refund is due pursuant to subsection (5) of this section;

(f) Advertise or represent the availability of fee-paid positions where no cost accrues to the applicant if hired in such a manner as to confuse such position with other available positions which are not available on a fee-paid basis;

(g) Advertise or represent that an available position is available on a free or no fee basis or otherwise indicate that no charge or cost accrues to anyone when in fact the employer is obligated to pay a fee contingent upon the acceptance of employment of the applicant;

(h) Advertise for any position, including personnel for its own staff, without identifying in the advertisement that it is a private employment agency.

(6) A private employment agency or any employee of such agency commits a misdemeanor if said agency or employee knowingly violates any provision of this section. An agency found guilty of such a crime shall be subject to a fine of not more than one thousand dollars per conviction, and any employee of such agency found directly responsible for committing acts in violation of this section shall be subject to a fine of not more than one thousand dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than one year in the county jail, or by both such fine and imprisonment.

(7) A private employment agency which has been convicted of a misdemeanor pursuant to this article, or any person connected therewith pursuant to paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of this section prior to conducting business in this state after such conviction, regardless of how classified as person, firm, association, or corporation, shall file with the department of labor and employment a cash or corporate surety bond in the sum of twenty thousand dollars. Such bond shall be executed by the private employment agency as principal and by a surety company authorized to do business in this state. Said private employment agency shall maintain such bond in effect as long as it conducts business in this state. Any person who suffers loss or damage as the result of a violation of this article, including any person who is owed a refund or any part thereof pursuant to subsections (4) and (5) of this section, may recover against the bond to the extent of the loss or damage suffered. A surety on any bond filed under the provisions of this section shall be released therefrom after such surety serves written notice thereof to the department of labor and employment at least sixty days prior to such release. Said release shall not discharge or otherwise affect any claim for loss or damage which occurred while said bond was in effect or which occurred under any contract executed during any period of time when said bond was in effect, except when another bond is filed in a like amount and provides indemnification for any such loss. The sole responsibilities of the department of labor and employment under this subsection (7) shall be to serve as a repository of bonds filed pursuant to this subsection (7) and to notify the district attorney in the county in which a private employment agency is located when the department of labor and employment receives written notice from a surety seeking release from a bond that has been filed with the department of labor and employment by said private employment agency pursuant to this subsection (7). A private employment agency that violates the provisions of this section with regard to any three or more different applicants in any one-year period shall be deemed a class 1 public nuisance and shall be subject to the provisions of part 3 of article 13 of title 16, C.R.S. Any surety bond filed by such agency shall be forfeited and the proceeds distributed as provided in section 16-13-311, C.R.S.

Source: L. 83: Entire section added, p. 699, § 1, effective June 10. L. 88: (1)(b.5), (5.5), and (7) added and (1)(c) amended, pp. 346, 347, §§ 13, 14, effective July 1.

18-5-308. Electronic mail fraud. (1) A person commits electronic mail fraud if he or she violates any provision of 18 U.S.C. sec. 1037 (a).

(2) This section shall not apply to a provider of internet access service, as defined in 47 U.S.C. sec. 231, who does not initiate the commercial electronic mail message.

(3) Electronic mail fraud is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that a second or subsequent offense within two years is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 2008: Entire section added, p. 596, § 2, effective August 5.

18-5-309. Money laundering - illegal investments - penalty - definitions. (1) A person commits money laundering if he or she:

(a) Conducts or attempts to conduct a financial transaction that involves money or any other thing of value that he or she knows or believes to be the proceeds, in any form, of a criminal offense:

(I) With the intent to promote the commission of a criminal offense; or

(II) With knowledge or a belief that the transaction is designed in whole or in part to:

(A) Conceal or disguise the nature, location, source, ownership, or control of the proceeds of a criminal offense; or

(B) Avoid a transaction reporting requirement under federal law;

(b) Transports, transmits, or transfers a monetary instrument or moneys:

(I) With the intent to promote the commission of a criminal offense; or

(II) With knowledge or a belief that the monetary instrument or moneys represent the proceeds of a criminal offense and that the transportation, transmission, or transfer is designed, in whole or in part, to:

(A) Conceal or disguise the nature, location, source, ownership, or control of the proceeds of a criminal offense; or

(B) Avoid a transaction reporting requirement under federal law; or

(c) Intentionally conducts a financial transaction involving property that is represented to be the proceeds of a criminal offense, or involving property that the person knows or believes to have been used to conduct or facilitate a criminal offense, to:

(I) Promote the commission of a criminal offense;

(II) Conceal or disguise the nature, location, source, ownership, or control of property that the person believes to be the proceeds of a criminal offense; or

(III) Avoid a transaction reporting requirement under federal law.

(2) Money laundering is a class 3 felony.

(3) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Conducts or attempts to conduct a financial transaction" includes, but is not limited to, initiating, concluding, or participating in the initiation or conclusion of a transaction.

(b) "Financial transaction" means a transaction involving:

(I) The movement of moneys by wire or other means;

(II) One or more monetary instruments;

(III) The transfer of title to any real property, vehicle, vessel, or aircraft; or

(IV) The use of a financial institution.

(c) "Monetary instrument" means:

(I) Coin or currency of the United States or any other country; a traveler's check; a personal check; a bank check; a cashier's check; a money order; a bank draft of any country; or gold, silver, or platinum bullion or coins;

(II) An investment security or negotiable instrument in bearer form or in other form such that title passes upon delivery; or

(III) A gift card or other device that is the equivalent of money and can be used to obtain cash, property, or services.

(d) "Represent" includes, but is not limited to, the making of a representation by a peace officer, a federal officer, or another person acting at the direction of, or with the approval of, a peace officer or federal officer.

(e) "Transaction" includes a purchase, sale, loan, pledge, gift, transfer, delivery, or other disposition and, with respect to a financial institution, includes a deposit; a withdrawal; a transfer between accounts; an exchange of currency; a loan; an extension of credit; a purchase or sale of any stock, bond, certificate of deposit, or other monetary instrument; the use of a safe deposit box; or any other payment, transfer, or delivery by, through, or to a financial institution by whatever means.

Source: L. 2010: Entire section added, (HB 10-1081), ch. 256, p. 1138, § 1, effective August 11.

PART 4

BRIBERY AND RIGGING OF CONTESTS

18-5-401. Commercial bribery and breach of duty to act disinterestedly. (1) A person commits a class 6 felony if he solicits, accepts, or agrees to accept any benefit as consideration for knowingly violating or agreeing to violate a duty of fidelity to which he is subject as:

(a) Agent or employee; or

(b) Trustee, guardian, or other fiduciary; or

(c) Lawyer, physician, accountant, appraiser, or other professional adviser; or

(d) Officer, director, partner, manager, or other participant in the direction of the affairs of an incorporated or unincorporated association; or

(e) Duly elected or appointed representative or trustee of a labor organization or employee welfare trust fund; or

(f) Arbitrator or other purportedly disinterested adjudicator or referee.

(2) A person who holds himself out to the public as being engaged in the business of making disinterested selection, appraisal, or criticism of commodities, property, or services commits a class 6 felony if he knowingly solicits, accepts, or agrees to accept any benefit to alter, modify, or change his selection, appraisal, or criticism.

(3) A person commits a class 6 felony if he confers or offers or agrees to confer any benefit the acceptance of which would be a felony under subsections (1) and (2) of this section.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 443, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-401. L. 77: (2) amended, p. 964, § 32, effective July 1. L. 89: IP(1), (2), and (3) amended, p. 835, § 60, effective July 1.

Cross references: For bribery of a public servant, see § 18-8-302.

ANNOTATION

Constitutionality of subsection (1)(a) and (1)(d). Subsection (1)(a) and (1)(d) is not void for vagueness and provides sufficient notice that conduct contemplated by the defendants was prohibited so as to serve as predicate acts for RICO prosecution and also provides a sufficiently clear, objective standard to satisfy due process. U.S. v. Gaudreau, 860 F.2d 357 (10th Cir. 1988).

Statute does not unconstitutionally delegate legislative power to private persons to define duty of fidelity. People v. Lee, 717 P.2d 493 (Colo. 1986).

18-5-402. Rigging publicly exhibited contests. (1) A person commits a class 3 misdemeanor if, with the intent to prevent a publicly exhibited or advertised contest from being conducted in accordance with the rules and usages purporting to govern it, he:

(a) Confers or offers or agrees to confer any benefit upon, or threatens any detriment to a participant, official, or other person associated with the contest or exhibition; or

(b) Tampers with any person, animal, or thing; or

(c) Knowingly solicits, accepts, or agrees to accept any benefit the conferring of which is prohibited by paragraph (a) of this subsection (1).

(2) A person commits a class 3 misdemeanor if he knowingly engages in, sponsors, produces, judges, or otherwise participates in a publicly exhibited or advertised contest knowing that the contest is not being conducted in compliance with the rules and usages purporting to govern it, by reason of conduct prohibited by this section.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 443, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-402.

18-5-403. Bribery in sports. (1) As used in this section:

(a) "Sports contest" means any professional or amateur sport or athletic game, race, or contest viewed by the public.

(b) "Sports participant" means any person who participates or expects to participate in a sports contest as a player, contestant, or member of a team, or as a coach, manager, trainer, owner, or other person directly associated with a player, contestant, team, or entry.

(c) "Sports official" means any person who acts or expects to act in a sports contest as an umpire, referee, judge, or otherwise to officiate at a sports contest.

(2) A person commits bribery in sports if:

(a) He confers, or offers or agrees to confer, any benefit upon or threatens any detriment to a sports participant with intent to influence him not to give his best efforts in a sports contest; or

(b) He confers, or offers or agrees to confer, any benefit upon or threatens any detriment to a sports official with intent to influence him to perform his duties improperly; or

(c) Being a sports participant, he knowingly accepts, agrees to accept, or solicits any benefit from another person upon an understanding that he will thereby be influenced not to give his best efforts in a sports contest; or

(d) Being a sports official, he knowingly accepts, agrees to accept, or solicits any benefit from another person upon an understanding that he will perform his duties improperly; or

(e) With intent to influence the outcome of a sports contest, he tampers with any sports participant, sports official, or any animal or equipment or other thing involved in the conduct or operation of a sports contest in a manner contrary to the rules and usages purporting to govern such a contest.

(3) Bribery in sports is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 444, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-403. L. 77: (2)(c) and (2)(d) amended, p. 964, § 33, effective July 1. L. 89: (3) amended, p. 836, § 61, effective July 1.

PART 5

OFFENSES RELATING TO THE UNIFORM COMMERCIAL CODE

18-5-501. Definitions. The definitions set forth in the “Uniform Commercial Code”, title 4, C.R.S., shall apply to sections 18-5-502 to 18-5-511.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 444, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-501.

18-5-502. Failure to pay over assigned accounts. Where, under the terms of an assignment of an account, as defined in section 4-9-102 (a) (2), C.R.S., the assignor, being permitted to collect the proceeds from the debtor, is to pay over to the assignee any of the proceeds and, after collection thereof, the assignor willfully and wrongfully fails to pay over to the assignee the proceeds amounting to one thousand dollars or more, the person commits a class 5 felony. Where the amount of the proceeds withheld by the assignor is less than one thousand dollars, the person commits a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 444, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-502. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 836, § 62, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 796, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2001: Entire section amended, p. 1446, § 39, effective July 1. L. 2007: Entire section amended, p. 1695, § 10, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

18-5-503. Criminal liability of transferor of a bulk transfer. (Repealed)

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-503. L. 91: Entire section repealed, p. 270, § 8, effective July 1.

18-5-504. Concealment or removal of secured property. If a person who has given a security interest in personal property, as security interest is defined in section 4-1-201 (b) (35), C.R.S., or other person with actual knowledge of the security interest, during the existence of the security interest, knowingly conceals or removes the encumbered property from the state of Colorado without written consent of the secured creditor, the person commits a class 5 felony where the value of the property concealed or removed is one thousand dollars or more. Where the value of the property concealed or removed is less than one thousand dollars, the person commits a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-504. L. 77: Entire section amended, p. 964, § 34, effective July 1. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 836, § 63, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 797, § 9, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 503, § 46, effective September 1. L. 2007: Entire section amended, p. 1695, § 11, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

This section applies to any valid security interest, perfected or not. People v. Armijo, 197 Colo. 91, 589 P.2d 935 (1979).

This section is designed to protect the ability of a secured creditor to look to the particular security underlying a debt in the event of default. Removal and concealment of security is conduct which impairs that ability and is thus violative of this section. People v. O'Cana, 725 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1986).

This section provides ample notice to the populace of the prohibited conduct and a sufficiently precise standard for those charged with its enforcement to satisfy constitutional standards of specificity and to withstand a void for vagueness challenge. People v. O'Cana, 725 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1986).

No affirmative conduct by any third party is necessary to complete the offense defined in this section. Even though a secured party who is the victim of the conduct proscribed by this section may elect not to report such conduct to prosecuting officials does not alter the fact that the offense is completed by the accused's conduct. People v. O'Cana, 725 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1986).

The offense of removing secured property established by this section requires proof that the defendant knew of the existence of the security interest, knew that he was removing the secured property from Colorado without first having obtained the creditor's written consent to such removal, and knew that such removal would impair the creditor's security interest. People v. O'Cana, 725 P.2d 1139 (Colo. 1986).

Leaving the state with a vehicle in which a former client has a security interest was found to be a violation of this section in an attorney disciplinary proceeding and was a basis for disbarment. People v. Odom, 941 P.2d 919 (Colo. 1997).

18-5-505. Failure to pay over proceeds unlawful. Where, under the terms of an instrument creating a security interest in personal property, as security interest is defined in section 4-1-201 (b) (35), C.R.S., the person giving the security interest and retaining possession of the encumbered property and having liberty of sale or other disposition, is required to account to the secured creditor for the proceeds of the sale or other disposition, and willfully and wrongfully fails to pay to the secured creditor the amounts due on account thereof, the person giving the security interest commits a class 5 felony where the amount of the proceeds withheld is one thousand dollars or more. If the amount of the proceeds withheld is less than one thousand dollars, the person commits a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-505. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 836, § 64, effective July 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 797, § 10, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 503, § 47, effective September 1. L. 2007: Entire section amended, p. 1695, § 12, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending this section, see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

18-5-506. Fraudulent receipt - penalty. A warehouse, as defined in section 4-7-102 (a) (13), C.R.S., or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouse, that issues or aids in issuing a receipt knowing that the goods for which the receipt is issued have not been actually received by the warehouse, or are not under the warehouse's actual control at the time of issuing the receipt, commits a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-506. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 837, § 65, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 504, § 48, effective September 1.

18-5-507. False statement in receipt - penalty. A warehouse, as defined in section 4-7-102 (a) (13), C.R.S., or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouse, that fraudulently issues or aids in fraudulently issuing a receipt for goods knowing that it contains any false statement, commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-507. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 504, § 49, effective September 1.

18-5-508. Duplicate receipt not marked - penalty. A warehouse, as defined in section 4-7-102 (a) (13), C.R.S., or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouse, that issues or aids in issuing a duplicate or additional negotiable receipt for goods knowing that a former negotiable receipt for the same goods or any part of them is outstanding and uncanceled, without placing upon the face thereof the word "duplicate", except in case of a lost or destroyed receipt after proceedings as provided for in section 4-7-601, C.R.S., commits a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-508. L. 89: Entire section amended, p. 837, § 66, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 504, § 50, effective September 1.

18-5-509. Warehouse's goods mingled - receipts - penalty. Where there are deposited with or held by a warehouse, as defined in section 4-7-102 (a) (13), C.R.S., goods of which the warehouse is owner, either solely or jointly or in common with others, the warehouse or any of the warehouse's officers, agents, or servants that, knowing this ownership, issue or aid in issuing a negotiable receipt for the goods that does not state such ownership commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 445, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-509. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 504, § 51, effective September 1.

18-5-510. Delivery of goods without receipt - penalty. A warehouse, as defined in section 4-7-102 (a) (13), C.R.S., or any officer, agent, or servant of a warehouse, that delivers goods out of the possession of such warehouse, knowing that a negotiable receipt the negotiation of which would transfer the right of the possession of those goods is outstanding and uncanceled, without obtaining the possession of that receipt at or before the time of the delivery, except the cases provided for in section 4-7-601, C.R.S., commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 446, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-510. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 504, § 52, effective September 1.

18-5-511. Mortgaged goods receipt - penalty. Any person who deposits goods to which the person does not have title, or upon which there is a security interest in personal property, as security interest is defined in section 4-1-201 (b) (35), C.R.S., and who takes for such goods a negotiable receipt that the person afterwards negotiates for value with intent to deceive and without disclosing the person's want of title or the existence of such security interest, commits a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 446, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-511. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 505, § 53, effective September 1.

18-5-512. Issuance of bad check. (1) In adopting this section, the general assembly declares as a matter of policy that the issuance and delivery of a known bad check by any person is, in itself, not only harmful to the person to whom it is given but is also injurious to the community at large and is, therefore, a proper subject for criminal sanction without regard to the purpose for which the check was given.

(2) "Insufficient funds" means not having a sufficient balance in account with a bank or other drawee for the payment of a check or order when the check or order is presented for payment and it remains unpaid thirty days after such presentment.

(3) Except as provided in section 18-5-205, a person commits a class 3 misdemeanor if he issues or passes a check or similar sight order for the payment of money, knowing that the issuer does not have sufficient funds in or on deposit with the bank or other drawee for the payment in full of the check or order as well as all other checks or orders outstanding at the time of issuance.

(4) This section does not relieve the prosecution from the necessity of establishing the required knowledge by evidence. However, for purposes of this section, the issuer's knowledge of insufficient funds is presumed, except in the case of a postdated check or order, if:

(a) He has no account with the bank or other drawee at the time he issues the check or order; or

(b) He has insufficient funds upon deposit with the bank or other drawee to pay the check or order, on presentation within thirty days after issue.

(5) A bank shall not be civilly or criminally liable for releasing information relating to the issuer's account to a sheriff, deputy sheriff, undersheriff, police officer, agent of the Colorado bureau of investigation, division of gaming investigator, division of lottery investigator, parks and outdoor recreation officer, Colorado wildlife officer, district attorney, assistant district attorney, deputy district attorney, or authorized investigator for a district attorney investigating or prosecuting a charge under this section.

(6) Restitution for offenses described in this section may be collected as a condition of pretrial diversion by a district attorney, an employee of a district attorney's office, or a person under contract with a district attorney's office. Such collection is governed by the provisions of article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S., and is not the collection of a debt.

Source: L. 72: p. 284, § 2. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-5-512. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 757, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2002: (6) added, p. 760, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2003: (5) amended, p. 1632, § 78, effective August 6.

Cross references: For the recovery of damages for insufficient funds or no account instruments, see § 13-21-109.

ANNOTATION

This section does not contain the former constitutionally infirm language of section 18-5-205 (2), which made a bank's failure to honor the check a material element of the crime of fraud by check. People v. Quinn, 190 Colo. 534, 549 P.2d 1332 (1976).

Applied in People v. Attebury, 196 Colo. 509, 587 P.2d 281 (1978).

PART 6

IMITATION CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT

18-5-601 to 18-5-606. (Repealed)

Source: L. 92: Entire part repealed, p. 393, § 25, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This part 6 was added in 1983. For amendments to this part 6 prior to its repeal in 1992, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume.

PART 7

FINANCIAL TRANSACTION DEVICE CRIME ACT

Cross references: For obtaining a financial transaction device by false statements, see § 18-5-209.

18-5-701. Definitions. As used in this part 7, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Account holder" means the person or business entity named on the face of a financial transaction device to whom or for whose benefit the financial transaction device is issued by an issuer.

(2) "Automated banking device" means any machine which, when properly activated by a financial transaction device or a personal identification code, may be used for any of the purposes for which a financial transaction device may be used.

(3) "Financial transaction device" means any instrument or device whether known as a credit card, banking card, debit card, electronic fund transfer card, or guaranteed check card, or account number representing a financial account or affecting the financial interest, standing, or obligation of or to the account holder, that can be used to obtain cash, goods, property, or services or to make financial payments, but shall not include a "check", a "negotiable order of withdrawal", and a "share draft" as defined in section 18-5-205.

(4) "Issuer" means any person or banking, financial, or business institution, corporation, or other business entity that assigns financial rights by acquiring, distributing, controlling, or cancelling a financial transaction device.

(5) "Personal identification code" means any grouping of letters, numbers, or symbols assigned to the account holder of a financial transaction device by the issuer to permit authorized electronic use of that financial transaction device.

(6) "Sales form" means any written record of a financial transaction involving use of a financial transaction device.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 549, § 2, effective July 1.

18-5-702. Unauthorized use of a financial transaction device. (1) A person commits unauthorized use of a financial transaction device if he uses such device for the purpose of obtaining cash, credit, property, or services or for making financial payment, with intent to defraud, and with notice that either:

(a) The financial transaction device has expired, has been revoked, or has been cancelled; or

(b) For any reason his use of the financial transaction device is unauthorized either by the issuer thereof or by the account holder.

(2) For purposes of paragraphs (a) and (b) of subsection (1) of this section, "notice" includes either notice given in person or notice given in writing to the account holder. The sending of a notice in writing by registered or certified mail, return receipt requested, duly stamped and addressed to such account holder at his last address known to the issuer, evidenced by a signed returned receipt signed by the account holder, is prima facie evidence that the notice was received.

(3) Unauthorized use of a financial transaction device is:

(a) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2007, p. 1695, § 13, effective July 1, 2007.)

(b) A class 1 misdemeanor if the value of the cash, credit, property, or services obtained or of the financial payments made is less than one thousand dollars;

(c) A class 5 felony if the value of the cash, credit, property, or services obtained or of the financial payments made is one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars;

(d) A class 3 felony if the value of the cash, credit, property, or services obtained or of the financial payments made is twenty thousand dollars or more.

(4) The value of the cash, credit, property, or services obtained and the financial payments made shall be the total value of the cash, credit, property, or services obtained or financial payments made by unauthorized use of a single financial transaction device within a six-month period from the date of the first unauthorized use.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 549, § 2, effective July 1; (3)(b) and (3)(c) amended, p. 539, § 16, effective July 1, 1985. L. 89: (3)(c) amended, p. 837, § 67, effective July 1. L. 92: (3) amended, p. 436, § 8, effective April 10. L. 98: (3)(b) and (3)(c) amended, p. 1439, § 17, effective July 1; (3)(b) and (3)(c) amended, p. 797, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2007: (3) amended, p. 1695, § 13, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

Fraudulent use of credit card. In prosecution based upon fraudulent use of another's credit card, fact that defendant was charged under § 18-5-103 rather than this more specific section was not error requiring dismissal. People v. Ortega, 181 Colo. 223, 508 P.2d 784 (1973) (decided under former § 40-14-21, C.R.S. 1963).

Notice requirement applies to the account holder or to one in possession of the financial transaction device with permission of the account holder and not to one using an allegedly lost or stolen device. Therefore, the prosecution was not required to prove that the defendant who had used a lost or stolen device had been given notice that his use was not authorized in order to get a conviction. People v. Pipkin, 762 P.2d 736 (Colo. App. 1988).

Trial court did not err in refusing to give jury instruction defining the affirmative defense of consent where proof of the elements of the charged offense necessarily required disproof of the issues raised by said defense. People v. Bush, 948 P.2d 16 (Colo. App. 1997).

Section requires proof that a defendant in fact obtained possession or use of cash, credit, property, or services through the unauthorized use of a financial transaction device. People v. Novitskiy, 81 P.3d 1070 (Colo. App. 2003).

18-5-703. Criminal possession of a financial transaction device. (Repealed)

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 550, § 2, effective July 1. L. 86: (3) amended, p. 770, § 7, effective July 1. L. 89: (3) and (4) amended, p. 837, § 68, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section repealed, p. 1318, § 6, effective July 1.

Cross references: For current provisions relating to criminal possession of a financial device, see § 18-5-903.

18-5-704. Sale or possession for sale of a financial transaction device. (Repealed)

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 550, § 2, effective July 1. L. 89: (1) amended, p. 837, § 69, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section repealed, p. 1319, § 7, effective July 1.

18-5-705. Criminal possession or sale of a blank financial transaction device.

(1) A person commits criminal possession or sale of a blank financial transaction device if, without the authorization of the issuer or manufacturer, he has in his possession or under his control or receives from another person, with intent to use, deliver, circulate, or sell it or with intent to cause the use, delivery, circulation, or sale of it, or sells any financial transaction device which has not been embossed or magnetically encoded with the name of the account holder, personal identification code, expiration date, or other proprietary institutional information.

(2) Criminal possession of a blank financial transaction device is a class 6 felony.

(3) Criminal possession of two or more blank financial transaction devices is a class 5 felony.

(4) Delivery, circulation, or sale of one blank financial transaction device is a class 5 felony.

(5) Delivery, circulation, or sale of two or more blank financial transaction devices is a class 3 felony.

(6) For purposes of this section, a blank financial transaction device is one that has at least one or more characteristics of a financial transaction device but does not contain all of the characteristics of a completed financial transaction device.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 550, § 2, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) to (4) amended, p. 837, § 70, effective July 1.

18-5-706. Criminal possession of forgery devices. (1) A person commits possession of forgery devices if he possesses any tools, photographic equipment, printing equipment, or any other device adapted, designed, or commonly used for committing or facilitating the commission of an offense involving the unauthorized manufacture, printing, embossing, or magnetic encoding of a financial transaction device or the altering or addition of any uniform product codes, optical characters, or holographic images to a financial transaction device, and intends to use the thing possessed, or knows that some person intends to use the thing possessed, in the commission of such an offense.

(2) Possession of a forgery device is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 551, § 2, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 838, § 71, effective July 1.

18-5-707. Unlawful manufacture of a financial transaction device. (1) A person commits unlawful manufacture of a financial transaction device if, with intent to defraud, he:

(a) Falsely makes or manufactures, by printing, embossing, or magnetically encoding, a financial transaction device; or

(b) Falsely alters or adds uniform product codes, optical characters, or holographic images to a device which is or purports to be, or which is calculated to become or to represent if completed, a financial transaction device; or

(c) Falsely completes a financial transaction device by adding to an incomplete device to make it a complete one.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) To "falsely alter" a financial transaction device means to change such device without the authority of anyone entitled to grant such authority, whether it be in complete or incomplete form, by means of erasure, obliteration, deletion, insertion of new matter, transposition of matter, or any other means, so that such device in its thus altered form falsely appears or purports to be in all respects an authentic creation of or fully authorized by its ostensible issuer.

(b) To "falsely complete" a financial transaction device means to transform an incomplete device into a complete one by adding, inserting, or changing matter without the authority of anyone entitled to grant that authority, so that the complete device falsely appears or purports to be in all respects an authentic creation of or fully authorized by its ostensible issuer.

(c) To "falsely make" a financial transaction device means to make or manufacture a device, whether complete or incomplete, which purports to be an authentic creation of its ostensible issuer, but which is not, either because the ostensible issuer is fictitious or because, if real, he did not authorize the making or the manufacturing thereof.

(3) Unlawful manufacture of a financial transaction device is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 84: Entire part added, p. 551, § 2, effective July 1; (1)(b) amended, p. 1125, § 43, effective July 1. L. 89: (3) amended, p. 838, § 72, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-5-707 is similar to former § 40-14-21, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Credit card may be forged. In an instruction on the subject of the forgery, a credit card not only has legal efficacy, but also specifically falls within the language of the forgery statute. People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972).

And prosecutor may proceed under forgery or credit card provisions. Since the credit card and forgery statutes have as their subject matter two different kinds of criminal transactions, the existence of the specific credit card statute does not preclude prosecution under the state's general forgery statute and also it is the proper discretionary function of the prosecutor to elect to proceed under the felony rather than the misdemeanor statute. People v. Couch, 179 Colo. 324, 500 P.2d 967 (1972).

Reasonable distinctions can be drawn between the two crimes which are the subject matter of the credit card and forgery statutes, and the existence of the specific statute regarding the misuse of credit cards does not preclude prosecution or conviction of appellant under the state's general forgery statute. People v. James, 178 Colo. 401, 497 P.2d 1256 (1972).

PART 8

EQUITY SKIMMING AND RELATED OFFENSES

18-5-801. Definitions. As used in this part 8, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Lease" means any grant of use and possession for consideration, with or without an option to buy.

(2) "Real property" means land and any interest or estate in land and includes a manufactured home as defined in section 42-1-102 (106) (b), C.R.S.

(3) "Rent" means any moneys or any other thing of value received as a payment or as a deposit for the privilege of living in or using real property.

(4) "Security interest" means an interest in personal property which secures payment or performance of an obligation.

(5) "Vehicle" means any device of conveyance capable of moving itself or of being moved from place to place upon wheels or a track or by water or air, whether or not intended for the transport of persons or property, and includes any space within such "vehicle" adapted for overnight accommodation of persons or animals or for the carrying on of business. "Vehicle" does not include a manufactured home as defined in section 42-1-102 (106) (b), C.R.S.

Source: L. 87: Entire part added, p. 670, § 1, effective July 1. L. 94: (2) and (5) amended, p. 2552, § 42, effective January 1, 1995.

18-5-802. Equity skimming of real property. (1) A person commits the crime of equity skimming of real property if the person knowingly:

(a) Acquires an interest in real property that is encumbered by a loan secured by a mortgage or deed of trust and the loan is in arrears at the time the person acquires the interest or is placed in default within eighteen months after the person acquires the interest; and

(b) Either:

(I) Fails to provide all rent derived from the person's interest in the real property first toward the satisfaction of all outstanding payments due on the loan and second toward any fees due to any association of real property owners that charges such fees for the upkeep of the housing facility, or common area including buildings and grounds thereof, of which the real property is a part before appropriating the remainder of such rent or any part thereof for any other purpose except for the purpose of repairs necessary to prevent waste of the real property; or

(II) After a foreclosure in which title has vested pursuant to section 38-38-501, C.R.S., collects rent on behalf of any person other than the owner of the real property.

(2) Repealed.

(3) Equity skimming of real property is a class 5 felony.

(4) It shall be an affirmative defense to this section:

(a) That all deficiencies in all underlying encumbrances at the time of acquisition have been fully satisfied and brought current and that, in addition, any regular payments on the underlying encumbrances during the succeeding nine months after the date of acquisition have been timely paid in full; except that this shall not be an affirmative defense to a crime that includes the element set forth in subparagraph (II) of paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of this section;

(b) That any fees due to an association of real property owners for the upkeep of the housing facility, or common area including buildings and grounds thereof, of which the real property is a part have been paid in full.

(5) The provisions of this section shall not apply to any bona fide lender who accepts a deed in lieu of foreclosure or who forecloses upon the real property.

(6) The provisions of this section shall not apply to any bona fide purchaser who acquires fee title in any real property without agreeing to pay all underlying encumbrances and takes fee title subject to all underlying encumbrances, if the following written, verbatim warning was provided to the seller in capital letters of no less than ten-point, bold-faced type and acknowledged by the seller's signature:

WARNING: PURCHASER, _____, WILL NOT ASSUME OR PAY ANY PRESENT MORTGAGE, DEEDS OF TRUST, OR OTHER LIENS OR ENCUMBRANCES AGAINST THE PROPERTY. THE SELLER, _____, UNDERSTANDS HE/SHE WILL REMAIN RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL PAYMENTS DUE ON SUCH MORTGAGES, DEEDS OF TRUST, OR OTHER LIENS OR ENCUMBRANCES AND FOR ANY DEFICIENCY JUDGMENT UPON FORECLOSURE.

I HAVE HAD THE FOREGOING READ TO ME AND UNDERSTAND THE PURCHASER, _____, WILL NOT ASSUME ANY PRESENT MORTGAGES, DEEDS OF TRUST, OR OTHER LIENS OR ENCUMBRANCES AGAINST THE PROPERTY DESCRIBED AS _____.

DATE _____

SELLER _____.

Source: L. 87: Entire part added, p. 671, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (1)(b) and (4) amended, p. 907, § 1, effective April 24; (2) repealed and (3), (4)(a), and (6) amended, pp. 861, 838, §§ 156, 73, effective July 1. L. 2009: (1) and (4)(a) amended, (HB 09-1227), ch. 155, p. 668, § 1, effective September 1.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Equity Skimming: A Crisis in Residential Real Estate", see 19 Colo. Law. 871 (1990).

Violation of this section subjects attorney to disciplinary action as engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, conduct reflecting adversely on the practice of law, and conduct which constitutes the violation of a criminal law. People v. Phelps, 837 P.2d 755 (Colo. 1992).

18-5-803. Equity skimming of a vehicle. (1) A person commits equity skimming of a vehicle if, knowing the vehicle is subject to a security interest, lien, or lease, he accepts possession of or exercises any control over the vehicle in exchange for consideration given which may be verbal assurance or otherwise, and:

(a) Obtains or exercises control over the vehicle of another and then sells or leases the vehicle to a third party without first obtaining written authorization from the secured creditor, lessor, or lienholder for the transaction of the sale or lease to the third party, unless the entire balance of the security interest, lien, or lease is paid or satisfied within thirty days of said transaction; or

(b) Arranges the sale or lease of the vehicle of another to a third party without first obtaining written authorization from the secured creditor, lessor, or lienholder for the transaction of the sale or lease to the third party and exercises control over any part of the funds received, unless the entire balance of the security interest, lien, or lease is paid or satisfied within thirty days of said transaction; or

(c) Knowingly fails to ascertain on a monthly basis whether payments are due to the secured creditor, lienholder, or lessor and to apply all funds he receives for any lease or sale of the vehicle toward the satisfaction of any outstanding payment due to the secured creditor, lienholder, or lessor in a timely manner.

(2) Equity skimming of a vehicle is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 87: Entire part added, p. 671, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 839, § 74, effective July 1.

18-5-804. Civil action. A condominium association, a property owners' association, or any like association of real property owners which charges fees for the upkeep of a housing facility, a housing project, or a common area thereof may proceed pursuant to rule 102 of the Colorado rules of civil procedure if such fees have not been received by the condominium association, property owners' association, or any like association for a period of ninety days or more.

Source: L. 87: Entire part added, p. 672, § 1, effective July 1.

PART 9

IDENTITY THEFT AND RELATED OFFENSES

18-5-901. Definitions. As used in this part 9, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Account holder" means any person or business entity named on or associated with the account or named on the face of a financial device to whom or for whose benefit the financial device is issued by an issuer.

(2) "Extension of credit" means any loan or agreement, express or implied, whereby the repayment or satisfaction of any debt or claim, whether acknowledged or disputed, valid or invalid, and however arising, may or will be deferred.

(3) To "falsely alter" a written instrument or financial device means to change a written instrument or financial device without the authority of anyone entitled to grant such authority, whether it be in complete or incomplete form, by means of erasure, obliteration, deletion, insertion of new matter, transposition of matter, or any other means, so that the written instrument or financial device in its thus altered form falsely appears or purports to be in all respects an authentic creation of or fully authorized by its ostensible maker.

(4) To "falsely complete" a written instrument or financial device means:

(a) To transform an incomplete written instrument or financial device into a complete one by adding, inserting, or changing matter without the authority of anyone entitled to grant that authority, so that the complete written instrument or financial device falsely appears or purports to be in all respects an authentic creation of or fully authorized by its ostensible maker; or

(b) To transform an incomplete written instrument or financial device into a complete one by adding or inserting materially false information or adding or inserting a materially false statement. A materially false statement is a false assertion that affects the action, conduct, or decision of the person who receives or is intended to receive the asserted information in a manner that directly or indirectly benefits the person making the assertion.

(5) To "falsely make" a written instrument or financial device means to make or draw a written instrument or financial device, whether it be in complete or incomplete form, that purports to be an authentic creation of its ostensible maker, but that is not, either because the ostensible maker is fictitious or because, if real, the ostensible maker did not authorize the making or the drawing of the written instrument or financial device.

(6) "Financial device" means any instrument or device that can be used to obtain cash, credit, property, services, or any other thing of value or to make financial payments, including but not limited to:

(a) A credit card, banking card, debit card, electronic fund transfer card, or guaranteed check card;

(b) A check;

(c) A negotiable order of withdrawal;

(d) A share draft; or

(e) A money order.

(7) "Financial identifying information" means any of the following that can be used, alone or in conjunction with any other information, to obtain cash, credit, property, services, or any other thing of value or to make a financial payment:

(a) A personal identification number, credit card number, banking card number, checking account number, debit card number, electronic fund transfer card number, guaranteed check card number, or routing number; or

(b) A number representing a financial account or a number affecting the financial interest, standing, or obligation of or to the account holder.

(8) "Government" means:

(a) The United States and its departments, agencies, or subdivisions;

(b) A state, county, municipality, or other political unit and its departments, agencies, or subdivisions; and

(c) A corporation or other entity established by law to carry out governmental functions.

(9) "Issuer" means a person, a banking, financial, or business institution, or a corporation or other business entity that assigns financial rights by acquiring, distributing, controlling, or cancelling an account or a financial device.

(10) "Number" includes, without limitation, any grouping or combination of letters, numbers, or symbols.

(11) "Of another" means that of a natural person, living or dead, or a business entity as defined in section 16-3-301.1 (11) (b), C.R.S.

(12) "Personal identification number" means a number assigned to an account holder by an issuer to permit authorized use of an account or financial device.

(13) "Personal identifying information" means information that may be used, alone or in conjunction with any other information, to identify a specific individual, including but not limited to a name; a date of birth; a social security number; a password; a pass code; an official, government-issued driver's license or identification card number; a government passport number; biometric data; or an employer, student, or military identification number.

(14) "Utter" means to transfer, pass, or deliver, or to attempt or cause to be transferred, passed, or delivered, to another person a written instrument or financial device, article, or thing.

(15) "Written instrument" means a paper, document, or other instrument containing written or printed matter or the equivalent thereof, used for purposes of reciting, embodying, conveying, or recording information, and any money, token, stamp, seal, badge, or trademark or any evidence or symbol of value, right, privilege, or identification, that is capable of being used to the advantage or disadvantage of another.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1319, § 8, effective July 1.

18-5-902. Identity theft. (1) A person commits identity theft if he or she:

(a) Knowingly uses the personal identifying information, financial identifying information, or financial device of another without permission or lawful authority with the intent to obtain cash, credit, property, services, or any other thing of value or to make a financial payment;

(b) Knowingly possesses the personal identifying information, financial identifying information, or financial device of another without permission or lawful authority, with the intent to use or to aid or permit some other person to use such information or device to obtain cash, credit, property, services, or any other thing of value or to make a financial payment;

(c) With the intent to defraud, falsely makes, completes, alters, or utters a written instrument or financial device containing any personal identifying information or financial identifying information of another;

(d) Knowingly possesses the personal identifying information or financial identifying information of another without permission or lawful authority to use in applying for or completing an application for a financial device or other extension of credit;

(e) Knowingly uses or possesses the personal identifying information of another without permission or lawful authority with the intent to obtain a government-issued document; or

(f) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2009, (SB 09-093), ch. 326, p. 1737, § 1, effective July 1, 2009.)

(2) Identity theft is a class 4 felony.

(3) The court shall be required to sentence the defendant to the department of corrections for a term of at least the minimum of the presumptive range and may sentence the defendant to a maximum of twice the presumptive range if:

(a) The defendant is convicted of identity theft or of attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit identity theft; and

(b) The defendant has a prior conviction for a violation of this part 9 or a prior conviction for an offense committed in any other state, the United States, or any other territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States that would constitute a violation of this part 9 if committed in this state, or for attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit a violation of this part 9 or for attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit an offense in another jurisdiction that would constitute a violation of this part 9 if committed in this state.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1322, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2009: (1)(a), (1)(f), and (3) amended, (SB 09-093), ch. 326, p. 1737, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Definition of “thing of value” in identity theft statute is narrower than definition contained in § 18-1-901 (3)(r). The term does not include nonpecuniary benefits of misleading and influencing actions of police officer by obtaining use of another person’s driving record. People v. Beck, 187 P.3d 1125 (Colo. App. 2008).

Defendant providing false name at traffic stop could not be charged with using false information to obtain a “thing of value” under identity theft statute. People v. Beck, 187 P.3d 1125 (Colo. App. 2008).

18-5-903. Criminal possession of a financial device. (1) A person commits criminal possession of a financial device if the person has in his or her possession or under his or her control any financial device that the person knows, or reasonably should know, to be lost, stolen, or delivered under mistake as to the identity or address of the account holder.

(2) (a) Criminal possession of one financial device is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) Criminal possession of two or more financial devices is a class 6 felony.

(c) Criminal possession of four or more financial devices, of which at least two are issued to different account holders, is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1323, § 8, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Annotator’s note. Since § 18-5-903 is similar to repealed § 18-5-703, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Because this section is worded in the disjunctive, it includes both a mental culpability offense and a strict liability offense. The court did not err in allowing the prosecution to amend the information to charge the defendant only with the strict liability alternative. People v. Stevenson, 881 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section is not facially unconstitutional based on an overbreadth argument, because possession of a stolen credit transaction device is neither a fundamental right nor constitutionally protected conduct. People v. Stevenson, 881 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1994).

This section is not unconstitutionally void for vagueness, because it adequately sets out the circumstances under which a person commits the strict liability offense of possession of a lost or stolen credit transaction device. People v. Stevenson, 881 P.2d 383 (Colo. App. 1994).

18-5-903.5. Criminal possession of an identification document. (1) A person commits criminal possession of an identification document if the person knowingly has in his or her possession or under his or her control another person’s actual driver’s license, actual government-issued identification card, actual social security card, or actual passport, knowing that he or she does so without permission or lawful authority.

(2) (a) Criminal possession of one or more identification documents issued to the same person is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(b) Criminal possession of two or more identification documents, of which at least two are issued to different persons, is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 2009: Entire section added, (SB 09-093), ch. 326, p. 1738, § 2, effective July 1, 2011.

18-5-904. Gathering identity information by deception. (1) A person commits gathering identity information by deception if he or she knowingly makes or conveys a materially false statement, without permission or lawful authority, with the intent to obtain, record, or access the personal identifying information or financial identifying information of another.

(2) Gathering identity information by deception is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1323, § 8, effective July 1.

18-5-905. Possession of identity theft tools. (1) A person commits possession of identity theft tools if he or she possesses any tools, equipment, computer, computer network, scanner, printer, or other article adapted, designed, or commonly used for committing or facilitating the commission of the offense of identity theft as described in section 18-5-902, and intends to use the thing possessed, or knows that a person intends to use the thing possessed, in the commission of the offense of identity theft.

(2) Possession of identity theft tools is a class 5 felony.

Source: L. 2006: Entire part added, p. 1323, § 8, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 5.5

Computer Crime

Law reviews: For article, "Ownership of Software and Computer-stored Data", see 13 Colo. Law. 577 (1984); for article, "Computer Security and Privacy: The Third Wave of Property Law", see 33 Colo. Law. 57 (February 2004).

18-5.5-101. Definitions.

18-5.5-102. Computer crime.

18-5.5-101. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Authorization" means the express consent of a person which may include an employee's job description to use said person's computer, computer network, computer program, computer software, computer system, property, or services as those terms are defined in this section.

(2) "Computer" means an electronic, magnetic, optical, electromagnetic, or other data processing device which performs logical, arithmetic, memory, or storage functions by the manipulations of electronic, magnetic, radio wave, or light wave impulses, and includes all input, output, processing, storage, software, or communication facilities which are connected or related to or operating in conjunction with such a device.

(3) "Computer network" means the interconnection of communication lines (including microwave or other means of electronic communication) with a computer through remote terminals, or a complex consisting of two or more interconnected computers.

(4) "Computer program" means a series of instructions or statements, in a form acceptable to a computer, which permits the functioning of a computer system in a manner designed to provide appropriate products from such computer system.

(5) "Computer software" means computer programs, procedures, and associated documentation concerned with the operation of a computer system.

(6) "Computer system" means a set of related, connected or unconnected, computer equipment, devices, and software.

(6.3) "Damage" includes, but is not limited to, any impairment to the integrity of availability of information, data, computer program, computer software, or services on or via a computer, computer network, or computer system or part thereof.

(6.7) "Exceed authorized access" means to access a computer with authorization and to use such access to obtain or alter information, data, computer program, or computer software that the person is not entitled to so obtain or alter.

(7) "Financial instrument" means any check, draft, money order, certificate of deposit, letter of credit, bill of exchange, credit card, debit card, or marketable security.

(8) "Property" includes, but is not limited to, financial instruments, information, including electronically produced data, and computer software and programs in either machine or human readable form, and any other tangible or intangible item of value.

(9) "Services" includes, but is not limited to, computer time, data processing, and storage functions.

(10) To "use" means to instruct, communicate with, store data in, retrieve data from, or otherwise make use of any resources of a computer, computer system, or computer network.

Source: L. 79: Entire article added, p. 728, § 7, effective July 1. L. 83: (1) R&RE and (10) added, p. 705, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (2) amended and (6.3) and (6.7) added, p. 694, § 7, effective July 1.

18-5.5-102. Computer crime. (1) A person commits computer crime if the person knowingly:

(a) Accesses a computer, computer network, or computer system or any part thereof without authorization; exceeds authorized access to a computer, computer network, or computer system or any part thereof; or uses a computer, computer network, or computer system or any part thereof without authorization or in excess of authorized access; or

(b) Accesses any computer, computer network, or computer system, or any part thereof for the purpose of devising or executing any scheme or artifice to defraud; or

(c) Accesses any computer, computer network, or computer system, or any part thereof to obtain, by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises, money; property; services; passwords or similar information through which a computer, computer network, or computer system or any part thereof may be accessed; or other thing of value; or

(d) Accesses any computer, computer network, or computer system, or any part thereof to commit theft; or

(e) Without authorization or in excess of authorized access alters, damages, interrupts, or causes the interruption or impairment of the proper functioning of, or causes any damage to, any computer, computer network, computer system, computer software, program, application, documentation, or data contained in such computer, computer network, or computer system or any part thereof; or

(f) Causes the transmission of a computer program, software, information, code, data, or command by means of a computer, computer network, or computer system or any part thereof with the intent to cause damage to or to cause the interruption or impairment of the proper functioning of or that actually causes damage to or the interruption or impairment of the proper functioning of any computer, computer network, computer system, or part thereof; or

(g) Uses or causes to be used a software application that runs automated tasks over the internet to access a computer, computer network, or computer system, or any part thereof, that circumvents or disables any electronic queues, waiting periods, or other technological measure intended by the seller to limit the number of event tickets that may be purchased by any single person in an on-line event ticket sale as defined in section 6-1-720, C.R.S.

(2) Deleted by amendment, L. 2000, p. 695, § 8, effective July 1, 2000.)

(3) (a) Except as provided in paragraphs (b) and (c) of this subsection (3), if the loss, damage, value of services, or thing of value taken, or cost of restoration or repair caused by a violation of this section is less than five hundred dollars, computer crime is a class 2 misdemeanor; if five hundred dollars or more but less than one thousand dollars, computer crime is a class 1 misdemeanor; if one thousand dollars or more but less than twenty thousand dollars, computer crime is a class 4 felony; if twenty thousand dollars or more, computer crime is a class 3 felony.

(b) Computer crime committed in violation of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that, if the person has previously been convicted under this section, a previous version of this section, or a statute of another state of similar content and purport, computer crime committed in violation of paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section is a class 6 felony.

(c) (I) Computer crime committed in violation of paragraph (g) of subsection (1) of this section is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(II) If computer crime is committed to obtain event tickets, each ticket purchased shall constitute a separate offense.

(III) Paragraph (g) of subsection (1) of this section shall not prohibit the resale of tickets in a secondary market by a person other than the event sponsor or promoter.

(d) Consistent with section 18-1-202, a prosecution for a violation of paragraph (g) of subsection (1) of this section may be tried in the county where the event has been, or will be, held.

Source: L. 79: Entire article added, p. 728, § 7, effective July 1. L. 83: (1) amended, p. 705, § 3, effective July 1. L. 84: (3) amended, p. 538, § 14, effective July 1, 1985. L. 89: (3) amended, p. 839, § 75, effective July 1. L. 92: (3) amended, p. 437, § 9, effective April 10. L. 98: (3) amended, p. 1440, § 18, effective July 1; (3) amended, p. 797, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2000: Entire section amended, p. 695, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2007: (3)(a) amended, p. 1696, § 14, effective July 1. L. 2008: (1)(g), (3)(c), and (3)(d) added and (3)(a) amended, p. 2230, §§ 3, 4, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2007 act amending subsection (3)(a), see section 1 of chapter 384, Session Laws of Colorado 2007.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Ownership of Software and Computer-stored Data”, see 13 Colo. Law. 577 (1984).

Section not unconstitutionally vague or overbroad. People v. Pahl, 169 P.3d 169 (Colo. App. 2006) (decided under former law).

Term “access”, as used in subsections (1)(c) and (1)(d), is clear and unambiguous as defined in the dictionary. Therefore, defendant accessed a computer system when she communicated with an automated telephone system by inputting data in response to computer-generated questions about her unemployment status. People v. Rice, 198 P.3d 1241 (Colo. App. 2008).

ARTICLE 6

Offenses Involving the Family Relations

Editor’s note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment, see the editor’s note following the title heading.

PART 1		18-6-105.	Distributing abortifacients.
ABORTION			PART 2
			BIGAMY
18-6-101.	Definitions.
18-6-102.	Criminal abortion.	18-6-201.	Bigamy.
18-6-103.	Pretended criminal abortion.	18-6-202.	Marrying a bigamist.
18-6-104.	Failure to comply.	18-6-203.	Definitions.

PART 3

INCEST

- 18-6-301. Incest.
 18-6-302. Aggravated incest.
 18-6-303. Sentencing.

PART 4

WRONGS TO CHILDREN

- 18-6-401. Child abuse.
 18-6-401.1. Child abuse - limitation for commencing proceedings - evidence - statutory privilege.
 18-6-401.2. Habitual child abusers - indictment or information - verdict of the jury.
 18-6-401.3. Video tape depositions - children - victims of child abuse.
 18-6-401.4. Payment of treatment costs for the victim or victims of an act of child abuse.
 18-6-402. Trafficking in children. (Repealed)
 18-6-403. Sexual exploitation of a child.
 18-6-404. Procurement of a child for sexual exploitation.
 18-6-405. Reports of convictions to department of education.

PART 5

ADULTERY

- 18-6-501. Adultery.

PART 6

HARBORING A MINOR

- 18-6-601. Harboring a minor.

PART 7

CONTRIBUTING TO DELINQUENCY

- 18-6-701. Contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

PART 8

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

- 18-6-800.3. Definitions.
 18-6-801. Domestic violence - sentencing.
 18-6-801.5. Domestic violence - evidence of similar transactions.
 18-6-801.6. Domestic violence - summons and complaint.
 18-6-802. Domestic violence - local board - treatment programs - liability immunity - repeal. (Repealed)
 18-6-802.5. Domestic violence - treatment programs.
 18-6-803. Commission - manual of standards for treatment of domestic violence perpetrators - repeal. (Repealed)
 18-6-803.5. Crime of violation of a protection order - penalty - peace officers' duties.
 18-6-803.6. Duties of peace officers and prosecuting agencies - preservation of evidence.
 18-6-803.7. Central registry of protection orders - creation.
 18-6-803.8. Foreign protection orders. (Repealed)
 18-6-803.9. Assaults and deaths related to domestic violence - report.
 18-6-804. Repeal of part. (Repealed)
 18-6-805. Repeal of sections. (Repealed)

PART 1

ABORTION

Law reviews: For article, "Abortion in Colorado: If Roe v. Wade is Reversed", see 19 Colo. Law. 807 (1990).

18-6-101. Definitions. As used in sections 18-6-101 to 18-6-104, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Justified medical termination" means the intentional ending of the pregnancy of a woman at the request of said woman or, if said woman is under the age of eighteen years, then at the request of the woman and her then living parent or guardian, or, if the woman is married and living with her husband, at the request of said woman and her husband, by a licensed physician using accepted medical procedures in a licensed hospital upon written certification by all of the members of a special hospital board that:

(a) Continuation of the pregnancy, in their opinion, is likely to result in: The death of the woman; or the serious permanent impairment of the physical health of the woman; or the serious permanent impairment of the mental health of the woman as confirmed in writing under the signature of a licensed doctor of medicine specializing in psychiatry; or the birth of a child with grave and permanent physical deformity or mental retardation; or

(b) Less than sixteen weeks of gestation have passed and that the pregnancy resulted from conduct defined as criminal in sections 18-3-402 and 18-3-403, or if the female person is unmarried and has not reached her sixteenth birthday at the time of such conduct regardless of the age of the male, or incest, as defined in sections 18-6-301 and 18-6-302, and that the district attorney of the judicial district in which the alleged sexual assault or incest has occurred has informed the committee in writing over his signature that there is probable cause to believe that the alleged violation did occur.

(2) "Licensed hospital" means one licensed or certificated by the department of public health and environment.

(3) "Pregnancy" means the implantation of an embryo in the uterus.

(4) "Special hospital board" means a committee of three licensed physicians who are members of the staff of the hospital where the proposed termination would be performed if certified in accordance with subsection (1) of this section, and who meet regularly or on call for the purpose of determining the question of medical justification in each individual case, and which maintains a written record, signed by each member, of the proceedings and deliberations of the board.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 446, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-101. L. 75: (1)(b) amended, p. 632, § 7, effective July 1. L. 94: (2) amended, p. 2735, § 358, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) Language of a Missouri statute requiring parental consent or spousal consent to abortions which was similar to the language found in the introductory portion of subsection (1) was held unconstitutional in Planned Parenthood of Missouri v. Danforth, 428 U.S. 52 (1976).

(2) Portions of this section were held unconstitutional in People v. Norton, 181 Colo. 47, 507 P.2d 862 (1973). In that decision, the court interpreted former section 40-6-101, 1971 Perm. Supp., C.R.S. 1963, which was later recodified in 1973 as section 18-6-101. As set forth in an appendix to the decision, the court indicated that the following italicized portions of section 40-6-101 are unconstitutional:

40-6-101. Definitions. As used in sections 40-6-101 to 40-6-104:

(1) "Pregnancy" means the implantation of an embryo in the uterus.

(2) "Licensed hospital" means one licensed or certificated by the Colorado department of health.

(3) "Justified medical termination" means the intentional ending of the pregnancy of a woman at the request of said woman or, if said woman is under the age of eighteen years, then at the request of said woman and her then living parent or guardian, or, if the woman is married and living with her husband, at the request of said woman and her husband, by a licensed physician using accepted medical procedures in a licensed hospital upon written certification by all of the members of a special hospital board that:

(a) Continuation of the pregnancy, in their opinion, is likely to result in: The death of the woman; or the serious permanent impairment of the mental health of the woman as confirmed in writing under the signature of a licensed doctor of medicine specializing in psychiatry; or the birth of a child with grave and permanent physical deformity or mental retardation; or

(b) Less than sixteen weeks of gestation have passed and that the pregnancy resulted from conduct defined as criminal in sections 40-3-401 and 40-3-402, or if the female person is unmarried and has not reached her sixteenth birthday at the time of such conduct regardless of the age of the male; or incest, as defined in sections 40-6-301 and 40-6-302, and that the district attorney of the judicial district in which the alleged rape or incest has occurred has informed the committee in writing over his signature that there is probable cause to believe that the alleged violation did occur.

(4) "Special hospital board" means a committee of three licensed physicians who are members of the staff of the hospital where the proposed termination would be performed if certified in accordance with subsection (3) of this section, and who meet regularly or on call for the purpose of determining the question of medical justification in each individual case, and which maintains a written record, signed by each member, of the proceedings and deliberations of such board.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "Colorado's New Abortion Statute", see 40 U Colo. L. Rev. 297 (1968). For note, "Certification of Rape Under the Colorado Abortion Statute", see 42 U. Colo. L. Rev. 121 (1970). For article, "Consent to Treatment and Access to Minors' Medical Records", see 17 Colo. Law. 1323 (1988).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-6-101 is similar to former § 40-2-50, C.R.S. 1963, relevant cases construing that provision have been included in the annotations to this section.

Portions of this section held unconstitutional. People v. Norton, 181 Colo. 47, 507 P.2d 862 (1973).

Language in the introductory portion of subsection (1) requiring parental consent for abortions for women under the age of eighteen is unconstitutional. Foe v. Vanderhoof, 389 F. Supp. 947 (D. Colo. 1975).

Remaining provisions of statute valid. Enforcement of the remaining sections will continue to further the legislative intent that the woman's health be protected by the requirement that medically acceptable procedures be used. People v. Franklin, 683 P.2d 775 (Colo. 1984).

This act provides a single procedure. Colorado's therapeutic abortion act provides a single procedure for the legal termination of pregnancies in Colorado. A woman desirous of obtaining an abortion must apply to a special hospital board consisting of three physician-members entrusted with deciding whether an applicant is entitled to an abortion on one of the grounds specified in the statute. If all of the board members certify in writing that she is so entitled, a woman may then have an abortion performed in an accredited hospital by a licensed physician using accepted medical procedures. Doe v. Dunbar, 320 F. Supp. 1297 (D. Colo. 1970).

Grounds for obtaining a justified medical termination include the following: The pregnancy resulted from rape; continuation of the pregnancy, in the opinion of the board, is likely to result in the death of the woman, the serious impairment of her physical health, or the serious and permanent impairment of her mental health (this must be confirmed in writing by a psychiatrist); or the child is likely to be born physically deformed or mentally retarded. Doe v. Dunbar, 320 F. Supp. 1297 (D. Colo. 1970).

Order to compel district attorney to certify action not treated as class action. Jane Doe v. Seccombe, 177 Colo. 127, 493 P.2d 30 (1972).

18-6-102. Criminal abortion. (1) Any person who intentionally ends or causes to be ended the pregnancy of a woman by any means other than justified medical termination or birth commits criminal abortion.

(2) Criminal abortion is a class 4 felony, but if the woman dies as a result of the criminal abortion, it is a class 2 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 447, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-102.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "State Constitutional Privacy Rights Post Webster — Broader Protection Against Abortion Restrictions?", see 67 Den. U. L. Rev. 401 (1990).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-6-102 is similar to former §§ 40-2-51 and 40-2-23, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

This section should not be construed too narrowly, but should be considered in the light of its purpose, which is to prevent abortions other than for lawful purposes or by natural causes. Palmer v. People, 162 Colo. 92, 424 P.2d 766 (1967).

The word "abortion" is synonymous and equivalent to "miscarriage" in its primary meaning. Marmaduke v. People, 45 Colo. 357, 101 P. 337 (1909); Hall v. People, 119 Colo. 141, 201 P.2d 382 (1948).

Intent to procure abortion may be inferred from character of means employed. Where drugs regarded as abortives are administered to a pregnant woman whose general health is good and requires no medicine, and said drugs so administered are calculated to produce serious disturbance in her system, and miscarriage is thereby induced, it may be presumed that the drugs so applied were designed and intended to produce that result. The intention may be rightly inferred from the character of the means employed. Dougherty v. People, 1 Colo. 514 (1872).

Malice is not an essential element of murder committed in attempt to cause abortion of a woman with child, and in an information charging such murder it is not necessary to allege that the act was done maliciously or with malice. Johnson v. People, 33 Colo. 224, 80 P. 133 (1905).

Prosecution need not negative exceptions. Under former provisions the prosecution was not required to show that the acts of the accused were not necessary to save the life, or to prevent serious bodily injury, nor that what was done by the accused was not done under the advice of a physician. The exceptions contained in former section are matters of defense, which must be made to appear by the defendant from the evidence, and need not be negated in the indictment, or the negative proved by the prosecution. Fitch v. People, 45 Colo. 298, 100 P. 1132 (1909).

In an information, under former section it was held to be unnecessary to negative the exceptions in the statute as matters of justification. Johnson v. People, 33 Colo. 224, 80 P. 133 (1905).

But it is not error to do so. The mere fact that the people are not required to negative the exceptions does not make it error for them to do so, either in the charge or the proof. Max v. People, 78 Colo. 178, 240 P. 697 (1925).

Refusal to charge as to manslaughter is not error. Where, in an attempt to procure the miscarriage of a woman with child, the death of the woman is caused, there is no element of manslaughter in the homicide, and in a prosecution for murder committed in an attempt to procure such miscarriage, it is not error to refuse to instruct the jury as to the law of manslaughter. Johnson v. People, 33 Colo. 224, 80 P. 133 (1905).

Statements of another that he knew defendant produced abortions are inadmissible. When one is on trial charged under this section with a crime of this nature, to admit as evidence in chief for the prosecution statements of another that he knew defendant did such criminal acts, is error. Sarkisian v. People, 56 Colo. 330, 138 P. 26 (1914).

But statements of woman were held admissible against persons with whom she conspired to procure an abortion. Solander v. People, 2 Colo. 48 (1873).

In a prosecution for murder based on a criminal abortion, ante-mortem statements of deceased concerning the preparation for and purpose of the operation are admissible in evidence. Max v. People, 78 Colo. 178, 240 P. 697 (1925).

Evidence held admissible. In a prosecution for murder based on a criminal abortion, evidence that defendant's license to practice as a physician and surgeon had been revoked, and that thereafter he maintained an office equipped with surgical instruments used in procuring abortions was admissible under the facts disclosed by the record. Max v. People, 78 Colo. 178, 240 P. 697 (1925).

Evidence held inadmissible. In a prosecution for procuring an abortion, the court did not err in refusing to permit certain witnesses offered by defendant to testify that they were his patients and that he had rendered them satisfactory service, where such witnesses were not called as character witnesses. Hall v. People, 119 Colo. 141, 201 P.2d 382 (1948).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain abortion conviction. Clarke v. People, 16 Colo. 511, 27 P. 724 (1891); Willis v. People, 73 Colo. 369, 215 P. 854 (1923); Caraway v. People, 175 Colo. 111, 486 P.2d 17 (1971).

18-6-103. Pretended criminal abortion. (1) Any person who intentionally pretends to end the real or apparent pregnancy of a woman by any means other than justified medical termination or birth commits pretended criminal abortion.

(2) Pretended criminal abortion is a class 5 felony, but if the woman dies as a result of the pretended criminal abortion, it is a class 2 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 447, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-103.

18-6-104. Failure to comply. Nothing in sections 18-6-101 to 18-6-104 requires a hospital to admit any patient under said sections for the purposes of performing an abortion, nor is any hospital required to appoint a special hospital board as defined in section 18-6-101 (4). A person who is a member of or associated with the staff of a hospital or any employee of a hospital in which a justified medical termination has been authorized and who states in writing an objection to the termination on moral or religious grounds is not required to participate in the medical procedures which result in the termination of a pregnancy, and the refusal of any such person to participate does not form the basis for any disciplinary or other recriminatory action against the person.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 447, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-104.

Editor's note: Portions of this section were held unconstitutional in People v. Norton, 181 Colo. 47, 507 P.2d 863 (1973). As set forth in an appendix to the decision, the court indicated that the following italicized portions of this section are unconstitutional:

18-6-104. Failure to comply. Nothing in sections 18-6-101 to 18-6-104 requires a hospital to admit any patient under said sections for the purposes of performing an abortion, nor is any hospital required to appoint a special hospital board as defined in section 18-6-101 (4). A person who is a member of or associated with the staff of a hospital or any employee of a hospital in which a justified medical termination has been authorized and who states in writing an objection to the termination on moral or religious grounds is not required to participate in the medical procedures which result in the termination of a pregnancy, and the refusal of any such person to participate does not form the basis for any disciplinary or other recriminatory action against the person.

18-6-105. Distributing abortifacients. (1) A person commits distributing abortifacients if he distributes or sells to or for any person other than a licensed medical doctor or osteopathic physician any drug, medicine, instrument, or other substance which is in fact an abortifacient and which he knows to be an abortifacient, and reasonably believes will be used as an abortifacient.

(2) Distributing abortifacients is a class 1 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 447, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-105.

PART 2

BIGAMY

18-6-201. Bigamy. (1) Any married person who, while still married, marries or cohabits in this state with another commits bigamy, unless as an affirmative defense it appears that at the time of the cohabitation or subsequent marriage:

- (a) The accused reasonably believed the prior spouse to be dead; or
 - (b) The prior spouse had been continually absent for a period of five years during which time the accused did not know the prior spouse to be alive; or
 - (c) The accused reasonably believed that he was legally eligible to remarry.
- (2) Bigamy is a class 6 felony.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 447, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-201. L. 89: (2) amended, p. 839, § 76, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the "Uniform Marriage Act", see article 2 of title 14; for the "Uniform Dissolution of Marriage Act", see article 10 of title 14.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For note, "The Presumption of Death and a Second Marriage", see 27 Dicta 414 (1950). For article, "Criminology of Voluntary Sexual Acts in Colorado", see 40 U. Colo. L. Rev. 268 (1968).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-6-201 is similar to former C.L. § 6835, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

"Absent" means being away from the home. The word "absent", as used in bigamy statutes, has been regarded as having such confined and technical meaning as it has in the rule regarding the presumption of death. "Absent" therefore means being away from the home or place where one has established a residence. Schell v. People, 65 Colo. 116, 173 P. 1141 (1918).

Remarriage within statutory period is at party's peril. It is the clear intent of this section that one who marries within the period designated by the statute shall do so at his peril. Schell v. People, 65 Colo. 116, 173 P. 1141 (1918).

But death of former spouse or divorce may validate prior marriage. Upon the dissolution of the subsisting marriage by death or by a competent decree of divorce, an intended marriage contracted in good faith by a party thereto prior to the removal of the disability is rendered valid and binding by the continued cohabitation of the parties to such union, as the original intention to become husband and wife, is presumed to continue so as to effectuate a valid common-law marriage. Davis v. People, 83 Colo. 295, 264 P. 658 (1928).

Cohabitation a question for jury. When acts and complicating circumstances are proved, it becomes largely a question for the jury to determine whether there was in fact such continuation as amounted to a living together. People v. Bright, 77 Colo. 563, 238 P. 71 (1925).

The wife is a competent witness against the husband in a prosecution for bigamy. The offense is construed to be a crime against the wife. Schell v. People, 65 Colo. 116, 173 P. 1141 (1918).

Defense of ignorance that former spouse was living must be established by defendant. Clause of this section concerning knowledge that a former spouse is still living constitutes an exception which it is neither for the information to negative, nor for the prosecution in the first instance to disprove. If defendant relies upon the fact that he did not know that his former wife was still alive, he must produce evidence thereof. Magee v. People, 79 Colo. 328, 245 P. 708 (1926).

Spouse held not absent. Defendant deserted his family, leaving them in Nebraska, in 1903, where they continued at their then residence until 1913. Defendant's second marriage occurred in less than two years after the first wife's departure from the former matrimonial domicile. While remaining at such former domicile the first wife was not "absent", within the meaning of this section, and a conviction was affirmed. Schell v. People, 65 Colo. 116, 173 P. 1141 (1918).

Information that follows this section is sufficient. An information which describes the offense in the language of this section, or so clearly that what is charged may be readily understood by a jury, is sufficient. Magee v. People, 79 Colo. 328, 245 P. 708 (1926).

18-6-202. Marrying a bigamist. Any unmarried person who knowingly marries or cohabits with another in this state under circumstances known to him which would render the other person guilty of bigamy under the laws of this state commits marrying a bigamist, which is a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 448, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-202.

18-6-203. Definitions. As used in sections 18-6-201 and 18-6-202, "cohabitation" means to live together under the representation of being married.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 448, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-203.

ANNOTATION

Term "live together". Under former section proscribing conduct under the term "living together", the term was construed to mean living under the same roof or under such conditions as husband and wife usually live. But occasional acts of clandestine illicit intercourse are not alone sufficient to constitute living together. People v. Bright, 77 Colo. 563, 238 P. 71 (1925) (decided under former C.L. § 6835).

PART 3

INCEST

18-6-301. Incest. (1) Any person who knowingly marries, inflicts sexual penetration or sexual intrusion on, or subjects to sexual contact, as defined in section 18-3-401, an ancestor or descendant, including a natural child, child by adoption, or stepchild twenty-one years of age or older, a brother or sister of the whole or half blood, or an uncle, aunt, nephew, or niece of the whole blood commits incest, which is a class 4 felony. For the purpose of this section only, "descendant" includes a child by adoption and a stepchild, but only if the person is not legally married to the child by adoption or the stepchild.

(2) When a person is convicted of, pleads nolo contendere to, or receives a deferred sentence for a violation of the provisions of this section and the victim is a child who is under eighteen years of age and the court knows the person is a current or former employee of a school district or a charter school in this state or holds a license or authorization pursuant to the provisions of article 60.5 of title 22, C.R.S., the court shall report such fact to the department of education.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 448, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-301. L. 83: Entire section amended, p. 695, § 6, effective June 15. L. 86: Entire section amended, p. 770, § 8 effective July 1. L. 90: Entire section amended, p. 1025, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2000: (2) amended, p. 1847, § 32, effective August 2. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 2514, § 2, effective June 5.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Incest and Ethics: Confidentiality's Severest Test", see 61 Den. L.J. 619 (1984).

Annotator's note. Since § 18-6-301 is similar to former § 40-9-4, C.R.S. 1963, and laws antecedent thereto, relevant cases construing those provisions have been included in the annotations to this section.

Under former section essential elements of incest were (1) the act of sexual intercourse; and, (2) such an act between persons related within the prohibited degrees defined by statute. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

Neither the age of the victim nor the age of the perpetrator is material as a requisite of this offense. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

Neither is the unwed status of the female an element. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

Rape and incest are separate and distinct crimes, with certain different elements essential to their proof. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

Either or both of these crimes may be charged in an appropriate factual situation. Where an act of sexual intercourse occurs between male and female persons who are related within certain prohibited degrees, where the female is unmarried and under the age of 18, and the male is over the age of 18 years, both the crime of statutory rape and the crime of incest could have been committed in the same transaction, and the people may charge the male participant with either or both crimes. McGee v. People, 160 Colo. 46, 413 P.2d 901 (1966).

The courts failure to give a straightforward negative response to the jurors' question concerning the definition of "sexual penetration" was harmless error. In order to convict the defendant of first degree sexual assault or incest the jurors had to accept the victim's testimony because the victim testified unequivocally to actual sexual intercourse while the defendant denied any improper touching at all. People v. Fell, 832 P.2d 1015 (Colo. App. 1991).

Retrial on habitual criminality barred notwithstanding trial court's erroneous interpretation or application of substantive law in dismissing habitual charges against the defendant where such dismissal occurs after jeopardy attached upon the impaneling and swearing of the jury. People v. Hrapski, 718 P.2d 1050 (Colo. 1986).

Evidence held sufficient to sustain conviction under this section. Kingsbury v. People, 44 Colo. 403, 99 P. 61 (1908).

18-6-302. Aggravated incest. (1) A person commits aggravated incest when he or she knowingly:

(a) Marries his or her natural child or inflicts sexual penetration or sexual intrusion on or subjects to sexual contact, as defined in section 18-3-401, his or her natural child, stepchild, or child by adoption, but this paragraph (a) shall not apply when the person is legally married to the stepchild or child by adoption. For the purpose of this paragraph (a) only, "child" means a person under twenty-one years of age.

(b) Marries, inflicts sexual penetration or sexual intrusion on, or subjects to sexual contact, as defined in section 18-3-401, a descendant, a brother or sister of the whole or half blood, or an uncle, aunt, nephew, or niece of the whole blood who is under ten years of age.

(2) Aggravated incest is a class 3 felony.

(3) When a person is convicted, pleads nolo contendere, or receives a deferred sentence for a violation of the provisions of this section and the court knows the person is a current or former employee of a school district in this state or holds a license or authorization pursuant to the provisions of article 60.5 of title 22, C.R.S., the court shall report such fact to the department of education.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 448, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-302. L. 77: (1) amended, p. 965, § 35, effective July 1. L. 83: Entire section added, p. 695, § 7, effective June 15. L. 90: (3) added, p. 1026, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2000: (3) amended, p. 1847, § 33, effective August 2.

ANNOTATION

The “unit of prosecution” for the crime of aggravated incest is the same as for the crime of sexual assault on a child because there is no discernible difference between the language used in subsection (1)(a) of this section and the phrase “any sexual contact” used in § 18-3-405.3. People v. Mintz, 165 P.3d 829 (Colo. App. 2007).

To determine if defendant’s actions satisfy more than one unit of prosecution, the court looks at all evidence introduced at trial to determine whether evidence relied upon by jury for conviction supports distinct and separate offenses. Factors to determine distinct offenses include contacts occurring at different locations or times or whether they were the product of new volitional departures. If the acts are not distinct offenses, they merge into a single conviction. People v. Mintz, 165 P.3d 829 (Colo. App. 2007).

Aggravated incest, as defined by this section, constitutes a crime of violence within the meaning of § 4B1.2 of the U.S. sentencing guidelines. United States v. Vigil, 334 F.3d 1215 (10th Cir. 2003).

Victim who identified defendant as her natural father was competent to testify concerning her own parentage. People v. Fierro, 199 Colo. 215, 606 P.2d 1291 (1980).

18-6-303. Sentencing. (1) The court may suspend a portion of the sentence of any person who is convicted of a violation committed prior to November 1, 1998, of any offense listed in this part 3 who is not a habitual sex offender against children, as described in section 18-3-412, if the offender receives a presentence evaluation that recommends a treatment program and the offender satisfactorily completes the recommended treatment program.

(2) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, the court may sentence a defendant who is convicted of a first offense pursuant to this part 3, committed prior to November 1, 1998, to a period of probation for purposes of treatment that, when added to any time served, does not exceed the maximum sentence imposable for the offense.

(3) The court shall sentence a defendant who is convicted of any offense specified in this part 3 committed on or after November 1, 1998, pursuant to the provisions of part 10 of article 1.3 of this title.

Source: L. 83: Entire section added, p. 695, § 8, effective June 15. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 1293, § 14, effective November 1. L. 2002: (3) amended, p. 1567, § 391, effective October 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (3), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

PART 4

WRONGS TO CHILDREN

18-6-401. Child abuse. (1) (a) A person commits child abuse if such person causes an injury to a child’s life or health, or permits a child to be unreasonably placed in a situation that poses a threat of injury to the child’s life or health, or engages in a continued pattern of conduct that results in malnourishment, lack of proper medical care, cruel punishment, mistreatment, or an accumulation of injuries that ultimately results in the death of a child or serious bodily injury to a child.

(b) (I) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (III) of this paragraph (b), a person commits child abuse if such person excises or infibulates, in whole or in part, the labia majora, labia minora, vulva, or clitoris of a female child. A parent, guardian, or other person legally responsible for a female child or charged with the care or custody of a female child commits child abuse if he or she allows the excision or infibulation, in whole or in part, of such child’s labia majora, labia minora, vulva, or clitoris.

(II) Belief that the conduct described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) is required as a matter of custom, ritual, or standard practice or consent to the conduct by the child on whom it is performed or by the child’s parent or legal guardian shall not be an affirmative defense to a charge of child abuse under this paragraph (b).

(III) A surgical procedure as described in subparagraph (I) of this paragraph (b) is not a crime if the procedure:

(A) Is necessary to preserve the health of the child on whom it is performed and is performed by a person licensed to practice medicine under article 36 of title 12, C.R.S.; or

(B) Is performed on a child who is in labor or who has just given birth and is performed for medical purposes connected with that labor or birth by a person licensed to practice medicine under article 36 of title 12, C.R.S.

(IV) If the district attorney having jurisdiction over a case arising under this paragraph (b) has a reasonable belief that any person arrested or charged pursuant to this paragraph (b) is not a citizen or national of the United States, the district attorney shall report such information to the immigration and naturalization service, or any successor agency, in an expeditious manner.

(c) (I) A person commits child abuse if, in the presence of a child, or on the premises where a child is found, or where a child resides, or in a vehicle containing a child, the person knowingly engages in the manufacture or attempted manufacture of a controlled substance, as defined by section 18-18-102 (5), or knowingly possesses ephedrine, pseudoephedrine, or phenylpropanolamine, or their salts, isomers, or salts of isomers, with the intent to use the product as an immediate precursor in the manufacture of a controlled substance. It shall be no defense to the crime of child abuse, as described in this subparagraph (I), that the defendant did not know a child was present, a child could be found, a child resided on the premises, or that a vehicle contained a child.

(II) A parent or lawful guardian of a child or a person having the care or custody of a child who knowingly allows the child to be present at or reside at a premises or to be in a vehicle where the parent, guardian, or person having care or custody of the child knows or reasonably should know another person is engaged in the manufacture or attempted manufacture of methamphetamine commits child abuse.

(III) A parent or lawful guardian of a child or a person having the care or custody of a child who knowingly allows the child to be present at or reside at a premises or to be in a vehicle where the parent, guardian, or person having care or custody of the child knows or reasonably should know another person possesses ephedrine, pseudoephedrine, or phenylpropanolamine, or their salts, isomers, or salts of isomers, with the intent to use the product as an immediate precursor in the manufacture of methamphetamine commits child abuse.

(2) In this section, "child" means a person under the age of sixteen years.

(3) The statutory privilege between patient and physician and between husband and wife shall not be available for excluding or refusing testimony in any prosecution for a violation of this section.

(4) No person, other than the perpetrator, complicitor, coconspirator, or accessory, who reports an instance of child abuse to law enforcement officials shall be subjected to criminal or civil liability for any consequence of making such report unless he knows at the time of making it that it is untrue.

(5) Deferred prosecution is authorized for a first offense under this section unless the provisions of subsection (7.5) of this section or section 18-6-401.2 apply.

(6) Repealed.

(7) (a) Where death or injury results, the following shall apply:

(I) When a person acts knowingly or recklessly and the child abuse results in death to the child, it is a class 2 felony except as provided in paragraph (c) of this subsection (7).

(II) When a person acts with criminal negligence and the child abuse results in death to the child, it is a class 3 felony.

(III) When a person acts knowingly or recklessly and the child abuse results in serious bodily injury to the child, it is a class 3 felony.

(IV) When a person acts with criminal negligence and the child abuse results in serious bodily injury to the child, it is a class 4 felony.

(V) When a person acts knowingly or recklessly and the child abuse results in any injury other than serious bodily injury, it is a class 1 misdemeanor; except that, if it is committed under the circumstances described in paragraph (e) of this subsection (7), then it is a class 5 felony.

(VI) When a person acts with criminal negligence and the child abuse results in any injury other than serious bodily injury to the child, it is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that, if it is committed under the circumstances described in paragraph (e) of this subsection (7), then it is a class 5 felony.

(b) Where no death or injury results, the following shall apply:

(I) An act of child abuse when a person acts knowingly or recklessly is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that, if it is committed under the circumstances described in paragraph (e) of this subsection (7), then it is a class 5 felony.

(II) An act of child abuse when a person acts with criminal negligence is a class 3 misdemeanor; except that, if it is committed under the circumstances described in paragraph (e) of this subsection (7), then it is a class 5 felony.

(c) When a person knowingly causes the death of a child who has not yet attained twelve years of age and the person committing the offense is one in a position of trust with respect to the child, such person commits the crime of murder in the first degree as described in section 18-3-102 (1) (f).

(d) When a person commits child abuse as described in paragraph (c) of subsection (1) of this section, it is a class 3 felony.

(e) A person who has previously been convicted of a violation of this section or of an offense in any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States that would constitute child abuse if committed in this state and who commits child abuse as provided in subparagraph (V) or (VI) of paragraph (a) of this subsection (7) or as provided in subparagraph (I) or (II) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (7) commits a class 5 felony if the trier of fact finds that the new offense involved any of the following acts:

(I) The defendant, who was in a position of trust, as described in section 18-3-401 (3.5), in relation to the child, participated in a continued pattern of conduct that resulted in the child's malnourishment or failed to ensure the child's access to proper medical care;

(II) The defendant participated in a continued pattern of cruel punishment or unreasonable isolation or confinement of the child;

(III) The defendant made repeated threats of harm or death to the child or to a significant person in the child's life, which threats were made in the presence of the child;

(IV) The defendant committed a continued pattern of acts of domestic violence, as that term is defined in section 18-6-800.3, in the presence of the child; or

(V) The defendant participated in a continued pattern of extreme deprivation of hygienic or sanitary conditions in the child's daily living environment.

(7.3) Felony child abuse is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified presumptive sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-401 (10). Misdemeanor child abuse is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(7.5) If a defendant is convicted of the class 2 or class 3 felony of child abuse under subparagraph (I) or (III) of paragraph (a) of subsection (7) of this section, the court shall sentence the defendant in accordance with section 18-1.3-401 (8) (d).

(8) Repealed.

(9) If a parent is charged with permitting a child to be unreasonably placed in a situation that poses a threat of injury to the child's life or health, pursuant to paragraph (a) of subsection (1) of this section, and the child was seventy-two hours old or younger at the time of the alleged offense, it shall be an affirmative defense to such charge that the parent safely, reasonably, and knowingly handed the child over to a firefighter, as defined in section 18-3-201 (1), or to a hospital staff member who engages in the admission, care, or treatment of patients, when such firefighter is at a fire station or such hospital staff member is at a hospital.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 448, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-401. L. 73: p. 538, § 4. L. 75: (7) amended and (8) added, p. 620, § 15, effective July 21. L. 79: (7) amended, p. 729, § 8, effective July 1. L. 80: (1) and (7) R&RE and (8) amended, pp. 544, 545, §§ 1, 2, effective May 6. L. 85: (1), (4), and (5) amended, (7) R&RE, and (7.5) added, pp. 672, 673, §§ 1, 2, effective June 7. L. 87: (6) amended, p. 817, § 21, effective October 1.

L. 89: (6) R&RE, p. 924, § 2, effective June 7. L. 90: (8) repealed, p. 1037, § 6, effective April 3. L. 91: (1) amended, p. 422, § 1, effective May 24. L. 95: (7)(a)(I) amended and (7)(c) added, p. 1222, § 4, effective July 1. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 803, § 2, effective May 24. L. 2000: (9) added, p. 2004, § 1, effective June 3. L. 2001: (6) repealed, p. 334, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2002: (7.5) amended, p. 1515, § 198, effective October 1. L. 2003: (1)(c) and (7)(d) added, p. 2383, §§ 1, 2, effective July 1. L. 2004: (7.3) added, p. 636, § 9, effective August 4. L. 2006: (1)(c) amended, p. 1705, § 4, effective July 1; (7)(a)(V), (7)(a)(VI), (7)(b)(I), and (7)(b)(II) amended and (7)(e) added, p. 2047, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2009: (7)(a)(V), (7)(a)(VI), (7)(b), and (7)(e) amended, (HB 09-1163), ch. 343, p. 1797, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2011: (1)(b)(IV) amended, (HB 11-1303), ch. 264, p. 1157, § 33, effective August 10.

Cross references: (1) For the “Child Protection Act of 1987”, see part 3 of article 3 of title 19.

(2) For the statutory privilege between patient and physician and between husband and wife, see § 13-90-107.

(3) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (7.5), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002. For the legislative declaration contained in the 2006 act amending subsection (1)(c), see section 1 of chapter 341, Session Laws of Colorado 2006.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Child Abuse — The Legislative Response”, see 44 Den. L.J. 3 (1967).

This section is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Kailey, 662 P.2d 168 (Colo. 1983).

Subsection (1)(a) is not unconstitutionally vague as applied to defendant stepmother who lived in the same house as abused child, failed to intervene in husband’s child abuse, and actively covered up the abuse. Defendant plainly permitted the child to be placed in a “situation that poses a threat of injury to the child’s life or health” and had adequate notice of the proscribed conduct. People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Former subsection (1) constitutional and does not prescribe different degrees of punishment for same conduct. People v. Schwartz, 678 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1984).

Subsection (1)(c) does not unconstitutionally infringe on parents’ right to raise their children. The state has a parens patriae interest in protecting children from imminent physical harm. People v. Laurent, 194 P.3d 1053 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2006 amendment).

Subsection (1)(c) is not unconstitutionally overbroad because it proscribes as felony child abuse the manufacture or attempted manufacture of controlled substances in a home where a child resides without proscribing as child abuse the commission of other crimes in a home where a child resides. People v. Laurent, 194 P.3d 1053 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2006 amendment).

Defendant’s claim that subsection (1)(c) violated equal protection fails because subsections (1)(c) and (7)(a)(I) to (7)(a)(VI) do not affect persons who are similarly situated. People v. Laurent, 194 P.3d 1053 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2006 amendment).

Prohibition of cruel punishment in former subsection (1)(c) constitutional. The prohibition in the child abuse statute against cruel punishment was sufficiently precise to satisfy due process requirements. People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982).

Classification of child abuse as more serious than negligent homicide constitutional. The legislative classification of child abuse as a crime more serious in penalty than the offense of criminally negligent homicide is neither arbitrary nor unreasonable and does not violate equal protection of the laws. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

Criminally negligent homicide is a lesser included offense of criminally negligent child abuse resulting in death. People v. Clements, 732 P.2d 1245 (Colo. App. 1986).

Sections 18-6-401 and 18-3-405 do not proscribe identical conduct. The proscriptions of this section encompass conduct that is particularly abusive to children, that is directed specifically against a child, and that results in injury to that child. Criminally negligent homicide, on the other hand, proscribes in general terms a gross carelessness that causes death to anyone, adult or child. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

More serious penalty than reckless manslaughter constitutional. The legislative classification of felony child abuse as a crime warranting a more serious penalty than reckless manslaughter, though proscribing identical conduct, does not violate equal protection of the laws. People v. Christian, 632 P.2d 1031 (Colo. 1981); People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981).

Common-law limits of parental chastisement codified. The parental privilege set out in § 18-1-703(1)(a) and the definition of criminal child abuse in § 18-1-401 codify common-law principles concerning the limits of permissible parental chastisement. People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982).

This section depends on no source of duty; therefore, defendant was sufficiently charged under the statute, despite the information's failure to allege the defendant's duty to act or the source of such duty. People v. Arevalo, 725 P.2d 41 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Under this section, any person owes a legal duty to refrain from either: (1) Permitting a child to be unreasonably placed in a situation that poses a threat; or (2) engaging in a continued pattern of child abuse. This duty attaches even if the person causes no injury to the child victim. People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Defendant sufficiently apprised of the charges against him because the information was framed in the words of the statute and the trial court had granted his request for a bill of particulars. People v. Arevalo, 725 P.2d 41 (Colo. App. 1986); People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Prosecution has burden of establishing guilt beyond reasonable doubt as to each material element of this offense. People v. Durbin, 187 Colo. 230, 529 P.2d 630 (1974).

Prosecution must establish guilt of defendant raising affirmative defense beyond reasonable doubt. Where, in a prosecution for child abuse, the evidence raises the affirmative defense of justified physical force for disciplinary purposes, the prosecution must establish the guilt of the defendant beyond a reasonable doubt as to that issue as well as all other elements of the offense. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

"Child", as used in this section to describe a victim of abuse, includes a fetus that is injured while in the womb, is subsequently born and lived outside the womb, and then dies from the injuries sustained. While Colorado has no provisions criminalizing the injuring or killing of a fetus, the state common law "born alive" doctrine permits a criminal prosecution of the perpetrator when a child is born alive and then dies of the prenatal injuries and civil law in the state has held that such a victim is a person within Colorado's wrongful death statute. People v. Lage, 232 P.3d 138 (Colo. App. 2009).

The term "health" includes both physical and mental well-being. People v. Sherrod, 204

P.3d 472 (Colo. App. 2007), rev'd on other grounds, 204 P.3d 466 (Colo. 2009).

The phrase "without justifiable excuse" in former subsection (1) of this section referred to the specific statute on justification, particularly § 18-1-703 (1)(a), which concerns the use of physical force in the special relationship of one who is entrusted with the care of a minor. People v. Hoehl, 193 Colo. 557, 568 P.2d 484 (1977).

Use of jury instruction containing phrase "without justifiable excuse" instead of word "unreasonably" from subsection (1)(a) was not plain error. People v. Johnson, 74 P.3d 349 (Colo. App. 2002).

The word "may" in former subsection (1)(a) of this section was construed to mean that there was a reasonable probability that the child's life or health will be endangered from the situation in which the child is placed. People v. Hoehl, 193 Colo. 557, 568 P.2d 484 (1977); People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982); People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

Lack of jury instruction on meaning of word "may" did not constitute plain error where evidence established a reasonable probability that child's life and health might be endangered and lack of instruction could not be said to have reasonably contributed to defendant's conviction of child abuse. People v. Rubanowitz, 688 P.2d 231 (Colo. 1984).

The phrase "endanger the child's . . . health" in former subsection (1)(a) of this section contained no constitutional infirmities. People v. Hoehl, 193 Colo. 557, 568 P.2d 484 (1977).

There is no constitutional impediment to the general assembly punishing conduct creating less than imminent danger, and it is a particularly appropriate standard where the protection of children is the statutory purpose. People v. Hoehl, 193 Colo. 557, 568 P.2d 484 (1977).

"Endanger" in former subsection (1)(a) meant an imminent danger and "may endanger" in subsection (1)(b) meant a reasonable probability of harm. People v. Schwartz, 678 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1984).

"Except" deleted. By statutory construction, the court deleted the "except" clauses in former subsections (7)(a)(I), (7)(a)(III), and (7)(a)(V). People v. Schwartz, 678 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1984).

Child abuse definition sufficiently particular to furnish adequate notice to potential wrongdoers. The term "negligently" (amended to read "through criminal negligence" in 1980), as used in this section, is not irreconcilably at odds with "tortured" and "cruelly punished", and the statutory definition of child abuse is sufficiently particular to furnish adequate notice to potential wrongdoers of the proscribed conduct and to protect against discriminatory enforcement. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981); People v. Mann, 646 P.2d 352 (Colo. 1982).

“Knowingly”. The requirement of “knowingly” in former subsection (1) did not refer to the actor’s awareness that his conduct was practically certain to cause the proscribed result; instead, “knowingly” referred to the actor’s general awareness of the abusive nature of his conduct in relation to the child or his awareness of the circumstances in which he committed an act against the well-being of the child. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981); People v. Thompson, 756 P.2d 353 (Colo. 1988).

The mental state “knowingly” is implied in former subsection (1)(c) because the statute required the accused to engage in the manufacture of a controlled substance. Both the terms “engage” and “manufacture” imply that the accused must be aware of the type of conduct participated in, and must seek to accomplish a particular task. People v. Laurent, 194 P.3d 1053 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2006 amendment to subsection (1)(c)).

The culpable mental states applicable to the crime of child abuse relate not to a particular result, but rather to the nature of the offender’s conduct in relation to the child or to the circumstances under which the act or omission occurred. People v. Deskins, 927 P.2d 368 (Colo. 1996).

Evidence that abuse resulted in serious bodily injury, as defined in § 18-1-901 (3)(p) sufficient to support charges of felony child abuse must relate to the extent of the injury at the time it occurred, not at the time of trial. People v. Thompson, 748 P.2d 793 (Colo. 1988).

Inaction may be act of mistreatment. The child abuse statute proscribes acts of mistreatment which include inaction as well as action. People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982).

“Tortured” and “cruelly punished”, as used in former subsection (1), referred to actus reus, as measured by the consequences wrought on the child. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981); People v. Jennings, 641 P.2d 276 (Colo. 1982).

Placing child in debilitating physical situation may be considered torture. A person may negligently cause or permit a child to be placed in a situation so debilitating to the child’s physical well-being that a reasonable juror, looking at the effect of the offender’s conduct on the child, would consider it torture or cruel punishment. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Conduct prohibited by former subsection (1)(b) was punished as provided in subsection (7)(b). People v. Schwartz, 678 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1984).

“Good faith” under former subsection (6) means an objectively reasonable belief that a child is not suffering from a condition which, if medically untreated, will endanger a child’s life or will pose a substantial risk of serious bodily harm to the child. A belief is objectively reasonable when based on a reasonable assessment of the facts and circumstances known or discernible to the parent. People v. Lybarger, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1989 repeal and reenactment of subsection (6)).

Thus, treatment by spiritual means defense is inapplicable where a parent believes that the child is not in danger of death or serious bodily harm but such belief is not based on a reasonable assessment of the facts and circumstances that are known to the parent. People v. Lybarger, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1989 repeal and reenactment of subsection (6)).

Treatment by spiritual means was an affirmative defense under former subsection (6) if there was credible evidence that the parent had an honest and reasonable belief that the child was not suffering from a condition which, if untreated, would endanger the child’s life or pose a substantial risk of serious bodily harm to the child, that the parent was a duly accredited practitioner of a recognized church or religious denomination, and the parent elected to treat the child solely by spiritual means in accordance with tenets and practices of the parent’s church. Record shows sufficient evidence raised by defendant to submit affirmative defense to the jury. People v. Lybarger, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991) (decided under law in effect prior to 1989 repeal and reenactment of subsection (6)).

Subsection (7)(a) applies only when death or injury occurs and subsection (7)(b) applies when no such result occurs. People v. Schwartz, 678 P.2d 1000 (Colo. 1984); People v. Lybarger, 790 P.2d 855 (Colo. App. 1989), rev’d on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

A class 3 felony conviction under subsection (7)(a)(III) requires a causal connection between each listed form of child abuse and the alleged serious bodily injury, and, because the prosecution failed to make that connection between the situation that posed a threat of injury to the child and a resulting serious bodily injury, the prosecution lacked sufficient evidence on their second alternative theory of liability. People v. Dunaway, 88 P.3d 619 (Colo. 2004).

No reasonable interpretation of subsection (1)(a) would lead to the conclusion that proof of injury or serious bodily injury for purposes of meeting elements in subsection (7)(a) is made or inferred through proof of the conduct listed in subsection (1)(a). People v. Dunaway, 88 P.3d 619 (Colo. 2004).

A person commits child abuse if he or she causes injury to a child’s life or health, or permits a child to be unreasonably placed in a situation which poses a threat of injury to the child’s life or health, and such offense does not depend on the offense resulting in death. People v. Robinson, 874 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1993).

Fact that a child victim dies is a sentence enhancement factor and not an element of the crime of child abuse. People v. Robinson, 874 P.2d 453 (Colo. App. 1993).

The distinction of a position of trust in subsection (7)(c) is not nominal and it sufficiently justifies the harsher penalty imposed under that subsection. People v. Martinez, 51 P.3d 1046 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 74 P.3d 316 (Colo. 2003).

The age distinction for the victims mentioned in subsection (7)(c) is based on differences that are real in fact and that are reasonably related to the more severe penalty associated with subsection (7)(c). People v. Martinez, 51 P.3d 1046 (Colo. App. 2001), rev'd on other grounds, 74 P.3d 316 (Colo. 2003).

Acts similar in character admissible to negate claim of justification. Where all the prior acts of child abuse the prosecution sought to introduce into evidence were committed against the same person, each act was occasioned by normal childhood behavior on the part of the victim, each act was similar in severity in that noticeable bruises and marks were left on the child's body, each act took place while the child's mother was absent, and, finally, each act was followed by the defendant's explanation that it was for disciplinary purposes, that acts were sufficiently similar in character to be admissible for purposes of establishing criminal culpability and of negating any claim of accident or justification. People v. Taggart, 621 P.2d 1375 (Colo. 1981).

Acquittal on assault charge not bar to prosecution for knowing child abuse. A verdict of acquittal on a charge of assault does not bar reprosecution for knowing child abuse, since a finding that the defendant did not have the specific intent to cause serious injury is not an ultimate fact essential to proof of knowing child abuse because a conviction on that charge may be sustained by conduct that is done knowingly or negligently. People v. Hoehl, 629 P.2d 1083 (Colo. App. 1980).

Failure to include the phrase "without justifiable excuse" in a jury instruction on a crime of child abuse was not error where the affirmative defense of reasonable and appropriate discipline was not raised by the defense. People v.

Lybarger, 700 P.2d 910 (Colo. 1985), rev'd on other grounds, 807 P.2d 570 (Colo. 1991).

Jury instruction delivered by trial court constructively amended the count of reckless child abuse resulting in death. The information charged one form of child abuse, causing an injury to a child's life or health, and the jury instruction stated another, uncharged form of child abuse, permitting a child to be unreasonably placed in a situation that may have endangered the child's life or health. People v. Weinreich, 98 P.3d 920 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 119 P.3d 1073 (Colo. 2005).

Because the amendment prejudiced defendant's substantial rights, the error rises to plain error. The amendment occurred after the close of evidence, and, therefore, defendant was deprived of the opportunity to present evidence on whether he had unreasonably placed his deceased daughter in a situation that may have endangered her life or health. People v. Weinreich, 98 P.3d 920 (Colo. App. 2004), aff'd, 119 P.3d 1073 (Colo. 2005).

Consistency of verdicts. There is no logical inconsistency between the guilty verdicts for the crimes of felony child abuse and reckless manslaughter. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981).

A guilty verdict for felony child abuse is not inconsistent with an acquittal of extreme indifference murder nor second degree murder. People v. Noble, 635 P.2d 203 (Colo. 1981).

Evidence sufficient to support a general verdict of guilty on charge brought under subsection (1)(a) where the evidence challenged on appeal consisted of alternative methods of establishing a single element. Therefore, the rule that requires sufficient evidence to support each alternative theory of prosecution's case does not apply. People v. Pineda, 40 P.3d 60 (Colo. App. 2001).

Manufacturing a controlled substance is a lesser included offense of child abuse based on manufacturing a controlled substance. People v. Laurent, 194 P.3d 1053 (Colo. App. 2008) (decided under law in effect prior to 2006 amendment to subsection (1)(c)).

Applied in People v. Sheldon, 198 Colo. 519, 602 P.2d 869 (1979); People v. Beland, 631 P.2d 1130 (Colo. 1981); People v. Raffaelli, 647 P.2d 230 (Colo. 1982); People v. Gordon, 738 P.2d 404 (Colo. App. 1987).

18-6-401.1. Child abuse - limitation for commencing proceedings - evidence - statutory privilege. (1) For the purposes of this section, "child abuse" means child abuse as defined in section 18-6-401 (1).

(2) No person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for an act of child abuse other than the misdemeanor offenses specified in section 18-6-401 (7) (a) (V), (7) (a) (VI), and (7) (b), unless the indictment, information, complaint, or action for the same is found or instituted within ten years after commission of the offense. No person shall be prosecuted, tried, or punished for the misdemeanor offenses specified in section 18-6-401 (7) (a) (V), (7) (a) (VI), and (7) (b), unless the indictment, information, complaint, or action for the same is found or instituted within five years after the commission of the offense.

(3) Out-of-court statements made by a child describing any act of child abuse performed on the child declarant, not otherwise admissible by a statute or court rule which provides an exception to the objection of hearsay, may be admissible in any proceeding in which the child is a victim of an act of child abuse pursuant to the provisions of section 13-25-129, C.R.S.

(4) All cases involving the commission of an act of child abuse shall take precedence before the court; the court shall hear these cases as soon as possible after they are filed.

(5) The statutory privilege between the victim-patient and his physician and between the husband and the wife shall not be available for excluding or refusing testimony in any prosecution of an act of child abuse.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 673, § 3, effective June 7.

Cross references: For provisions concerning sex offenses against children which are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-3-411; for the physician-patient and husband-wife privileges, see § 13-90-107.

18-6-401.2. Habitual child abusers - indictment or information - verdict of the jury. (1) For the purposes of this section, "child abuse" means child abuse as defined in section 18-6-401 (1).

(2) Every person convicted in this state of an act of child abuse who has been previously convicted upon charges prior to the commission of the present act, which were separately brought, either in this state or elsewhere, of an act of child abuse or who has been previously convicted under the laws of any other state, the United States, or any territory subject to the jurisdiction of the United States of an unlawful act which, if committed within this state, would be an act of child abuse shall be adjudged an habitual child abuser. If the second or subsequent act of child abuse for which a defendant is convicted constitutes a class 3 felony under section 18-6-401 (7) (a) (II) or a class 4 felony under section 18-6-401 (7) (a) (IV), the sentence imposed shall be served in the department of corrections and shall not be less than the upper limit of the presumptive range for that class felony as set out in section 18-1.3-401. If the second or subsequent act of child abuse for which a defendant is convicted constitutes a misdemeanor, the sentence imposed shall be served in the county jail and shall not be less than the maximum sentence for that class misdemeanor as set out in section 18-1.3-501.

(3) Any previous conviction of an act of child abuse shall be set forth in apt words in the complaint, indictment, or information. For purposes of trial, a duly authenticated copy of the record of previous convictions and judgments of any court of record for any of said crimes of the party indicted, charged, or informed against shall be prima facie evidence of such convictions and may be used in evidence against such party. A duly authenticated copy of the records of institutions of treatment or incarceration, including, but not limited to, records pertaining to identification of the party indicted, charged, or informed against, shall be prima facie evidence of the facts contained therein and may be used in evidence against such party.

(4) Any person who is subject to the provisions of this section shall not be eligible for probation or suspension of sentence or deferred prosecution.

(5) The procedures specified in section 18-1.3-803 shall govern in a trial to which the provisions of this section are alleged to apply based on a previous conviction or convictions for an act of child abuse as set out in the complaint, indictment, or information.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 674, § 3, effective June 7. L. 96: (5) amended, p. 1846, § 19, effective July 1. L. 2002: (2) and (5) amended, p. 1515, § 199, effective October 1. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 1428, § 9, effective April 29.

Cross references: (1) For provisions concerning habitual sex offenders against children which are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-3-412.

(2) For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (2) and (5), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

18-6-401.3. Video tape depositions - children - victims of child abuse. (1) When a defendant has been charged with an act of child abuse, as defined in section 18-6-401 (1), and when the victim at the time of the commission of the act is a child less than fifteen years of age, the prosecution may apply to the court for an order that a deposition be taken of the victim's testimony and that the deposition be recorded and preserved on video tape.

(2) The prosecution shall apply for the order in writing at least three days prior to the taking of the deposition. The defendant shall receive reasonable notice of the taking of the deposition.

(3) Upon timely receipt of the application, the court shall make a preliminary finding regarding whether, at the time of trial, the victim is likely to be medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of rule 804 (a) of the Colorado rules of evidence. Such finding shall be based on, but not be limited to, recommendations from the child's therapist or any other person having direct contact with the child, whose recommendations are based on specific behavioral indicators exhibited by the child. If the court so finds, it shall order that the deposition be taken, pursuant to rule 15 (d) of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure, and preserved on video tape. The prosecution shall transmit the video tape to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending.

(4) If at the time of trial the court finds that further testimony would cause the victim emotional trauma so that the victim is medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of rule 804 (a) of the Colorado rules of evidence, the court may admit the video tape of the victim's deposition as former testimony under rule 804 (b) (1) of the Colorado rules of evidence.

(5) Nothing in this section shall prevent the admission into evidence of any videotaped statements of children that would qualify for admission pursuant to section 13-25-129, C.R.S., or any other statute or rule of evidence.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 675, § 3, effective June 7. L. 2000: (5) added, p. 453, § 8, effective April 24.

Cross references: For provisions concerning video tape depositions of child victims of sexual offenses which are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-3-413.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Children as Witnesses", see 31 Colo. Law. 15 (October 2002).

18-6-401.4. Payment of treatment costs for the victim or victims of an act of child abuse. (1) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, the court may order any person who is convicted of an act of child abuse, as defined in section 18-6-401 (1), to meet all or any portion of the financial obligations of treatment prescribed for the victim or victims of his offense.

(2) At the time of sentencing, the court may order that an offender described in subsection (1) of this section be put on a period of probation for the purpose of paying the treatment costs of the victim or victims.

Source: L. 85: Entire section added, p. 675, § 3, effective June 7. L. 2003: (2) amended, p. 976, § 14, effective April 17.

Cross references: For provisions concerning payment of treatment costs for victims of sexual offenses against children which are similar to the provisions of this section, see § 18-3-414.

18-6-402. Trafficking in children. (Repealed)

Source: L. 77: Entire section added, p. 981, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2006: Entire section amended, p. 1308, § 2, effective May 30. L. 2009: (2) and (3) amended, (HB 09-1123), ch. 306, p. 1652, § 1, effective May 21. L. 2010: Entire section repealed, (SB 10-140), ch. 156, p. 540, § 13, effective April 21.

Editor's note: This section was relocated to § 18-3-502 in 2010.

18-6-403. Sexual exploitation of a child. (1) The general assembly hereby finds and declares: That the sexual exploitation of children constitutes a wrongful invasion of the child's right of privacy and results in social, developmental, and emotional injury to the child; that a child below the age of eighteen years is incapable of giving informed consent to the use of his or her body for a sexual purpose; and that to protect children from sexual exploitation it is necessary to prohibit the production of material which involves or is derived from such exploitation and to exclude all such material from the channels of trade and commerce.

(1.5) The general assembly further finds and declares that the mere possession or control of any sexually exploitative material results in continuing victimization of our children by the fact that such material is a permanent record of an act or acts of sexual abuse of a child; that each time such material is shown or viewed, the child is harmed; that such material is used to break down the will and resistance of other children to encourage them to participate in similar acts of sexual abuse; that laws banning the production and distribution of such material are insufficient to halt this abuse; that in order to stop the sexual exploitation and abuse of our children, it is necessary for the state to ban the possession of any sexually exploitative materials; and that the state has a compelling interest in outlawing the possession of any sexually exploitative materials in order to protect society as a whole, and particularly the privacy, health, and emotional welfare of its children.

(2) As used in this section, unless the context otherwise requires:

(a) "Child" means a person who is less than eighteen years of age.

(b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 1882, § 1, effective July 1, 2003.)

(c) "Erotic fondling" means touching a person's clothed or unclothed genitals or pubic area, developing or undeveloped genitals or pubic area (if the person is a child), buttocks, breasts, or developing or undeveloped breast area (if the person is a child), for the purpose of real or simulated overt sexual gratification or stimulation of one or more of the persons involved. "Erotic fondling" shall not be construed to include physical contact, even if affectionate, which is not for the purpose of real or simulated overt sexual gratification or stimulation of one or more of the persons involved.

(d) "Erotic nudity" means the display of the human male or female genitals or pubic area, the undeveloped or developing genitals or pubic area of the human male or female child, the human breasts, or the undeveloped or developing breast area of the human child, for the purpose of real or simulated overt sexual gratification or stimulation of one or more of the persons involved.

(e) "Explicit sexual conduct" means sexual intercourse, erotic fondling, erotic nudity, masturbation, sadomasochism, or sexual excitement.

(f) "Masturbation" means the real or simulated touching, rubbing, or otherwise stimulating of a person's own clothed or unclothed genitals or pubic area, developing or undeveloped genitals or pubic area (if the person is a child), buttocks, breasts, or developing or undeveloped breast area (if the person is a child), by manual manipulation or self-induced or with an artificial instrument, for the purpose of real or simulated overt sexual gratification or arousal of the person.

(g) "Sadomasochism" means:

(I) Real or simulated flagellation or torture for the purpose of real or simulated sexual stimulation or gratification; or

(II) The real or simulated condition of being fettered, bound, or otherwise physically restrained for sexual stimulation or gratification of a person.

(h) "Sexual excitement" means the real or simulated condition of human male or female genitals when in a state of real or simulated overt sexual stimulation or arousal.

(i) "Sexual intercourse" means real or simulated intercourse, whether genital-genital, oral-genital, anal-genital, or oral-anal, between persons of the same or opposite sex, or between a human and an animal, or with an artificial genital.

(j) "Sexually exploitative material" means any photograph, motion picture, video, video tape, print, negative, slide, or other mechanically, electronically, chemically, or digitally reproduced visual material that depicts a child engaged in, participating in, observing, or being used for explicit sexual conduct.

(k) "Video", "video tape", or "motion picture" means any material that depicts a moving image of a child engaged in, participating in, observing, or being used for explicit sexual conduct.

(3) A person commits sexual exploitation of a child if, for any purpose, he or she knowingly:

(a) Causes, induces, entices, or permits a child to engage in, or be used for, any explicit sexual conduct for the making of any sexually exploitative material; or

(b) Prepares, arranges for, publishes, including but not limited to publishing through digital or electronic means, produces, promotes, makes, sells, finances, offers, exhibits, advertises, deals in, or distributes, including but not limited to distributing through digital or electronic means, any sexually exploitative material; or

(b.5) Possesses or controls any sexually exploitative material for any purpose; except that this paragraph (b.5) does not apply to peace officers or court personnel in the performance of their official duties, nor does it apply to physicians, psychologists, therapists, or social workers, so long as such persons are licensed in the state of Colorado and the persons possess such materials in the course of a bona fide treatment or evaluation program at the treatment or evaluation site; or

(c) Possesses with the intent to deal in, sell, or distribute, including but not limited to distributing through digital or electronic means, any sexually exploitative material; or

(d) Causes, induces, entices, or permits a child to engage in, or be used for, any explicit sexual conduct for the purpose of producing a performance.

(4) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 1882, § 1, effective July 1, 2003.)

(5) (a) Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this subsection (5), sexual exploitation of a child is a class 3 felony.

(b) Sexual exploitation of a child by possession of sexually exploitative material pursuant to paragraph (b.5) of subsection (3) of this section is a class 6 felony; except that said offense is a class 4 felony if:

(I) It is a second or subsequent offense; or

(II) The possession is of a video, video tape, or motion picture or more than twenty different items qualifying as sexually exploitative material.

(6) If any provision of this section or the application thereof to any person or circumstances is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect other provisions or applications of this section which can be given effect without the invalid provision or application, and to this end the provisions of this section are declared to be severable.

Source: L. 79: Entire section added, p. 737, § 1, effective July 1. L. 81: (3)(a) amended, p. 997, § 1, effective July 1. L. 84: (1) and (3) amended, p. 553, § 1, effective July 1. L. 88: (1.5) and (3)(b.5) added, (2)(c), (2)(d), (2)(f), and (5) amended, and (4) R&RE, pp. 730, 712, 731, §§ 1, 2, 4, 18, 3, effective July 1. L. 98: (2)(j), IP(3), (3)(b), and (3)(c) amended, p. 398, § 3, effective April 21. L. 2003: (2)(b), (3)(a), (3)(c), and (4) amended, p. 1882, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2006: (5) amended, p. 2043, § 1, effective July 1; (5) amended, p. 2056, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2009: (2)(j) and (5) amended and (2)(k) added, (HB 09-1163), ch. 343, p. 1799, § 3, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Amendments to subsection (5) by House Bill 06-1011 and House Bill 06-1092 were harmonized.

ANNOTATION

Constitutionality. This section does not constitute a denial of due process nor infringe upon first amendment freedom of speech. The sale of child pornography is not constitutionally protected conduct. People v. Enea, 665 P.2d 1026 (Colo. 1983).

The constitutionality of this section is preserved by the statutory requirements that a person knowingly took sexually explicit photographs of a child and that the content of those photographs, viewed objectively, would lead to sexual gratification or stimulation of a reasonable viewer. People v. Grady, 126 P.3d 218 (Colo. App. 2005).

Defining "sexual gratification or stimulation of one or more of the persons involved" objectively, so as to include a reasonable viewer of sexual materials that have been distributed, furthers the statute's legislative intent of protecting children from sexual exploitation and does not cause the statute to be unconstitutionally overbroad and vague. People v. Grady, 126 P.3d 218 (Colo. App. 2005).

Subsection (1) is a statement of legislative purpose, and does not alter the elements of the crime as set forth in subsection (3). People v. Enea, 665 P.2d 1026 (Colo. 1983).

Section is not unconstitutionally vague. People v. Gagnon, 997 P.2d 1278 (Colo. App. 1999).

Subsection (2)(d) that defines "erotic nudity" is not unconstitutionally overbroad. The category of "sexual conduct" proscribed through the definition of "erotic nudity" in subsection (2)(d) is suitably limited to conduct that is not constitutionally protected. People v. Gagnon, 997 P.2d 1278 (Colo. App. 1999).

Subsection (3)(a) is not constitutionally overbroad on its face because it prohibits only the use of real children in the production of pornography and does not prohibit the making or possession of photographs that "appear to be" of a minor engaged in sexually explicit conduct. People v. Campbell, 94 P.3d 1186 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (3)(b) is not unconstitutionally overbroad or vague on its face when used to prosecute for making materials depicting erotic nudity as defined by subsection (2)(d). People v. Batchelor, 800 P.2d 599 (Colo. 1990).

Subsection (3)(b) is not overbroad or vague as applied to the defendant who was charged with sexual exploitation of a child because he knowingly made photographs of his daughter for no reason other than defendant's sexual gratification. People v. Batchelor, 800 P.2d 599 (Colo. 1990).

Based on the plain language of subsections (3)(b) and (3)(b.5), the general assembly intended the prohibited behavior relating to each discrete item of sexually exploitative material to constitute an allowable unit of prosecution. Each sexually exploitative image is a permanent record and, therefore, constitutes a discrete act of victimization of the child. People v. Renander, 151 P.3d 657 (Colo. App. 2006).

Subsection (3)(b) does not apply to the duplication of photographs by the prosecution for use by defense counsel in preparation for trial when the court has taken adequate precautions to limit their use. People v. Arapahoe County Court, 74 P.3d 429 (Colo. App. 2003).

"Arranges for" in subsection (3)(b) does not include either arranging for the distribution of material, or arranging to obtain material. People v. Mantos, 250 P.3d 586 (Colo. App. 2009).

The requisite mental state of "knowingly" in subsection (3) must be deemed to apply to every element of the offense of sexual exploitation of a child, including the element of age, absent a clear intent to the contrary. People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section 18-3-406 (1) eliminates the culpable mental state as to age prescribed by subsection (3), "knowingly", and replaces it with that of § 18-3-406 (1), "lack of reasonable belief". People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Section 18-3-406 (1), by providing for the affirmative defense of reasonable belief, manifests clear legislative intent that the culpable mental state of "knowingly" in subsection (3) does not apply to the age of the victim. People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

Even if the individual has not developed the film, a prosecution under subsection (3)(a) may be predicated upon an individual's photographing a child engaged in sexually explicit conduct. The critical question for the jury to resolve is whether the individual photographed the child for the purpose of producing a visual depiction of explicit sexual conduct. People v. St. James, 75 P.3d 1122 (Colo. App. 2002).

"Prepares" as used in subsection (3)(b) means engaging in the process of creating any sexually exploitative material. People v. Mantos, 250 P.3d 586 (Colo. App. 2009).

Evidence that a person has knowingly received prohibited material in an e-mail could be accepted as proof that the person knowingly possessed the material, because a person who knowingly receives an e-mail is aware of the nature of its content and has immediate and knowing dominion or control over it. Fabiano v. Armstrong, 141 P.3d 907 (Colo. App. 2006).

Definition of "erotic nudity" does not require that the "real or simulated overt sexual gratification or stimulation" be depicted in the material, but only that the overt sexual gratification or stimulation be of any of the persons involved in the activity. People v. Batchelor, 800 P.2d 599 (Colo. 1990).

A display or picture qualifies as “erotic nudity” under subsection (2)(d) if: (1) The display or picture depicts the human breasts or undeveloped or developing breast area of a child; and (2) the display or picture is for the purpose of real or simulated overt sexual gratification of stimulation of one or more of the persons involved. People v. Gagnon, 997 P.2d 1278 (Colo. App. 1999).

For purposes of this section, “possession” means the non-exclusive control or dominion over sexually exploitative material. People v. Marsh, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

The presence of digital images in an internet cache can constitute evidence of a prior act of possession. There was enough evidence that the jury could infer that the defendant knowingly viewed the images in the internet cache. People v. Marsh, ___ P.3d ___ (Colo. App. 2011).

The requirement of “possesses or controls any sexually exploitative material” in subsection (3)(b.5) does not contain any requirement that the material be retained for any minimum period of time. Fabiano v. Armstrong, 141 P.3d 907 (Colo. App. 2006).

Court need not find that photos taken of minor by defendant were obscene in order for defendant to be prosecuted for sexual exploitation of a child. People v. Gagnon, 997 P.2d 1278 (Colo. App. 1999).

18-6-404. Procurement of a child for sexual exploitation. Any person who intentionally gives, transports, provides, or makes available, or who offers to give, transport, provide, or make available, to another person a child for the purpose of sexual exploitation of a child commits procurement of a child for sexual exploitation, which is a class 3 felony.

Source: L. 83: Entire section added, p. 696, § 9, effective June 15.

18-6-405. Reports of convictions to department of education. (1) When a person is convicted, pleads nolo contendere, or receives a deferred sentence for a violation of the provisions of this part 4 and the court knows the person is a current or former employee of a school district in this state or holds a license or authorization pursuant to the provisions of article 60.5 of title 22, C.R.S., the court shall report such fact to the department of education.

(2) Repealed.

Source: L. 90: Entire section added, p. 1026, § 9, effective July 1. L. 96: Entire section amended, p. 1291, § 4, effective January 1, 1997. L. 2000: (2) repealed, p. 1722, § 4, effective June 1; (1) amended, p. 1847, § 34, effective August 2.

PART 5

ADULTERY

18-6-501. Adultery. Any sexual intercourse by a married person other than with that person’s spouse is adultery, which is prohibited.

Conduct proscribed by this section is different than conduct proscribed by § 18-3-405, sexual assault on a child, and imposing different penalties for the two sections does not offend equal protection. People v. Slusher, 844 P.2d 1222 (Colo. App. 1992).

Defendant can be prosecuted under this section for photographing his 18-year-old wife having sex with a 15-year-old girl even if the defendant’s wife could not be prosecuted for having sex with the girl pursuant to § 18-3-402 (1)(e). People v. Campbell, 94 P.3d 1186 (Colo. App. 2004).

When there is nothing in the statute nor any evidence in the record that would support requiring defendants to inquire regarding the victim’s age, the convictions of defendants cannot be sustained based solely on their failure to do so. People v. Bath, 890 P.2d 269 (Colo. App. 1994).

A person convicted of violating 18 U.S.C. § 2252 (a)(2) has engaged in conduct that, if committed in Colorado, would constitute sexual exploitation of a child in violation of subsection (3)(b.5) of this section and is, therefore, subject to the registration requirement of § 16-22-103 (1)(b). Fabiano v. Armstrong, 141 P.3d 907 (Colo. App. 2006).

Court could properly impose consecutive sentences for multiple sexual exploitation convictions since the crime recognizes that each sexually exploitive image of a child constitutes a discrete act of victimization of the child. People v. Rabes, 258 P.3d 937 (Colo. App. 2010).

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 449, § 1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-6-501.

ANNOTATION

Annotator's note. Since § 18-6-501 is similar to former C.L. § 6837, a relevant case construing that provision has been included in the annotations to this section.

Purpose of section. This section is designed to prohibit and punish the disgraceful and scandalous conduct of those who would, by their evil and immoral example, debase and demoralize society. People v. Bright, 77 Colo. 563, 238 P. 71 (1925).

Jury determines weight of evidence. In a criminal prosecution for adultery under former provisions of this section, if there was sufficient evidence to justify the jury in finding that the parties lived together in an open state of adultery, the court erred in dismissing the case, since it was for the jury to determine the weight of the evidence. People v. Bright, 77 Colo. 563, 238 P. 71 (1925).

PART 6

HARBORING A MINOR

18-6-601. Harboring a minor. (1) (a) A person commits the crime of harboring a minor if the person knowingly provides shelter to a minor without the consent of a parent, guardian, custodian of the minor, or the person with whom the child resides the majority of the time pursuant to a court order allocating parental responsibilities and if the person intentionally:

(I) Fails to release the minor to a law enforcement officer after being requested to do so by the officer; or

(II) Fails to disclose the location of the minor to a law enforcement officer when requested to do so, if the person knows the location of the minor and had either taken the minor to that location or had assisted the minor in reaching that location; or

(III) Obstructs a law enforcement officer from taking the minor into custody; or

(IV) Assists the minor in avoiding or attempting to avoid the custody of a law enforcement officer; or

(V) Fails to notify the parent, guardian, custodian of the minor, or the person with whom the child resides the majority of the time pursuant to a court order allocating parental responsibilities or a law enforcement officer that the minor is being sheltered within twenty-four hours after shelter has been provided.

(b) If the shelter provided to the minor is by a licensed child care facility, including a licensed homeless youth shelter, the minor, despite the minor's status, may reside at such facility or shelter for a period not to exceed two weeks after the time of intake, pursuant to the procedures set forth in article 5.7 of title 26, C.R.S.

(c) It is a defense to a prosecution under this section that the defendant had custody of the minor or lawful parenting time with the minor pursuant to a court order.

(2) Harboring a minor is a class 2 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 86: Entire part added, p. 780, § 1, effective April 14; (3) amended, p. 1225, § 46, effective May 30. L. 94: (2)(b) amended, p. 2656, § 139, effective July 1. L. 96: (2)(c) amended, p. 1842, § 7, effective July 1. L. 97: Entire section amended, p. 975, § 1, effective May 22. L. 98: IP(1)(a), (1)(a)(V), and (1)(c) amended, p. 1403, § 57, effective February 1, 1999.

PART 7

CONTRIBUTING TO DELINQUENCY

18-6-701. Contributing to the delinquency of a minor. (1) Any person who induces, aids, or encourages a child to violate any federal or state law, municipal or county ordinance, or court order commits contributing to the delinquency of a minor. For the purposes of this section, the term "child" means any person under the age of eighteen years.

(2) Contributing to the delinquency of a minor is a class 4 felony.

(3) When a person is convicted, pleads nolo contendere, or receives a deferred sentence for a violation of the provisions of this section and the court knows the person is a current or former employee of a school district in this state or holds a license or authorization pursuant to the provisions of article 60.5 of title 22, C.R.S., the court shall report such fact to the department of education.

Source: L. 87: Entire part added, p. 817, § 22, effective October 1. L. 90: (3) added, p. 1026, § 10, effective July 1. L. 92: (1) amended, p. 404, § 17, effective June 3. L. 2000: (3) amended, p. 1847, § 35, effective August 2.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "Commitment of Misdemeanants to the Colorado State Reformatory", see 29 Dicta 294 (1952).

Annotator's note. The following annotations include cases decided under former § 19-3-119.

A law enforcement officer does not violate this section when, in the completion of undercover activities, he encourages a child to violate a law or ordinance. People in Interest of M.N., 761 P.2d 1124 (Colo. 1988); People in Interest of J.A.L., 761 P.2d 1137 (Colo. 1988) (both cases decided under former § 19-3-119).

An adult may be charged with violating this statute regardless of whether the minor was actually charged with or convicted of a crime or whether the minor was old enough to be charged with or convicted of a crime. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

This is a criminal statute. Miller v. People in Interest of Edwin, 102 Colo. 259, 78 P.2d 624 (1938).

The statute does not require that a minor child be charged or convicted of a crime or that the child be older than ten years old for a person to be found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a minor. People v. Miller, 830 P.2d 1092 (Colo. App. 1991).

The required mens rea for an offense under this section is knowingly; except that the mens rea does not apply to the defendant's knowledge of the age of the minor victim. The purpose of this section is to protect minors. Thus, the defendant's awareness of the victim's age is not the focus of the statute, and the intent of the general assembly is to hold the defendant responsible if he or she engaged in the prohibited conduct and the victim's age fell within the statutorily defined age element. People v. Hastings, 983 P.2d 78 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000); People v. Gorman, 983 P.2d 92 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000).

The affirmative defense of reasonable belief with regard to the age of the victim, created in this section, applies to an offense charged under this section. But the trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury on the affirmative defense where the defendant failed to present sufficient evidence of the defense at trial. People v. Hastings, 983 P.2d 78 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000); People v. Gorman, 983 P.2d 92 (Colo. App. 1999), aff'd, 19 P.3d 662 (Colo. 2000).

Section materially the same as prior section of law on same subject, and specific violations of liquor code must be prosecuted under that law and not this provision. General assembly's reenactment of this section does not change the result. People v. O'Donnell, 926 P.2d 114 (Colo. App. 1996).

Evidence held insufficient. Moore v. People, 111 Colo. 584, 144 P.2d 776 (1943).

Possession of marijuana is not a lesser included offense of contributing to the delinquency of a minor under this section or transferring marijuana under § 18-18-406 (7)(b). People v. Graybeal, 155 P.3d 614 (Colo. App. 2007).

Applied in Gibson v. People, 44 Colo. 600, 99 P. 333 (1908); Sass v. People, 48 Colo. 125, 109 P. 263 (1910); McClelland v. People, 49 Colo. 538, 113 P. 640 (1911); Sharp v. People, 90 Colo. 356, 9 P.2d 483 (1932); May v. People, 636 P.2d 672 (Colo. 1981); People v. Corpening, 837 P.2d 249 (Colo. App. 1992).

PART 8

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Cross references: For provisions relating to domestic abuse programs, see article 7.5 of title 26.

18-6-800.3. Definitions. As used in this part 8, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “Domestic violence” means an act or threatened act of violence upon a person with whom the actor is or has been involved in an intimate relationship. “Domestic violence” also includes any other crime against a person, or against property, including an animal, or any municipal ordinance violation against a person, or against property, including an animal, when used as a method of coercion, control, punishment, intimidation, or revenge directed against a person with whom the actor is or has been involved in an intimate relationship.

(2) “Intimate relationship” means a relationship between spouses, former spouses, past or present unmarried couples, or persons who are both the parents of the same child regardless of whether the persons have been married or have lived together at any time.

Source: L. 89: Entire section added, p. 909, § 1, effective April 4. L. 94: (1) amended, p. 2020, § 1, effective June 3; entire section amended, p. 2025, § 1, effective July 1. L. 95: IP and (1) amended, p. 566, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1) amended, p. 726, § 7, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: Subsection (1) was amended in Senate Bill 94-51. Those amendments were superseded by the amendment of the entire section in House Bill 94-1253.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “Injunctive Remedies for Interpersonal Violence”, see 18 Colo. Law. 1743 (1989). For article, “1994 Legislative Strengthens Domestic Violence Protective Orders”, see 23 Colo. Law. 2327 (1994).

Evidence of a sexual relationship is not necessary to establish the existence of an intimate relationship. People v. Disher, 224 P.3d 254 (Colo. 2010).

A sexual relationship may be an indicator, but never a necessary condition, of an intimate relationship for purposes of the Colorado domestic violence statute. The relationship must be more than that of a roommate, friend, or acquaintance, and there must be a romantic attachment or shared parental status between the parties. People v. Disher, 224 P.3d 254 (Colo. 2010).

When determining whether a relationship is an “intimate relationship”, a court may take into account the following three factors:

(1) The length of time the relationship has existed or did exist; (2) the nature or type of the relationship; and (3) the frequency of interaction between the parties. People v. Disher, 224 P.3d 254 (Colo. 2010).

The existence of a dating relationship indicates the kind of romantic attachment required by the statute. Whether that dating relationship was sexual in nature should not have been the determining factor. People v. Disher, 224 P.3d 254 (Colo. 2010).

18-6-801. Domestic violence - sentencing. (1) (a) In addition to any sentence that is imposed upon a person for violation of any criminal law under this title, any person who is convicted of any crime, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by the court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), or any crime against property, whether or not such crime is a felony, when such crime is used as a method of coercion, control, punishment, intimidation, or revenge directed against a person with whom the actor is or has been involved in an intimate relationship shall be ordered to complete a treatment program and a treatment evaluation that conform with the standards adopted by the domestic violence offender management board as required by section 16-11.8-103 (4), C.R.S. If an intake evaluation conducted by an approved treatment program provider discloses that sentencing to a treatment program would be inappropriate, the person shall be referred back to the court for alternative disposition.

(b) The court may order a treatment evaluation to be conducted prior to sentencing if a treatment evaluation would assist the court in determining an appropriate sentence. The person ordered to undergo such evaluation shall be required to pay the cost of the treatment evaluation. If such treatment evaluation recommends treatment, and if the court so finds, the person shall be ordered to complete a treatment program that conforms with the standards adopted by the domestic violence offender management board as required by section 16-11.8-103 (4), C.R.S.

(c) Nothing in this subsection (1) shall preclude the court from ordering domestic violence treatment in any appropriate case.

(2) Subsection (1) of this section shall not apply to persons sentenced to the department of corrections.

(3) A person charged with the commission of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which includes an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), shall not be entitled to plead guilty or plead nolo contendere to an offense which does not include the domestic violence designation required in section 16-21-103, C.R.S., unless the prosecuting attorney makes a good faith representation on the record that such attorney would not be able to establish a prima facie case that the person and the alleged victim were currently or formerly involved in an intimate relationship if the defendant were brought to trial on the original domestic violence offense and upon such a finding by the court. The prosecuting attorney's record and the court's findings shall specify the relationship in the alleged domestic violence case which the prosecuting attorney is not able to prove beyond a reasonable doubt and the reasons therefor. No court shall accept a plea of guilty or nolo contendere to an offense which does not include the domestic violence designation required in section 16-21-103, C.R.S., when the facts of the case indicate that the underlying factual basis includes an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1) unless there is a good faith representation by the prosecuting attorney that he or she would be unable to establish a prima facie case if the defendant were brought to trial on the original offense.

(4) No person accused or convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by the court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), shall be eligible for home detention in the home of the victim pursuant to section 18-1.3-105 or 18-1.3-106 or for deferred prosecution pursuant to section 18-1.3-101. Nothing in this subsection (4) is intended to prohibit a court from ordering a deferred sentence for a person accused or convicted of a crime, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by the court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1).

(5) Before granting probation, the court shall consider the safety of the victim and the victim's children if probation is granted.

(6) Nothing in this section shall preclude the ability of a municipality to enact concurrent ordinances.

(7) In the event a person is convicted in this state on or after July 1, 2000, of any offense which would otherwise be a misdemeanor, the underlying factual basis of which has been found by the court on the record to include an act of domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), and that person has been three times previously convicted, upon charges separately brought and tried and arising out of separate and distinct criminal episodes, of a felony or misdemeanor or municipal ordinance violation, the underlying factual basis of which was found by the court on the record to include an act of domestic violence, the prosecuting attorney may petition the court to adjudge the person an habitual domestic violence offender, and such person shall be convicted of a class 5 felony. If the person is adjudged an habitual domestic violence offender, the court shall sentence the person pursuant to the presumptive range set forth in section 18-1.3-401 for a class 5 felony. The former convictions and judgments shall be set forth in apt words in the indictment or information.

Source: L. 88: Entire part added, p. 732, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: Entire section R&RE, p. 909, § 2, effective April 4. L. 94: (1) amended and (3) to (6) added, p. 2026, § 2, effective July 1. L. 95: (3) amended, p. 566, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2000: (7) added, p. 1011, § 1, effective July 1; (1)(a) and (1)(b) amended, p. 913, § 2, effective January 1, 2001. L. 2002: (4) and (7) amended, p. 1515, § 200, effective October 1. L. 2009: (1)(a) and (1)(b) amended, (SB 09-292), ch. 369, p. 1948, § 32, effective August 5.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsections (4) and (7), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “What Family Law Practitioners Should Know About Domestic Violence”, see 19 Colo. Law. 53 (1990). For article, “Plea Bargaining, Legislative Limits, and the Separation of Powers”, see 32 Colo. Law. 63 (March 2003). For article, “The New Domestic Violence Treatment Standards for 2010”, see 39 Colo. Law. 45 (September 2010).

Any form of treatment ordered for domestic violence offenders must conform with the standards adopted by the domestic violence offender management board, despite the seeming inconsistency between subsections (1)(a) and (1)(b) regarding recommendation for treatment and what treatment includes. Partners in Change, L.L.C. v. Philp, 197 P.3d 232 (Colo. App. 2008).

Subsection (3) does not provide that the absence of the required domestic violence designation in the complaint divests the court of jurisdiction. Because defendant did not object to the form of the complaint and did not show how he was prejudiced, the technical defect could be corrected by remanding the case to the trial court to allow the prosecution to amend the complaint to reflect that the underlying facts involved domestic violence. People v. Campbell, 174 P.3d 860 (Colo. App. 2007).

When there is no dispute that the underlying factual basis for the charges against defendant included an act of domestic violence and defendant is appropriately advised concerning the nature and consequences of his or her plea such that the placement of a domestic violence designation on the complaint will not alter defendant's understanding of the agreement, the appropriate remedy for the trial court's technical violation of subsection (3) is to remand the case to allow the prosecution to amend the complaint to include a domestic violence designation. People v. Campbell, 174 P.3d 860 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under § 16-5-301 and subsection (7) of this section, in order to demand and receive a preliminary hearing, defendant must be charged with a class 4, 5, or 6 felony. Here, the substantive offense with which defendant was charged was a misdemeanor. People v. Garcia, 176 P.3d 872 (Colo. App. 2007).

Under subsection (7), defendant could only stand convicted of a class 5 felony if first convicted of the misdemeanor and subsequently adjudged a habitual offender by the court. Because count one of the information did not charge defendant with a substantive felony offense requiring mandatory sentencing, the exception in § 16-5-301 (1)(a) allowing for a preliminary hearing under such circumstances is inapplicable. People v. Garcia, 176 P.3d 872 (Colo. App. 2007).

18-6-801.5. Domestic violence - evidence of similar transactions. (1) The general assembly hereby finds that domestic violence is frequently cyclical in nature, involves patterns of abuse, and can consist of harm with escalating levels of seriousness. The general assembly therefore declares that evidence of similar transactions can be helpful and is necessary in some situations in prosecuting crimes involving domestic violence.

(2) In criminal prosecutions involving domestic violence in which the defendant and the victim named in the information have engaged in an intimate relationship as of the time alleged in the information, evidence of any other acts of domestic violence between the defendant and the victim named in the information, and between the defendant and other persons, constitute other acts or transactions for the purposes of this section, and the court may authorize the admission of evidence as provided in subsection (3) of this section.

(3) The proponent of evidence of other acts or transactions under this section shall advise the trial court by offer of proof of such evidence and shall specify whether the evidence is offered to show a common plan, scheme, design, identity, modus operandi, motive, or guilty knowledge or for some other purpose.

(4) Upon the offer of proof under subsection (3) of this section, the trial court shall determine whether the probative value of the evidence of similar acts or transactions is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice to the defendant, confusion of the issues, or misleading of the jury if the evidence is allowed or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

(5) Upon admitting evidence of other acts or transactions into evidence pursuant to this section and again in the general charge to the jury, the trial court shall direct the jury as to the limited purpose for which the evidence is admitted and for which the jury may consider it.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 2020, § 2, effective June 3. L. 2001: (2) amended, p. 730, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

A court should consider evidence of previously charged acts of domestic violence. This section does not abrogate the standard set forth in People v. Garner, 806 P.2d 366 (Colo. 1991), that the prosecution has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the prior acts actually occurred. This section does not require, however, that the court hold an evidentiary hearing on an offer of proof. People v. Ma, 104 P.3d 273 (Colo. App. 2004), rev'd on other grounds, 121 P.3d 205 (Colo. 2005).

Court applies People v. Spoto (795 P.2d 1314 (Colo. 1990)) test in determining admissibility of prior acts and this section does not limit admissibility of evidence of other acts to married partners. People v. Raglin, 21 P.3d 419 (Colo. App. 2000).

Evidence of prior transaction properly admitted. People v. Ramirez, 18 P.3d 822 (Colo. App. 2000).

Evidence of a prior act of domestic violence may be relevant to prove an intent to harm the victim, rather than to frighten him or her. People v. Torres, 141 P.3d 931 (Colo. App. 2006).

Trial court's failure to give contemporaneous limiting instructions in connection with testimony about two prior instances of domestic violence did not cast a serious doubt on the reliability of defendant's conviction and, thus, was not plain error. Although the trial court did not give the limiting instruction during the testimony of two witnesses, it alleviated any potential prejudice by (1) giving the instruction during the testimony of a third witness; (2) stating, at that time, that the instruction applied not only to the testimony of that witness but also to the testimony of the other two witnesses; and (3) providing the jury with a written instruction at the close of the evidence explicitly reminding them that the testimony of the three witnesses had been admitted only for a limited purpose. People v. Moore, 117 P.3d 1 (Colo. App. 2004).

18-6-801.6. Domestic violence - summons and complaint. Any person completing or preparing a summons, complaint, summons and complaint, indictment, information, or application for an arrest warrant shall indicate on the face of such document whether the facts forming the basis of the alleged criminal act, if proven, could constitute domestic violence as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1).

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 2027, § 3, effective July 1.

18-6-802. Domestic violence - local board - treatment programs - liability immunity - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 88: Entire part added, p. 732, § 1, effective July 1. L. 89: (3)(a) amended, p. 910, § 3, effective April 4. L. 94: (1)(a) amended, p. 2656, § 140, effective July 1. L. 96: (2)(e) repealed, p. 1263, § 172, effective August 7. L. 2000: (4) added, p. 913, § 3, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (4) provided for the repeal of this section, effective January 1, 2001. (See L. 2000, p. 913.)

18-6-802.5. Domestic violence - treatment programs. Any defendant who is sentenced to a treatment program pursuant to section 18-6-801 or who is ordered to complete an evaluation pursuant to section 18-6-801 (1) shall pay for the evaluation and treatment programs on a sliding fee basis, as provided in the standardized procedures for the treatment evaluation of domestic violence offenders and the guidelines and standards for a system of programs for the treatment of domestic violence offenders adopted by the domestic violence offender management board pursuant to section 16-11.8-103, C.R.S.

Source: L. 2001: Entire section added, p. 980, § 3, effective August 8.

18-6-803. Commission - manual of standards for treatment of domestic violence perpetrators - repeal. (Repealed)

Source: L. 88: Entire part added, p. 733, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) amended and (5) added, p. 913, § 4, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (5) provided for the repeal of this section, effective January 1, 2001. (See L. 2000, p. 913.)

18-6-803.5. Crime of violation of a protection order - penalty - peace officers' duties. (1) A person commits the crime of violation of a protection order if, after the person has been personally served with a protection order that identifies the person as a restrained person or otherwise has acquired from the court or law enforcement personnel actual knowledge of the contents of a protection order that identifies the person as a restrained person, the person:

(a) Contacts, harasses, injures, intimidates, molests, threatens, or touches the protected person or protected property, including an animal, identified in the protection order or enters or remains on premises or comes within a specified distance of the protected person, protected property, including an animal, or premises or violates any other provision of the protection order to protect the protected person from imminent danger to life or health, and such conduct is prohibited by the protection order; or

(b) Except as permitted pursuant to section 18-13-126 (1) (b), hires, employs, or otherwise contracts with another person to locate or assist in the location of the protected person.

(1.5) As used in this section:

(a) "Protected person" means the person or persons identified in the protection order as the person or persons for whose benefit the protection order was issued.

(a.5) (I) "Protection order" means any order that prohibits the restrained person from contacting, harassing, injuring, intimidating, molesting, threatening, or touching any protected person or protected animal, or from entering or remaining on premises, or from coming within a specified distance of a protected person or protected animal or premises or any other provision to protect the protected person or protected animal from imminent danger to life or health, that is issued by a court of this state or a municipal court, and that is issued pursuant to:

(A) Article 14 of title 13, C.R.S., section 18-1-1001, section 19-2-707, C.R.S., section 19-4-111, C.R.S., or rule 365 of the Colorado rules of county court civil procedure;

(B) Sections 14-4-101 to 14-4-105, C.R.S., section 14-10-107, C.R.S., section 14-10-108, C.R.S., or section 19-3-316, C.R.S., as those sections existed prior to July 1, 2004;

(C) An order issued as part of the proceedings concerning a criminal municipal ordinance violation; or

(D) Any other order of a court that prohibits a person from contacting, harassing, injuring, intimidating, molesting, threatening, or touching any person, or from entering or remaining on premises, or from coming within a specified distance of a protected person or premises.

(II) For purposes of this section only, "protection order" includes any order that amends, modifies, supplements, or supersedes the initial protection order. "Protection order" also includes any restraining order entered prior to July 1, 2003, and any foreign protection order as defined in section 13-14-104, C.R.S.

(b) "Registry" means the computerized information system created in section 18-6-803.7 or the national crime information center created pursuant to 28 U.S.C. sec. 534.

(c) "Restrained person" means the person identified in the order as the person prohibited from doing the specified act or acts.

(d) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 1003, § 6, effective July 1, 2003.)

(2) (a) Violation of a protection order is a class 2 misdemeanor; except that, if the restrained person has previously been convicted of violating this section or a former version of this section or an analogous municipal ordinance, or if the protection order is issued pursuant to section 18-1-1001, the violation is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(a.5) A second or subsequent violation of a protection order is an extraordinary risk crime that is subject to the modified sentencing range specified in section 18-1.3-501 (3).

(b) (Deleted by amendment, L. 95, p. 567, 3, effective July 1, 1995.)

(c) Nothing in this section shall preclude the ability of a municipality to enact concurrent ordinances. Any sentence imposed for a violation of this section shall run consecutively and not concurrently with any sentence imposed for any crime which gave rise to the issuing of the protection order.

(3) (a) Whenever a protection order is issued, the protected person shall be provided with a copy of such order. A peace officer shall use every reasonable means to enforce a protection order.

(b) A peace officer shall arrest, or, if an arrest would be impractical under the circumstances, seek a warrant for the arrest of a restrained person when the peace officer has information amounting to probable cause that:

(I) The restrained person has violated or attempted to violate any provision of a protection order; and

(II) The restrained person has been properly served with a copy of the protection order or the restrained person has received actual notice of the existence and substance of such order.

(c) In making the probable cause determination described in paragraph (b) of this subsection (3), a peace officer shall assume that the information received from the registry is accurate. A peace officer shall enforce a valid protection order whether or not there is a record of the protection order in the registry.

(d) The arrest and detention of a restrained person is governed by applicable constitutional and applicable state rules of criminal procedure. The arrested person shall be removed from the scene of the arrest and shall be taken to the peace officer's station for booking, whereupon the arrested person may be held or released in accordance with the adopted bonding schedules for the jurisdiction in which the arrest is made, or the arrested person may be taken to the jail in the county where the protection order was issued. The law enforcement agency or any other locally designated agency shall make all reasonable efforts to contact the protected party upon the arrest of the restrained person. The prosecuting attorney shall present any available arrest affidavits and the criminal history of the restrained person to the court at the time of the first appearance of the restrained person before the court.

(e) The arresting agency arresting the restrained person shall forward to the issuing court a copy of such agency's report, a list of witnesses to the violation, and, if applicable, a list of any charges filed or requested against the restrained person. The agency shall give a copy of the agency's report, witness list, and charging list to the protected party. The agency shall delete the address and telephone number of a witness from the list sent to the court upon request of such witness, and such address and telephone number shall not thereafter be made available to any person, except law enforcement officials and the prosecuting agency, without order of the court.

(4) If a restrained person is on bond in connection with a violation or attempted violation of a protection order in this or any other state and is subsequently arrested for violating or attempting to violate a protection order, the arresting agency shall notify the prosecuting attorney who shall file a motion with the court which issued the prior bond for the revocation of the bond and for the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of the restrained person if such court is satisfied that probable cause exists to believe that a violation of the protection order issued by the court has occurred.

(5) A peace officer arresting a person for violating a protection order or otherwise enforcing a protection order shall not be held criminally or civilly liable for such arrest or enforcement unless the peace officer acts in bad faith and with malice or does not act in compliance with rules adopted by the Colorado supreme court.

(6) (a) A peace officer is authorized to use every reasonable means to protect the alleged victim or the alleged victim's children to prevent further violence. Such peace officer may transport, or obtain transportation for, the alleged victim to shelter. Upon the request of the protected person, the peace officer may also transport the minor child of the protected person, who is not an emancipated minor, to the same shelter if such shelter is willing to accept the child, whether or not there is a custody order or an order allocating parental responsibilities with respect to such child or an order for the care and control of the child and whether or not the other parent objects. A peace officer who transports a minor child over the objection of the other parent shall not be held liable for any damages that may result from interference with the custody, parental responsibilities, care, and control of or access to a minor child in complying with this subsection (6).

(b) For purposes of this subsection (6), “shelter” means a battered women’s shelter, a friend’s or family member’s home, or such other safe haven as may be designated by the protected person and which is within a reasonable distance from the location at which the peace officer found the victim.

(7) The protection order shall contain in capital letters and bold print a notice informing the protected person that such protected person may either initiate contempt proceedings against the restrained person if the order is issued in a civil action or request the prosecuting attorney to initiate contempt proceedings if the order is issued in a criminal action.

(8) A protection order issued in the state of Colorado shall contain a statement that:

(a) The order or injunction shall be accorded full faith and credit and be enforced in every civil or criminal court of the United States, another state, an Indian tribe, or a United States territory pursuant to 18 U.S.C. sec. 2265;

(b) The issuing court had jurisdiction over the parties and subject matter; and

(c) The defendant was given reasonable notice and opportunity to be heard.

(9) A criminal action charged pursuant to this section may be tried either in the county where the offense is committed or in the county in which the court that issued the protection order is located, if such court is within this state.

Source: L. 91: Entire section added, p. 418, § 1, effective May 31. L. 92: Entire section amended, p. 294, § 4, effective April 23; (1) and (2) amended, p. 404, § 18, effective June 3; entire section amended, p. 177, § 3, effective July 1. L. 94: (2) and (3) amended and (6) added, p. 2027, § 4, effective July 1; entire section amended, p. 2010, § 7, effective January 1, 1995. L. 95: (1), (2), and (3)(d) amended, p. 567, § 3, effective July 1. L. 96: (3)(d) amended, p. 736, § 6, effective July 1; (1.5)(d) amended, p. 1692, § 26, effective January 1, 1997. L. 98: (1.5)(b), (1.5)(d), and (3)(c) amended and (8) added, p. 1232, § 3, effective July 1; (6)(a) amended, p. 1404, § 58, effective February 1, 1999. L. 99: (1.5)(d) amended, p. 502, § 11, effective July 1. L. 2000: (1) and (1.5)(d) amended, p. 1011, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1003, § 6, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1.5)(a.5) amended, p. 555, § 12, effective July 1; (2)(a.5) added, p. 636, § 10, effective August 4. L. 2005: (3)(d) amended and (9) added, p. 427, § 6, effective April 29. L. 2006: (1) amended, p. 1057, § 2, effective July 1. L. 2007: (1)(a) and (1.5)(a.5)(I) amended, p. 726, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2008: IP(1) amended, p. 1718, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor’s note: Amendments to this section in House Bill 92-1075 and House Bill 92-1078 were harmonized. Amendments to this section in House Bill 94-1090 and House Bill 94-1253 were harmonized.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “1994 Legislature Strengthens Domestic Violence Protective Orders”, see 23 Colo. Law. 2327 (1994).

Because the elements of violation of a mandatory restraining order and the elements of harassment by stalking are not the same, the subsequent prosecution of defendant did not violate double jeopardy protections. People v. Carey, 198 P.3d 1223 (Colo. App. 2008).

Because the elements of violation of a protection order and harassment are not the same, the principles of double jeopardy do not require that the convictions for both offenses be merged. People v. Thomeczek, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Violation may consist of more than coming within specified distance. Where defendant came within 100 feet of protected person and thereafter broke into her apartment with intent to make direct contact with her, the intent to make direct contact supplied the intent to commit a “crime” upon entry so as to support a conviction for first degree burglary. People v. Widhalm, 991 P.2d 291 (Colo. App. 1999).

The required culpable state of mind of “knowingly” applies to all elements of the crime of violation of a restraining order. People v. Coleby, 34 P.3d 422 (Colo. 2001).

18-6-803.6. Duties of peace officers and prosecuting agencies - preservation of evidence. (1) When a peace officer determines that there is probable cause to believe that a crime or offense involving domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), has been committed, the officer shall, without undue delay, arrest the person suspected of its commission pursuant to the provisions in subsection (2) of this section, if applicable, and charge the person with the appropriate crime or offense. Nothing in this subsection (1) shall be construed to require a peace officer to arrest both parties involved in an alleged act of domestic violence when both claim to have been victims of such domestic violence. Additionally, nothing in this subsection (1) shall be construed to require a peace officer to arrest either party involved in an alleged act of domestic violence when a peace officer determines there is no probable cause to believe that a crime or offense of domestic violence has been committed. The arrested person shall be removed from the scene of the arrest and shall be taken to the peace officer’s station for booking, whereupon the arrested person may be held or released in accordance with the adopted bonding schedules for the jurisdiction in which the arrest is made.

(2) If a peace officer receives complaints of domestic violence from two or more opposing persons, the officer shall evaluate each complaint separately to determine if a crime has been committed by one or more persons. In determining whether a crime has been committed by one or more persons, the officer shall consider the following:

- (a) Any prior complaints of domestic violence;
- (b) The relative severity of the injuries inflicted on each person;
- (c) The likelihood of future injury to each person; and
- (d) The possibility that one of the persons acted in self-defense.

(3) (a) A peace officer is authorized to use every reasonable means to protect the alleged victim or the alleged victim’s children to prevent further violence. Such peace officer may transport, or obtain transportation for, the alleged victim to shelter. Upon the request of the protected person, the peace officer may also transport the minor child of the protected person, who is not an emancipated minor, to the same shelter if such shelter is willing to accept the child, whether or not there is a custody order or an order for the care and control of the child or an order allocating parental responsibilities with respect to the child and whether or not the other parent objects. A peace officer who transports a minor child over the objection of the other parent shall not be held liable for any damages that may result from interference with the custody, parental responsibilities, care, and control of or access to a minor child in complying with this subsection (3).

(b) For purposes of this subsection (3), “shelter” means a battered women’s shelter, a friend’s or family member’s home, or such other safe haven as may be designated by the protected person and which is within a reasonable distance from the location at which the peace officer found the victim.

(4) (a) The arresting agency shall make reasonable efforts to collect and preserve any pertinent evidence until the time of final disposition of the matter, including, but not limited to, the following:

- (I) Any dispatch tape recording relating to the event;
- (II) Any on-scene video or audio tape recordings;
- (III) Any medical records of treatment of the alleged victim or the defendant; and
- (IV) Any other relevant physical evidence or witness statements.

(b) However, in the absence of bad faith, any failure to collect or preserve any evidence listed in paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) shall not be grounds to dismiss the matter.

(4.5) When a peace officer responds to a call or is otherwise responding to a report about an alleged offense involving domestic violence, as defined in section 18-6-800.3 (1), or other domestic dispute, the officer shall include in his or her written or oral report concerning such incident whether children may have seen or heard the alleged offense; except that, in the absence of bad faith, the failure of a peace officer to note that a child may have seen or heard the alleged offense shall not be grounds to dismiss the matter.

(5) A peace officer shall not be held civilly or criminally liable for acting pursuant to this section if the peace officer acts in good faith and without malice.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added. p. 2029, § 5, effective July 1. L. 95: (1) amended, p. 568, § 4, effective July 1. L. 98: (1) amended, p. 1231, § 2, effective July 1; (3)(a) amended, p. 1404, § 59, effective February 1, 1999. L. 2001: (4.5) added, p. 980, § 4, effective August 8.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "1994 Legislature Strengthens Domestic Violence Protective Orders", see 23 Colo. Law. 2327 (1994).

18-6-803.7. Central registry of protection orders - creation. (1) As used in this section:

(a) "Bureau" means the Colorado bureau of investigation.

(b) "Protected person" means the person or persons identified in the protection order as the person or persons for whose benefit the protection order was issued.

(b.5) (I) "Protection order" means any order that prohibits the restrained person from contacting, harassing, injuring, intimidating, molesting, threatening, or touching any protected person, or from entering or remaining on premises, or from coming within a specified distance of a protected person or premises, that is issued by a court of this state or an authorized municipal court, and that is issued pursuant to:

(A) Article 14 of title 13, C.R.S., section 18-1-1001, section 19-2-707, C.R.S., section 19-4-111, C.R.S., or rule 365 of the Colorado rules of county court civil procedure;

(B) Sections 14-4-101 to 14-4-105, C.R.S., section 14-10-107, C.R.S., section 14-10-108, C.R.S., or section 19-3-316, C.R.S., as those sections existed prior to July 1, 2004; or

(C) An order issued as part of the proceedings concerning a criminal municipal ordinance violation.

(II) "Protection order" also includes any restraining order entered prior to July 1, 2003, and any foreign protection order as described in section 13-14-104, C.R.S.

(c) "Registry" means a computerized information system.

(d) "Restrained person" means the person identified in the order as the person prohibited from doing the specified act or acts.

(e) (Deleted by amendment, L. 2003, p. 1007, § 7, effective July 1, 2003.)

(f) "Subsequent order" means an order which amends, modifies, supplements, or supersedes a protection order.

(2) (a) There is hereby created in the bureau a computerized central registry of protection orders which shall be accessible to any state law enforcement agency or to any local law enforcement agency having a terminal which communicates with the bureau. The central registry computers shall communicate with computers operated by the state judicial department.

(b) Protection orders and subsequent orders shall be entered into the registry by the clerk of the court issuing the protection order; except that orders issued pursuant to sections 18-1-1001 and 19-2-707, C.R.S., shall be entered into the registry only at the discretion of the court or upon motion of the district attorney. The clerk of the court issuing the protection order shall be responsible for updating the registry electronically in a timely manner to ensure the notice is as complete and accurate as is reasonably possible with regard to the information specified in subsection (3) of this section.

(c) The restrained person's attorney, if present at the time the protection order or subsequent order is issued, shall notify the restrained person of the contents of such order if the restrained person was absent when such order was issued.

(d) Protection orders and subsequent orders shall be placed in the registry not later than twenty-four hours after they have been issued; except that, if the court issuing the protection order or subsequent order specifies that it be placed in the registry immediately, such order shall be placed in the registry immediately.

(e) Upon reaching the expiration date of a protection order or subsequent order, if any, the bureau shall note the termination in the registry.

(f) In the event the protection order or subsequent order does not have a termination date, the clerk of the issuing court shall be responsible for noting the termination of the protection order or subsequent order in the registry.

(3) (a) In addition to any information, notice, or warning required by law, a protection order or subsequent order entered into the registry shall contain the following information, if such information is available:

(I) The name, date of birth, sex, and physical description of the restrained person to the extent known;

(II) The date the order was issued and the effective date of the order if such date is different from the date the order was issued;

(III) The names of the protected persons and their dates of birth;

(IV) If the protection order is one prohibiting the restrained person from entering in, remaining upon, or coming within a specified distance of certain premises, the address of the premises and the distance limitation;

(V) The expiration date of the protection order, if any;

(VI) Whether the restrained person has been served with the protection order and, if so, the date and time of service;

(VII) The amount of bail and any conditions of bond which the court has set in the event the restrained person has violated a protection order; and (VIII) An indication whether the conditions of the protection order are also conditions of a bail bond for a felony charge.

(b) If available, the protection order or subsequent order shall contain the fingerprint-based state identification number issued by the bureau to the restrained person.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 2013, § 8, effective January 1, 1995. L. 96: (1)(e) amended, p. 1692, § 27, effective January 1, 1997. L. 98: (2)(b) amended, p. 947, § 5, effective May 27; (1)(e) amended, p. 1233, § 4, effective July 1. L. 99: (1)(e) amended, p. 503, § 12, effective July 1. L. 2003: Entire section amended, p. 1007, § 7, effective July 1. L. 2004: (1)(b.5) amended, p. 556, § 13, effective July 1. L. 2010: (3)(a)(VIII) added, (HB 10-1218), ch. 177, p. 640, § 1, effective April 29.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, “1994 Legislature Strengthens Domestic Violence Protective Orders”, see 23 Colo. Law. 2327 (1994).

18-6-803.8. Foreign protection orders. (Repealed)

Source: L. 98: Entire section added, p. 1233, § 5, effective July 1. L. 2003: (4) amended, p. 1009, § 8, effective July 1. L. 2004: Entire section repealed, p. 554, § 5, effective July 1.

18-6-803.9. Assaults and deaths related to domestic violence - report. The Colorado bureau of investigation shall prepare a report by November 1, 1995, and by November 1 of each year thereafter, to the governor, the president of the senate, and the speaker of the house of representatives on the number of assaults related to and the number of deaths caused directly by domestic violence, including, but not limited to, homicides of victims, self-defense killings of alleged perpetrators, and incidental killings of children, peace officers, persons at work, neighbors, and bystanders in the course of episodes of domestic violence.

Source: L. 94: Entire section added, p. 2029, § 5, effective July 1.

18-6-804. Repeal of part. (Repealed)

Source: L. 88: Entire part added, p. 734, § 1, effective July 1. L. 91: Entire section amended, p. 399, § 1, effective March 27. L. 95: Entire section repealed, p. 569, § 9, effective July 1; entire section repealed, p. 1254, § 13, effective July 1.

18-6-805. Repeal of sections. (Repealed)

Source: L. 95: Entire section added, p. 569, § 10, effective July 1. L. 96: (1) amended, p. 1470, § 12, effective June 1. L. 98: Entire section amended, p. 771, § 1, effective May 22. L. 99: (1) amended, p. 623, § 20, effective August 4. L. 2000: Entire section repealed, p. 914, § 5, effective July 1.

ARTICLE 6.5

Wrongs to At-risk Adults

18-6.5-101.	Legislative declaration.		cases involving crimes against at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles.
18-6.5-102.	Definitions.
18-6.5-103.	Crimes against at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles - classifications.	18-6.5-106.	Payment of treatment costs for victims of crimes against at-risk adults or at-risk juveniles - restitution.
18-6.5-103.5.	Video tape depositions - at-risk adult victims and witnesses.	18-6.5-107.	Surcharge - collection and distribution of funds - crimes against at-risk persons surcharge fund - creation - report.
18-6.5-104.	Statutory privilege not allowed.
18-6.5-105.	Preferential trial dates of 18-6.5-101. Legislative declaration. The general assembly recognizes that fear of mistreatment is one of the major personal concerns of at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles and that at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles are more vulnerable to and disproportionately damaged by crime in general but, more specifically, by abuse, exploitation, and neglect because they are less able to protect themselves against offenders, a number of whom are in positions of trust, and because they are more likely to receive serious injury from crimes committed against them and not to fully recover from such injury. At-risk adults and at-risk juveniles are more impacted by crime than the general population because they tend to suffer great relative deprivation, financially, physically, and psychologically, as a result of the abuses against them. A significant number of at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles are not as physically or emotionally equipped to protect themselves or aid in their own security as non-at-risk adults and non-at-risk juveniles in society. They are far more susceptible than the general population to the adverse long-term effects of crimes committed against them, including abuse, exploitation, and neglect. The general assembly therefore finds that penalties for specified crimes committed against at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles should be more severe than the penalties for the commission of said crimes against other members of society.

Source: L. 91: Entire article added, p. 1778, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1733, § 22, effective July 1.

18-6.5-102. Definitions. As used in this article, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) “At-risk adult” means any person who is sixty years of age or older or any person who is eighteen years of age or older and is a person with a disability as said term is defined in subsection (3) of this section.

(1.5) “At-risk juvenile” means any person who is under the age of eighteen years and is a person with a disability as said term is defined in subsection (3) of this section.

(1.7) “Convicted” and “conviction” mean a plea of guilty accepted by the court, including a plea of guilty entered pursuant to a deferred sentence under section 18-1.3-102, a verdict of guilty by a judge or jury, or a plea of no contest accepted by the court.

(1.8) “Crime against an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile” means any offense listed in section 18-6.5-103 or criminal attempt, conspiracy, or solicitation to commit any of those offenses.

(2) “Neglect” has the same meaning as set forth in section 26-3.1-101 (4) (b), C.R.S.

(3) “Person with a disability” means any person who:

(a) Is impaired because of the loss of or permanent loss of use of a hand or foot or because of blindness or the permanent impairment of vision of both eyes to such a degree as to constitute virtual blindness; or

(b) Is unable to walk, see, hear, or speak; or

(c) Is unable to breathe without mechanical assistance; or

(d) Is developmentally disabled as defined in section 27-10.5-102 (11), C.R.S.; or

(e) Is a person with a mental illness as the term is defined in section 27-65-102 (14), C.R.S.; or

(f) Is mentally impaired as the term is defined in section 24-34-301 (2.5) (b) (III), C.R.S.; or

(g) Is blind as that term is defined in section 26-2-103 (3), C.R.S.; or

(h) Is receiving care and treatment for a developmental disability under article 10.5 of title 27, C.R.S.

(3.5) “Position of trust” means assuming a responsibility, duty, or fiduciary relationship toward an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile.

(4) Any subsection, or portion of a subsection, of this section declared to be unconstitutional or otherwise invalid shall not impair the remaining provisions of this section.

Source: L. 91: Entire article added, p. 1778, § 2, effective July 1. L. 92: (3)(d) amended, p. 1397, § 54, effective July 1. L. 93: (1.5) added and (3)(a) and (3)(f) amended, pp. 1733, 1637, §§ 23, 21, effective July 1. L. 2006: (3)(e) amended, p. 1388, § 17, effective August 7. L. 2007: (3.5) added, p. 2006, § 1, effective July 1. L. 2010: (3)(e) amended, (SB 10-175), ch. 188, p. 786, § 31, effective April 29. L. 2012: (1.7) and (1.8) added, (HB 12-1226), ch. 279, p. 1486, § 1, effective August 15.

Editor’s note: Section 5 of chapter 279, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act adding subsections (1.7) and (1.8) applies to convictions on or after August 15, 2012.

18-6.5-103. Crimes against at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles - classifications.

(1) Crimes against at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles shall be as prescribed in this section.

(2) Any person whose conduct amounts to criminal negligence, as defined in section 18-1-501 (3), commits:

(a) A class 4 felony if such negligence results in the death of an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile;

(b) A class 5 felony if such negligence results in serious bodily injury to an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile; and

(c) A class 6 felony if such negligence results in bodily injury to an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile.

(3) (a) Any person who commits a crime of assault in the first degree, as such crime is described in section 18-3-202, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile commits a class 4 felony if the circumstances described in section 18-3-202 (2) (a) are present and a class 2 felony if such circumstances are not present.

(b) Any person who commits a crime of assault in the second degree, as such crime is described in section 18-3-203, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile commits a class 5 felony if the circumstances described in section 18-3-203 (2) (a) are present and a class 3 felony if such circumstances are not present.

(c) Any person who commits a crime of assault in the third degree, as such crime is described in section 18-3-204, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile commits a class 6 felony.

(4) Any person who commits robbery, as such crime is described in section 18-4-301 (1), and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, commits a class 3 felony. If the offender is convicted of robbery of an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, the court shall sentence the defendant to the department of corrections for at least the presumptive sentence under section 18-1.3-401 (1).

(5) Any person who commits theft, and commits any element or portion of the offense in the presence of the victim, as such crime is described in section 18-4-401 (1), and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, or who commits theft against an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile while acting in a position of trust, whether or not in the presence of the victim, commits a class 5 felony if the value of the thing involved is less than five hundred dollars or a class 3 felony if the value of the thing involved is five hundred dollars or more. Theft from the person of an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile by means other than the use of force, threat, or intimidation is a class 4 felony without regard to the value of the thing taken.

(6) Any person who knowingly neglects an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile or knowingly acts in a manner likely to be injurious to the physical or mental welfare of an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile commits a class 1 misdemeanor.

(7) (a) Any person who commits a crime of sexual assault, as such crime is described in section 18-3-402, sexual assault in the first degree, as such crime was described in section 18-3-402, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile commits a class 2 felony.

(b) Any person who commits a crime of sexual assault in the second degree, as such crime was described in section 18-3-403, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, commits a class 3 felony.

(c) Any person who commits unlawful sexual contact, as such crime is described in section 18-3-404 or sexual assault in the third degree, as such crime was described in section 18-3-404, as it existed prior to July 1, 2000, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, commits a class 6 felony; except that the person commits a class 3 felony if the person compels the victim to submit by use of such force, intimidation, or threat as specified in section 18-3-402 (4) (a), (4) (b), or (4) (c), or if the actor engages in the conduct described in section 18-3-404 (1) (g) or (1.5).

(d) Any person who commits sexual assault on a child, as such crime is described in section 18-3-405, and the victim is an at-risk juvenile, commits a class 3 felony; except that, if the circumstances described in section 18-3-405 (2) (a), (2) (b), (2) (c), or (2) (d) are present, the person commits a class 2 felony.

(e) Any person who commits sexual assault on a child by one in a position of trust, as such crime is described in section 18-3-405.3, and the victim is an at-risk juvenile, commits a class 2 felony if the victim is less than fifteen years of age or a class 3 felony if the victim is fifteen years of age or older but less than eighteen years of age.

(f) Any person who commits sexual assault on a client by a psychotherapist, as such crime is described in section 18-3-405.5, and the victim is an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, commits a class 3 felony if the circumstances described in section 18-3-405.5 (1) exist or a class 6 felony if such circumstances are not present.

(8) For purposes of subsections (3) to (7) of this section, commission of the offenses described in said subsections shall include the attempt, solicitation, or conspiracy to commit such offenses.

Source: L. 91: Entire article added, p. 1779, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1733, § 24, effective July 1. L. 95: (3) amended, p. 1254, § 14, effective July 1. L. 97: (7) added, p. 1539, § 2, effective July 1. L. 98: (5) amended and (8) added, pp. 1440, 1441, §§ 19, 24, effective July 1. L. 99: (6) amended, p. 799, § 20, effective July 1. L. 2000: (7)(a), (7)(b), and (7)(c) amended, p. 706, § 32, effective July 1. L. 2002: (4) amended, p. 1516, § 201, effective October 1. L. 2003: (4) amended, p. 1428, § 10, effective April 29. L. 2007: (5) amended, p. 2006, § 2, effective July 1.

Cross references: For the legislative declaration contained in the 2002 act amending subsection (4), see section 1 of chapter 318, Session Laws of Colorado 2002.

ANNOTATION

Subsection (2) is a separate substantive offense, not a sentence enhancer. People v. Lovato, 179 P.3d 208 (Colo. App. 2007).

Subsection (2) is not void for vagueness; it prohibits any criminally negligent act or omission that results in bodily injury to an at-risk adult or juvenile. Although broad, the proscription is not so vague that a person of common intelligence must necessarily guess at its meaning. People v. Lovato, 179 P.3d 208 (Colo. App. 2007).

Although the court's instruction deviated from the language in subsection (2), it was not error. The deviation from the statute worked to defendant's benefit by creating a more demanding standard of culpability, so defendant may not claim error. People v. Lovato, 179 P.3d 208 (Colo. App. 2007).

Robbery of an at-risk adult is a lesser included offense of aggravated robbery; therefore, the conviction for robbery of an at-risk adult must be vacated because it merges with the aggravated robbery conviction. People v. Lovato, 179 P.3d 208 (Colo. App. 2007).

The general assembly's intent is that subsection (7)(b) would apply only to sexual assault crimes committed before July 1, 2000, that fit the previous definition of second degree assault. People v. Renfro, 117 P.3d 43 (Colo. App. 2004).

Subsection (5) enhances the penalties for general theft when the theft is committed against an at-risk adult; it does not create a separate offense. To prove that a defendant has committed theft from an at-risk adult, the prosecution first must prove that the defendant has committed general theft. People v. McKinney, 99 P.3d 1038 (Colo. 2004).

Trial court did not err in refusing to instruct the jury that knowledge of the age of the victim was an element of the offense of robbery of an at-risk adult. There is no indication that the general assembly intended to require that a defendant act with knowledge of the age of a victim in order to be charged with a crime against an at-risk adult. There is no mens rea element in the statute. Hence no defense of reasonable mistake of the victim's age. People v. Davis, 935 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1996).

Trial court did not err in refusing to impose a lesser sentence than the presumptive sentence under § 18-1-105 (1), as the sentence was required by this section. By reference only to that section and using the mandatory word "shall", the general assembly did not allow a trial court discretion to engraft probation, part of an entirely separate statutory scheme, onto its sentencing decision. People v. Davis, 935 P.2d 79 (Colo. App. 1996).

Because one of the powers exercised by defendant under father's power of attorney, dealing with personal and family maintenance, required him to maintain father's standard of living, he had a legal duty to exercise that power with due care for father's benefit. Defendant was convicted of second degree assault and causing serious bodily injury to an at-risk adult by criminal negligence when, despite defendant's medical training, defendant failed to respond to father's worsening condition, left father bedridden for a significant length of time without proper change of clothing, toileting, or hygiene, failed to seek professional care for father, and verbally abused father, causing him to fear defendant. People v. Madison, 176 P.3d 793 (Colo. App. 2007).

Convictions for theft from an at-risk adult reversed where at-risk adults signed checks on behalf of a family trust and a common stock company rather than in their individual capacities. People v. Pahl, 169 P.3d 169 (Colo. App. 2006).

18-6.5-103.5. Video tape depositions - at-risk adult victims and witnesses. (1) In any case in which a defendant is charged with a crime against an at-risk adult, as described in section 18-6.5-103, or in any case involving a victim or witness who is an at-risk adult, as defined in section 18-6.5-102 (1), the prosecution may file a motion with the court at any time prior to commencement of the trial, for an order that a deposition be taken of the testimony of the victim or witness and that the deposition be recorded and preserved on video tape.

(2) The prosecution shall file a motion requesting a videotaped deposition at least three days prior to the taking of the deposition. The defendant shall receive reasonable notice of the taking of the deposition. The defendant shall have the right to be present and to be represented by counsel at the deposition.

(3) Upon timely receipt of the motion, the court shall make a preliminary finding regarding whether, at the time of trial, the victim or witness is likely to be medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of rule 804 (a) of the Colorado rules of evidence. Such finding, at a minimum, shall be based on recommendations from the victim's or witness' physician or any other person having direct contact with the victim or witness, whose recommendations are based on specific behavioral indicators exhibited by the victim or witness. If the court so finds, it shall order that the deposition be taken, preserved on a video imaging format, and conducted pursuant to rule 15 (d) of the Colorado rules of criminal procedure; except that after consultation with the chief judge of the judicial district, the trial court may appoint an active or senior district or county court judge to serve in its place and preside over all aspects of the taking of the deposition. After the deposition is taken, the prosecution shall transmit the video tape to the clerk of the court in which the action is pending.

(4) If at the time of trial the court finds that the victim or witness is medically unavailable or otherwise unavailable within the meaning of rule 804 (a) of the Colorado rules of evidence, the court may admit the video tape of the victim's or witness' deposition as former testimony under rule 804 (b) (1) of the Colorado rules of evidence.

Source: L. 2000: Entire section added, p. 416, § 1, effective April 13. L. 2004: (3) amended, p. 422, § 1, effective August 4.

18-6.5-104. Statutory privilege not allowed. The statutory privileges provided in section 13-90-107 (1), C.R.S., shall not be available for excluding or refusing testimony in any prosecution for a crime committed against an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile pursuant to this article.

Source: L. 91: Entire article added, p. 1780, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1734, § 25, effective July 1.

18-6.5-105. Preferential trial dates of cases involving crimes against at-risk adults and at-risk juveniles. Consistent with the constitutional right to a speedy trial, all cases involving the commission of a crime against an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile shall take precedence before the court, and the court shall hear these cases as soon as possible after they are filed.

Source: L. 91: Entire article added, p. 1780, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1735, § 26, effective July 1.

18-6.5-106. Payment of treatment costs for victims of crimes against at-risk adults or at-risk juveniles - restitution. (1) In addition to any other penalty provided by law, the court may order any person who is convicted of a crime against an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile, as set forth in this article, to meet all or any portion of the financial obligations of treatment prescribed for the victim or victims of such person's offense.

(2) At the time of sentencing, the court may order that an offender described in subsection (1) of this section be put on a period of probation for the purpose of paying the treatment costs of the victim or victims, which, when added to any time served, does not exceed the maximum sentence imposable for the offense.

(3) If an at-risk adult or an at-risk juvenile has sustained monetary damages as a result of the commission of a crime described in this article against such adult or juvenile, the court shall order the offender to provide restitution pursuant to article 18.5 of title 16 and article 28 of title 17, C.R.S. If, after a reasonable period not to exceed one hundred eighty-two days, the offender has not, in the opinion of the court, completed adequate restitution, the offender's probation may be revoked. However, any remaining amount of restitution shall continue to have the full force and effect of a final judgment and remain enforceable pursuant to article 18.5 of title 16, C.R.S.

Source: L. 91: Entire article added, p. 1780, § 2, effective July 1. L. 93: Entire section amended, p. 1735, § 27, effective July 1. L. 2000: (3) amended, p. 1050, § 18, effective September 1. L. 2012: (3) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 873, § 129, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (3) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

18-6.5-107. Surcharge - collection and distribution of funds - crimes against at-risk persons surcharge fund - creation - report. (1) Each person who is convicted of a crime against an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile or who is convicted of identity theft pursuant to section 18-5-902, when the victim is an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile, shall be required to pay a surcharge to the clerk of the court for the judicial district in which the conviction occurs.

(2) Surcharges pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be in the following amounts:

(a) For each class 2 felony of which a person is convicted, one thousand five hundred dollars;

(b) For each class 3 felony of which a person is convicted, one thousand dollars;

(c) For each class 4 felony of which a person is convicted, five hundred dollars;

(d) For each class 5 felony of which a person is convicted, three hundred seventy-five dollars;

(e) For each class 6 felony of which a person is convicted, two hundred fifty dollars;

(f) For each class 1 misdemeanor of which a person is convicted, two hundred dollars;

(g) For each class 2 misdemeanor of which a person is convicted, one hundred fifty dollars; and

(h) For each class 3 misdemeanor of which a person is convicted, seventy-five dollars.

(3) The clerk of the court shall allocate the surcharge required pursuant to this section as follows:

(a) Five percent shall be retained by the clerk of the court for administrative costs incurred pursuant to this subsection (3). Such amount retained shall be transmitted to the state treasurer for deposit in the judicial stabilization cash fund created in section 13-32-101 (6), C.R.S.

(b) Ninety-five percent shall be transferred to the state treasurer, who shall credit the same to the crimes against at-risk persons surcharge fund created pursuant to subsection (4) of this section.

(4) (a) There is hereby created in the state treasury the crimes against at-risk persons surcharge fund, referred to in this section as the "fund", that consists of moneys received by the state treasurer pursuant to this section. The moneys in the fund shall be subject to annual appropriation by the general assembly to the state office on aging in the department of human services, created pursuant to section 26-11-202, C.R.S., for distribution to a fiscal agent that is an affiliate of a national organization that serves individuals affected by a disability and chronic condition across the life span and is working with the state of Colorado to implement the lifespan respite care program, referred to in this section as the "fiscal agent". Provided that programs selected to receive moneys from the fund meet the guidelines for distribution pursuant to paragraph (b) of this subsection (4), the fiscal agent shall award moneys to programs selected by a statewide coalition of nonprofit or not-for-profit organizations that focus on the needs of caregivers of at-risk adults or at-risk juveniles.

(b) The state office on aging in the department of human services shall establish guidelines for the distribution of the moneys from the fund, including but not limited to:

(I) Procedures for programs to use in applying for an award of moneys from the fund;

(II) Procedures for the fiscal agent to use in reporting to the state office on aging pursuant to paragraph (e) of this subsection (4); and

(III) Accountability and performance standards for programs that receive moneys from the fund.

(c) Notwithstanding any provisions of paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) to the contrary, the fiscal agent may use a portion of the moneys that it receives pursuant to paragraph (a) of this subsection (4) for training and to facilitate the coordination of programs that provide respite services for caregivers of at-risk adults or at-risk juveniles. The fiscal agent shall distribute the remainder of the moneys directly to the programs.

(d) Each program that receives moneys from the fund shall:

(I) Provide respite services that allow a caregiver to have a break from caregiving;

(II) Have a signed agreement and protocol with the fiscal agent;

- (III) Conduct a fingerprint-based criminal history record check of staff and providers; and
- (IV) Satisfy the accountability and performance standards established by the state office on aging pursuant to subparagraph (III) of paragraph (b) of this subsection (4).
- (e) The fiscal agent shall report to the state office on aging in the department of human services on a regular basis to be specified by the state office on aging. The report shall include, but need not be limited to:
- (I) A list of all programs that received moneys from the fund in the preceding fiscal year;
- (II) A description of how each program that received moneys from the fund in the preceding fiscal year used those moneys; and
- (III) Documentation demonstrating that each program that received moneys from the fund in the preceding fiscal year satisfied all of the criteria specified in paragraph (d) of this subsection (4).
- (f) The state office on aging shall not expend any moneys until the fund has enough money to pay the expenses necessary to administer the fund.
- (g) All interest derived from the deposit and investment of moneys in the fund shall be credited to the fund. Any moneys not appropriated by the general assembly shall remain in the fund and shall not be transferred or revert to the general fund of the state at the end of any fiscal year.
- (5) The court may waive all or any portion of the surcharge required by subsection (1) of this section if the court finds that a person convicted of a crime against an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile is indigent or financially unable to pay all or any portion of the surcharge. The court may waive only that portion of the surcharge that the court finds that the person convicted of a crime against an at-risk adult or at-risk juvenile is financially unable to pay.

Source: L. 2012: Entire section added, (HB 12-1226), ch. 279, p. 1486, § 2, effective August 15.

Editor’s note: Section 5 of chapter 279, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act adding this section applies to convictions on or after August 15, 2012.

ARTICLE 7

Offenses Relating to Morals

Editor’s note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971. For historical information concerning the repeal and reenactment, see the editor’s note following the title heading.

PART 1		18-7-201.5.	Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons convicted of prostitution.
OBSCENITY - OFFENSES		18-7-201.7.	Prostitution with knowledge of being infected with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
18-7-101.	Definitions.	18-7-202.	Soliciting for prostitution.
18-7-102.	Obscenity.	18-7-203.	Pandering.
18-7-103.	Injunctions to restrain the promotion of obscene materials.	18-7-204.	Keeping a place of prostitution.
18-7-104.	Applicability of this part 1. (Repealed)	18-7-205.	Patronizing a prostitute.
18-7-104.5.	Remedies under the “Colorado Organized Crime Control Act”.	18-7-205.5.	Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons convicted of patronizing a prostitute.
18-7-105.	Severability.	18-7-205.7.	Patronizing a prostitute with knowledge of being infected with acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
18-7-106.	Constitutional questions expedited. (Repealed)
PART 2
PROSTITUTION
18-7-201.	Prostitution prohibited.	18-7-206.	Pimping.

- 18-7-207. Prostitute making display.
 18-7-208. Promoting sexual immorality.

PART 5

SEXUALLY EXPLICIT MATERIALS
HARMFUL TO CHILDREN

PART 3

PUBLIC INDECENCY

- 18-7-301. Public indecency.
 18-7-302. Indecent exposure.

- 18-7-501. Definitions.
 18-7-502. Unlawful acts.
 18-7-503. Applicability.
 18-7-504. Severability.

PART 4

CHILD PROSTITUTION

- 18-7-401. Definitions.
 18-7-402. Soliciting for child prostitution.
 18-7-403. Pandering of a child.
 18-7-403.5. Procurement of a child.
 18-7-404. Keeping a place of child prostitution.
 18-7-405. Pimping of a child.
 18-7-405.5. Inducement of child prostitution.
 18-7-406. Patronizing a prostituted child.
 18-7-407. Criminality of conduct.
 18-7-408. Severability.
 18-7-409. Reports of convictions to department of education.

PART 6

VISUAL REPRESENTATIONS
CONTAINING ACTUAL VIOLENCE

- 18-7-601. Dispensing violent films to minors - misdemeanors.

PART 7

SEXUAL CONDUCT IN A CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTION

- 18-7-701. Sexual conduct in a correctional institution.

PART 8

CRIMINAL INVASION OF PRIVACY

- 18-7-801. Criminal invasion of privacy.

PART 1

OBSCENITY - OFFENSES

Editor's note: This title was repealed and reenacted in 1971, and this part 1 was subsequently repealed and reenacted in 1976, 1977, and 1981, resulting in the addition, relocation, and elimination of sections as well as subject matter. For amendments to this part 1 prior to 1981, consult the Colorado statutory research explanatory note and the table itemizing the replacement volumes and supplements to the original volume of C.R.S. 1973 beginning on page vii in the front of this volume and the editor's note following the title heading. Former C.R.S. section numbers prior to 1981 are shown in editor's notes following those sections that were relocated.

Cross references: For power of boards of county commissioners and governing bodies of municipalities to regulate obscene material or performance, see §§ 30-15-401 (1)(c) and 31-15-401 (1)(g).

18-7-101. Definitions. As used in this part 1, unless the context otherwise requires:

(1) "Material" means anything tangible that is capable of being used or adapted to arouse interest, whether through the medium of reading, observation, sound, or in any other manner, but does not include an actual three-dimensional obscene device.

(1.5) "Minor" means a person under eighteen years of age.

(2) "Obscene" means material or a performance that:

(a) The average person, applying contemporary community standards, would find that taken as a whole appeals to the prurient interest in sex;

(b) Depicts or describes:

(I) Patently offensive representations or descriptions of ultimate sex acts, normal or perverted, actual or simulated, including sexual intercourse, sodomy, and sexual bestiality; or

(II) Patently offensive representations or descriptions of masturbation, excretory functions, sadism, masochism, lewd exhibition of the genitals, the male or female genitals in a state of sexual stimulation or arousal, or covered male genitals in a discernibly turgid state; and

(c) Taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value.

(3) "Obscene device" means a device including a dildo or artificial vagina, designed or marketed as useful primarily for the stimulation of human genital organs.

(4) "Patently offensive" means so offensive on its face as to affront current community standards of tolerance.

(5) "Performance" means a play, motion picture, dance, or other exhibition performed before an audience.

(6) "Promote" means to manufacture, issue, sell, give, provide, lend, mail, deliver, transfer, transmit, publish, distribute, circulate, disseminate, present, exhibit, or advertise, or to offer or agree to do the same.

(6.5) "Prurient interest" means a shameful or morbid interest.

(7) "Simulated" means the explicit depiction or description of any of the types of conduct set forth in paragraph (b) of subsection (2) of this section, which creates the appearance of such conduct.

(8) "Wholesale promote" means to manufacture, issue, sell, provide, mail, deliver, transfer, transmit, publish, distribute, circulate, disseminate, or to offer or agree to do the same for purpose of resale.

(9) If any of the depictions or descriptions of sexual conduct described in this section are declared by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unlawfully included herein, this declaration shall not invalidate this section as to other patently offensive sexual conduct included herein.

Source: L. 81: Entire part R&RE, p. 998, § 1, effective July 1. L. 86: (2)(b)(II) and (4) amended and (6.5) added, p. 782, § 1, effective April 21. L. 94: (1.5) added, p. 1720, § 16, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former § 18-7-101 as it existed prior to 1981.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For article, "Obscenity Law in Colorado: The Struggle to Pass a Constitutional Statute", see 60 Den. L.J. 49 (1982). For article, "Obscenity and Pornography: Forging Decency Through the Law", see 17 Colo. Law. 45 (1988).

Annotator's note. Cases decided under the 1971 and 1977 versions of this section which are deemed to be relevant appear below.

The 1977 version of the Colorado obscenity statute was unconstitutional. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Provisions regulating promotion of obscene devices held unconstitutional. The provisions of the statutory scheme which regulate the promotion of obscene devices impermissibly burden the right of privacy. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985) (decided prior to 1986 amendment).

Definition of "patently offensive" contained in this section is unconstitutionally overbroad. The first amendment to the U.S. Constitution requires a "tolerance" standard, for determining whether material or a performance is "patently offensive". People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985) (decided prior to 1986 amendment).

Subsection (2)(b) held constitutional. The terms used in this paragraph are sufficiently specific to satisfy requirements of Miller v. California, and thus statute is not unconstitutionally overbroad. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985).

Obscenity statute provides sufficiently adequate standards to enable courts and juries to apply the law consistently and is not impermissibly vague. People v. Ford, 773 P.2d 1059 (Colo. 1989).

Obscenity statute that defines material that is patently offensive in terms of community standards of tolerance satisfies Colorado and U.S. constitutions and is not overbroad. People v. Ford, 773 P.2d 1059 (Colo. 1989).

Terms "materials" and "promote" as used in this section held not constitutionally defective. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985).

Federal court abstained from determining provisions' constitutionality until state courts determined validity. The United States district court for Colorado chose to abstain from the determining any federal constitutional question concerning Colorado legislation regulating obscene material, § 18-7-101 et seq., until the Colorado state courts were afforded an opportunity to construe the provisions and determine their validity or invalidity under the state constitution. Bergstrom v. Ricketts, 495 F. Supp. 210 (D. Colo. 1980).

United States supreme court decisions binding on state. United States supreme court decisions interpreting the scope of the first amendment's protections in obscenity cases are binding upon the state supreme court. People v. Berger, 185 Colo. 85, 521 P.2d 1244 (1974).

A statewide community standard is dictated by the constitution. To impose less than a statewide standard in the interpretation of a state obscenity statute would be to denigrate the constitutional guarantees that are afforded to every person. People v. Tabron, 190 Colo. 161, 544 P.2d 380 (1976).

Anything less than a statewide standard is unworkable when state obscenity statutes are involved. People v. Tabron, 190 Colo. 161, 544 P.2d 380 (1976).

Obscenity test derived from supreme court decisions. The three-fold test of obscenity set forth in subsection (5)(now (6)) is derived from the United States supreme court's decision in Roth v. United States (354 U.S. 476, 77 S. Ct. 1304, 1 L. Ed.2d 1498 (1957)), as further defined in Memoirs v. Massachusetts (383 U.S. 413, 86 S. Ct. 975, 16 L. Ed.2d 1 (1968)), and Redrup v. New York (386 U.S. 767, 87 S. Ct. 1414, 18 L. Ed.2d 515 (1967)). People v. Berger, 185 Colo. 85, 521 P.2d 1244 (1974).

18-7-102. Obscenity. (1) (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (1.5) of this section, a person commits wholesale promotion of obscenity if, knowing its content and character, such person wholesale promotes or possesses with intent to wholesale promote any obscene material.

(b) Wholesale promotion of obscenity is a class 1 misdemeanor.

(1.5) (a) A person commits wholesale promotion of obscenity to a minor if, knowing its content and character, such person wholesale promotes to a minor or possesses with intent to wholesale promote to a minor any obscene material.

(b) Wholesale promotion of obscenity to a minor is a class 6 felony.

(2) (a) Except as otherwise provided in subsection (2.5) of this section, a person commits promotion of obscenity if, knowing its content and character, such person:

(I) Promotes or possesses with intent to promote any obscene material; or

(II) Produces, presents, or directs an obscene performance or participates in a portion thereof that is obscene or that contributes to its obscenity.

(b) Promotion of obscenity is a class 2 misdemeanor.

(2.5) (a) A person commits promotion of obscenity to a minor if, knowing its content and character, such person:

(I) Promotes to a minor or possesses with intent to promote to a minor any obscene material; or

(II) Produces, presents, or directs an obscene performance involving a minor or participates in a portion thereof that is obscene or that contributes to its obscenity.

(b) Promotion of obscenity to a minor is a class 6 felony.

(3) Repealed.

Question of obscenity is one of law, not of fact. Houston v. Manerbino, 185 Colo. 1, 521 P.2d 166 (1974).

Whether the statutory tests of subsection (5)(now (6)) have been properly applied in a given case, as well as whether the materials are obscene, are questions of law in the first instance. People v. Berger, 185 Colo. 85, 521 P.2d 1244 (1974).

For a review of the history of obscenity regulation, see People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Magazine can be banned where pictures, without reference to text, declared obscene. Where an allegedly obscene magazine consists of both words and pictures, the pictures can be declared obscene and the entire magazine banned under this part without reference to whether the included text or other articles imbue the magazine with serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Obscenity provisions could not support injunction or criminal charge. The 1977 version of the Colorado obscenity statute could not be relied upon to support either a civil injunction or a criminal charge. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Denver obscenity ordinance held in conflict with legislative grant of power. Pierce v. City & County of Denver, 193 Colo. 347, 565 P.2d 1337 (1977).

Applied in Citizens for Free Enter. v. Dept. of Rev., 649 P.2d 1054 (Colo. 1982).

(4) - A person who possesses six or more identical obscene materials is presumed to possess them with intent to promote the same.

(5) This section does not apply to a person who possesses or distributes obscene material or participates in conduct otherwise proscribed by this section when the possession, participation, or conduct occurs in the course of law enforcement activities.

(6) This section does not apply to a person's conduct otherwise proscribed by this section which occurs in that person's residence as long as that person does not engage in the wholesale promotion or promotion of obscene material in his residence.

Source: L. 81: Entire part R&RE, p. 999, § 1, effective July 1. L. 83: (5) and (6) amended, p. 2048, § 4, effective October 14. L. 86: (1)(a), (2)(a)(I), (4), and (5) amended and (3) repealed, pp. 782, 785, §§ 2, 8, effective April 21. L. 94: (1) and (2) amended and (1.5) and (2.5) added, p. 1720, § 17, effective July 1.

Editor's note: This section is similar to former §§ 18-7-103, 18-7-104, 18-7-105, and 18-7-106 as they existed prior to 1981.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For article, "Obscenity Law in Colorado: The Struggle to Pass a Constitutional Statute", see 60 Den. L.J. 49 (1982). For article, "Constitutional Law", which discusses a Tenth Circuit decision dealing with obscenity, see 62 Den. U. L. Rev. 95 (1985). For article, "Obscenity and Pornography: Forging Decency Through the Law", see 17 Colo. Law. 45 (1988).

Annotator's note. Cases decided under the 1971 and 1977 versions of this section which are deemed to be relevant appear below.

For the unconstitutionality of the 1971 statute, see People v. Hildebrandt, 190 Colo. 167, 554 P.2d 384 (1976).

The 1977 version of the Colorado obscenity statute was unconstitutional. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Provisions regulating promotion of obscene devices held unconstitutional. The provisions of the statutory scheme which regulate the promotion of obscene devices impermissibly burden the right of privacy. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985) (decided prior to 1986 amendment).

Presumption of scienter contained in subsection (3) unconstitutional. The requirement that statutes regulating obscenity contain an element of scienter is based upon the potential for a strict liability obscenity provision to inhibit the exercise of protected speech. People v. Seven

Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985) (decided prior to 1986 repeal of subsection 3).

Presumption contained in subsection (4) is constitutional and comports with the requirements of due process. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985).

Promotion of obscenity to minor is not unconstitutionally vague. A person of common intelligence reading "promote" in context with the statutory definition would understand its meaning and application. The fact that the legislature defined promote differently than its common meaning does not make it unconstitutional. People v. Boles, __ P.3d __ (Colo. App. 2011).

Obscenity statute does not lack criminally culpable mens rea and does not premise liability on the mental state of a third party nor does it premise liability on discretionary acts of a third party. People v. Ford, 773 P.2d 1059 (Colo. 1989).

For a review of the history of obscenity regulation, see People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

Obscenity provisions could not support injunction or criminal charge. The 1977 version of the Colorado obscenity statute could not be relied upon to support either a civil injunction or a criminal charge. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980).

18-7-103. Injunctions to restrain the promotion of obscene materials. (1) The district courts of this state and the judges thereof shall have full power, authority, and jurisdiction to enjoin the wholesale promotion, promotion, or display of obscene materials as specified in this section and to issue all necessary and proper restraining orders, injunctions, and writs and processes in connection therewith not inconsistent with this article.

(2) The district attorney of the county in which a person, firm, or corporation wholesale promotes, promotes, or displays, or is about to wholesale promote, promote, or display, or has in his, her, or its possession with intent to wholesale promote, promote, or display, or is about to acquire possession with intent to wholesale promote, promote, or display any obscene material may maintain an action for injunction against such person, firm, or corporation to prevent the wholesale promotion, promotion, or display or further wholesale promotion, promotion, or display of said material described or identified in said suit for injunction.

(3) This article shall not authorize the issuance of temporary restraining orders except where exigent circumstances require the same. In matters of exigent circumstances, the restraining order shall provide that the action must be commenced on the earliest possible date. No temporary restraining order may be issued to restrain the continued exhibitions of a motion picture being shown commercially before the public, notwithstanding the existence of exigent circumstances.

(4) No temporary restraining order or temporary injunction may be issued except after notice to the person, firm, or corporation sought to be enjoined and only after all parties have been offered or afforded an opportunity to be heard. A person, firm, or corporation shall be deemed to have been offered or afforded an opportunity to be heard if notice has been given and he, she, or it fails to appear. At such hearing, evidence shall be presented and witnesses examined.

(5) Before or after the commencement of the hearing on an application for a temporary injunction, the court may, and on motion of the party sought to be restrained shall, order the trial on the action on the merits to be advanced and consolidated with the hearing on the application. Where such hearings are not so consolidated, and a temporary injunction or restraining order is issued, the court shall hold a final hearing and a trial of the issues within one day after joinder of issue, and a decision shall be rendered within two days of the conclusion of the trial. If a final hearing is not held within one day after joinder of issue or a decision not rendered within two days of the conclusion of the trial, the injunction shall be dissolved. No temporary injunction or restraining order shall issue until after a showing of probable cause to believe that the material or display is obscene and a showing of probable success on the merits. Any such temporary injunction or restraining order shall provide that the defendant may not be punished for contempt if the material is found not to be obscene after joinder of issue, final hearing, and trial.

(6) Nothing contained in this article shall prevent the court from issuing a temporary restraining order forbidding the removing, destroying, deleting, splicing, or otherwise altering of any motion picture alleged to be obscene.

(7) Any person, firm, or corporation sought to be permanently enjoined shall be entitled to a full adversary trial of the issues within one day after the joinder of issue, and a decision shall be rendered by the court within two days of the conclusion of the trial. If the defendant in any suit for a permanent injunction filed under the terms of this article shall fail to answer or otherwise join issue within the time required to file his, her, or its answer, the court, on motion of the party applying for the injunction, shall enter a general denial for the defendant and set a date for hearing on the question raised in the suit for injunction within fourteen days following the entry of the general denial entered by the court. The court shall render its decision within two days after the conclusion of the hearing.

(8) In the event that a final order or judgment of injunction is entered against the person, firm, or corporation sought to be enjoined, such final order or judgment shall contain a provision directing the person, firm, or corporation to surrender to the sheriff of the county in which the action was brought any of the material described in subsection (2) of this section, and such sheriff shall be directed to seize and destroy the same six months after the entry of the said final order unless criminal proceedings or an indictment is brought before that time, in which event, said material may be used as evidence in such criminal proceeding.

(9) In any action brought as herein provided, the district attorney shall not be required to file any undertaking, bond, or security before the issuance of any injunction order provided for above, shall not be liable for costs, and shall not be liable for damages sustained by reason of the injunction order in cases where judgment is rendered in favor of the person, firm, or corporation sought to be enjoined.

(10) Every person, firm, or corporation who wholesale promotes, promotes, displays, or acquires possession with intent to wholesale promote, promote, or display any of the material described in subsection (2) of this section, after the service upon him of a summons and complaint in an action brought pursuant to this article, is chargeable with knowledge of the contents.

Source: L. 81: Entire part R&RE, p. 1000, § 1, effective July 1. L. 86: (1) to (5) amended, p. 783, § 3, effective April 21. L. 87: (8) and (10) amended, p. 1579, § 24, effective July 10. L. 2012: (7) amended, (SB 12-175), ch. 208, p. 873, § 130, effective July 1.

Editor's note: (1) This section is similar to former § 18-7-102 as it existed prior to 1981.

(2) Section 173 of chapter 208, Session Laws of Colorado 2012, provides that the act amending subsection (7) applies to specified time intervals. For more information, see page 896 of Session Laws of Colorado 2012.

ANNOTATION

Law reviews. For article, "One Year Review of Criminal Law and Procedure", see 39 Dicta 81 (1962). For article, "Obscenity Law in Colorado: The Struggle to Pass a Constitutional Statute", see 60 Den. L.J. 49 (1982).

This section held constitutional. The procedures established by this statute are sufficient to satisfy due process. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985).

Requirement of adversary hearing. Where injunctive relief is sought which amounts to prior restraint, or where a search warrant is sought, there is required an adversary hearing, which may be on short notice, to determine whether the materials sought to be seized are in fact obscene. People ex rel. McKevitt v. Harvey, 176 Colo. 447, 491 P.2d 563 (1971) (decided under former § 40-9-19, C.R.S. 1963).

Obscenity provisions could not support injunction or criminal charge. The 1977 version of the Colorado obscenity statute could not be relied upon to support either a civil injunction or a criminal charge. People v. New Horizons, Inc., 200 Colo. 377, 616 P.2d 106 (1980) (decided under former § 18-7-102).

18-7-104. Applicability of this part 1. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire part R&RE, p. 1001, § 1, effective July 1. L. 86: Entire section repealed, p. 785, § 8, effective April 21.

Editor's note: This section was similar to former § 18-7-107 as it existed prior to 1981.

18-7-104.5. Remedies under the "Colorado Organized Crime Control Act". When a person or persons, through an enterprise, engage in a pattern of racketeering activity for which the predicate offenses are the promotion or wholesale promotion of obscenity, pursuant to article 17 of this title, the difference in the fair market value of real property in the vicinity of the location of such enterprise from what the value would be if such enterprise or any part thereof were not located in the vicinity, as established by the opinion testimony of experts or otherwise, shall be deemed a compensable injury for which the owners of victimized real property can exercise all civil remedies set forth in article 17 of this title, in addition to any other measure of damages provable pursuant to article 17 of this title.

Source: L. 86: Entire section added, p. 784, § 4, effective April 21.

18-7-105. Severability. If any provision of this part 1 is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be unconstitutional, the remaining provisions of this part 1 are valid, unless it appears to the court that the valid provisions of this part 1 are so essentially and inseparably connected with, and so dependent upon, the void provision that it cannot be presumed that the general assembly would have enacted the valid provisions without the void provision or unless the court determines that the valid provisions, standing alone, are incomplete and are incapable of being executed in accordance with the legislative intent.

Source: L. 81: Entire part R&RE, p. 1002, § 1, effective July 1.

ANNOTATION

Qualified severability clause used by court in determining legislative intent. Such a clause creates a presumption that the legislature would have been satisfied with the portions of the statute that remain after the unconstitutional provisions are stricken. People v. Seven Thirty-five East Colfax, Inc., 697 P.2d 348 (Colo. 1985).

18-7-106. Constitutional questions expedited. (Repealed)

Source: L. 81: Entire part R&RE, p. 1002, § 1, effective July 1.

Editor's note: Subsection (2) provided for the repeal of this section, effective January 1, 1983. (See L. 81, p. 1002.)

PART 2

PROSTITUTION

Cross references: For provisions relating to HIV infection and acquired immune deficiency syndrome, see part 14 of article 4 of title 25.

18-7-201. Prostitution prohibited. (1) Any person who performs or offers or agrees to perform any act of sexual intercourse, fellatio, cunnilingus, masturbation, or anal intercourse with any person not his spouse in exchange for money or other thing of value commits prostitution.

(2) (a) "Fellatio", as used in this section, means any act of oral stimulation of the penis.

(b) "Cunnilingus", as used in this section, means any act of oral stimulation of the vulva or clitoris.

(c) "Masturbation", as used in this section, means stimulation of the genital organs by manual or other bodily contact exclusive of sexual intercourse.

(d) "Anal intercourse", as used in this section, means contact between human beings of the genital organs of one and the anus of another.

(3) Prostitution is a class 3 misdemeanor.

Source: L. 71: R&RE, p. 451, §1. C.R.S. 1963: § 40-7-201. L. 77: Entire section R&RE, p. 987, § 1, effective May 27.

ANNOTATION

This is an offense involving moral turpitude. R & F Enters., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 199 Colo. 137, 606 P.2d 64 (1980).

Applied in People v. Mason, 642 P.2d 8 (Colo. 1982).

18-7-201.5. Acquired immune deficiency syndrome testing for persons convicted of prostitution. (1) (a) Any person who is convicted of prostitution pursuant to section 18-7-201 or a comparable municipal ordinance shall be ordered by the court to submit to a diagnostic test for the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The court shall order that such person shall pay the cost of such diagnostic test as a part of the costs of the action.

(b) As used in this subsection (1), "diagnostic test" means a human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) screening test followed by a supplemental HIV test for confirmation in those instances when the HIV screening test is repeatedly reactive.

(2) The results of any test performed pursuant to this section shall be reported to the person tested and to the district attorney or the municipal prosecuting attorney of the jurisdiction in which the person is prosecuted. The district attorney or municipal prosecuting attorney shall keep the results of such test strictly confidential unless the results of such test indicate the presence of the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome and:

(a) The person is subsequently charged with a violation of section 18-7-201.7 or 18-7-205.7; or

(b) The person is subsequently charged with a violation of section 18-7-201 or 18-7-205 or a comparable municipal ordinance and the district attorney or municipal prosecuting attorney for the charging jurisdiction seeks the test results for purposes of case evaluation, charging, and sentencing. In such case, the district attorney or municipal prosecuting attorney who obtained the original conviction pursuant to section 18-7-201 or a comparable municipal ordinance may release the test results only to the district attorney or municipal prosecuting attorney in the charging jurisdiction or the said district attorney's or municipal prosecuting attorney's designee. Any district attorney or municipal prosecuting attorney who receives test results pursuant to this paragraph (b) shall keep said test results strictly confidential, except as provided in this subsection (2).

(3) (a) The test ordered pursuant to subsection (1) of this section shall be performed by a facility that provides ongoing health care.

